HUMERAL, adj. Hu²m'e²r'l. Lat., humeralis (from humerus [q. v.]). Fr., huméral. Of or pertaining to the humerus, or to the upper arm. [C; L, 343.]

HUMÉRAL (Fr.), adj. U⁶-ma¹-ra³l. See HUMERAL; as a n., of Cuvier, the coracoid bone (1st def.) in fishes. [L, 14.]

HUMERALIFER, HUMERALIFERUS (Lat.), adj's. Hu²-(hu⁴-me²r-a²l'a²l'i²-u²r'e²r.)-a²l'i²e²r-u²s(u⁴s). Fr., huméralifère. From humerus (q. v.), and ferre, to bear. Furnished with a cape or cloak (as in the Jacchus humeralifer). [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HUMERALIS (Lat.), adj. Hu²(hu⁴)-me²r-a²l'i²s. See HUMERAL; as a n., see DELTOID.—H. externus. See HUMERO-RADIALIS.

HUMEREN, adj. Hu²me²r-e²n. See HUMERAL.

HUMERIUS (Lat.), adj. Hu²(hu⁴)-me²(me²)/ri²-u²s(u⁴s). See HUMERAL.

HUMERO-ABDOMINALIS (Lat.), adj. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-a²l'i²(a²b)-do²m-i²n-a²l'i²s. For deriv., see HUMERUS and ABDOMEN. Pertaining to the humerus and to the abdomen; as a n., the costal part of the pectoralis major muscle in batrachians. [L, 229 (a, 29).]

HUMERO-BICIPITAL, adj. Hu²m'e²r-o-bi-si²p'i²-t'l. Pertaining to the humerus and to the biceps flexor cubiti.

HUMERO-CORONARIUS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-ko²r-on-a²l'i²-u²s(u⁴s). From humerus (q. v.), and corona, a crown. See EPITROCHLEO-PHALANX.

HUMERO-CUBITALIS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-ku²b(i²)-bi²l'a²l'i²s. From humerus (q. v.), and cubitus, the elbow. Fr., huméro-cubital [Chaussier]. Pertaining to the humerus and to the forearm; as a n., the brachialis anticus. [A, 299 (L).]—H.-c. obliquus. Fr., huméro-cubital oblique. See HUMERO-RADIALIS.

HUMERO-METACARPAL, adj. Hu²m'e²r-o-me²t-a²-ka²r-p'l. From humerus (q. v.), and metacarpus the wrist. Of or pertaining to the humerus and the metacarpus. [L.]

HUMERO-METACARPEUS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-me²t-a²-ka²r-pe²u²s(u⁴s). In the horse, a muscle representing the extensores carpi radialis longus et brevis. [L, 13.]—H.-m. externus. See EPICONDYLO-SUPERCARPEUS.—H.-m. internus. See EPITROCHLEO-SUPERCARPEUS.

HUMERO-OLECRANAL, adj. Hu²m'e²r-o-o-le²kr'a²-n'l. From humerus (q. v.), and ὀλέκρانون, the olecranon. Fr., huméro-olécrânien. Pertaining to the humerus and to the olecranon. [A, 385.]

HUMÉRO-OLÉCRÂNÏEN (Fr.), n. U⁶-ma-ro-o-la-kr'a²-ne-a²n². See HUMERO-OLECRANIUS.—Petit h.-o. See HUMERO-OLECRANIUS minor.

HUMERO-OLECRANIUS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-o²l'i²(ol)-e²-kran(kra³n)/i²-u²s(u⁴s). Fr., huméro-olécrânien. Connected with the humerus and the olecranon. [L, 13.]—H.-o. externus. Fr., huméro-olécrânien externe, court extenseur de l'avant-bras. Ger., äußerer Armbeinellenbogenmuskel, äusserer (oder mittlerer) Strecker des Vorarmes. The external portion or caput medium of the extensor triceps brachii muscle of lower mammals, the analogue of the external head of the extensor triceps brachii of man. [L.]—H.-o. internus. Fr., huméro-olécrânien interne, moyen extenseur de l'avant-bras. Ger., innerer Armbeinellenbogenmuskel kurzer (oder innerer) Strecker des Vorarmes. The internal head or caput parvum of the triceps extensor brachii muscle of lower mammals, analogous to the internal head of the triceps extensor brachii of man. [L.]—H.-o. minor. Fr., petit huméro-olécrânien, petit extenseur de l'avant-bras, anconé. Ger., kleiner Armbeinellenbogenmuskel, kleiner (oder hinterer, oder kurzer äusserer) Strecker des Vorarmes, tiefer (oder kleiner) Kopfknochenmuskel. 1. The analogue of the anconeus muscle of man, found in most of the lower mammals. [L.] 2. See ANCONÆUS (3d def.).

HUMERO-PHALANX (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-fa²l'(fa³l)-a²n(a²n²)/je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). Fr., huméro-phalangé. In the horse, the analogue of the flexor perforatus of man. [L, 13.]

HUMERO-PRÆPHALANX (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-præ(pra³-e²-fa²l'(fa³l)-a²n(a²n²)/je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). From humerus (q. v.), præ, before, and φάλαγξ (See PHALANX). See EPICONDYLO-PRÆPHALANX.

HUMERO-RADIAL, adj. Hu²m'e²r-o-ra²/di²-a²l. Lat., humero-radialis (from humerus [q. v.], and radius [q. v.]). Fr., huméro-radial. Ger., humeroradial, Armvorarmbein-. Pertaining to the humerus and to the radius; as a n. (Fr., huméro-radial, court fléchisseur de l'avant-bras, brachial antérieur; Ger., Armvorarmbeinmuskel, kurzer Beuger des Vorarmes, gewundener Beuger), the analogue of the brachialis anticus muscle of man, found in the lower animals. [L.]

HUMERO-RADIO-PHALANX (Lat.), adj. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-ra²(ra³)-di²-o^(a²)-fa²l'(fa³l)-a²n(a²n²)/je²(ge²)-u²s(u⁴s). For deriv., see HUMERUS, RADIIUS, and PHALANX. Connected with the humerus, the radius, and the phalanges; as a n., a muscle in the horse which is the analogue of the flexor perforans in man. [L, 13.]

HUMERO-SUPRACARPEUS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-su²(su)-pra³-ka²rp'e²-u²s(u⁴s). From humerus, the upper bone of the arm, supra, above, and καρπός, the wrist. A muscle connected with the humerus and the carpus. [L.]—H.-externus. See EPICONDYLO-SUPRACARPEUS.

HUMERO-SUPRARADIALIS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-o^(a²)-su²(su)-pra³-ra²(ra³)-di²-a²l'i²s. From humerus (q. v.), supra, above, and radius (q. v.). See SPINATIOR LONGUS.

HUMÉRO-TRANSVERSAIRE (Fr.), n. U⁶-ma-ro-tra²n²-s-ve²r-sa²r. See CERVICO-COSTO-HUMERALIS.

HUMERO-ULNAR, adj. Hu²m'e²r-o-u²l²na²r. For deriv., see HUMERUS and ULNA. Pertaining to the humerus and the ulna. [L.]

HUMERUS (Lat.), n. m. Hu²(hu⁴)/me²r-u²s(u⁴s). More properly written umerus. Gr., ἄμος. Fr., humérus. Ger., Oberarmbein (1st def.), Armknochen (1st def.). It., omero. Sp., humero. Syn.: os brachii (1st def.), os humeri (1st def.). 1. (Obs.) the shoulder. [A, 325.] 2. The bone of the upper arm, articulating with the scapula above and the ulna and radius below. Its upper part embraces the surgical neck, the anatomical neck, the greater and lesser tuberosities, and the head of the bone; below, it terminates in the outer and inner condyles and the trochlea. [A, 70.] 3. In ornithology, the analogue of the bone described in the 2d def.; sometimes also "the whole upper arm, from shoulder to elbow." [L, 343.]—Humeri alati. The shoulder-blades of consumptives, from their resemblance to wings. [L, 30.]

HUMEUR (Fr.), n. U⁶-m⁶r. See HUMOR and TEMPERAMENT.—H. abluigneux. See Humerus abluigneus oculi (2d def.).—H. aqueuse. See Aqueous humor.—H's catholiques. In ancient medicine, humors (2d def.) supposed to pervade the entire body. [L, 41.]—H's constituantes. The blood, lymph, and chyle. [L, 49 (a, 14).]—H. de Cotugno. See PERILYMPH.—H. de Morgagni. See LYMPHON Morgagni.—H. de Scarpa. See ENDOLYMPH.—H's excrémentielles. Excrementitious secretions. [L, 49 (a, 14).]—H's excrémento-récémentielles. Secretions, such as the buccal, nasal, and vesical mucus, saliva, tears, gastric juice, bile, etc., that are partly excrementitious and partly designed to play a further part in the organism. [L, 49 (a, 14).] Cf. H's récémentielles.—H's froides. Lit., cold humors. [D, 74.] See SCROFULA.—H. hyaloïde. See CORPUS vitreum.—H's productes.

The secretions; they comprise the h's récrémentielles and the h's excrémento-récrémentielles. [L, 49 (a, 14).]—H's récrémentielles. The cerebro-spinal, synovial, and spermatic fluids, and the milk. [L, 49 (a, 14).]—H's sécrétées. See H's produites.—H. vitrée. See CORPUS vitreum.

HUMIC ACID, n. $Hu^2m^1i^2k$. From humus (q. v.). Fr., acide humique. Ger., Huminsäure, Geinsäure, Humussäure. Syn.: ulmic acid. An amorphous colloidal substance, $C_{60}H_{14}O_{27}$, contained in humus. It has an acid reaction, and contains 8 atoms of hydrogen, replaceable by basic radicles. Its presence in the soil seems to facilitate the absorption of nitrogen from the air. [B, 2.]

HUMID, adj. $Hu^2m^1i^2d$. Lat., humidus (from humere, to be moist). Fr., humide. Ger., feucht. Moist, damp, wet. [A, 312 (a, 21).]

HUMIDITY, n. $Hu^2m^1i^2d^1i^2i$. From humidus, moist. Fr., humidité. Ger., Feuchtigkeit. It., umidità. Sp., humedad. The state of being humid.—Absolute h. Ger., absolute Feuchtigkeit. As applied to the atmosphere, the actual weight of vapor of water in a given bulk; usually reckoned in grains to the cubic foot. [C. Denison, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Nov. 28, 1885, p. 600.]—Relative h. Ger., relative Feuchtigkeit. As applied to the atmosphere, the proportion of its actual amount of moisture to what it would contain if saturated; saturation being 100, the relative h. is expressed in hundredths. [C. Denison, l. c.]

HUMIDUM (Lat.), n. n. $Hu^2(hu)^1m^1i^2d-u^3m(u^4m)$. From humere, to be moist. A humor.—H. nativum articuloform. The synovial fluid. [a, 40.]—H. primigenium, H. radicale. A name given by the humoralists to the fluid which was supposed to give consistency and flexibility to different parts of the body. [a, 40.]—H. seminale. The seminal fluid. [a, 40.]—H. vitreum. See CORPUS vitreum.

HUMIFORME (Fr.), adj. $U^3me-fô^3rm$. Resembling humus or humic acid. [A, 385.]

HUMIFUSE, adj. $Hu^2m^1i^2fu^2s$. Lat., humifusus (from humus, the ground, and fundere, to pour out). Fr., h. Spread over the ground (said of plants). [B, 19 (a, 24).]

HUMILIS (Lat.), adj. $Hu^2(hu)^1m^1i^2l^1s$. From humus, the ground. 1. Of plants, low in stature as compared with others of the same genus. [B, 19 (a, 24).] 2. As a n., an old term for the rectus inferior oculi muscle, because its action gives the impression of humility. [F.]

HUMILUS (Lat.), n. m. $Hu^2(hu)^1m^1i^2l^1u^3s(u^4s)$. See HUMULUS.

HUMIN, n. $Hu^2m^1i^2n$. See HUMIC ACID.—H'ssäure (Ger.). See HUMIC ACID.

HUMIRI (Lat.), HUMIRIA (Lat.), HUMIRIUM (Lat.), n's n., f., and n. $Hu^2(hu)^1m^1i^2r-i^2e$, $hu^2(hu)^1m^1i^2r-i^2a^2$, $-u^3m(u^4m)$. Fr., humirie. Ger., Humiribaum. Of Aublet, a genus of the Humiriacæ (Fr., humiriaceæ; Ger., Humiriaceen), which are a natural order of balsamiferous, exstipulate trees, or shrubs, including Vantanea, H., and Sacoglottis. The Humiriæ of Reichenbach are the same. [B, 12, 42 (a, 24).]—Gujanischer Humiribaum (Ger.). See Humiria balsamifera.—Humiri balsam. See under Humiria floribunda.—Humiria balsamifera. Ger., gujanischer Humiribaum. A tree from 30 to 40 feet high, growing in Guiana, and yielding, when the bark is incised, a reddish juice which concretes and resembles storax. It is burned as a perfume, and is used internally as a stimulating expectorant in rheumatism and in tapeworm, and externally as an ingredient in salves and ointments. [B, 12, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—Humiria floribunda. Ger., reichblütiger Humiribaum. A smaller species, 20 to 40 feet high, growing in Brazil, where its balsam is called umire, and is used like copaiba in gonorrhœa and diarrhœa. The bark furnishes a perfume. [B, 12, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—"Am. Jour. of Pharm.," July, 1888, p. 33 (a, 24).—Humiria gabonensis. A species (formerly regarded by Baillon as constituting a distinct genus) called djouga in Gaboon, and having a drupaceous fruit with a very hard stone, the latter full of lacunæ filled with a balsamic resin. [B, 121.]—Reichblütiger Humiribaum (Ger.). See Humiria floribunda.

HUMISTRATOUS, adj. $Hu^2m^1i^2st^1ra^2t-u^3s$. From humus, the ground, and sternere, to spread out. See HUMIFUSE.

HUMIVAGUE (Fr.), adj. U^3me-va^3g . From humus, the ground, and vagari, to wander. In zoology, crawling, creeping. [A, 385.]

HUMMER (Ger.), n. Hum^1me^3r . The genus Homarus. [A, 528.]

HUMMING, adj. and n. $Hu^3m^1i^2n$. 1. (Adj.) producing or having the quality of a hum. 2. (N) see HUM.

HUMOPIC ACID, n. $Hu^2m-op^1i^2k$. For deriv., see HUMUS and OPIMUM. Fr., acide humopique. An acid, $C_{22}H_{20}O_7$, formed when narcotine is heated to 220° C.; occurring as a dark-brown, amorphous mass, insoluble in water and in weak acids, soluble in alkaline solutions. [B, 93 (a, 38).]

HUMOR (Lat.), n. m. $Hu^2(hu)^1m^1o^3r$. Gen., -or^1is. Fr., humeur. Ger., Feuchtigkeit. It., umore. Sp., h. 1. Any fluid of the body. 2. Of the old writers, a fluid supposed to be present in the body which by its excess gave the type to a certain disease. According to their ideas there were four h's, yellow and black bile, blood, and phlegm. [K, 3.] 3. In popular language, a chronic skin disease attributed to disorder of the blood.—Aqueous h. Lat., h., aqueus. Fr., humeur aqueuse. Ger., Kammerwasser. The fluid which fills the anterior chamber, between the cornea anteriorly and the lens and suspensory ligament posteriorly; in weight, 5 or 6 grains; specific gravity, 1.0003; coefficient of refraction, 1.3366. It contains albumin, sodium chloride, and calcium phosphate in small quantities. [F.]—Cardinal h's. The blood, mucus, bile, and black bile, constituting the h's of the ancients. [a, 40.]—Catholic h's. Those h's common to all parts of the body, e. g., the blood and lymph. [a, 40.]—Cold h's. Fr., humeurs froides. See SCROFULA.—Constituent h's. See H. alimentarius.—Corroding h. See ATRABILIS.—Crystalline h. See Crystalline LENS.—Dartrous h. Fr., humour dartreux. A h. supposed to give rise to dartrous diseases or to herpeticism. [G.]—Glacial h. See H. glacialis.—H. albugineus (oculi), H. albugineus. Fr., humour albugineus (2d def.). 1. Of James, the aqueous h. 2. Of Paré, the vitreous h. [B, 52.]—H. albuminus. See Aqueous h.—H. alimentarius. Those fluids which build up or produce the tissues of the human body, e. g., the blood, chyle, or lymph. [a, 40.]—H. amnii. See Liquor AMNII.—H. aqueus, H. aqueus. See Aqueous h.—H. articularis. See SYNOVIA.—H. ceruminosus. The cerumen of the ear. [a, 40.]—H. [a, 40.]—H. ovatus, H. oviformis. An old term for the aqueous h. [F.]—H. pericardii. The normal pericardial fluid. [a, 40.]—H. purulentus. See PUS.—H. Scarpæ. See ENDOLYMPH.—H. seminalis. See H. genitalis.—Humores utiles. Ger., nützliche Feuchtigkeiten. The constituent and recremental h's embracing in the latter class the serous and mucous secretions, the bile, the pancreatic and intestinal juices, etc. [a, 40.]—H. venereus. See H. genitalis.—H. vitreus, Hyaloid h. See CORPUS vitreum.—Milky h. Of Wharton and Haller, the uterine milk (q. v.).—Ocular h's. See H's of the eye.—Secreted h. See SECRETION.—Vitreous h. See CORPUS vitreum.—Vitreous h. of the ear. Fr., vitrine auditive. Ger., Glas-körper des Ohres. See ENDOLYMPH.

HUMORAL, adj. $Hu^2mo^2r-l^1$. Lat., humoralis (from humor, a fluid). Fr., h. Ger., h., humoralisch. Of Harvey, pertaining to or proceeding from the humors. [D, 20.]

HUMORALISM, n. $Hu^2mo^2r-l^1i^2z^1m$. See HUMORAL PATHOLOGY.

HUMORARIUS (Lat.), adj. $Hu^2(hu)^1mo^2r-a(a^3)r^1i^2u^3s(u^4s)$. See HUMORIC.

HUMORIC, adj. $Hu^2mo^2r-i^2k$. Lat., humoricus, humorarius (from humor, a fluid). Fr., humorique. Due to or arising from a liquid. [a, 17.] See H. SOUND.

HUMORISM, n. $Hu^2mo^2r-i^2z^1m$. Fr., humorisme. See HUMORAL PATHOLOGY.

HUMORIST, n. $Hu^2mo^2r-i^2st$. Lat., humorista (from humor, a fluid). Fr., humoriste. See HUMORALIST.

HUMORO-VITALISM, n. $Hu^2m^1o^2r-o-vit^1a^2l-i^2z^1m$. From humor, a fluid, and vita, life. Fr., humoro-vitalisme. The doctrine that the seat of life is in the humors. [A, 385.]

HUMOUR, n. Hu^2mo^2r . See HUMOR.

HUMP, n. Hu^3mp . Fr., bosse. Ger., Höcker. It., gobba. Sp., giba. A protuberance.—H.-back. See KYPHOSIS.—H.-backed. Affected with kyphosis.—Visceral h. In the Mollusca, the thin-walled dorsal or antipodal region formed by the soft viscera. [L, 121 (a, 39).]

HUMUANCHIANG (Chin.), n. See GELSEMIUM elegans.

HUMULA (Beng.), n. The Kaempferia galanga. [B, 172 (a, 24).] Cf. KUMULA.

HUMULIN, n. $Hu^2mu^2l-i^2n$. From humulus, the hop. Fr., humuline. Ger., H. See LUPULIN.

HUMULINE, n. $Hu^2m^1u^2l-en$. From humulus, hops. A mixture of tincture of hops and infusion of hops, previously evaporated separately. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

HUMULO-TANNIC ACID, n. $Hu^2mu^2l-o-ta^2n^1i^2k$. Fr., acide humulo-tannique. A whitish, amorphous mass insoluble in ether, soluble in acetic ether, in alcohol, and in hot water. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

HUMULUS (Lat.), n. m. $Hu^2(hu)^1mu^2l(mu^2l)^1u^3s(u^4s)$. From humus, the earth. 1. A genus of urticaceous plants. The Humulus of Dumortier are a tribe of the Urticaceæ, consisting of the single genus H. 2. Of the U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph., the dried strobiles of H. lupulus. fruit (the ovary, which changes into a small nut enveloped in an enlarged sepal). [B. 12, 180 (a, 24).]—Glandula humuli. See HOP and LUPULIN.—Herba humuli. The leaves of H. lupulus. [B. 180 (a, 24).]—Humuli strobili. Hops. [a, 24].—H. lupulus. Fr., houblon, salsperrille nationale, vigne du Nord. Ger., (gemeiner Hopfen). It., luppolo. Sp., lúpulo, hombrecillo. The common hop; a dicelious, perennial plant producing long, annual, twining stems, indigenous to North America (where it is found growing wild) and to Europe. It is extensively cultivated for the sake of its ament-like fruit (strobiles), called hops, which are used in the manufacture of beer. The calyx and scales in the fruit are covered with reddish atoms (see LUPULIN) containing the active principle of the plant. Hops are tonic and slightly narcotic, and have been used, combined with capsicum, in the dyspepsia of alcoholism as a substitute for alcoholic stimulants. According to Bartholow, hops increase the action of the heart, excite the cutaneous circulation, and cause diaphoresis. They are also considered anaphrodisiac. They are used empirically in the form of a pillow for sleeplessness, and, placed in a bag and dipped in hot water, as an anodyne fomentation. In Belgium the young and tender tops are eaten like asparagus. [B. 5, 12, 18, 34, 77, 180 (a, 24).] See also HOP.—Infusum humuli. Fr., tisane de houblon. Ger., Hopfen-aufguss. Syn.: infusum lupuli [Br. Ph.]. A preparation made by infusing $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. (troy) of hops in 1 pint of water [U. S. Ph., 1870]; or $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. (av.) of hops in 10 fl. oz. of water [Br. An inflammation characterized by the infiltration of the vitreous by large numbers of lymphoid cells, so that the vitreous consists practically of a large abscess. It may be circumscribed or diffuse, idiopathic or traumatic. It may accompany a general panophthalmitis, or be the result of an intra-ocular thrombus. [F.]—H. serosa. Fr., hyalite séreuse. Ger., seröse H. (oder Glaskörperentzündung). A low grade of h. characterized by opacities, and fluidity of the vitreous, and failing vision. It is usually due to chorioiditis or cyclitis. [F.]—Suppurating h. Lat., h. suppurativa. See H. purulenta.

HYACINTHUS ORIENTALIS.

HYALODEITIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od-e^2-(e)^{ti}2s$. Gen., -it'idōs (-it'idis). See HYALITIS.

HYALODEOGLISCHROTIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od^{i^2}(e^2)-o^2)-gl^2sk(gli^2sch^2)/ro^2t(e^2)as$. Gen., -rot'e^2os (-et'is). From υαλοειδής, vitreous, and γλισχροτής, viscosity. Viscidity of the corpus vitreum. [A, 322.]

HYALODEOMALACIA (Lat.), HYALODEOMALACOSIS (Lat.), n's f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od-e^2-o^2)-ma^2(ma^2)-a(a^2)/s^2(ki^2)-a^2-a^2k(a^2k)-os^2is$. Gen., -ac'ia, -cos'eos (-cos'is). From υαλοειδής, glassy, and μαλακία, softness. Softening of the corpus vitreum. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYALODEONYXIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od-e^2-o^2)-n^2x(nu^6x)^{i^2}s$. Gen., -nyx'eos (-nyx'is). See HYALONYXIS.

HYALODEOPROPTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od-e^2-o^2)-pro^2p-to^2si^2s$. Gen., -ptos'eos (-is). From υαλοειδής, glassy, and πρόπτωσης, a falling forward. Fr., hyalodéopropiose. Ger., Glaskörperworf. Prolapse of the corpus vitreum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYALODES (Lat.), adj. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-od-e^2-as$. Gr., υαλοειδής (from υαλος, glass, and ειδος, resemblance). Fr., hyaloïde. Ger., glashühlich. See HYALOID; as a n. (Ger., Glaskörper), the corpus vitreum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYALOGEN, n. $Hi-a^2I'o-jc^2n$. From υαλος, glass, and γεννάν, to engender. An albuminous substance found in cartilage; so called because it is readily reduced to hyalin. [Krukenberg, "Ztschr. f. Biol.," xx, 305, in "Ctblrl. f. d. med. Wssnsch.," Jan. 10, 1885, p. 21 (B).]

HYALOID, adj. $Hi-a^2I-oid$. Gr., υαλώδης (from υαλος, glass, and ειδος, resemblance). Lat., hyaloides, hyaloïdes, hyaloïdus. Fr., hyaloïde, hyaloïdien. Ger., glashühlich (1st def.). It., vitreo (1st def.). Sp., vitreo (1st def.). 1. Pertaining to the corpus vitreum; as a n. (Lat., hyaloïdea), the h. membrane. 2. As a n., of Eimer, a clear zone surrounding the nucleolus of cells. ["Arch. f. mikr. Anat.," 1857, p. 94 (J).]

HYALOIDEA (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-i^2d(ed)^{e^2}-a^2$. See under HYALOID.—H. PROPRIA. See HYALOID MEMBRANE.

HYALOIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-i^2d(ed)^{e^2}-it^2s$. Gen., -it'idōs (-it'idis). See HYALITIS.

HYALOIDIOPROPTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-i^2d(ed)^{e^2}-pro^2p-to^2si^2s$. Gen., -ptos'eos (-is). See HYALODEOPROPTOSIS.

HYALOIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-i^2d(ed)^{e^2}-i(e)^{ti}2s$. Gen., -it'idōs (-it'idis). Fr., hyaloïdite. See HYALITIS.

HYALOLÆNA (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-len^2(la^2e^2)n-a^2$. Of Bunge, a genus of the Umbelliferae; of Bentham and Hooker, a section of the genus Selinum. [B, 42 (a, 24).]—H. SEVERZOWI. The Ferula sumbul. [B, 93.]

HYALOM (Ger.), n. Hu^6-a^2-lom . See HYALOMA.—H. DER HAUT. See COLLOID MILIUM.

HYALOMA (Lat.), n. n. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o^2)-ma^2$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From υαλος, glass. Fr., hyalome. Ger., Hyalom. A conversion of the eye into a glass-like mass. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYALOMENINX (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-men^2(man)^{i^2}n^2x$. Gen., -ing'gos (-ing'gis). From υαλος, glass, and μηνίγξ, a membrane. A hyaloid membrane, especially that of the eye. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYALONYXIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-ni^2x(nu^6x)^{i^2}s$. Gen., -nyx'eos (-is). From υαλος, glass, and νύξις, a pricking. Puncture of the corpus vitreum, as in keratonyxis. [A, 322.]

HYALOPHAGIA (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-fa^2(fa^2g)^{i^2}-a^2$. From υαλος, glass, and φαγνν, to eat. Ger., Glassefressen. A mania for, or a vicious habit of, eating glass. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYALOPLASTM, n. $Hi-a^2I-o-pla^2z^2m$. Gen., -plasm'atos (-atis). Lat., hyaloplastma (from υαλος, glass, and πλάσμα, anything formed). Fr., hyaloplasme. 1. Of Hanstein (1880), the fundamental hyaline substance of cells. 2. Of Strasburger, the more homogeneous and fluid part of the protoplasm of the formative cell. [J, 15; "Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," N. S. xxx, p. 33 (a, 32).] Cf. SPONGIOPLASTM.—Nuclear h. Fr., hyaloplasme nucléaire. Of Strasburger, the reduplicated filament of the nucleus, more dense than the hyaline substance (Ger., Kernsafft) of the nucleus itself. [B, 104 (a, 21).]

HYALOPTERUS, adj. $Hi-a^2I-o^2pt'e^2r-u^2s$. Lat., hyalopterus (from υαλος, glass, and πτερον, a wing). Fr., hyaloptère. Having transparent wings. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYALOSOMA (Lat.), n. n. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2(a^3)-o(o^2)-so^2)-ma^2$. Gen., -som'atos (-atis). From υαλος, glass, and σωμα, a body. Fr., hyalosome. Of Planter, the hyaline part of the germinal spot in the maturing ova of molluscs. ["Arch. f. mikr. Anat.," 1885 (J).] See also PROTIHALOSOMA.

HYALOSPERMUS, adj. $Hi-a^2I-o-spu^2r-m^2u^2s$. Lat., hyalospermus (from υαλος, glass, and σπέρμα, a seed). Having transparent seeds. [L, 107.]

HYANASÄURE (Ger.), n. $Hu^6-an'a^2-zoir-e^2$. See HYPERIC ACID.

HYANCHE (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-a^2n^2(a^2n^2)/ke^2(ch^2)a$. Gen., -anch'ēs. Gr., υάγχη (from εξ, a swine, and ἀγκιν, to strangle). See CYANCHE tonsillarīs.

HYBANTHUS (Lat.), n. m. $Hi^2b(hu^6b)-a^2n^2(a^2n^2)/thi^2s(thu^6s)$. From υβος, the hump of a camel, and άνθος, a flower. Of Jacquin, a genus of the Violaceae tribe Viola. The Hybanthea are a section of the Viola. [B, 42, 121 (a, 21).]—H. breviflorus. A species found in Brazil, used like Ionidium ipecacuanha. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—H. ipecacuanha. The Ionidium ipecacuanha. [B, 93 (a, 35).]—H. maytenillo. A species growing in Chili. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—H. microphyllus. The Ionidium microphyllum. [B, 121 (a, 35).]—H. parviflorus. The Ionidium parviflorum. [B, 121 (a,

35).]—H. scandens. The Ionidium h. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—H. striatus. A species found in the West Indies; used like Ionidium ipecacuanha. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—H. urticifolius. A Brazilian species. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—H. verticillatus. The Ionidium polygalifolium. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

HYBERNATION, n. $Hi-hu^6rn-a^2shu^2n$. See HIBERNATION.

HYBOMA (Lat.), n. n. $Hi(hu^6)-bo^2)-ma^2$. Gen., -hom'atos (-atis). Gr., υβωμα. See GIBBOSITY.—H. scoliosis. Lateral curvature of the spine. [L, 29 (a, 29).]

HYBOMÈTRE (Fr.), n. $E-ho-me^2tr'$. From υβος, a hump, and μέτρον, a measure. An instrument for measuring a pathological projection. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYBOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hi(hu^6)-bo^2)-si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). Gr., υβωσις. See GIBBOSITY.

HYBRID, adj. $Hi^2br'i^2d$. Lat., hybridus (from υβρις, wanton violence). Fr., hybride. Ger., h. 1. Of mixed origin, cross-bred, mongrel (said of animals and plants). 2. Of a disease, due to more than one kind of poison. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24).]—H. of measles and scarlet fever. See RÖTHELN.

HYBRIDATION, n. $Hi-br'i^2d-a^2shu^2n$. Fr., h. See HYBRIDIZATION.

HYBRIDISM, n. $Hi^2br'i^2d-i^2z^2m$. From υβρις, wanton violence. The act of making or becoming hybrid.—Syphilitic h. Of Verneuil, a condition in which the effects of syphilis and some other diseases (such as alcoholism, malarial diseases, neoplasms, varicose ulcers, etc.) are combined. It is maintained that this combination produces affections that are unlike either of the diseases concerned, though most resembling syphilis, and also that the resulting affection is entirely unaffected by antisyphilitic treatment. ["Med. Chron.," April, 1888, p. 47; "Union méd.," Dec. 17, 1887 (G).]

HYBRIDITY, n. $Hi-br'i^2d-i^2t^2i^2$. From υβρις, wanton violence. Fr., hybridité. The state of being hybrid.

HYBRIDIZATION, n. $Hi-br'i^2d-i^2za^2shu^2n$. From υβριζειν, to wax wanton. The process, or the fact, of the formation of a hybrid (disease, animal, or plant). See CROSS-FERTILIZATION.

HYDALEOUS, adj. $Hi-dal'e-u^2s$. Gr., υδαλεος (from υδωρ, water). Watery, dropsical. [A, 311 (a, 21).]

HYDANTOIC ACID, n. $Hid-a^2n-to^2i^2k$. Fr., acide hydantolique. Ger., Hydantoinensäure. Glycolamic or glycoluric acid, a crystalline body, $C_3H_5N_2O_3 = NH_2.CO.NH - CH_2.CO.OH$, possessing the properties of a monobasic acid, and derived from hydantoin (glycolyl urea) by the addition of the elements of a molecule of water. [B, 4.]

HYDANTOIN, n. $Hid-a^2n-to^2i^2n$. Fr., hydantoiné. Ger., H., Hydantoin. Glycolyl urea, a body, $C_3H_5N_2O_3 = CH_2.CO.NH_2.CO$, forming colorless, acicular crystals, having a sweet taste, soluble in water, and melting at $206^\circ C$. [B, 3, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDARTHROS (Lat.), n. m. $Hid(hu^6d)-a^2r^2thro^2s$. See HYDARTHROS.

HYDARTHROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $Hid(hu^6d)-a^2r^2thro^2si^2s$. Gen., -thros'eos (-os'is). From υδωρ, water, and άρθρον, a joint. Fr., hyarthrose. See HYDARTHROSIS.

HYDARTHROSUS (Lat.), n. m. $Hid(hu^6d)-ar^2th^2ru^2s(ru^6s)$. See HYDARTHROS and HYDARTHROSIS.

HYDATENOMENOUS, adj. $Hid-a^2-te^2n-o^2m-e^2n-u^2s$. Gr., υδαταινόμενος. Lat., hydatenomenus. 1. Dropsical. 2. Hydræmic. 3. Having watery menses. [A, 311, 325.]

HYDATEROCELE (Lat.), n. f. $Hid(hu^6d)-a^2(a^2)-e^2nt-e^2r-o(o^2)-sc(ka^2)/le^2la$; in Eng., hi-da^2t-e^2nt'e^2r-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From υδωρ, water, εύτερον, an intestine, and κύλη, a tumor. See HYDENTEROCELE.

HYDATIC, adj. $Hi-da^2t'i^2k$. Containing hydatids. [a, 34.]

HYDATID, n. $Hi^2da^2t-i^2d$. Written, also, hydatide. Gr., υδατις. Lat., hydatid. Ger., H., Hydatide, Wasserblase. 1. See ECHINOCOCCUS HOMOINIS. 2. The vesicle containing an echinococcus. 3. In anatomy, a name for certain bulbous cyst-like remnants of atrophied embryonic structures, one of which, the h. of Morgagni, hangs by a pedicle from the fimbriated extremity of the oviduct, and another from the epoophoron. 4. In the pl., h's, see CYSTICA. [A, 5; B, 28 (a, 27).]—Alveolar h's. The nerve sacs at the roots of the teeth. [a, 40.]—Barren h. A h. (2d def.) in which there are no echinococcus heads developed upon the endocyst, but fluid alone is contained within it. [Ashhurst (a, 39).] See ACEPHALOCYSTS.—Carcinomatous h. Fr., hydatide carcinomatuse. A name given in the last century, by Adams, to the animal supposed to constitute the morbid tissue of cancer. [a, 40.]—Fertile h. An h. the endocyst of which is supplied with minute buds or germæ, which develop into scolices or echinococcus heads that eventually break loose from their attachments and form secondary and tertiary cysts. These cysts are not cured by tapping. [L, 40.]—Gid h. See CENURUS cerebrales.—H. cyst. See H. (2d def.).—H's of Morgagni. Lat., corpora Morgagni, corpuscula suceiformia [Rosenmüller]. Fr., hydatides pédiculées. Syn.: hyaloid bodies [Simpson]. The terminal bulbs of the vestiges of the Müllerian duct, which in the female hang from the fimbriated extremity of the oviduct by a pedicle in the female, and in the male is situated between the body of the testicle and the upper globe of the

HYDATIDE (Fr., Ger.), n. E-da³-ted, hu⁶-da³-ted'e². See HYDATID.—Hühnlich (Ger.). See HYDATIFORM.—H'ukrankheit (Ger.). See HYDATIDOSIS.—H's pédiculées (Fr.). See HYDATIDS of Morgagni.

HYDATIDEPATTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-e²p-(ap)-a³-ti(e)/ti²s. Gen., -i'tidos (-idis). From đaris, a drop of water, and πάτισ, pertaining to the liver. Fr., hydatidepattite. Hepatitis associated with hydatids. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATIDIC, adj. Hid-a³-ti²d'i²k. Lat., hydatidicus (from đaris, a drop of water). Fr., hydatidique. Pertaining to hydatids. [L, 107.]

HYDATIDIFORM, adj. Hid-a³-ti²d'i²-fo²rm. Fr., hydatidiforme. Ger., hydatidenähnlich. See HYDATIDOID.

HYDATIDOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-o(o³)-se-(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hid-a³-ti²d'o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From đaris, a hydatid, and κύλη, a tumor. Ger., Wasserblasenbruch. An oschecele containing hydatids. [E.]

HYDATIDOCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-o(o³)-se²f(ke²f)/a²l(a³l)-u³s(u⁴s). From đaris, a hydatid, and κεφαλή, the head. See Gm.

HYDATIDODES (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-od'ez(as). See HYDATIDOID.

HYDATIDOGENOUS, adj. Hid-a²t-i²d-o²f'e²n-u³s. From đaris, a hydatid, and γεννάω, to engender. Having the capability of producing a hydatid. [a, 40.]

HYDATIDOID, adj. Hid-a²t-i²d-oid. Lat., hydatidoides, hydatidoides (from đaris, a hydatid, and είδος, resemblance). Fr., hydatidoïde. Ger., hydatidenähnlich. Resembling hydatids.

HYDATIDOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d o'ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From đaris, a hydatid. Ger., Blasenwurmgeschwulst. A hydatidic tumor. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATIDOSCHEOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-o²s-ke²(ch²e²)-o(o³)-se-(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hid-a²t-i²d-o²s'ke²-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From đaris, a hydatid, σχηρον, the scrotum, and κύλη, a tumor. See HYDATIDOCELE.

HYDATIDOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-o'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From đaris, a hydatid. Fr., hydatidose. Ger., Hydatidenkrankheit. The state of being affected with hydatids. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATIDOUS, adj. Hid-a²t-i²d-u³s. Lat., hydatidosus. Fr., hydatideux. Affected with hydatids. [A, 322.]

HYDATIFORM, adj. Hi-da²t-i²-fo²rm. From đaris, a hydatid, and forma, form. See HYDATIDOID.

HYDATIGENA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²j(i²g)/e²n-a³. From đaris, a hydatid, and γένος, a genus. A genus of the Teniæ in the larval state. [Goeze (L, 16)].—H. granulosa. See Echinococcus hominis.—H. orbicularis, H. oblonga. See Cysticercus tenuicollis.

HYDATIGENOUS, adj. Hid-a²t-i²j'e²n-u³s. From đaris, a hydatid, and γεννάω, to engender. Fr., hydatigène. Causing, or bearing, or caused by hydatids. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDATINIFORM, adj. Hi²d-a²t-i²n'i²-fo²rm. See HYDATIDOID.

HYDATINUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i(e)/nu³s(nu⁴s). Gen., đáreus, đárinus. Fr., hydatinien. Watery; as a n., in the neut., hydatinum (= đáreus), a certain ancient collyrium made with rain-water. [A, 311; Galen (A, 325).]

HYDATIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²s. Gen., -at'idos (-idis). Gr., đaris (from đawp, water). Fr., hydatide. Ger., H. Hydatide, Wasserbläschen. It., idatide. Sp., hidatide. Lit., a particle of water (Lat., aquula), a drop. 1. A hydatid, or a hydatid cyst; of Lamarck, a genus of the Teniæ in the larval state; of Rudolphi, the Echinococcus hominis. [L, 16.] 2. (Obs.) a rounded vesicle, as large as a pea, with pellucid contents, usually solitary, met with often on the eyelids. [G, 11].—H. accephalocystis. See ACEPHALOCYSTIS.—H. cellulosa. Cystic degeneration in cellular tissue. A small cystic tumor about 3 lines in diameter situated at the junction of the testicle and the epididymis, attached to the tunica vaginalis. [a, 40].—Tænia h. An old term for the vesicular mole. [A, 42.]

HYDATISM, n. Hi²d/a³-ti²z'm. Gr., đatistmós. Lat., hydatismus. Fr., hydatisme. Ger., Wassergeschwür, Flüssigkeitsschall. It., idatismo. Sp., hidatismo. 1. Of Cælius Aurelianus, the sound produced by moving a liquid contained in a cavity, especially that of the thorax. [L, 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).] 2. The percussion note elicited in hydrothorax. [L, 135 (a, 39).]

HYDATISOMATOUS, adj. Hi²d-a³-ti²-som'a²-u³s. Lat., hydatismatus (from đaris, a drop of water, and σώμα, a body). Of De

HYDATOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hi²d(hu⁶d) a²t(a³t)-o(o³)-se-(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hi²d'a²t-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-æ). See HYDATIDOCELE and HYDROCELE.

HYDATOCHLOOS (Lat.), HYDATOCHLOROS (Lat.), HYDATOCHLOUS (Lat.), adj's. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²k(o³ch²)/lo(lo²)-o²s, -o²k(o³ch²)/lo(ro²s, -o²k(o³ch²)/lo(lo²)-u³s(u⁴s). Gr., đatōchloos (from đawp, water, and χλός, the first light-green shoot of plants). Ger., wassergrün. Watery and green. [A, 311 (a, 17).]

HYDATOCHOLOS (Lat.), HYDATOCHOLUS (Lat.), adj's. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²k(o³ch²)/o²l(o²)-o²s, -u³s(u⁴s). Gr., đatōcholos (from đawp, water, and χολος, bile). Ger., wässrig-gallicht. Of Hippocrates, watery and containing bile (said of the stools). [A, 322.]

HYDATOCHROOS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²k(o³ch²)/ro(ro²)-o²s. Gr., đatōchroos (from đawp, water, and χρῶς, color). Ger., wasserfarbig. Of the color of water; of Hippocrates, pale as water. [A, 311 (a, 17); L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATODEITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-od-e²-i(e)/ti²s. Gen., -i'tidos (-idis). From đatōdēs, watery (see also itis). Inflammation of the lining membrane of the anterior chamber of the eye. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATODES (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-od'ez(as). Gr., đatōdēs (from đawp, water, and είδος, resemblance). Lat., hydatoides. Ger., wässrig. 1. Of Hippocrates, watery; of urine, limpid; of a person, dropsical. 2. Of Galen, diluted with water (said of wine). [A, 311 (a, 17); L, 50 (a, 14).] 3. As a n., the aqueous humor. [B.]

HYDATOGENESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o(o³)-je²n-(ge²n)'e²s-i²s. Gen., -es'eos (-gev'esis). From đawp, water, and γένεσις, a production. Fr., hydatogénèse. Ger., Wasserbildung. The formation of water, or of a watery fluid, in the body. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDATOID, adj. Hi²d/a²t-oid. Gr., đatōides, đatōeídēs, đatōídēs (from đawp, water, and είδος, resemblance). Lat., hydatoides. Fr., hydatoïde. Ger., wässerröhlich (1st def.), blasenwurmähnlich (2d def.). It., idatoides. Sp., hidatoides. 1. Water-like. [L, 41, 44 (a, 14).] 2. Resembling a hydatid. [a, 17.] 3. As a n., the aqueous humor and its supposititious investment.

HYDATONCUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²n'k'u³s(u⁴s). From đawp, water, and γκῶκος, a tumor. Ger., Wassergeschwulst. A swelling with watery contents. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDATOPHTHONGOS (Lat.), HYDATOPHTHONGUS (Lat.), n's m. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²f-tho²n'g'o³s, -gu³s(gu⁴s). From đawp, water, and φθόγγος, the voice. Fr., hydatophthonge. Of Piorry, hydatism. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDATOPOSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o(o³)-po(po²)/zi²(si²)-a³. Gr., đatoposia (from đawp, water, and πόσις, a drinking). Fr., hydatoposie. Ger., Wassertrinken. The drinking of water. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYDATOPOTA (Lat.), HYDATOPOTES (Lat.), n's m. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²p(o²)-a³, -ez(as). Gen., -op'ote, -op'otu (-æ). From đawp, water, and πότης, to drink. A water-drinker. [A, 322 (a, 21).]

HYDATOSCHEOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-i²d-o²s-ke²(ch²e²)-o(o³)-se-(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hid-a²-o²s'ke²-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. See HYDATIDOSCHEOCELE.

HYDATOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). From đatōsiv, to make watery. Fr., hydatose. See HYDATOGENESIS.

HYDATOTHERAPIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-o(o³)-the²-ra²p(a³)-i(e)a³. Fr., hydatothérapie. See HYDROTHERAPY.

HYDATULA (Lat.), n. f. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-a²t(a³t)-u²(u³)-a³. From đaris, a drop of water. A genus of the Teniæ in the larval state. [L.]—H. cerebralis. See Cœnurus cerebralis.—H. solitaria. See CYSTICERCUS tenuicollis.

HYDERIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-e²r-i(i²)-a(a³)-si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-as'is). Gr., đēriasis. See HYDROPS.

HYDERICUS (Lat.), HYDERODES (Lat.), adj's. Hid(hu⁶d)-e²r-i²k-u³s(u⁴s), -e²r-od'ez(as). Gr., đērikós, đērodēs. Dropsical. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDERONCUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-e²r-o²n'k'u³s(u⁴s). From đēpos, the dropsy, and γκῶκος, a tumor. See HYDATONCUS.

HYDEROS (Lat.), HYDERUS (Lat.), n's m. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-e²r-o²s, -u³s(u⁴s). Gr., đēpos (from đawp, water). 1. Of Greek writers, diabetes, also dropsy. 2. Of later writers, ascites and anasarca. 3. Of Paulus Ægineta, hepatherderus. [L, 50 (a, 14); L, 107; L, 135 (a, 38).]

HYDNE (Fr.), n. Ed-n'. See HYDNUM.—H. blanc. See HYDNUM album.—H. cure-oreille. See HYDNUM auriscalpium.—H. écailleux. See HYDNUM subsquamosum.—H. en forme de coupe. See HYDNUM cyathiforme.—H. grisson. See HYDNUM erinaceum.—H. hérisson souterrain. See HYDNUM erinaceum subterraneum.—H. imbriqué. See HYDNUM imbricatum (1st def.) and HYDNUM repandum.—H. sinué. See HYDNUM repandum.—H. zoné. See HYDNUM cyathiforme concrescens.

HYDNOCARPUS (Lat.), n. m. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-no(no³)-ka³rp'u³s(u⁴s). From đwvov (see HYDNUM) and καρπός, a fruit. Fr., hydno-carpe. Of Gärtner, a genus of the Biacææ, tribe Pangieæ. [B, 121 (a, 35)].—H. anthelminticus. A tree growing in Cochinchina not generally recognized by botanists, but from the structure of the seed probably a species of Gynocardia. The seed, known in Siam as lukrabo, and in China as ta-fung-tze, is used in a variety of skin diseases, and is said to be sometimes substituted for St. Ignatius's beans. [B, 18, 121, Hooker (a, 35).]—H. inebrians. A species found in Ceylon, where it is called makoolo, and on the Malabar coast. The fruit is extremely poisonous, and is used in New Zealand as a fish poison. An oil obtained from the seed is used in India in leprosy and skin diseases. [B, 19, 121 (a, 35).]—H. odoratus. See GYNOCARDIA odorata.—H. venenatus. See H. inebrians.—H. wightianus. A species found in India. An infusion of the seeds is used as a detergent douche after delivery, and an oil obtained from them is used like chaulmoogra oil. [A, 479 (a, 21).]

HYDNON (Lat.), n. n. Hīd(hu⁴d)no²n. Gr., ὑδνον. See HYDNUM.

HYDNORA (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)no²r-a². From ὑδνον, an edible fungus, and ὄργαν, to see. Fr., hydnore. Syn.: Aphyteia [Acharius]. Of Thunberg, a genus of fungus-like, leafless plants, of the Cytnaceae, tribe Hydnoreae, parasitic on the roots of the Euphorbiaceae, etc. The Hydnoreae Fr. (hydnorées) are: Of Benham and Hooker, a tribe of the Cytnaceae; of Reichenbach, a division of the Cytnaceae. The Hydnoreae of Agardh are an order of Fungi, including H. and Rafflesia. [B, 19, 38, 42, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

—H. african. Fr., aphytée aquatique, melon d'eau de Hottentots. Jackal's-kost, a species found at the Cape of Good Hope. It smells like decaying roast beef. The Hottentots eat the fruit, raw or cooked. [B, 19, 173 (a, 24).]

HYDNUM (Lat.), n. n. Hīd(hu⁴d)ni²m(mu⁴m). Gr., ὑδνον. Fr., hydne. Ger., Stachelpilz, Stachelschwamm. Of Linnæus, a genus of the Hydnaceae. The Hydnaceae (Fr., hydnacées) are an order of the Hymenogymetes. The Hydnaceae or Hydnei (Fr., hydnées, hydnes; Ger., Hydneen) are a division of hymenogymetes Ecotribades (by some authors made a natural order of Fungi). The Hydnidae of Gray are the same (in part). [B, 19, 104, 121, 173, 180, 291 (a, 21).]—Coral-like h., H. abietinum. See H. coralloides.—H. album. Fr., hydne blanc. A species eaten in France. [B, 173 (a, 21).]—H. alpinum. The Sphagnum alpinum. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—H. auriscalpium. Fr., hydne cure-oreille, brouquichons. An edible species found on fir cones. [B, 19, 173 (a, 24).]—H. barba Jovis. Ger., Bartschwamm. The Jew's beard, a species growing on decayed branches and hollow trunks of trees. Ger., Stoppelpilz, weisser Ziegenfuss. A species found late in the summer or in the autumn in woods, scattered in patches or occurring in large rings. It is an excellent article of food. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—H. scrobiculatum. See H. cyathiforme.—H. sinuatum. See H. repandum.—H. squamosum. 1. Of Schäffer, see H. repandum. 2. Of Bulliard, see H. sub-squamosum (1st def.).—H. squarrosum. See H. imbricatum (1st def.).—H. stalactitium. See H. coralloides.—H. sub-squamosum. Fr., hydne écailleux, chervottine écailleuse, grande chevrette. 1. A species eaten in France. 2. Var. of Batsch, the H. imbricatum (1st def.). [B, 173 (a, 24).]—H. zonatum. Fr., hydne zoné. See H. cyathiforme conerescens.

HYDORRHEA (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-o²r-re²(ro²e²)-a². See HYDORRHEA.

HYDRA (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)ra². Gr., ὕδρα. 1. Of Linnæus, a genus of the Terniadae in the larval state. [L, 16.] 2. A genus of fresh-water Hydrozoa, remarkable for the fact that every part of it when cut in pieces becomes a new organism. [B.]—H. bidentata. See CYSTICERCUS tenuicollis.—H. viridis. A species of H. (2d def.) found in fresh water; it is green, and the tentacula, which number 8 or 10, are much shorter than the body. [a, 39.]

HYDRABIETIC ACID, HYDRABIETINIC ACID, n's. Hīd-ra²b-i²e²t-i²k, -i²e²t-i²n²i²k. Fr., acide hydrabiétique. A white, crystalline acid, C₁₄H₁₆O₈, fusing partially at 129° C., melting at 144° C., insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol and in ether; formed by treating sodium amalgam with abietic acid. [B, 46 (a, 39); L, 49 (a, 38).]

HYDRACETAMIDE, n. Hīd-ra²s-e²t-a²m-i²d. Fr., hydracétamide. An amorphous body, C₁₁H₁₂N₂, formed by exposing aldehyde ammonia for some time to moisture, or to alcohol; soluble in water and in alcohol, insoluble in ether, and decomposed by boiling water. [B, 3, 4, 46, 93 (a, 35).]

HYDRACETIN, n. Hīd-ra²s-e²t-i²n. From ὕδρα, a water-serpent. Fr., hydracétine, pyrodine, acétyl-phényl-hydrazine. Of Guttman, pure acetphenylhydrazide, C₆H₅NH—NH.C₂H₅O, formerly used in an impure state under the name of pyrodine. It forms a white, crystalline, odorless, and almost tasteless powder, soluble with difficulty in water (1 to 50), easily soluble in alcohol, a powerful reducing agent, and decidedly antipyretic and antirheumatic. It has been used in the form of an ointment in psoriasis. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxviii (a, 14); "Therap. Gaz.," Aug, 11, p. 546 (a, 17).]

HYDRACHNE (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²k(r²a²ch²)ne(na). Gen., -rachnes. From ὕδρα, water, ἀχνη, anything shaved off. Fr., hydrachne. Ger., frieselartige Wasserblase. A small watery vesicle of the skin or the mucous membrane of the mouth. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRACHNIDES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²k(r²a²ch²)ny²-ni²d-ez(e²s). From ὕδρα, water, ἀχνη, anything shaved off, and εἶδος, resemblance. Ger., Wasserpocken, Lymphpocken. 1. Vesicles with watery contents. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 2. The water-mites, a family of the Acaridea, found, when immature, as parasites on water-bugs and beetles, and, through life, on the gills of the freshwater mussel. [B, 77 (a, 24).]

HYDRACID, n. Hī-dra²s-i²d. For deriv., see HYDROGEN and Acid. Lat., hydracidum. Fr., hydracide. See Hydrogen acid.

HYDRACRYLAMIC ACID, n. Hī-dra²k-ri²-a²m-i²k. Fr., acide hydracrylamique. Ger., Hydracrylaminssäure. See LACTAMIC ACID.

HYDRACRYLATE, n. Hī-dra²k-ri²-at. Fr., h. Ger., Hydracrylat. A salt of hydracrylic acid. The h's are isomeric with the lactates, and have in general the constitution Rn(C₃H₅O₂)n, where Rn is a radicle of the combining power n. [B.]

HYDRACRYLIC ACID, n. Hī-dra²k-ri²-i²k. Fr., acide hydracrylique (ou lactique nonal). Ger., Hydracrylsäure. A syrupy, acid liquid, CH₂OH.(CH.CH₂).OH (probably), or C₃H₄O₂ (acrylic acid) + H₂O = C₃H₅O₂, isomeric with lactic acid, into which it is converted by prolonged boiling with an excess of soda. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYRADEN (Lat.), n. m. and f. Hīd(hu⁴d)ra²d(r²a²d)-e²n-(an). Gen., -adēnos (-is). From ὕδρα, water, and ἀδην, a gland. See Lymphatic gland.

HYRADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²d(r²a²d)-e²n-i(-e)-i²s. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ὕδρα, water, and ἀδην, a gland (see also -itis*). Inflammation of a lymphatic gland. [E.]—H. axillaris. See HYDROSADENITIS.

HYRADÉNOMES (Fr.), n. E-dra²-da-nom. Of Jacquet and Darier, an affection of the skin in which red papules develop, varying in size from that of pin-heads to that of peas, without subjective symptoms, and which are said to be due to adenoid epithelium of the sweat-glands. ["Ann. de dermat. et de syphil.," May, 1887, p. 317 (G).]

HYRADENYPERTROPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²d-(ra²d)-e²n-ip(n²)-e²r-tro(tro²)fi²-a². From ὕδρα, water, ἀδην, a gland, ὑπερ, beyond measure, and τροφή, nourishment. Hypertrophy of a lymphatic gland. [A, 322.]

HYRÆDOS (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-red²(ra²e²d)-o²s. Gen., -red²oos (-red²ous). From ὕδρα, water, and αἶδωσ, shame. A swelling of the female pudendum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYRÆMATOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hīd(hu⁴d)-re²m(r²a²e²m)-a²(ta²)-o(-o²)-se(ka²)lela. In Eng., hid-re²m/a²t-o-cele. Fr., hydrématocèle. A hematocèle consecutive to a hydrocele. [A, 526.]

HYRÆMIA (Lat.), n. Hīd(hu⁴d)-rem²(ra²e²m)-i²-a². From ὕδρα, water, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., hydrémie, hydrohémie. Ger., Hydrämie, Wässrigkeit des Blutes. It., idroemia, idremia. Sp., hidroemia. A condition in which the water constituent of the blood is abnormally increased; due to hæmorrhage, albuminuria, deficient excretion of water from the kidneys or skin, and possibly extensive burns. [D.]

HYRÆMIC, adj. Hī-drem²i²k. Fr., hydrémique. Ger., hydrämisch. Of, pertaining to, or affected with hydræmia. [a, 17.]

HYRÆROPÉRICARDIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dra²-a-ro-pa-re-ka²-r-de. From ὕδρα, water, ἀρρ, air, περι, around, and καρδία, the heart. A collection of liquid and gas in the pericardium. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYRÆROPÉRITONIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dra²-a-ro-pa-re-to-ne. From ὕδρα, water, ἀρρ, air, and περιτόναιον, the peritonæum. An effusion of water and gas into the peritonæum. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYRÆROPLEURIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dra²-a-ro-plu²-re. From ὕδρα, water, ἀρρ, air, and πλευρά, the side. See HYDROPLEURIA.

HYDRIFORM, adj. Hī-dra²-fo²rīm. From ὕδρα, a water-serpent, and forma, form. Having the form of the common freshwater polyp (Hydra). [B, 28 (a, 27).]

HYDRAGOGIA (Lat.), n. f. sing. and n. pl. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²-goj-(gog)²i²a². Gr., ὑδραγωγία (from ὕδρα, water, and ἄγω, to lead). 1. (Sing.) hydragogue action. 2. (N. pl.) the lymphatics. [L, 50 (a, 14); L, 135 (a, 39).]

HYDRAGOGON (Lat.), n. n. Hīd(hu⁴d)-ra²-go²go²n. From ὕδρα, water, and ἄγω, to conduct. 1. A hydragogue. 2. The Ruscus aculeatus. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

HYDRAGOGUE, adj. Hī-dra²-go²g. Gr., ὑδραγωγός (from ὕδρα, water, and ἄγω, to conduct). Lat., hydragogue. Fr., h. Ger., wassertreibend. Causing copious watery evacuations, especially by the bowels.

HYDRAGOGUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra³-gog'u³m(u⁴m). A hydragogue remedy.—H. Boylei. See ARGENTI h. Boylei.

HYDRAL, adj. Hí'dra². Lat., hydralis (from ὑδωρ, water). Of or pertaining to the Hydrates or the h. alliance (Lat., nixus hydralis). [a, 24.]

HYDRALCOHOL, n. Hi-dra²l'ko-ho²l. From ὑδωρ, water, and alcohol. Fr., hydralcool. Of Bérál, brandy or spirit containing 22 per cent. of alcohol. [B, 119 (a, 38).]

HYDRALCOOLAT (Fr.), n. E-dra²l'ko-o-la²t. A hydrolate to which alcohol has been added. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDRALCOOLATURE (Fr.), n. E-dra²l'ko-o-la²-tu⁶r. A tincture made with diluted alcohol. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDRALCOOLÉ (Fr.), n. E-dra²l'ko-o-la. A mixture of 1 part of rectified alcohol and 30 parts of water. [B, 119 (a, 38).]

HYDRALCOOLIQUE (Fr.), adj. E-dra²l'ko-o-lek. Containing hydralcohol as an excipient. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDRALLES (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²(ra³l)'ez(e²s). From ὑδωρ, water. Of Lindley, an alliance (nixus) of the Epigynæ, including the Hydrochetridae; and subsequently the Hydrochetridae, Naiadaceæ, and Zosteraceæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

HYDRALIZARIN, n. Hi-dra²l'iz²'a²r²i²n. A dihydroxydihydroanthraquinone, C₁₄H₁₀O₄ = C₆H₄ | C(OH), C₆H₂(OH)₂, occurring as a yellow precipitate when an alkaline alizarin solution is warmed with tin and treated with acid. [B, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDRALKOHOLOLYTON (Lat.), n. n. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-ra²l'(ra³l)-ko-ho²l-o²l²(u⁶t)-o²n. See HYDROCOHOLOLYTON.

HYDRALLAS (Lat.), n. m. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²l'(dra³l)'la²s(la²s). Gen., lant'os (-lant'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀλλᾶς (see ALLANTOIS). Fr., hydrallante. Ger., Metrydroorrhöe. Of Dugès, excess of the allantoic fluid. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRALMA (Lat.), HYDRALME (Lat.), n's f. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²l'(dra³l)'ma², (-me²na). Gen., -al'mæ, -al'mes. Gr., ὑδράλη (from ὑδωρ, water, and ἀλη, brine). Fr., hydralma, eau de mer. Ger., Salzwasser. Sea-water; in the pl., hydralmæ (Fr., hydralmes), salt, or sea-water baths. [L, 50 (a, 14); 135 (a, 39).]

HYDRALOGEN, n. Hid-ra²l'o-je²n. From ὑδωρ, water, ἄλας, salt, and γενᾶν, to engender. Hydrochloric acid. [L, 80.]

HYDRAMIDE, n. Hid'ra²m-i²d'id. 1. An amide produced by the action of ammonia on an aromatic aldehyde (e. g., hydrobenzamide). 2. An old name for ammonia, from the supposition that it was a compound of amidogen and hydrogen. [B, 46; Kane (B, 98).]—H. carbonate. An old name for normal ammonium carbonate. [B, 98.]

HYDRAMIE (Ger.), n. Hu⁶-dra-me'. See HYDRÆMIA.

HYDRÄMISCH (Ger.), adj. Hu⁶-dram'i²sh. Hydræmic; as a n., a person affected with hydræmia. [D.]

HYDRAMNTION (Lat.), HYDRAMNIOS (Lat.), n's n. and m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²m(r³m)'ni²-o²n, -o²s. Written, also, hydroamnios. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀμνιον, the amnion. Fr., hydramnios. Ger., Anhäufung der Amnionflüssigkeit. See Dropsy of the AMNION.—Acute h. Fr., h. aigu [Charpentier]. H. of rapid formation, accompanied with great pain, vomiting, emaciation, and high fever, and threatening abortion or the life of the patient. [A, 15.]

HYDRANGÆA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²n(r³n²)'je²(ge²)-a³. Fr., hydrangée, hydrangelle. Of Benth and Hooker, a genus of shrubs of the Saxifragæ, tribe Hydrangææ. Several species found in Japan are used in making tea. The Hydrangææ (Fr., hydrangées) of Dumortier are an order of calcifyferal dicotyledons, including H., etc. The Hydrangææ, or hydrangæes, of Lindley are the same. The Hydrangææ of Presl are a tribe or subdivision of the Saxifragææ. The Hydrangææ of De Candolle and the Hydran-

h. In Europe, the H. hortensis; in America, the H. arborescens. [B, 5, 275 (a, 24).]—H. arborescens. Seven-barks, the common h. of North America. The root contains hydrangin (q. v.), is diuretic, and has been used for vesical calculi. In large doses it produces vertigo. [B, 5, 34 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," viii (a, 14).]—H. azazai. A species found in Japan, where it was formerly much used as an antiperiodic and tonic. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxviii (a, 14).]—H. hortensis, H. hortensis. The changeable h.; probably indigenous to China, where it has long been cultivated. [B, 19, 34, 104 (a, 24).]—H. Thunbergii. A species the leaves of which are used in Japan to make a tea called ama-tsjä, or tea of Heaven. The sweetish leaves contain a white, neutral, crystalline body, C₁₀H₆O₃, melting at 128° C., sparingly soluble in cold or hot water and in cold alcohol or ether, readily soluble in boiling alcohol or ether, hot glacial acetic acid, chloroform, benzene, or dilute alkalis. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv (a, 14).]—H. vulgaris. See H. arborescens.—Lithiated h. A proprietary preparation reputed to be made from a species of H. (probably H. arborescens) and to contain lithium; used as a lithontriptic and in gouty and rheumatic affections. [a, 22.]

HYDRANGÆITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²n(r³n²)'je²(ge²)-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -i'tidos (-idis). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀγγεῖον, a vessel (see also -itis). See LYMPHANGÆITIS.

HYDRANGÆIOGRAPHY, HYDRANGÆIOLOGY, n's. Hi-dra²n-ji²-o²g'ra²f-i², -o²l'o-ji². Lat., hydrangæiographia, hydrangæiologia (from ὑδωρ, water, ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, and γραφήν, to write, or λόγος, understanding). Fr., hydrangéiologie. Ger., Lehre von den Lymphgefässen. The anatomy, etc., of the lymphatic vessels. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRANGÆION (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²n(r³n²)'ji'(ge²i²)-o²n. A lymphatic vessel. [A, 322.]

HYDRANGÆIOTOMY, n. Hi-dra²n-ji²-o²t'o²m-i². Lat., hydrangæiotomia (from ὑδωρ, water, ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, and τομή, a cutting). Ger., Zergliederung der Lymphgefässe. Dissection of the lymphatic vessels. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRANGÆIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²n(dra³n²)'ji'(ge²i²)-u³m(u⁴m). See HYDRANGÆON.

HYDRANGÆLE (Fr.), n. E-dra²n²-zhe²l. See HYDRANGÆA.

HYDRANGÆARRHÉE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. From ὑδωρ, water, ἀγγεῖον, a vessel, and ῥοία, a flowing. See Pituitous CATARRH.

HYDRANGIN, n. Hi-dra²nj'i²n. A crystalline glucoside obtained from the root of Hydrangea arborescens. It melts at 235° C. and, on increasing the temperature slightly, sublimes without decomposing. It is decomposed by dilute acids into glucose and a resin-like mass. [B, 5 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxv (a, 14).]

HYDRANGIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ra²n(r³n²)'ji'(ge²i²)-u³m(u⁴m). See HYDRANGÆON.

HYDRANISOIN, n. Hi-dra²n-i²s-o²i²n. Fr., hydranisoïne. A crystalline substance, C₁₄H₁₈O₄, resembling cholesterol, obtained by treating anisic aldehyde with sodium amalgam. It is insoluble in water and in cold ether, soluble in alcohol, and melts at about 170° C. [B, 38, 46, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDRANOSUS (Lat.), n's f. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²n(dra³n²)'o²s-o²s, -u³s(u⁴s). Gen., -os'eos (-dram'osis), or -dram'osi. From ὑδωρ, water, and νόσος, disease. Fr., hydranose. Ger., serose Ausschwitzung. It., idranosis. 1. Of Lobstein, a serous exudation. 2. Of some modern pathologists, hydratosis. [L, 41, 44, 50, 135 (a, 14, 39).]

HYDRANTH, n. Hí'dra²nth. From ὑδωρ, water, and άνθος, a flower. The proper nutritive zoid, or that part of it which carries the mouth and proper digestive cavity. [L, 193.]

HYDRANTOIC ACID, n. Hi-dra²n-to'i²k. See HYDANTOIC ACID.

HYDRANTOIN, n. Hi-dra²n-to'i²n. See HYDANTOIN.

HYDRANZOTHIN, n. Hid-ra²n'zo-thi²n. A white crystalline powder, S₂(CS.NH₂)₂, obtained by treating ammonium thiocyanate with a mixture of hydrochloric acid and ferric chloride, and in other ways. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDRAPORIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²p(dra³p)-o(o²)'ri²-a³. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀπορία, want of resource. Fr., hydraporie. Ger., Mangel an Wasser. An insufficiency of water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRARGICUS (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²r'ji²(gi²)-ku²s(ku⁴s). See HYDRARGYRATE.

HYDRARGOCHLORIDE, n. Hi-dra²r-go-klor'i²d'id. A compound of mercury bichloride with another chloride. [L, 56.]

HYDRARGURE (Fr.), n. E-dra²r-gu⁶r. From ὑδράργυρος, quicksilver. An amalgam of mercury and another metal. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYDRARGYRANATRIPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²r'ji²(gu⁶r)-a²n(a²n)-a³-tri²p'si²s. Gen., -trips'eos (-trips'is). From ὑδράργυρος, quicksilver, and τρίψις, friction. Fr., hydrargyranatrispisi. Ger., Quecksilbereinreibung. Mercurial friction. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRARGYRATE, adj. Hi-dra²r'ji²-rat. Lat., hydrargyratus, hydrargyricus (from ὑδράργυρος, quicksilver). Fr., hydrargyride. Of, pertaining to, or containing mercury. [B.]

HYDRARGYRENTEROPHTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-dra²r'ji²(gu⁶r)-e²n-te²r-o²(o²)'i²ph'this'-i²s. Gen., -phthis'eos (-oph'thisis). From ὑδράργυρος, quicksilver, έντερον, an intestine, and φθίσις, phthisis. Fr., hydrargyrentérophthésie. Ger., Quecksilberdarmschwindsucht. A wasting disease of the intestines produced by the use of mercury. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

giæ of Liebmann and Zuccarini are the same. [B, 19, 34, 42, 104, 170 (a, 24).]—American wild h. See H. arborescens.—Climbing h. The Schizophragma hydrangeoides. [B, 275 (a, 24).]—Common

HYDRARGYRIE (Fr., Ger.), n. E-dra³r-zhe-re, hu⁶-dra³r-gu⁶-re'. See HYDRARGYRIA and HYDRARGYRIASIS.

HYDRARGYRIS (Lat.), n. f. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-dra}^3\text{r}\text{-ji}^2\text{r}\text{-}(\text{gu}^6\text{r})\text{-i}^2\text{s}$. From ὕδραργυρος, quicksilver. 1. Of Bonnisdorf, an amalgam. 2. In the pl., hydrargyrides, of Bendant, a family of ponderable bodies, having mercury as their type. [L.]

HYDRARGYROCYANATE (Fr.), n. E-dra³r-zhe-ro-se-a²-na²t. A salt of hydrargyrocyanic acid. [B., 38 (a, 34).]

HYDRARGYRUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-dra}^3\text{r}\text{'ji}^2\text{r}\text{-}(\text{gu}^6\text{r})\text{-u}^2\text{m}(\text{u}^2\text{m})$. Gr., ὕδραργυρος (from ὕδωρ, water, and ἀργυρος, silver). Guz., páro. Hind., Mah, Beng, párá. Ar., jbáká. Pers., simába, jiraha. Sanscr., páradáha, rasama. A preparation consisting of an extemporaneously prepared mercuric nitrate, Hg(NO₃)₂, dissolved in water with the addition of nitric acid. The U. S. preparation is made by dissolving 40 parts of red mercury oxide (mercuric oxide), corresponding to 37 of mercury, in a mixture of 45 of nitric acid and 15 of water. The Swedish preparation is a solution of 10 parts of pure mercury in 36 of nitric acid; the Belgian, one of 10 parts of pure mercury in 15 of nitric acid and 5 of water; the Swiss and Greek preparation is a solution of 10 parts of red mercury oxide in a sufficient quantity of nitric acid and water. The sp. gr. of the U. S. preparation is 2.100, and it contains about 50 per cent. of mercuric nitrate, with a little free nitric acid. The sp. gr. of the other preparations varies from 1.440 to 1.185. The preparation is a transparent, nearly [U. S. Ph.] or quite [Belg. Ph., Gr. Ph., Swiss Ph., Swed. Ph.] colorless liquid of strongly acid reaction. [B, 95 (a, 38)].—Liquor hydrargyri nitrici acidus [Br. Ph.]. Mass of mercury, blue mass, blue pill, a preparation consisting of mercury incorporated into a pillular mass in a state of such fine subdivision that no metallic globules can be discovered with a glass of low magnifying power. The U. S. preparation contains 33 parts of mercury, 3 of glycerin, and 34 of honey of rose, triturated together and gradually incorporated with 5 parts of licorice-root and 25 of marsh-mallow in No. 60 powder. The Belgian preparation contains 33 parts of mercury triturated with 33 of honey and 7 of powdered flowers of French rose, and then incorporated with 10 of sugar and 17 of powdered licorice-root. The other preparations are triturations of 2 parts of mercury with 3 of conserve of rose, mixed with 1 part of powdered licorice-root, distributing it uniformly. The Br. Ph. directs that pills from 3 to 8 grains be made of the mass, and the Fr., Swiss, and Swed. preparations contain 5 centigrammes of mercury to a pill. Mercurial (or blue) ointment; a preparation consisting of metallic mercury intimately mixed with fatty matter so that the separate mercurial globules are no longer visible to the naked eye, or under a weak magnifying power. In the U. S. Ph., the Br. Ph., and the Fr. Cod., the proportion of fatty matter to mercury is as one to one; in the Ger. Ph. as two to one. The U. S. Ph. preparation contains 500 parts of mercury, 225 each of lard and suet, and 40 of compound tincture of benzoin; the Br. Ph. preparation, 16 parts each of mercury and lard, and 1 part of suet; the Fr. Cod. preparation, 15 parts each of mercury and benzoinated lard; the Ger. and Finn. preparations, 10 parts of mercury, 13 of lard, and 7 of suet; the Austr. preparation, 4 parts of mercury, 6 of lard, and 2 of suet; the Dan. preparation, 9 parts of mercury, 22 of lard, and 14 of suet; the Gr. preparation, 3 parts of mercury, 4 of lard, and 2 of suet; the Belg. Ph. preparation, 50 parts of mercury, 40 of benzoinated lard, and 5 each of suet and oil of almonds; the Swiss preparation, 7 parts of mercury, 10 of lard, and 4 of suet; the Hung. Ph. preparation, 300 parts of mercury, 450 of lard, and 150 of suet; the Dutch Ph. preparation, 3 parts of mercury and 7 of lard; the Norw. Ph. preparation, 20 parts of mercury, 60 of lard, and 20 of suet; the Roum. preparation, 35 parts of mercury, 40 of lard, and 20 of suet; the Russ., 7 parts of mercury, 8 of lard, and 4 of suet; the Swed. Ph., 9 parts of mercury and 18 each of lard and suet; the Sp. preparation, 6 parts of mercury and 6 of lard. The Fr. Cod. has an additional preparation, the pomade mercurielle faible (onguent mercuriel simple, pomatum cum hydrargyro simplex), which consists of the ordinary mercurial ointment (pomade mercurielle à parties égales), diluted with 3 times its weight of benzoinated lard; the Belg. Ph., a preparation, the unguentum hydrargyri mitius, consisting of the ordinary mercurial ointment diluted with an equal weight of benzoinated lard; the Gr. Ph., the unguentum hydrargyri Lowrierii, a preparation consisting of equal parts of mercury and simple ointment; the Roum. Ph., the unguentum de mercuriu duble, consisting of 100 parts of mercury and 50 parts each of lard and oil of theobroma; and the Sp. Ph., two additional preparations, the pomada mercurial simple, consisting of the ordinary mercurial ointment diluted with twice its weight of lard, and the pomada mercurial terciada, consisting of 2 parts of the ordinary ointment and 1 part of lard. HYDRASTINE, n. Hi-dra³st'en. Lat., hydrastina, hydrastinum, hydrastia (obs.). Fr., h. Ger., Hydrastin. An alkaloid, C₂₂H₂₃NO₆, contained in the rhizome of Hydrastis canadensis. It forms shining, white prisms, melts at 135° C., decomposes at a higher temperature, and is insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in diluted mineral acids. In small doses it causes vaso-constriction, diminution in the size of the kidneys, and heightening of blood-pressure; in large doses, vaso-paresis and diminution of blood-pressure. In the voluntary muscles it produces convulsions like those of strychnine poisoning. In small doses it is applied to inflamed mucous membranes. [R. Massini, "Corresp. Bl. d. Schweiz. Aerzt." 1885, No. 16; "Ann. di chim. e di farmacol.," July, 1890, p. 49 (B); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxii, xxxvi, xxxvii (a, 14); B. 93 (a, 14).]—H. tartrate. HYDRASTININE, n. Hi-dra³st'it²n-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrastinin. An alkaloid, C₁₇H₁₃NO₅, obtained by oxidizing hydrastine with nitric acid, forming white acicular crystals, readily soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform, less soluble in warm water, and forming soluble acid salts. It exerts a paralyzing action on the voluntary muscles, but stimulates the vaso-constrictor nerves, causing contraction of the vessels, heightened cardiac systole, and increase of blood-pressure. As a substitute for ergot, it is more prompt and sustained in action, produces no irritation when injected subcutaneously, and produces no subsequent discomfort. It has been used in metrorrhagia, congestive dysmenorrhœa, and the hemorrhage of uterine myoma. ["Ann. di chim. e di farmacol.," July, 1890, p. 46, 49 (B); "Therap. Gaz.," Feb., 1890, p. 86 (a, 17).]—H. hydrochloride. A compound of h. and hydrochloric acid; readily soluble in water, and preferred to the uncombined base for medicinal use. ["Ann. di chim. e di farmacol.," July, 1890, p. 46 (B).]

HYDRASTINUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴)-ra³s(ra³s)-tin(ten)-u³m(u⁴m). See HYDRASTINE.—H. tartaricum. See HYDRASTINE tartrate.

HYDRASTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴)-ra³s(ra³s)'ti²s. Gen., -rast'idos (-idis), -rast'is. From ὑδωρ, water. Fr., h. (1st def.), hydraste (1st def.), hydrastide (1st def.), racine d'h. du Canada (2d def.). Ger., H. Wasserkraut (1st def.), Geleberwurz (2d def.). It., idrasto (1st def.). Syn.: h. rhizome, rhizoma h. (see HYDRANTIS (2d def.). Indian turmeric; of Linnæus, a genus of the Ranunculaceæ, tribe Helleboreæ. The Hydrastidea of Torrey and Gray are a tribe of the Ranunculaceæ consisting of the genus H. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., the rhizome and rootlets of H. canadensis. [B. 5, 34, 42, 170, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—Extractum h. fluidum [U. S. Ph.]. Fr., extrait liquide de h. Ger., flüssiges H.-extrakt. A preparation made by exhausting the rhizome of H. canadensis, in No. 60 powder, with a mixture of alcohol and water

(in the proportion of 3 parts of the former to 1 part of the latter), reserving the first 85 cu. cent. of the percolate, evaporating the remainder of the percolate to a soft extract, mixing this with the reserved portion, and adding enough of the menstruum to make the whole measure 100 cu. cent. [B, 81.]—H. canadensis. Fr., h. de Canada. Ger., canadische Wasserkraut, Gelbsuchtwurzel. Goldenseal; a small herb found in bog meadows from Canada to Carolina and Kentucky. Its thick, fleshy rhizome with its numerous fibres, the h. of the U. S. Ph., contains hydrastine, berberine, and xanthopurine, and is considered a tonic, alterative, and aperient. It has been used in diseases of the mucous membranes (enteritis, leucorrhoea, etc.) and in uterine hemorrhage. By some it is substituted for quinine in intermittent fevers, and at one time it was considered a remedy for cancer. [B, 5, 19, 34, 173, 180 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvi (a, 14).]—H. rhizome.

Rhizoma h. (see hydrastidis). See H. (21 def.).—Tinctura h. [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made by moistening 20 parts of hydrastis, in No. 60 powder, with 15 of dilute alcohol, macerating for 24 hours, and adding slowly enough dilute alcohol to make 100 parts of tincture. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

HYDRATABLE, adj. Hid'rat-a-2-b'l. Fr., h. Capable of being hydrated or converted into a hydrate. [L, 41 (a, 38).]

HYDRATATION, n. Hi-dra-ta'shu'n. See HYDRATION.

HYDRATE, n. Hid'rat. Lat., hydras, hydratum (from ὑδωρ, water). Fr., h. Ger., Hydrat. It., idrato, Sp., hidrato, 1. Originally a compound of an element or radicle with water. The term is still used in this sense in speaking of crystalline substances in which water (water of crystallization) forms a part of the chemical or physical organization. Thus ordinary sulphate of copper, $\text{CuSO}_4 \cdot 5\text{H}_2\text{O}$, is spoken of as a h. of the dried or anhydrous sulphate, CuSO_4 . 2. In the usual sense of the term, a compound of a metal or radicle with hydroxyl (OH). Such compounds may be regarded as water in which an atom of hydrogen is replaced by an atom or molecule of the combining radicle. Such compounds are now often denominated hydroxides, to avoid confusion with h. in the first sense. [B.]—Haloid h. Ger., Haloidhydrat. A h., or compound of a radicle with two or more molecules of hydroxyl, in which one of the molecules of hydroxyl is replaced by a haloid element. [B.]—H. aluminique (Fr.). See TERRA argillacea pura.

HYDRATED, adj. Hid'rat-e'd. Fr., hydraté. 1. Compounded with or containing water, either simply admixed or as an essential part of its constitution (e. g., a h. crystal is one containing water of crystallization). 2. Containing hydroxyl (OH); forming a hydrate (hydroxide), or combined with a hydrate (e. g., hydrated iron oxide). [B.]

HYDRATIC, adj. Hid-ra-2't'i'k. Fr., hydratique. Ger., hydratisch. Having the character of a hydrate. [B, 38.]

HYDRATION, n. Hi-dra'shu'n. From ὑδωρ, water. Fr., h. It., idrazione. The act or process of mixing or combining with water; conversion into a hydrate; also the state of being thus mixed, combined, or converted. [B.]

HYDRATOCARBONAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu'd)-rat(r'a-2't)-o-(o²)-ka²rb-on'a²s(a²s). Gen., -onal'is. See HYDROCARBONATE—H. ferrosus saccharatus [Dan. Ph., Swed. Ph.]. See FERRI carbonas saccharatus.—H. magnesianus [Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.]. See MAGNESIUM carbonate.—H. plumbicus. See LEAD carbonate.

HYDRATROPIC ACID, n. Hid-ra-2'tro-2'p'i'k. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἄτροπος (see ATROPA). Fr., acide hydratropique. Ger., Hydratropssäure. See PHENYLPROPIONIC ACID.

HYDRATUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-rat(r'a-2't)-u²m(u⁴m). See HYDRATE.—H. chloralicum. See CHLORAL hydrate.—H. ferri-cum. Iron hydroxide. [B.]—H. ferri-cum magnesianum. See FERRI oxidum hydratum cum magnesia.—H. magnesianum. Magnesium hydroxide. [a, 38.]—H. natrium. Sodium hydroxide. [a, 38.]—H. natrium solutum. See Liquor sodæ.

HYDRATUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu'd)-rat(r'a-2't)-u²s(u⁴s). See HYDRATED.

HYDRAULIC, adj. Hid-ra-1'i'k. From ὑδραυλις, a hydraulic organ. Fr., hydraulique. Ger., hydraulisch. Relating to water, or to fluids in motion.

HYDRAULICS, n. sing. Hid-ra-1'i'k. From ὑδραυλις, a hydraulic organ. The science of the motion of liquids.

HYDRAZINE, n. Hid'ra-2-zen. Syn.: diamide. 1. An imaginary compound, $\text{N}_2\text{H}_4 = \text{H}_2\text{N.NH}_2$. 2. A derivative of this compound, formed by substituting an alcohol radicle for 1 or 2 atoms of hydrogen (primary and secondary h's). [B, 4.]

HYDRAZOBENZENE, n. Hid'ra-2-o-be-2'n'en. Fr., hydrazobenzine. Ger., Hydrazobenzol. A compound of benzene with nitrogen and hydrogen, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_8\text{N}_2$ (H) — N(H). $\text{C}_6\text{H}_8\text{N}_2 = \text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{N}_2$, a substance isomeric with benzidine, forming colorless tabular crystals of camphoraceous odor, fusing at 131° C., and nearly insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol and ether. [B, 4, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

HYDRAZOENZOIC ACID, n. Hid'ra-2-o-be-2-n-zo'i'k. Fr., acide hydrazobenzoïque. Ger., Hydrazobenzoësäure. A weak

dibasic acid, $\text{H}-\text{N.C}_6\text{H}_4\text{CO.OH}$
 $\text{H}-\text{N.C}_6\text{H}_4\text{CO.OH}$

HYDRAZULMINE, n. Hid'ra-2-u-1'men. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrazulin. A black, shining, amorphous substance, $(\text{C}_2\text{N}_2)_2$ (NH_2) $_2 = \text{C}_4\text{H}_4\text{N}_4$, formed by the union of dry ammonia gas with cyanogen, and, according to Jacobsen and Emmerling, closely related to uric acid. [B, 2 (a, 38).]

HYDRAZULMOXIN, n. Hid'ra-2-u-1-mo-2-x'i'n. Fr., hydrazulmoxine. Ger., H. An acid substance, $\text{C}_4\text{H}_6\text{N}_4\text{O}$, obtained, along with ammonia, by decomposing hydrazulmine with water. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDRECHIDNEOUS, adj. Hid-re-2'k'id-ne-us. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔχιδνα, a spider. Lat., hydrechidneus. Fr., hydrechidneux. Living in water. The Hydrechidne of J. A. Ritgen are a family of ophidian reptiles having poisonous fangs and living in water. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYDRECTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'k'ta-2's(ta-2's)-i-2's. Gen., -as'eos (-rec'tasis). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔκτασις, extension. Distension by a liquid. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRELEUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'l-e-(a²e-2)-u²m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑδρέλαιον (from ὑδωρ, water, and ἔλαιον, olive-oil). Fr., hydré-léon. Ger., Oelmilch. Of Galen, a mixture of oil and water. [B, 38, 78, 88 (a, 14, 39).]

HYDRELECTRIC, adj. Hid-re-2'l-e-2'k'tri-2'k. Lat., hydrelectricus (from ὑδωρ, water, and ἤλεκτρον, amber). Pertaining to hydroelectricity.

HYDRELECTRICITY, n. Hid-re-2'l-e-2'k'tri-2's'i-2't-i-2'. Lat., hydrelectricitas (from ὑδωρ, water, and ἤλεκτρον, amber). Fr., hydrelectricité. Galvanism. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRELYTRON (Lat.), HYDRELYTRUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'l'i-2't(u²t)-ro-2-n, -ru-2'm(u⁴m). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔλυτρον, a cover. 1. Hydrocele of the tunica vaginalis testis. 2. A watery collection in the vagina. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDREMESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'm'e-2-si-2's. Gen., -es'eos (-rem'esis). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔμεσις, a vomiting. Fr., tomissement aqueux. Ger., Wasserbrechen. Watery vomiting. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRENCEPHALIC, adj. Hid-re-2-n-se-2'f-a-2'l'i'k. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔγκεφαλος, the brain. Fr., hydrencéphalique. See HYDROCEPHALIC.

HYDRENCEPHALIE (Fr.), n. E-dra-2'n-2-sa-fa-2-le. See HYDROCEPHALUS.—H. prégnésique [Piorry]. Congenital hydrocephalus. [L, 82.]

HYDRENCEPHALION (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n(re-2'n)-se-2'f(ke-2'f)-a-2'l(a-2'l)-i-2'o-2'n. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔγκεφαλος, the brain. Fr., hydrencéphale, hydrencéphalie. See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDRENCEPHALITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n(re-2'n)-se-2'f(ke-2'f)-a-2'l(a-2'l)-i(e)-i-2'tis. Gen., -it'idos (-it'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔγκεφαλος, the brain (see also *-itis). Fr., hydrencéphalite. Ger., entzündliche Hirnwassersucht. Hydrocephalus with inflammation. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRENCEPHALUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n(re-2'n)-se-2'f(ke-2'f)-a-2'l(a-2'l)-i-2'u-2'm(u⁴m). See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDRENCEPHALOCÉLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n(re-2'n)-se-2'f(ke-2'f)-a-2'l(a-2'l)-o(o²)-se(ka)²le(la); in Eng., hi-dre-n-se-2'f-a-2'l-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-ce). From ὑδωρ, water, ἔγκεφαλος, the brain, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hydrencéphalocèle. Ger., Hirnwasserbruch. An encephalocèle which, in addition to brain substance, contains a portion of one or both ventricles filled with fluid. [E.] See also MENINGOCÉLE, ENCEPHALOCÉLE, and HERNIA cerebri.—Orbital h. See Orbital ENCEPHALOCÉLE.

HYDRENCEPHALOID, adj. Hid-re-2-n-se-2'f-a-2'l-oid. See HYDROCEPHALOID.

HYDRENCEPHALON (Lat.), HYDRENCEPHALUS (Lat.), n's n. and m. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n(re-2'n)-se-2'f(ke-2'f)-a-2'l(a-2'l)-o-2'n, -u-2's(u⁴s). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἔγκεφαλος, the brain. See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDRENTEREPIPOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n-te-2'r-e-2'p-i-2-plo(o²)-se(ka)²le(la); in Eng., hi-dre-n-te-2'r-e-2'p-i-2'plo-sel. Gen., -celes (-ce). From ὑδωρ, water, ἔντερον, an intestine, ἐπίπλοον, the membrane inclosing the entrails, and κύλη, a tumor. An enteropiplocele with serous fluid in the sac. [E.]

HYDRENTEROCÉLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n-te-2'r-o(o²)-se(ka)²le(la); in Eng., hi-dre-n-te-2'r-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-ce). From ὑδωρ, water, ἔντερον, an intestine, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hydre-ntérocéle. Ger., Wasserdarmbruch. Intestinal hernia with fluid in the sac. [E.]

HYDRENTERO-EPILOMPHALUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n-te-2'r-o(o²)-e-2'p-i-2-plo-2'm'fa-2'l(fa-2'l)-u-2'm(u⁴m). From ὑδωρ, water, ἔντερον, an intestine, ἐπίπλοον, the membrane inclosing the entrails, and ὄμφαλος, the navel. An umbilical hernia which contains intestine, serum, and omentum. [E.]

HYDRENTEROMPHALOCÉLE (Lat.), HYDRENTEROMPHALUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'n-te-2'r-o-2'm'fa-2'l(fa-2'l)-o(o²)-se(ka)²le(la); in Eng., hi-dre-n-te-2'r-o-2'm'fa-2'l-o-sel; hid(hu'd)-re-2'n-te-2'r-o-2'm'fa-2'l(fa-2'l)-u-2's(u⁴s). Gen., -cel'es, -omph'ali. From ὑδωρ, water, ἔντερον, an intestine, ὄμφαλος, the navel, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hydrentéromphale. Ger., Darmnassensackbruch. An umbilical hernia containing intestine and water. [E.]

HYDRENTÉRRHÉE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dra-2'n-2-ta-ror-ra. From ὑδωρ, water, ἔντερον, an intestine, and ροία, a flowing. A serous or mucous diarrhoea. [A, 250 (a, 21); L, 82.]

HYDREPIGASTRIUM (Lat.), n. Hid(hu'd)-re-2'p-i-2-ga-2'st-(ga-2'st)-ri-2'u-2'm(u⁴m). From ὑδωρ, water, ἐπί, upon, and γαστήρ, the abdomen. Fr., hydrépigastre. Ger., äussere Bauchwassersucht. An external or superficial form of ascites, in which the fluid collects between the abdominal muscles and the peritonæum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDREPIPOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-re²p-i²-plo(plo²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hid-re²p-i²p'lo-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-æ). From ὑδωρ, water, ἐπιπλοον, the membrane inclosing the entrails, and κῆλη, a tumor. Fr., hydrépiploécèle. Ger., Netzwasserbruch. An omental hernia with water in the sac. [E.]

HYDREPIPOMPHALOCELE (Lat.), HYDREPIPOMPHALUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Hid(hu⁶d)-re²p-i²-plo²m-fa²(fa³)-o(o²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hid-re²p-i²p'lo²m-fa²-o-sel; hid(hu⁶d)-re²p-i²-plo²m-fa²(fa³)-u²s(u²s). Gen., -cel'es (-æ) or -p'omph'ali. From ὑδωρ, water, ἐπιπλοον, the omentum, ὄμφαλος, the navel, and κῆλη, a tumor. Fr., hydrépipomphaté. Ger., Wassernabelbruch. An umbilical hernia containing omentum and serum. [E.]

HYDREPIPLOON (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-re²p-i²p'lo(o²)²-o²n. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἐπιπλοον, the omentum. Fr., hydrépiploon. Ger., Netzwassersucht. Omental dropsy. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRERON (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-re(ra)'ro²n. Gr., ὕδρρον. Of Dioscorides, the Campanula erinus. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

HYDRETHMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dre²t-me. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἤθμος, a strainer. Serous œdema. [L, 82].—II, νέφραξική [Piorry]. Œdema of the brain. [L, 82.]

HYDRETHMOCARDIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dre²t-mo-ka²rd-e. From ὑδωρ, water, ἤθμος, a strainer, and καρδία, the heart. Œdema of the heart.

HYDRETRON (Lat.), HYDRETRUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu⁶d)-re(rat)'ro²n, -ru²m(ru²m). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἤτρον, the abdomen. See ASCITES.

HYDREXOSTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-re²x-o²s-to²'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). From ὑδωρ, water, ἔξ, outside of, and ὄστέον, a bone. Fr., hydréxostose. Ger., wässriger Knochenauswuchs. An exostosis complicated with a collection of water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRHÉMIE (Fr.), n. E-dra-me. See HYDRÆMIA.

HYDRIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ri(re)-a(a²)'si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-as'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἰασις, a mode of healing. Fr., hydrïasie. Ger., Wasserheilkraft. Of F. Röver, the curative action of cold water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRIATIC, adj. Hid-ri²-a²t'i²pk. From ὑδωρ, water, and ιατρικός, healing. Fr., hydrïatique. Ger., hydrïatisch. Hydrotherapeutic. [a, 18.]

HYDRIATICS, n. sing. Hid-ri²-a²t'i²ks. See HYDRIATICS.

HYDRIATRIC, adj. Hid-ri²-a²t'i²pk. Pertaining to hydrïatics.

HYDRIATRICES, n. sing. Hid-ri²-a²t'i²ks. Lat., hydrïatrice (from ὑδωρ, water, and ιατρικός, healing). Fr., hydrïatrie. Ger., Hydrïatrik, Wassercurmethode. The systematic treatment of diseases with cold water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRIATROS (Lat.), HYDRIATRUS (Lat.), n's m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ri²-a²t'i²pk(ro²s, -ru²s(ru²s)). From ὑδωρ, water, and ιατρός, a surgeon. Fr., hydrïatrie. Ger., Hydrïatriker, Wasserarzt. A practitioner of hydrïatics. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRIATRY, n. Hid-ri²-a²t'i²pk. See HYDRIATRICES.

HYDRIC, adj. Hid-ri²ik. Lat., hydricus (from water). Fr., hydrique. Ger., hydrisch. It., idrico. Sp., hidrico. 1. Containing water. 2. Combined with hydrogen; a term applied especially to names of the hydrogen acids considered as salts of hydrogen (e. g., h. chloride = hydrochloric acid); also applied especially to acid salts, because all the hydrogen of the acid characteristic is not replaced by the basic element. [B.] See also DIHYDRIC, MONOHYDRIC, and TRIHYDRIC.

HYDRICOCARBONICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)'ri²ka(o²)-ka²rb-o²n'i²ka-u²s(u²s). 1. Hydrocarbonic. 2. United with water, or hydroxyl, and carbonic acid (e. g., plumbum hydricocarbonicum = lead hydrocarbonate). [B.]

HYDRIDE, n. Hid-ri²d(rid). Lat., hydridum (from ὑδωρ, water). Fr., hydrure. Ger., Hydrür, Hydrïd, -hydrïd, -wasserstoff. It., idrulo. Sp., hidruro. A compound consisting of an element or radicle united directly with hydrogen. [a, 38.]

HYDRIDUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)'ri²d-u²m(u²m). See HYDRIDE.—II, acetylum. See ACETIC ALDEHYDE.

HYDRIN, n. Hid-ri²n. From ὑδωρ, water. Fr., hydrine. Ger., H. 1. A generic name for a compound of glyceryl with hydroxyl, either alone or associated with other radicles. The h's form a large class of chemical compounds, the individual members of which are indicated by distinctive prefixes; thus dichlorhydrin is C₂H₄(OH)Cl₂, glyceryl combined with 1 molecule of hydroxyl and 2 atoms of chlorine. 2. The term is sometimes extended to comprise a class of bodies analogous to glycerin h's, but derived from other alcohols than glycerin (e. g., erythrite dibromhydrin). [B.]

HYDRINDIC ACID, n. Hid-ri²d'i²pk. Fr., acide hydrïndique. Ger., Hydrïndinsäure. Dioxindol; an acid, C₈H₇N₂O₂ = C₈H₄($\frac{CH.OH}{NH}$)CO, crystallizing in transparent yellow prisms. [B, 4, 93 (a, 38).]

HYDRINDIN, n. Hid-ri²n'di²pn. Fr., hydrïndine. Ger., H. A yellowish-white powder, C₂₂H₂₂N₄O₄H₂O, obtained by treating isatide with potassium hydroxide and alcohol. It is insoluble in water, soluble in boiling alcohol, and fuses at 300° C. [B, 46, 48, 93 (a, 39).]—H'säure (Ger.). See HYDRINDIC ACID.

HYDRIODAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ri(r'i²)²d-a²s(a²s). Gen., -at'is. See HYDRIODATE.—H, kallesus. See POTASSIUM IODIDE.

HYDRIODATE, n. Hid-ri²od-at. Lat., hydrïodas. Fr., iodhydrate, h. A compound of an element or radicle with hydriodic acid. The term is sometimes used in the same sense as iodide, but usually signifies an addition compound of hydriodic acid with ammonia, an ammonia derivative (e. g., an alkaloid), or a radicle acting in the same manner. Thus ammonia hydriodate (ammonium iodide) is NH₃HI. [B.] Cf. HYDROCHLORATE and HYDRIODIDE.

HYDRIODIC, adj. Hid-ri²-o²d'i²pk. Lat., hydrïodicus. Fr., hydrïodique, iodhydrïque. Compounded of hydrogen and iodine. [B.]—Aqueous (solution of) h. acid. See under H. acid.—Dilute h. acid. Lat., acidum hydrïodicum dilutum [U. S. Ph., 1860]. A preparation having a sour taste, and, when fresh, colorless; made by dissolving 1 oz. (Troy) of powdered iodine in distilled water, and treating with hydrosulphuric-acid gas until the iodine color disappears, then boiling till the odor of the acid is no longer perceptible, filtering through paper, and adding sufficient distilled water to make 6 fl. oz. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—H. acid. Lat., acidum hydrïodicum. Fr., acide iodhydrïque (ou hydrïodique). Ger., Hydrïod-säure, Jodwasserstoffsäure. A colorless, fuming, heavy gas, HI, of the sp. gr. of 4.374, and having a suffocating odor and a strongly acid reaction. At a low temperature it forms a colorless liquid, and at -55° C. freezes. 2. Ordinary h. acid, aqueous (solution of) h. acid; formed by dissolving gaseous h. acid in water. The saturated solution has a sp. gr. of 1.99 at 0° C. It tends to decompose on exposure to the air. [B.]—H. ether. See ETHYL IODIDE.

HYDRIODIDE, n. Hid-ri²-o²d-i²d(id). Lat., hydrïodas, iodhydras. Fr., iodhydrate, hydrïode. A compound of hydrogen and iodine with an element or radicle. The term is now applied only to compounds of bases (e. g., alkaloids) with hydriodic acid, in which the former are (apparently) combined directly with the latter. [B.] Cf. HYDRIODATE.

HYDRIODKALI (Ger.), n. Hu⁶d-re-od'ka²i². See POTASSIUM IODIDE.

HYDRIODSÄURE (Ger.), n. Hu⁶d-re-od'zoi²r-e². See HYDRIODIC ACID.

HYDRIODURET, n. Hid-ri²-o²d'u²r-e²t. Fr., hydrïodure. See HYDRIODINE.

HYDRIOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ri²-o²'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water. See HYDRIATRICES.

HYDROA (Lat.), n. f. sing. and n. pl. Hi(hu⁶)-dro'a². Written also, hidroa. From ὑδωρ, water. Fr., h, hidroa. Ger., Schwitzblättchen (1st def.), Hiitzbläschen (1st def.). 1. Of ancient writers, a term for various cutaneous eruptions associated with profuse sweating, especially in summer. 2. In modern dermatology, a name for various vesicular diseases of uncertain nosological relations. [G.] 3. A cysticercus. 4. Of Quincy, a symptomatic miliary fever. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—Arthritic h. See H. vacciniforme and H. bulleux.—H. pemphigoides. See DERMATITIS herpeticiformis.—Bulbous h. See H. bulleux.—Herpeticum h. [T. Fox]. H. characterized by vesicles, occurring in groups. ["Arch of Dermatol.," Jan., 1880, p. 16 (G).]—H. alba. See MILARIA alba.—H. bulleux (Fr.). Syn.: pemphigus à petits bulles. Of Bazin, an eruption of vesicles or small blebs, varying in size from that of a lentil to that of a pea, occupying the trunk, the arms, and the inner surfaces of the thighs, and attended with itching. The vesicles soon dry up, but successive crops appear, and the duration of the disease is from five to six months. [G, 26.]—H. febrilis. See HERPES facialis.—H. gestationis. Impetigo herpeticiformis. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. herpeticiformis. See Herpeticum h.—H. pruriginosa [T. Fox]. H. characterized by successive crops of vesicles or small bullæ, which, clear at first, gradually become clouded, and, on drying up, leave crusts and finally pigmented spots. The eruption is attended with severe pruritus. [G.] Cf. H. bulleux.—H. simplex. Of T. Fox, h. in which the vesicles are few in number and do not occur in groups. ["Arch. of Dermatol.," Jan., 1880, p. 16 (G).]—H. sudamen. See ECZEMA sudorale.—H. symptomatice. H. associated with some general disease. The skin affection is described as consisting of red pimples accompanied with itching. [G, 17.]—H. vacciniforme (Fr.). Of Bazin, a vesicular eruption occurring usually upon the nose, cheeks, wrists, hands, and buccal mucous membrane, consisting of transparent vesicles, which, on the second or third day, are umbilicated, and their contents becoming cloudy, soon dry up, forming little crusts, which finally drop off and leave depressed cicatrices. [G, 26.]—H. vesiculæux (Fr.). Of Bazin, a vesicular eruption of both cutaneous and mucous surfaces, most commonly affecting the backs of the hands, the wrists, and the anterior surfaces of the knees. Toward the second or third day the buccal mucous membrane becomes affected. The vesicles are preceded and accompanied by small, sharply defined patches of erythema, in the centres of which the vesicles make their appearance. The latter soon dry up, forming little dark-colored crusts surrounded by a whitish border of detached epidermis. By most recent writers the disease is regarded as identical with herpes iris. [G, 26.]—Vesicular h. See H. vesiculæux.

HYDROABDOMEN (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-dro(dro³)-a²b(a²b)-o²me²n. Gen., -dom'itis. From ὑδωρ, water, and abdomen, the belly. See ASCITES.

HYDROACRIDINE, n. Hi-dro-a²kr'i²d-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydroacridin. An addition compound of acridine and hydrogen, prepared by the action of sodium amalgam on acridine, and in other ways. It crystallizes in colorless prisms, insoluble in water, slightly soluble in cold alcohol, freely soluble in hot alcohol and in ether, fusing at 163° C., subliming when heated with caution, and at a very high temperature distilling to form acridine. There are two varieties: 1. Soluble h., dihydroacridine, forming colorless, columnar crystals, C₁₃H₁₁N = C₁₃H₉N + H₂. 2. Insoluble h., a substance of uncertain composition, perhaps C₂₆H₂₀N₂ = 2C₁₃H₉N + H₂. [B, 46 (a, 39), 79.]

HYDROADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-a²d(a²d)-e²n(i²e)²t'is. Gen., -it'idos (-it'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀδὴρ, a gland (see also -itis). See HYDRAENITIS.

HYDROADIPSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-dro(dro³)-a²d(a²d)-i²ps'i²-a². From ὑδωρ, water, a priv., and διψα, thirst. Of McElroy, a lack of desire for water. [Seguin, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Oct. 25, 1884, p. 465 (D).]

HYDROEMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-em'(a²e²m)-i²-a³. From ὑδωρ, water, and αἷμα, blood. See HYDREMIA.

HYDRO-AERATE, adj. Hi-dro-a'e²r-at. Lat., hydroaeratus (from ὑδωρ, water, and ἀήρ, air). Fr., hydro-aéré. Living in either water or air (said of certain cryptogams). [Roussel (L, 180).]

HYDRO-AERIC, adj. Hi-dro-a'e²r-i²k. From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀήρ, air. Fr., hydroaérique. Of a sound, due to the collision of gas and liquid (in a cavity). [L, 41, 49 (a, 14).]

HYDRO-ARGENTIC, adj. Hi-dro-a³r-je²nt'i²k. From ὑδωρ, water, and argentum, silver. Containing both hydrogen and silver. [B.]

HYDROARIC, adj. Hi-dro-a³r'i²k. From ὑδωρ, water, and ὄριον, a small egg. Lat., hydroaricus. Fr., hydroarique. Ger., Eierstockwassersucht betreffend. Pertaining to ovarian dropsy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROARION (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro-a(a³)ri²-o²n. From ὑδωρ, water, and ὄριον, a small egg. Fr., hydrovaire. Ger., Eierstockwassersucht. Ovarian cystoma. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROATROPIC ACID, n. Hid'ro-a³t-ro²p'i²k. See HYDROATROPIC ACID.

HYDROBENZAMIDE, n. Hi-dro-be²nz'a²m-i²d(id). Fr., h. Ger., Hydrobenzamid. Azobenzoyl hydride, a neutral substance, (C₇H₅CH)²/N₂ = C₉H₇N₂, forming colorless octaedral crystals, soluble in alcohol. It is isomeric with amarine and lophine. [B, 4; B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

HYDROBENZILURIC ACID, n. Hi-dro-be²nz-i²l-u²r'i²k. Fr., acide hydrobenzylurique. Ger., Hydrobenzylursäure. An acid, C₁₄H₂₁NO₄, obtained by treating hippuric acid with nascent hydrogen. [B, 2.]

HYDROBENZOIC ACID, n. Hi-dro-be²n-zo'i²k. Ger., Hydrobenzoesäure. See BENZOIC ACID.

HYDROBENZOLIN, n. Hi-dro-be²n'zo-i²n. Fr., hydrobenzoline. Ger., Hydrobenzolin. A compound, C₁₁H₁₄O₂ = C₆H₅CH(OH)CH(OH).C₆H₅, obtained by treating benzoin with nascent hydrogen, and occurring in rhombic tabular crystals melting at 132° C., slightly soluble in water, freely soluble in alcohol. [B, 4, 93 (a, 38).]

HYDROBENZURIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-be²nz-u²r'i²k. An acid, C₁₈H₂₄N₂O₆, occurring as a turpentine-like mass which crystallizes on standing a long time. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROBENZYLURIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-be²nz-i²l-u²r'i²k. An oily liquid, C₁₄H₂₁NO₄, which gradually solidifies on standing. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROBERBERINE, n. Hi-dro-bu⁶r'be²r-en. Fr., hydroberberine. Ger., Hydroberberin. A monacid, crystalline base, C₂₀H₂₁N₃O₇, obtained by the action of nascent hydrogen on berberine. It forms granular or acicular crystals, without color, or with a slight yellow tinge, belonging to the oblique rhombic system. [B, 5 (a, 38); B, 46, 93 (a, 14); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xi (a, 14).]

HYDROBICARBURET, n. Hi-dro-bi-ka³rb'u²-re²t. Fr., hydrobicarbure. A compound of bicarbureted hydrogen with a simple body. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROBILIRUBIN, n. Hi-dro-bil-i²-ru²'bi²n. Fr., hydrobilirubine. Ger., H. A reddish-brown, amorphous substance, C₂₇H₄₀N₄O₇, found in the feces and (especially in fever) in the urine. It is soluble in alkalies, in alcohol, and in chloroform, less soluble in ether and in benzene, nearly insoluble in water. According to Jaffé, it is identical, but according to Maly, not identical, with urobilin and stercobilin. [B, 9, 93, 270 (a, 38).]

HYDROBISULPHATE, n. Hi-dro-bi-su³l'f'at. Fr., hydrobisulfate. A hydrosulphate containing twice as much sulphur as hydrogen. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYDROBLEPHARISUM (Lat.), HYDROBLEPHARON (Lat.), HYDROBLEPHARUM (Lat.), n's m., n., and n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-ble'f-a²r(a²r)-i²z(i²s)'mu²s(mu²s), -ble'f'a²r(a²r)-o²n, -n²m(u²m). From ὑδωρ, water, and βλεφαρον, the eyelid. See BLEPHAREDEMA.

HYDROBROMATE, n. Hi-dro-brom'at. Lat., hydrobromas. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrobromat. It., idrobromato. Sp., hidrobromato. A salt of hydrobromic acid. The term is occasionally used in the same sense as bromide, but generally denotes an addition compound of hydrobromic acid with a radicle of the ammonia type (e. g., an alkaloid). Thus the h. of quinine is C₂₀H₂₄N₂O₂HBr. Such compounds are in reality of the same nature as the so-called ammonia hydrobromate, NH₄HBr, whose real structure is probably represented by the formula $\text{H} \begin{array}{c} \text{Br} \\ \text{N} \equiv \text{H}_3 \end{array}$, or NH₄-Br. Such compounds are therefore more appropriately called hydrobromides. [B.]

HYDROBROMETHYL, n. Hi-dro-brom-e²th'i²l. Ger., Hydrobromäthyl. Ethyl bromide. [B.]

HYDROBROMIC, adj. Hi-dro-brom'i²k. Lat., hydrobromicus. Fr., hydrobromique, bromhydrique. Compounded of or containing hydrogen and bromine. [B.]—H. acid. Lat., acidum hydrobromicum (sen bromhydricum). Fr., acide bromhydrique (gasueux [Fr. Cod.]). Ger., Hydrobromsäure, Bromwasserstoffsäure. A colorless, fuming gas, HBr, having an irritating odor and a strong acid reaction. At -73° C. it forms a colorless liquid, and at -87° freezes into a colorless solid. The ordinary h. acid, or aqueous solution of h. acid (Fr., solution aqueuse d'acide bromhydrique), consists of h. acid dissolved in water. The saturated solution has a sp. gr. of 1.78 at 0° C. It is a colorless solution emitting pungent, irritating fumes. The official (or dilute) h. acid (Lat., acidum hydrobromicum dilut- um [U. S. Ph.], Fr., acide bromhydrique dissous [Fr. Cod.]) contains 10 per cent. of h.-acid gas, and has at 15° C. a sp. gr. of 1.077. It is a limpid, colorless, odorless liquid of strongly acid taste and reaction. H. acid has been used to prevent the unpleasant sensations in the head caused by quinine, to relieve tinnitus, and to mitigate the "hot flashes" of the menopause. [B.]—H. ether. See ETHYL bromide.

HYDROBROMIDE, n. Hi-dro-brom'i²d(id). Fr., hydrobromure. Ger., Hydrobromür, bromwasserstoff. It., idrobromuro. Sp., hidrobromuro. A compound of an element or radicle with hydrogen and bromine; a hydrobromate in the modern sense of that term, and used in preference to the latter, as being more precise. [B.]

HYDROBROMIODE, n. Hi-dro-brom-i'od-i²d(id). A compound of hydrogen, bromine, and iodine with the same base. [B.]

HYDROCACHEXIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-ka²k-(ka²ch²)-e²x'i²-a³. From ὑδωρ, water, and καχέξια, a bad habit of body. Fr., hydrocachexie. Ger., Wassercachexie, Wasserseuche. See CACHEXIA aquosa.

HYDROCAMPHORIC ACID, n. Hi-dro-ka²m-f'o²r'i²k. Fr., acide hydrocamphorique. An acid, C₁₀H₁₆O₂, formed by heating camphoric acid at 160° C. with hydroiodic acid of a density of 1.55. It occurs in granules soluble in hot water. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROCARBON, n. Hi-dro-ka³rb'o²n. From ὑδωρ, water, and carbo, a coal. Fr., hydrocarbure. Ger., Kohlenwasserstoff. It., idrocarburo. A compound of carbon and hydrogen. The h's constitute a number of homologous series, each member of each series being formed from the preceding member by the addition of the common difference CH₂. Consequently, in each series, the relation between the number of hydrogen and the number of carbon atoms in each member is the same; and this relation may accordingly be expressed by a general formula which will represent every member of that particular series. Thus the paraffins have the general formula = C_nH_{2n+2}, in which 1, 2, 3, etc., being substituted in succession for n, all the members of that group will be formed. Series of hydrocarbons having the following general formulae are known:

1. C_nH_{2n+2}; paraffins or ethanes; h's in which the entire combining capacity is saturated.
2. C_nH_{2n+1}; alkyls or alcohol radicles; univalent hydrocarbons.
3. C_nH_{2n}; olefines, alkylidenes, or aldehyde radicles; bivalent hydrocarbons.
4. C_nH_{2n-1}; organic acid radicles, acidyls; trivalent hydrocarbons.
5. C_nH_{2n-2}; alcohol acid radicles; quadrivalent hydrocarbons.
6. C_nH_{2n-3}; aldehyde acid radicles; quinivalent hydrocarbons.
7. C_nH_{2n-4}; double acid radicles; sexvalent hydrocarbons; also the saturated compounds (terpenes), C₁₀H₁₆.
8. C_nH_{2n-5}; septivalent hydrocarbons.
9. C_nH_{2n-6}; octovalent (and saturated) hydrocarbons. [Benzene derivatives, aromatic series.]
10. C_nH_{2n-7}; nonivalent (and univalent) hydrocarbons. [Phenyl derivatives.]
11. C_nH_{2n-8}; decivalent hydrocarbons. Of these are known phenylene, C₆H₄, and cinnamene, C₉H₈.
12. C_nH_{2n-10}; cholesterene, C₂₆H₄₂, is the only known member of this group.
13. C_nH_{2n-12}. Of these, naphthalene, C₁₀H₈, and pyrene, C₁₆H₁₀, are known.
14. C_nH_{2n-14}. Of these, diphenyl, C₁₂H₁₀, acenaphthene, C₁₂H₁₀, diphenylmethane, C₁₂H₁₂, phenyltoluene, C₁₃H₁₂, dibenzyl, C₁₄H₁₄, diphenylethane, C₁₄H₁₄, benzyltoluene, C₁₄H₁₄, ditolyl, C₁₄H₁₄, ditolylmethane, C₁₆H₁₆, benzylethylbenzene, C₁₅H₁₆, ditolylethane, C₁₅H₁₆, dimesitylthane, C₁₉H₂₄, and dibenzyl, C₁₄H₁₄, are known.
15. C_nH_{2n-16}. Stilbene, C₁₄H₁₂, is known.
16. C_nH_{2n-18}. Of these, anthracene, C₁₄H₁₀, phenanthrene, C₁₄H₁₀, methylanthracene, C₁₅H₁₂, dimethylanthracene, C₁₆H₁₄, and retene, C₁₈H₁₈, are known.
17. C_nH_{2n-22}. Diphenylbenzene, C₁₈H₁₄, and triphenylmethane, C₁₉H₁₆, are known.
18. C_nH_{2n-24}. Chrysene, C₁₈H₁₂, and diphenylphenylenemethane, C₁₉H₁₄, are known.
19. C_nH_{2n-26}. Dinaphthyl, C₂₀H₁₄, is known.
20. C_nH_{2n-30}. Triphenylbenzene, C₂₄H₁₈, tetraphenylmethane, C₂₆H₂₀, and tetraphenylethane, C₂₆H₂₂, are known.
21. C_nH_{2n-32}. Tetraphenylethylene, C₂₈H₂₂, is known.

There has been proposed for the hydrocarbons a nomenclature which would indicate both the series to which any member belongs, and also its place in the series. The latter is denoted by the initial syllable of the title; meth-, for hydrocarbons containing 1 atom of carbon; eth-, when there are 2 carbon atoms; prop-, when there are 3 atoms; quart-, or tert-, 4 atoms; quint-, or pent-, 5 atoms, etc., each member after the third being designated by a prefix, taken from the Latin or Greek, indicative of the number of carbon atoms. The series to which the h. belongs is designated by an affix, as follows:

1. Series C_nH_{2n+2}, -ane, pentane, C₅H₁₂.
 2. Series C_nH_{2n+1}, -yl, pentyl (amyl), C₅H₁₁.
 3. Series C_nH_{2n}, -ene, pentene (amylen), C₅H₁₀.
 4. Series C_nH_{2n-1}, -enyl, pentenyl, C₅H₉.
 5. Series C_nH_{2n-2}, -ine, pentine, C₅H₈.
 6. Series C_nH_{2n-3}, -inyl, pentinyl, C₅H₇.
 7. Series C_nH_{2n-4}, -one, pentone, C₅H₆.
 8. Series C_nH_{2n-5}, -onyl, pentonyl, C₅H₅.
 9. Series C_nH_{2n-6}, -une, pentune, C₅H₄.
 10. Series C_nH_{2n-7}, -unyl, pentunyl, C₅H₃. [B.]
- Normal h. A h. the carbon nuclei of which are imagined to be arranged in a chain, so that no one nucleus is connected with more than two adjacent nuclei. Such a row of nuclei is thus represented: C''—C'—C'—C' —C'''. [B.]

HYDROCARBONAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-ka¹rb-on/a³(u³s). Gen., -at³is. See HYDROCARBONATE.—H. magnesi-cus. See MAGNESIUM CARBONATE.—H. zincicus [Fr. Cod.]. Zinc hydrocarbonate. [B, 113.]

HYDROCARBONATE, n. Hi-dro-ka¹rb'o²n-at. Lat., hydro-carbonas (from ὑδωρ, water, and carbo, a coal). Fr., h. Ger., Hydrocarbonat. 1. A hydrated carbonate. 2. A compound consisting of a carbonate and a hydrate. 3. An acid carbonate; so called because containing an atom of hydrogen in addition to the acid radicle of carbonic acid. [B.]

HYDRO-CARBONÉ (Fr.), adj. E-dro-ka¹rb-na. From ὑδωρ, water, and carbo, a coal. Composed of water and carbon. [L, 41 (a, 38).]

HYDROCARBONIC, adj. Hi-dro-ka¹rb-o²n'i²k. Lat., hydro-carbonicus. Fr., hydrocarbonique. Containing both hydrogen and carbon. [B.]—H. sulphite. Fr., acide hydro-sulfocarbonique. See THIOCARBONIC ACID.

HYDRO-CARBONICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-ka¹rb-o²n(on)'i²k-u³s(u³s). Hydrocarbonic; with the name of a base, the acid carbonate of the base. [B.]

HYDROCARBURET, n. Hi-dro-ka¹rb'u³re-t. Lat., hydro-carburetum. Fr., hydrocarbure. See HYDROCARBON.

HYDROCARDIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-ka¹rd'i²a². From ὑδωρ, water, and καρδία, the heart. Fr., hydrocardie. Ger., Herzbeutelwassersucht. Of Fabricius Hildanus, serous effusion into the pericardium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCAROTIN, n. Hi-dro-ka¹rb-ot'i²n. Fr., hydrocarotine. Ger., H. A crystalline principle, C₁₈H₃₀O, discovered (together with carotin) by Husemann in the carrot. According to Armand [Compt. rend.,] cxlii, 1319, "Ann. d. chim. e. di farmacol.," Aug., 1880, p. 111, it is identical with cholesterol, colored with a red pigment. [B.; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xv (a, 14).]

HYDROCATARRHOPHESIS (Lat.), HYDROCATARRHOPHIA (Lat.), n's f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-ka¹(ka²)-a³r'i²e-(a)'si³s, -rof(ro³)'i²a². Gen., -es'eos (-is), or -rhop'hie. From ὑδωρ, water, κατά, entirely, and ῥόσσις, a supping up. Fr., hydrocatarrhophèse. Ger., Wassereinsaugung. The absorption of water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCAULUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-ka¹(ka³u³)-u³s(u³s). From ὑδωρ, water, and καυλός, the stalk of a plant. 1. The main stem of the cenosarc of a hydrozoan. 2. All that portion of the hydrophyton which intervenes between the hydrorrhiza and the hydranth. [B, 28 (a, 27); L, 193.]

HYDROCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hid'ro-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-æ). Gr., ὑδροκῆλη (from ὑδωρ, water, and κῆλη, a tumor). Fr., hydrocèle. Ger., Wasserbruch. It., idro-cèle. Sp., hidrocele. A collection of clear, watery fluid, especially in the tunica vaginalis testis, the vaginal process of the spermatic cord, or the canal of Nuck.—Abdominal h. An accumulation of fluid in the tunica vaginalis communis with its greatest distention beneath the fascia transversalis. [a, 40.]—Acute h. Lat., h. acuta. 1. Of Velpeau, the effusion of serum into the tunica vaginalis during acute orchitis. 2. A h. developing from traumatism. [a, 40.]—Anasarca h. Edema of the scrotum. [a, 40.]—Chylous h. Fr., hydrocèle grasseuse. See CHYLOCELE.—Congenital h. of the neck. See H. of the neck.—Congenital h. of the spermatic cord. A h. due to the fact that the communication between the cavities of the peritoneum and of the tunica vaginalis has never been obliterated. [E.]—Diffused h. of the spermatic cord. Lat., h. diffusa funiculi spermatici. A disease of the nature of œdema, a watery fluid being diffused throughout the loose tissue connecting the vessels of the spermatic cord and inclosed in a sheath of condensed tissue. [E, 16.]—Dupuytren's h. Fr., hydrocèle en bissac. A h. having a constriction, so that it is more or less completely divided into two masses. [L, 41; "Un. méd. et sci. du Nord.-Est.," "Province méd.," Oct. 6, 1888, p. 577.]—Encysted h. A cystic tumor of the spermatic cord. It rarely exceeds the size of a hen's egg and is always of slow growth. [a, 40.]—Encysted h. of the epididymis. The same as encysted h. of the testicle, except that the cyst is connected with the epididymis. [E, 16.]—Encysted h. of the spermatic cord. Lat., h. funiculi spermatici saccata (1st def.). Fr., hydrocèle enkystée du cordon spermaticque. 1. A tumor caused by the development of a cyst containing fluid in the loose connective tissue of the spermatic cord. 2. A h. of the vaginal process of the peritoneum, a portion of which has remained open. [E, 16.]—Encysted h. of the testicle (or testis). Lat., h. saccata testis. Fr., hydrocèle enkystée du testicule. A form of h. in which fluid is effused into an adventitious cyst or cysts distinct from the sac of the tunica vaginalis. [E, 16.]—Encysted h. of the tunica vaginalis. A h. due to the formation of an adventitious cyst in the tunica vaginalis. [E, 16.] See Encysted h. of the testicle.—Endemic h. of Malabar. Fr., hydrocèle endémique de Malabar. See ELEPHANTIASIS ARABUM.—External h. Lat., h. œdenatodes. Fr., hydrocèle par infiltration. A serous infiltration of the areolar tissue of the scrotum. [E.]—Funicular h. See H. of the spermatic cord.—Gibbon's h. A h. coexisting with a large hernia. ["Un. méd. et sci. du Nord.-Est.," "Province méd.," Oct. 6, 1888, p. 577.]—H. acuta. See Acute h.—Hydatid h. A tumor of the tunica vaginalis composed of numerous small cysts. [a, 40.]—H. bilocularis. A h. consisting of two cysts. [Englisch (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. bilocularis abdominalis. A h. of the tunica vaginalis communis, with distention above and below, connected by a narrow canal through which the fluid can be pressed from one lobe to the other. [a, 40.]—H. by effusion. 1. The ordinary h. of the tunica vaginalis. 2. Accidental cysts distended by serum. [Velpeau (a, 40).]—H. by infiltration. General œdema of the scrotum. [a, 40.]—H. colli. See H. of the neck.—H. communicans. A h. communicating with the peritoneal cavity. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. complicata. A h. complicated with her-

HYDROCELLIC, adj. Hi-dro-sel'i²k. Gr., ὑδροκηλικός (from ὑδωρ, water, and κῆλη, a tumor). Of or pertaining to hydrocele. [E.]

HYDROCELLULOSE, n. Hi-dro-se¹l'u³l-ose. A body, C₁₂H₂₂O₁₁, formed when cellulose is moistened with any dilute mineral acid, and then dried. It is insoluble in water, soluble in hot dilute alkalies, and is well suited for the manufacture of photographic collodion. [B, 3 (a, 38); B, 46 (a, 39); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv, xxx (a, 14).]

HYDROCELODES (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-se¹(ka)l-od'ez(as). From ὑδροκῆλη, hydrocele, and εἶδος, resemblance. A swelling of the scrotum resembling a hydrocele, which may be due to an accumulation of urine from a rupture of the urethra into the scrotum. [L, 84.]

HYDROCENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-se²n(ke²n)-o¹-si²s. Gen., -os¹eos(-is). From ὑδωρ, water, and κένωσις, a discharge. Fr., hydrocénose. Ger., Austeerung des Wassers, Wasseraufleerung. The reduction of a dropsical accumulation of water, either by hydragogue medicines or by paracentesis. [L., 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDROCENOTIC, adj. Hid-ro-se²n-o²t'i²k. Lat., hydrocenoticus. Fr., hydrocénotique. Pertaining to hydrocenosis. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCEPHALOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-se²f-(ke²f)-a²l(a³l)-o(o³)-se(ka)¹le(da); in Eng., hi-dro-se²f'a²l-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es(-œ). See HYDROCEPHALOCELE.

HYDROCEPHALOCENTESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-se²f-(ke²f)-a²l(a³l)-o(o³)-se²n(ke²n)-te(ta)¹/si²s. Gen., -es'eos(-is). From ὑδωρ, water, κεφαλή, the head, and κέντροσις, a puncturing. Fr., hydrocéphalocentèse. Ger., Anstechung des Wasserkopfs. The operation of puncturing the head in hydrocephalus. [L., 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDROCEPHALOID, adj. Hi-dro-se²f'a²l-oid. From ὑδωρ, water, κεφαλή, the head, and εἶδος, resemblance. Resembling hydrocephalus; as a n., of Marshall Hall, a form of cerebral anaemia occurring in young children; so called on account of its resemblance to tubercular meningitis (from which it differs in presenting a depression of the fontanelles). After death blood is found in the vessels of the brain, and the ventricles are distended with fluid. [D., 34.]

HYDROCEPHALON (Lat.), n. n. Hid-ro(ro²)-se²f(ke²f)/a²l(a³l)-o²n, -u²m(u²m). See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDROCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-se²f(ke²f)-a²l(a³l)-u²m(u²m). Written, also, hydrocephalon, hydrocephalum. Gr., ὑδροκέφαλον (from ὑδωρ, water, and κεφαλή, the head). Fr., hydrocéphale, hydrocéphalie. Ger., Hydrocephalie, Wasserkopf. It., idrocefalo, idrocefalia. Sp., hidrocéfalo, hidrocéfalia. Dropsy of the brain. An accumulation of serous fluid in undue amount within the cavity of the cranium. [B., 46 (a, 39); D., 20.]—Acquired h. See H. acquisitus.—Acute h. Lat., h. acutus. Fr., hydrocéphale aiguë (ou interne, ou ventriculaire). Ger., acuter (oder hitziger) Wasserkopf. As ordinarily understood, tubercular meningitis, i. e., a marked increase in the fluid contents of the ventricles of the brain, together with a softening of the surrounding portions of the brain substance, produced by miliary tubercles, in the arachnoid, at the base of the brain, acting as an irritant. [D., 29.]—Auencephalous h. Fr., hydrocéphalie anencéphalique. H. in which there is little or no development of the brain, the space it should occupy in the calvaria being filled by hydrocephalic fluid. [E. Blanc, "Nouv. arch. d'obstét. et de gynéc.," May, 1886, p. 245 (a, 40).]—Arachnoid h. H. in which the effusion takes place into the arachnoid cavity.—Chronic (internal) h. Lat., h. chronicus internus. h. longus, hydrups ventriculorum chronicus. Fr., hydrocéphale chronique. Ger., chronischer H., chronische Hydrocephalie (oder Gehirnwassersucht), Wasserkopf. An intracranial dropsy, usually occurring in childhood, characterized by an effusion of a serous or albuminous fluid into the ventricles, ordinarily, but sometimes into the subarachnoid space, into a cyst between the hemispheres, or between the membranes. When the quantity of fluid is large and the pressure, consequently, is great, the membranes and the brain may become infiltrated and softened. The cranium is enlarged in proportion to the quantity of fluid and the pressure. It may present a symmetrical balloon-shape, being fullest at the occiput, or at the vertex; or the enlargement may be irregular. The cranial bones are usually thin and soft, but are sometimes unusually thick. In addition to the ordinary or internal form of the disease, there is also the external, in which the membranes of the brain protrude through openings between the cranial bones. [D., 1.] Cf. External h.—Congenital h. Lat., h. congenitus. Fr., hydrocéphalie congénitale. Ger., angeborene Hydrocephalie. A congenital form of chronic h. HYDROCHAMÆMELUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-kam-(ch²a³m)-e²m(a³-e²m)-el(al)¹/u²m(u²m). Gr., ὑδροχαμαιμελον (from ὑδωρ, water, and χαμαιμελον, chamomile). See Infusum ANTHEMIDIS.

HYDROCHARIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid-ro²k(ro²ch²a²a²r)²i²s. Gen., -char'itis (-itis). From ὑδωρ, water, and χάρις, grace. Fr., morène, hydrocharide, h. Ger., Froschbiss. A genus of the Hydrocharideæ, tribe Stratioteæ. The Hydrocharaceæ of Lindley are the Hydrocharideæ (1st def.). The Hydrocharaceæ of Reichenbach are a division of the Hydrocharideæ, consisting of Hydrocharis, Hydropeltis, etc., and subsequently of the subdivisions Anacharideæ, Vallisneriææ, and Stratioteæ. The Hydrochariæ of Dumortier are the Hydrocharideæ (1st def.). The Hydrochariæ of Lindley are the Hydrocharideæ (Fr., hydrocharidées; Ger., Hydrocharideen), which are the hydrocharads, or frogbits; 1. Of Ventenat, an order (of Reichenbach, a family) of the Helobia, consisting, in Reichenbach's last classification (1841), of the divisions Hydrocharaceæ, Nepentheæ, and Nymphæaceæ. Bentham and Hooker divide them into two series: the Glycydræ, containing the tribes Hydrilleæ, Vallisneriææ, and Stratioteæ; and the Marineæ, consisting of the tribe Thalassieæ. 2. Of De Candolle, a family of plants (of Dumortier, a family of the Hydrochariæ), consisting of the tribes Limnobiææ and Stratioteæ. The Hydrochariæ of Jussieu are the Hydrocharideæ (1st def.). The Hydrochariæ are a tribe of the Oenantheæ. HYDROCHLORATE, n. Hid-ro-klor'at. Lat., hydrochloras, chlorhydras. Fr., hydrochlorate, chlorhydrate. Sp., clorhidrato. A compound of hydrochloric acid. It is occasionally used in the sense of chloride, but generally denotes an addition compound of hydrochloric acid with a radicle of the ammonia type, an alkaloid, for instance. Thus the hydrochlorate of quinine is C₂₀H₂₄N₂O₂.HCl. Such compounds are really of the same nature as the so-called h. of ammonia, (NH₃HCl), where, although a molecule of HCl is apparently united with a molecule of NH₃, in reality the additional atoms of hydrogen and chlorine are combined separately with the quinquivalent nitrogen, as represented by the graphic formula, $\text{H} \text{---} \text{N} \equiv (\text{H}_3)$. The term hydrochloride, therefore, appears more appropriate as applied to these compounds. [B.]

HYDROCHLORATUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-klor-(ch²lor)-at(a³t)¹/u²m(u²m). Containing hydrochloric acid; muriated; with the name of a base, the hydrochlorate or the chloride of that base.

HYDROCHLORE (Fr.), n. E-dro-klor. Ger., Hydrochlor. See AQUA CHLORI.

HYDROCHLORIC, adj. Hi-dro-klor'i²qk. Lat., hydrochloricus. Fr., hydrochlorique, chlorhydrique. Ger., Hydrochlor-. It., idroclorico, cloridrico. Sp., hidroclórico, clorhidrico. 1. Composed of chlorine and hydrogen, chlorhydric, muriatic. On the continent of Europe, chlorhydric is the more common term. 2. Prepared with h. acid (e. g., h. solution of arsenic). [B.; a, 38.]—Aqueous h. acid. See H. acid (2d def.).—Chlorinated h. ether. See ETHYLDIBENE dichloride.—Crude h. acid. The h. acid of commerce. It is official in the Ger. Ph. as acidum hydrochloricum crudum, and in the Fr. Cod. as acide chlorhydrique du commerce. It contains numerous impurities, prominent among which are sulphuric acid, chlorine, iron, and arsenic. [B.]—Dilute h. acid. Lat., acidum hydrochloricum dilutum [U. S. Ph., Ger., Ph.], acidum muriaticum dilutum [U. S. Ph., 1870]. An aqueous solution of h. acid diluted with water. The U. S. Ph. preparation contains 10 per cent. of h.-acid gas and has a sp. gr. of 1.049; the Br. preparation contains 10.58 per cent. of h.-acid gas and has a sp. gr. of 1.052. The Ger. preparation contains 12½ per cent. of h.-acid gas. [B.]—Heavy h. ether. An old name for a mixture of h. acid, acetic aldehyde, acetal, acetic acid, ethylacetate, and chloral, produced by treating alcohol with chlorine and washing in water. [B., 2.]—H. acid. Lat., acidum hydrochloricum (seu hydrochloratum, muriaticum, seu marinum). Fr., acide chlorhydrique (ou hydrochlorique). Ger., Chlorwasserstoff, Hydrochlorgas, Hydrochlorsäure. It., acido cloridrico. Sp., ácido clorídrico. Syn.: chlorhydric (or muriatic) acid. 1. A colorless, fuming gas, HCl, of strongly acid reaction and suffocating odor, formed by the union of hydrogen and chlorine. It is often called h.-acid gas, to distinguish it from its aqueous solution to which the name h. acid is usually applied. Its sp. gr. is 1.278. It dissolves readily in water, 1,000 parts of the latter at 0° taking up 825 parts by weight or 503,000 parts by volume of the gas. The amount dissolved diminishes with an increase of the temperature, 1,000 parts of water at ordinary temperatures dissolving only about 750 parts by weight of the gas. At a temperature of -16°, and under a pressure of 20 atmospheres, h.-acid gas condenses to a colorless liquid having a sp. gr. of 1.27. 2. Ordinary h. acid, aqueous solution of h.-acid gas, commonly called h. acid; a solution of h. acid in water. The saturated solution is a colorless, fuming liquid which freezes at -40°, forming a substance resembling butter. At 0° C. it contains 45 per cent. of the gas, and at ordinary temperatures from 42 to 43 per cent. Its sp. gr. at 15° is about 1.21. Official h. acid (Lat., acidum hydrochloricum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Ger. Ph.], acidum muriaticum [U. S. Ph., 1870], acidum chlorhydricum [Fr. Cod.]; Fr., acide chlorhydrique officinal [Fr. Cod.]) contains 25 per cent. of the gas (Ger. Ph.), 31.8 per cent. [Br. Ph.], 31.9 per cent. [U. S. Ph.], and 34.4 per cent. [Fr. Cod.]. The sp. gr. of these solutions at 15° is, respectively, 1.13, 1.16, and 1.17. It is a transparent, colorless liquid of corrosive taste and properties, and emitting suffocating, irritant, white fumes of the h.-acid gas. [B.]—H.-acid gas. See H. acid (1st def.).—H. ether. See ETHYL CHLORIDE.—Liquid h. acid. A name applied sometimes, but improperly, to the aqueous solution of h.-acid gas. It should be restricted to the liquid form which the latter assumes under the combined effect of cold and pressure. [B., 5.]

HYDROCHLORIDE, n. Hid-ro-klor'íð(d). Fr., hydrochlorure. Ger., chlorwasserstoff. It., idrocloruro. Sp., hidrocloruro. A compound of an element or radicle with both hydrogen and chlorine. It is used instead of hydrochlorate, as being less ambiguous. [B.]

HYDROCHLORINAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-klor-(ch'ro'1)-(en)(a's'ta's). Gen., -otis. See HYDROCHLORIDE and CHLORIDE.—H. natriens. Sodium chloride. [B., 88 (a, 39).]

HYDROCHOLECYSTITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-kol-(ch'ro'1)-e²(a)-si²st(ku'st)'ie'i'tis. Gen., -it'idos(-idis). From ὕδωρ, water, χολή, bile, and κύστις, a bladder (see al'o *-itis). Ger., entzündliche Gallenblasenwassersucht. So-called inflammatory dropsy of the gall-bladder. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-ch'2'i²(n²)-si²s. Gen., -chys' eos(-och'y'sis). From ὕδωρ, water, and χύσις, a pouring. See DROPSY.—H. cutanea. See ANASARCA.

HYDROCINCHONIDINE, n. Hid'ro-si²n-ko²n'íð-d-en. Lat., hydrocinchoniu. An alkaloid, C₁₉H₂₁N₃O, found in commercial cinchonidine, slightly soluble in chloroform, in ether, and in water, and melting at 230° C. [B., 81 (a, 38).]

HYDROCINCHONINE, n. Hid-ro-si²n²'kon-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrocinchonin. A cinchona alkaloid, C₁₉H₂₁N₃O, or C₂₀H₂₃N₃O, obtainable artificially by the action of permanganate of potassium on cinchonine. It occurs in small, brilliant needles, fusible at 258° C., insoluble in cold water, partially soluble in hot water and in alcohol. [Hesse, "Ber. d. dtseh. chem. Gesellsch.," xv, p. 854; "Pharm. Jour. and Trans.," May 6, 1882; "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," July, 1882, p. 361; B., 5, 23 (a, 14, 39).]

HYDROCINNAMIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-si²n-a²m'íð-k. Fr., acide hydrocinnamique. Ger., Hydrocinnamsäure. It., acido idrocinamico. Syn.: homotoluic acid, cinnoplic acid, B-phenylpropionic acid. A crystalline acid, C₉H₈, C₉H₇, CO.OH, or C₉H₇O₂, isomeric with hydratropic acid, obtained by treating cinnamic acid with nascent hydrogen and in other ways. It has a goat-like smell, is easily soluble in alcohol, ether, or boiling water, slightly so in cold water, melts at 47½° C., and boils at 230° C. [B., 3, 4 (a, 38); B., 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROCINNAMIDE, n. Hid-ro-si²n-a²m-íð(d). Fr., h. Ger., Hydrocinnamid. Syn.: Cinnamidenediamine. A crystalline substance, (C₉H₇CH₂)₂.CH₂.N₂, obtained by treating oil of cinnamon or cinnamic aldehyde with ammonia. [B., 3, 4 (a, 39).]

HYDROCINNAMYL, n. Hid-ro-si²n-a²m-íð. Cinnamyl hydride (cinnamic aldehyde), C₉H₈O. [B., 88, 93 (a, 14); a, 39.]

HYDROCIRSOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-su²rs-(kí²rs)'o(o's)-se(kay)'le(la); in Eng., hi'dro-su²rs-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From ὕδωρ, water, and κίρσοκῆλη, an enlargement of the spermatic vessels. Fr., hydrocirsocele. Ger., Wasserkrampfaderbruch. Hydrocele associated with varicocele. [L., 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCITRIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-si²t'ri'tik. Fr., acide hydrocitrique. A 2-atom addition compound of citric acid, C₆H₁₀O₇, obtained by the action of sodium on dry citric acid, fusible at 100° C., soluble in water, insoluble in alcohol. [B., 38 (a, 38); B., 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROCLEPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-kle²p'si's. Gen., -cleps' eos(-is). From ὕδωρ, water, and κλέψις, theft. Fr., hydroclepsie. A gradual and almost imperceptible decrease of watery liquid. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCOBALTCYANIC ACID, n. Hid'ro-ko-ba'1t-i²-si-a²n'íð-k. Fr., acide hydrocobaltocyanique. Ger., Kobaltcyanwasserstoffsäure. An acid, H₂Co₂(CN)₁₂ + H₂O, occurring in the form of colorless, deliquescent, acicular crystals. It is strongly acid in reaction and of decided acid characters, forming salts with iron and zinc and decomposing the carbonates with the production of metallic cobalticyanides. Its probably constitutional formula is H(C₂N₂)₆{Co-(C₂N₂)₃H}_{H₂(C₂N₂)₃} [B.]

HYDROCELIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-sel'(ko²'e²)-í²-a². From ὕδωρ, water, and κοιλία, the belly. See ASCITES.

HYDROCHOLEOLYTON (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-ko-(ko²)-ho²l-o²l'i²t(u'6)-o²n. From ὕδωρ, water, and alcohol (q. v.), and λυτός, soluble. Fr., hydrocholeolyte. Soluble in water and in alcohol. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROCOLLIDINE, n. Hid-ro-ko²l'i²d-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrocollidin. A poisonous ptomaine, C₈H₁₃N = C₆H₁₁N + H₂, found by Gautier and Etard among the products of putrefaction of albumin. But, according to Nencki, the body which they discovered has the formula C₈H₁₁N, and is probably isophenylethylamine. [B.; E. D. Ferguson, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 4, 1888, p. 113.]

HYDROCOMENIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-kom-e²n'íð-k. Fr., acide hydrocoménique. An acid, C₈H₈O₄, formed by the action of sodium amalgam on comenic acid dissolved in water. It is an amorphous, deliquescent body, slightly soluble in alcohol. [B., 46, 93 (a, 14, 39).]

HYDROCONCHININE, n. Hid-ro-ko²n'k'í²n-en. Ger., Hydroconchinin. An alkaloid obtained by Hesse from the mother liquor, from which quinidine sulphate (conchinine) has separated; probably identical with the hydroquinidine of Forst and Böhringer. ["Ber. d. dtseh. chem. Gesellsch.," xv, p. 1656, cited in "Drugg. Circ. and Chem. Gaz.," Dec., 1882, p. 181; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxx (a, 14).]

HYDROCONION (Lat.), HYDROCONIUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-kon(ko²n)'i²-o²n, -u²m(u'm). From ὕδωρ, water, and κόνιος, dusty. Fr., baïn de pluie. Ger., Wasserstaubbad, Regenbad. Of Gillet de Grammont, a shower bath. [L., 30, 50, 105, 135 (a, 14; a, 39).]—Bergson's h. A spraying apparatus consisting of an open glass vessel into which is plunged a tube open at both ends and terminating in a point at the upper end. At right angles to this tube is a horizontal tube also terminating in a point in such a way that the orifices touch each other. When a strong current of air is forced through this horizontal tube by means of a rubber bulb, a vacuum is created at the orifice of the perpendicular tube and the liquid rises in consequence. [Gottstein (A. 319 (a, 21)).]—Wintrich's h. An apparatus consisting of a bottle-shaped glass vessel. Through the cork passes a vertical tube which bends at right angles and runs along in a horizontal direction parallel to and one cm. distant from another horizontal tube connected by a tube with a bulb and an air-chamber until, turning upward near the extremity, it terminates opposite the orifice of the upper tube. [Gottstein (A. 319 (a, 21)).]

HYDROCORIDINE, n. Hid-ro-ko²r'íð-d-en. A substance, C₁₀H₁₇N = coridine (C₁₀H₁₅N) + H₂. According to A. B. Griffiths, the ptomaine produced by the Bacterium Allii (q. v. in Supplement) is probably h.; this ptomaine is a monacid base, forming white deliquescent masses composed of microscopic acicular crystals, soluble in hot water, in alcohol, and in ether. ["Comptes rend. de l'acad. des sci.," ex, p. 416; "Ann. di chim. e di farmacol.," July, 1890, p. 34 (B).]

HYDROCORM, n. Hid-ro-ko²rm. Lat., hydrocormum (from ὕδωρ, water, and κορμός, the trunk of a tree). Fr., hydrocorme. Ger., Schwimmholz. A stem or stalk that is horizontal and floats on the water. [L., 50, 107.]

HYDROCOTARININE, n. Hid-ro-ko-ta²rn'en. Lat., hydrocotaruna. Ger., H. A crystalline alkaloid, C₁₂H₁₅NO₄ + ½H₂O, obtained from opium. It is readily soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform, melts at 50° C., and volatilizes at 100° C. [B., 2, 5, 270 (a, 38); B., 46 (a, 39); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi, xxiv (a, 14).] Cf. COTARININE.

HYDROCOTOIN, n. Hid-ro-ko-tó-i²n. A substance, C₁₁H₁₁O₄, obtained from coto-bark; occurring as large, tasteless, light-yellow crystalline prisms, soluble in ether, in chloroform, in acetone, in warm nitric acid, and in dilute solution of caustic soda, and melting at 98° C. [B., 81, 270 (a, 38).]

HYDROCOTYLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro's)-ko²t'i²(u'6)-e(a). Gen., -cot'y les. From ὕδωρ, water, and κορύλη, a cup. Fr., h. Ger., Wassernabel. Pennywort; a genus of the Umbelliferae. The Hydrocotylea (Fr., hydrocotylées) are: Of Reichenbach, a section of the Boluceæ; of Dumortier, a tribe of the Didiscofermæ; of De Candolle, a tribe of the Orthospermæ; of Benthiam and Hooker, a tribe of the Umbelliferae. The Hydrocotylidæ of Lindley, the Hydrocotylinae of Sprengel, and the Hydrocotylinae of Koch are the same. [B., 34, 38, 42, 170, 173, 180 (a, 21).]—Herba hydrocotyles. The herb of H. asiatica. [B., 95.]—H. americana. Sp., sombrello de agua, yedra (6 hiedra) terrestre. A small species growing in moist places from Canada to South Carolina. [B, 34 (a, 24)].—H. asiatica. Ar., artānīdā-e-hīndī. Sanscr., brāhāmī, mandūka parāne. Mah., brāhmi. Hind., brāhāmī, brāhāma-mandūkī. Beng., thola-kuri, thuk-kuri. Bom., brāhāmī, brāhmi. Duk., vallāri-kīpālta. Guz., khāro brāhāmī, kīhī brāhāmī. Tamil, vūlavē. Malay, codagam. Tel., babassa. Fr., h. d'Asie, h. [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., asiatischer Wassernabel, It. idrocotile asiatica. Sp., hidrocotila [Mex. Ph.]. Asiatic water pennywort, thick-leaved pennywort; a species found in moist places in Africa and the East Indies. The leaves are toasted and given in infusion in the bowel complaints of children. They are also applied externally in bruises, etc. In Java they are considered diuretic, and in Malabar they are used in leprosy. The plant is valuable as an internal and external remedy in cutaneous diseases. The legume is eaten, and has been used in elephantiasis Græcorum and in syphilitic ulcers and scrofula. [B, 5, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24)].—H. bonariensis. Ger., Bonarescher Wassernabel. A species found in Peru and Brazil, of which there are two varieties—multiflora and trilobrys. Both are employed as vulneraries, and their root is used in kidney and liver diseases. [B, 180 (a, 24)].—H. bupleurifolia. A species growing at the Cape of Good Hope. It has the medicinal properties of the other species. [B, 121 (a, 35)].—H. centella. A South African species. [B, 214 (a, 35)].—H. d'Asie (Fr.). See H. asiatica.—H. en ombelle (Fr.). See H. umbellata.—H. gummitifera. The Azorella cespitosa and Azorella glaberrima. [a, 24].—H. montana. A species growing in South Africa, where it is used medicinally. [B, 121, 300 (a, 35)].—H. multiflora. See H. bonariensis.—H. nummularioides. A species growing in the Mascarene Islands, identified by some authors with the H. asiatica. [J. C. Baker; B, 309 (a, 35)].—H. plantaginea. A species growing at the Cape of Good Hope, erroneously identified with the H. asiatica. [B, 214, 309, 311 (a, 35)].—H. rotundifolia. A species common in India, from which it may be distinguished by its much smaller fruits. [B, 18 (a, 35)].—H. schukriana. See H. vulgaris.—H. trilobrys. See H. bonariensis.—H. umbellata. Fr., h. en ombelle. Ger., Goldes Wassernabel. Sp., ombigo de Venus [Mex. Ph.]. A species found in Brazil, Peru, the West Indies, and also North America, in bogs and ponds. The juice is emetic, and the leaves are used in diseases of the liver and spleen. The plant is supposed to have the properties of H. asiatica. [B, 34, 173, 180 (a, 24); J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Jan., 1886, p. 20].—H. vulgaris. Fr., h. vulgaire, écuelle d'eau, gobelet vulgaire, gobelet d'eau, nombril de Venus aquatique. Ger., gemeiner Wassernabel. Flowk-wort, sheep's-bane, penny-rot; a species found in Europe, where, under the name herba cotyledonis aquatica, it was once used in liver and bowel complaints and as a vulnerary. It is erroneously considered a cause of rot in sheep. [B, 19, 64, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24)].—Radix hydrocotyles. The root of H. asiatica. [A, 319 (a, 21)].

HYDROCUMARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-ku-ma²r¹i²k. Fr., acide hydrocumarique. Ger., Hydrocumarsäure. I. Mellicotic acid; a monobasic, crystalline acid, C₉H₁₀O₃ = OH.C₆H₄.CH₂.COOH, found in Melilotus officinalis, and also obtained by treating coumarin or coumaric acid with sodium amalgam. It forms long, colorless needles or prisms, melting at 83° C., and soluble in hot water, ether, or alcohol. [B, 3, 4, 270 (a, 38)]. 2. An anhydrous crystalline acid, apparently not the same as mellicotic acid, but having a molecular formula, C₁₈H₁₈O₆, double that of the latter, or C₉H₉O₃, and acting as a dibasic acid. [B, 2.]

HYDROCUMARIN, n. Hid-ro-ku¹ma²r¹i²n. Fr., hydrocumarine. A body, C₁₈H₁₈O₄, melting at 222° C., obtained by melting hydrocumaric acid, when a portion of the acid sublimes. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xix (a, 14); B, 46, 93 (a, 39)].

HYDROCRANIA (Lat.), HYDROCRANIUM (Lat.), n's f. and n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-kran(kra³n¹i²a³)-u³m(u¹m). From ūdōp, water, and κρανίον, the cranium. See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDROCRITHE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-kri(kre)'the-(tha). Gen., -crithe's. From ūdōp, water, and κριθή, barley. Fr., h. Ger., Gerstenwasser. Barley-water. [L, 50 (a, 14)].

HYDROCROCONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-kro-ko²n¹i²k. Fr., acide hydrocroconique. Ger., Hydrokrokonsäure. A dibasic crystalline acid, C₃H₄O₈, derived from croconic acid. [B, 3.]

HYDROCUMARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-ku²-ma²r¹i²k. Ger., Hydrocumarsäure. See HYDROCUMARIC ACID.

HYDROCUPROCYANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-ku²-pro-si-a²n¹-i²k. Fr., acide hydrocuprocyanique. Ger., Cuprocyanwasserstoff-säure. A hydrogen acid, H₂Cu₂(C₄N₄), of unstable character. Its salts are the cuprocyanides. [B.]

HYDROCYANALDINE, n. Hid-ro-si-a²n¹-a²l¹den. A substance, C₅H₁₂N₂, formed by the action of hydrocyanic acid on ammoniac aldehyde acidulated with hydrochloric acid. It crystallizes in colorless needles, freely soluble in boiling water and in alcohol, slightly soluble in cold water and in ether. Its solutions are neutral and without odor. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39)].

HYDROCYNANAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-si(ku⁴)/an-(a³n)-a²s(a³s). Gen., -at'is. See HYDROCYNANATE and CYANIDE.—H. morphicus. Morphine cyanide. [a, 38.]

HYDROCYNATE, n. Hid-ro-si¹a²n¹-at. Lat., hydrocyanas. Fr., h. cyanhydrate. A salt of hydrocyanic acid. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14)].

HYDROCYNATED, adj. Hid-ro-si¹a²n¹-at-e²d. Lat., hydrocyanatus. Combined with hydrocyanic acid; forming a cyanide. [a, 38.]

HYDROCYNIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-si-a²n¹i²k. Lat., acidum hydrocyanicum (seu cyanohydricum, seu hydrocyanatum, seu borussicum). Fr., acide cyanhydrique (ou hydrocyanique, ou prussique). Ger., Cyanwasserstoff-säure, Blausäure, Hydrocyansäure. Prussic acid; an acid consisting of a direct compound of hydrogen with true cyanogen, H—C≡N. It is produced, along with sugar and oil of bitter almonds, by the fermentation of amygdalin induced by the action of emulsion, which is found with the former in almonds, laurel-leaves, peach-stones, etc. Artificially, it is prepared in various ways from the cyanides and ferrocyanides. It is a colorless, very volatile fluid, of peculiar almond odor, solidifying at —15° and boiling at 25.5° C. It is extremely poisonous, whether taken by the mouth or inhaled in the form of vapor, exerting a direct toxic action on the red corpuscles of the blood. The h. a. of the U. S. Ph. of 1880, acidum hydrocyanicum dilutum, is a solution of the strength of 2 per cent. in dilute alcohol. Under certain circumstances the nitrogen in h. a. becomes a pentad, and thus admits of the formation of addition compounds, hydrochlorides, hydrobromides, and hydriodides, of the formula H—C≡N = $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} H \\ Cl \end{array} \right.$, etc.

[B.]—Anhydrous h. a. Ger., wasserfreie Blausäure. Aqueous h. a. deprived of its water. [B.]—Aqueous h. a. Ger., wässrige Blausäure. H. a. obtained by distillation and containing a certain amount of water, which is removed by subsequent fractional distillation and desiccation. It is very unstable. [B.]—Dilute h. a., Diluted h. a. Lat., acidum hydrocyanicum dilutum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], acidum hydrocyanicum [Gr. Ph., Swiss Ph.], acidum hydrocyanicum medicinale [Russ. Ph.], acidum cyanhydricum [Belg. Ph.], acidum hydrocyanatum [Pruss. Ph. (6th ed.)], Sp. acide cyanhydrique dissous au 100° [Fr. Cod.], Norw. acide cyanhydric [Sp. Ph.]. A solution of h. a. prepared by treating potassium ferrocyanide with sulphuric acid and water and taking up the product in diluted alcohol [U. S. Ph.] or in water, and in other ways. The U. S., Br., Pruss., Russ., and Norw. preparations contain 2 per cent. of h. a., the Belg. preparation contains 2.5 per cent., the Fr. preparation 1 per cent., and the Sp. preparation 10.5 per cent. [B, 95 (a, 38)].—Inhalation of h. a. [Br. Ph.]. See VAPOR ACIDI HYDROCYNICI.—Scheele's h. a. A solution of h. a. containing 5 per cent. of the anhydrous acid. [B, 5 (a, 38)].—Syrup of h. a. Lat., syrupus acidi hydrocyanici. Fr., sirup d'acide hydrocyanique. A preparation in the French, Belgian, and Italian formularies containing 1 part of dilute h. a. in from 125 to 200 parts of syrup. [B.]—Vapor of h. a. See VAPOR ACIDI HYDROCYNICI.

HYDROCYANIZED, adj. Hid-ro-si¹a²n¹-izd. See HYDROCYANATED.

HYDROCYANO-FERRAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-si(ku⁴)²-a²n(a³n)-o(o³)-fe²r¹ra²s(ra³s). Gen., -rat'is. See HYDROFERRICYANIDE.—H. quincius. See HYDROFERRATE DE QUININE.

HYDROCYANOFERRIC, adj. Hid-ro-si-a²n¹-o-fe²r¹i²k. Lat., hydrocyanoferricus. Fr., hydrocyanoferrique. See HYDROFERRICYANIC.

HYDROCYANOFERROSUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-si(ku⁴)²-a²n(a³n)-o(o³)-fe²r¹-o³s(u³s). Fr., hydrocyanoferruz. See HYDROFERRICYANOUS.

HYDROCYANOGEN, n. Hid-ro-si-a²n¹-o³-je²n. Hydrocyanic acid. [B, 7.]

HYDROCYANOROSANILINE, n. Hid-ro-si-a²n¹-o-roz-a²n¹-i²-en. A white, crystalline substance, C₂₁H₁₉N₃, formed by the action of potassium cyanide on the salts of rosaniline. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39)].

HYDROCYANSÄURE (Ger.), n. Hu⁴d-ro-tsu⁴-a²n¹-zoir-e². See HYDROCYANIC ACID.

HYDROCYST, n. Hid-ro-si²st. Lat., hydrocystis (from ūdōp, water, and κυστίς, a cyst). Fr., hydrocyste. Ger., Wasserblase. 1. A cyst containing water. 2. In the pl., h's, processes attached to the cœnosar of the Physophoridae, termed feelers. [B, 28 (a, 27)].

HYDROCYSTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-si²st(ku⁴s)'¹ts. Gen., -cyst'eos (-is). Fr., hydrocyste. Ger., Wasserblase. 1. See HYDROCYST. 2. See HYDATID.

HYDRODEOPYRA (Lat.), HYDRODEOPYRETOS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Hid(hu⁴d)-rod-e²-o²p'i²ru⁴r¹-a³-o²p-i²ru⁴r¹-e²-o³s. From ūdōpōdēs, watery, and πύρ, or πυρετός, fever. Fr., hydrodéopyre. A fever attended with watery effusion or discharges. [L, 50 (a, 14)].

HYDRODERMA (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-du⁴rm(de²rm¹)-a². Gen., -derm'atos (-atis). From ūdōp, water, and δέρμα, the skin. Fr., hydroderme. See ANASARCA.

HYDRODES (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-rod(ez/as). Gr., υδροδής (from ūdōp, water, and είδος, resemblance). Watery. [A, 311.]

HYDRODIARRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-di(di²)-a²r(a³r)-re'(ro²e²-a²). From ūdōp, water, and διάρροια, diarrhœa. Fr., hydrodiarrhœe. Ger., wässriger Durchfall. Watery diarrhœa. [L, 50 (a, 14)].

HYDRODIFFUSION (Ger.), n. Hu⁴d-ro-di²f-fu-ze-on'. The physical mingling of two miscible fluids having no chemical affinity, occurring without difference of pressure and sometimes in opposition to gravity. [Munk (A, 319 [a, 21]).]

HYDRODIURÈSE (Fr.), n. E-dro-de-u⁴-re²z. From ūdōp, water, and διουρεΐν, to pass urine. A copious secretion of limpid urine. [Robert, "Union méd.," Sept. 27, 1885, p. 525.]

HYDRODYNAMIC, adj. Hid-ro-di²n-a²m¹i²k. From ūdōp, water, and δύναμις, power. Pertaining to hydrodynamics. [L, 107.]

HYDRODYNAMICS, n. sing. Hid-ro-di²n-a²m¹i²ks. That branch of mechanics which concerns fluids (especially liquids) in a state of motion. [B.]

HYDRECIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-re'(ro²e²)-si²(ki²)-u³m(u⁴m). From ūdōp, water, and αἶκος, a house. The chamber into which the cœnosar in many of the Calycephoridae can be retracted. [B, 28 (a, 27)].

HYDREDEMA (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-re²d(ro²e²d)-em(am¹)³a³. Gen., -em'atos (-atis). From ūdōp, water, and οἰδήμα, a swelling. Fr., hydrœdème. Ger., wässriges Oedem. See EDEMA.

HYDROELATERIN, n. Hid-ro-e²l-a²t'e²r-i²n. An amorphous substance insoluble in water, obtained from Ecballium elaterium. [B, 10.]

HYDRO-ELECTRIC, adj. Hid-ro-e²l-e²k'tri²k. Of or pertaining to electricity evolved by the action of water or steam. [B.]

HYDRO-ELECTRICITY, n. Hid-ro-e²l-e²k-tri²s'i²t-i². From υδρω, water, and ηλεκτρον, amber. Electricity generated by means of water or steam.

HYDRO-ELECTRIZATION, n. Hid-ro-e²l-e²k-tri²z-a'shu²n. From υδρω, water, and ηλεκτρον, amber. Of Beard and Rockwell, electrization in which water is employed as an electrode. [B, 26.]

HYDROËMIE (Fr.), n. E-dro-a-me. See HYDRÆMIA.

HYDRO-ENCEPHALION (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-(e²n²)-se²f(ke²f)'n²(a²)-i²s'u²s. From υδρω, water, and ἐγκεφάλιος, the brain. See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDRO-ENCÉPHALOCELE (Fr.), n. E-dro-a²n²-sa-fa²-lo-se²l. See HYDROENCEPHALOCELE.

HYDRO-ENCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-(e²n²)-se²f(ke²f)'n²(a²)-i²s'u²s. From υδρω, water, and ἐγκεφάλιος, the brain. See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDRO-ENTEROCOLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-te²r-o(o²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hi-dro-e²n'te²r-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-e). See HYDROENTEROCOLE.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-te²r-o(o²)-e²p-i²-plo(plo²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hi-dro-e²n-te²r-o-e²p-i²-plo-sel. Gen., -cel'es (-e). See HYDROENTEREPIPOCELE.

HYDRO-ENTERO-EPIPHALMUM (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-te²r-o(o²)-e²p-i²-plo(m'fa²)(fa²)-u²m(u²m). See HYDROENTEREPIPHALMUM.

HYDRO-ENTEROPHALMOCOLE (Lat.), HYDRO-ENTEROPHALMUM (Lat.), HYDRO-ENTEROPHALUS (Lat.), n's f., n., and m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-te²r-o(o²)-e²p-i²-plo(m'fa²)(fa²)-u²m(u²m); in Eng., hi-dro-e²n-te²r-o-e²p-i²-plo-sel; hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²n-te²r-o(o²)-e²p-i²-plo(m'fa²)(fa²)-u²m(u²m). See HYDROENTEROPHALMOCOLE.

HYDRO-EPIGASTRIUM (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²p-i²-ga²st(ga²st)'ri²-n²(u²m). See HYDREPIGASTRIUM.

HYDRO-EPIPOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²p-i²-plo(plo²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hi-dro-e²p-i²-plo-sel. Gen., -cel'es. See HYDREPIPOCELE.

HYDRO-EPIPHALMOCOLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²p-i²-plo(m'fa²)(fa²)-u²m(u²m); in Eng., hi-dro-e²p-i²-plo-sel. Gen., -cel'es. See HYDREPIPHALMOCOLE.

HYDRO-EPIPHALMUM (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²p-i²-plo(m'fa²)(fa²)-u²m(u²m). See HYDREPIPHALMUM.

HYDRO-EPIPLOON (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²p-i²-plo(o²)-n. See HYDREPIPLOON.

HYDROETHYLCROTONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-e²th-i²l-kro-to²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydro-éthyl-crotonique. A fatty acid, C₆H₁₀O₂, isomeric with diethyl-acetic acid and formed, when bromhydroethyl-crotonic acid is treated with sodium amalgam and water. It is a colorless, oily liquid with a disagreeable odor and high specific gravity, soluble in water. It boils at 194° to 195° C. and is not solidified at -15° C. This acid is probably identical with diethylacetic acid. [B, 3 (a, 38); B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROETRON (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e(a)'tro²n. From υδρω, water, and τρον, the belly. See ASCITES.

HYDRO-EXOSTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-e²x-o²s-to²si²s. Gen., -os'es (-os'is). See HYDREXOSTOSIS.

HYDROFÈRE (Fr.), n. E-dro-fe²r. From υδρω, water, and ferre, to bear. Of Mathieu de la Drôme, an apparatus designed for administering baths with an extremely small quantity of liquid. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROFERRICYANHYDRIC ACID, n. Hid'ro-fe²r-i²-si-a²n-hid'ri²k. See HYDROFERRICYANIC ACID.

HYDROFERRICYANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-fe²r-i²-si-a²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydroferricyanique (ou hydroferricyanique). Ger., Ferricyanwasserstoffsäure. A hydrogen acid, H₄Fe₂(C₅N₃)₄, occurring under the form of brownish acicular crystals, readily soluble in water. It is of decided acid character and forms a series of salts called the ferricyanides. It is actively poisonous. [B.]

HYDROFERRICYANAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fe²r-ro-ro³-si(ku⁶)'a²n(a²n)-a²s(a²s). Gen., -atis. See HYDROFERRICYANIDE.—H. quinicus. Quinine hydroferricyanide. [B.]

HYDROFERRICYANATE, n. Hid-ro-fe²r-o-si'a²n-at. Fr., h. See HYDROFERRICYANIDE.

HYDROFERRICYANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-fe²r-o-si'a²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydroferricyanique (ou hydroferricyanique). Ger., Ferricyanwasserstoffsäure. A hydrogen acid, H₄Fe₂C₅N₃ = Fe(C₅H₃)₂:H₂, occurring as colorless crystals, soluble in water and in alcohol. It is produced by the action of hydrochloric acid on potassium ferrocyanide. It has marked acid properties and forms a series of salts called ferrocyanides. [B.]

HYDROFERRICYANIDE, n. Hid-ro-fe²r-o-si'a²n-i²d(i²d). Also written hydroferricyanate and ferrocyanhydrate. Fr., hydroferricyanure. Ger., Hydroferricyanid. A salt of hydroferricyanic acid; more especially applied to addition compounds of this acid with basic substances like alkaloids. [B.] See QUININE h.

HYDROFLUATE (Fr.), n. E-dro-flu⁶-a²l. A salt of hydrofluoric acid. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROFLUORIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-flu⁶-o²r'i²k. Lat., acidum fluoris. Fr., acide fluorhydrique. Ger., Hydrofluorsäure, Fluorwasserstoffsäure. It., acido fluoridrico. A compound of hydrogen and fluorine, HF. The anhydrous acid is obtained with great difficulty, and is a volatile, colorless liquid, emitting irritant, poisonous vapors and causing great irritation on coming in contact with the skin. Its sp. gr. is .9879. It boils at 19.4° C. The acid is readily soluble in water. It has the power of corroding glass and porcelain from its affinity for the silicon which these substances contain, and it is employed for etching on glass. It has been used as an antiseptic. [B, 3; "Nouv. rem.," "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Sept. 19, 1885, p. 336.]

HYDROFLUOSILICATE, n. Hid'ro-flu⁶-o-si²'i²-kat. A salt of hydrofluosilicic acid.

HYDROFLUOSILICIC ACID, n. Hid'ro-flu⁶-o-si²'i²-s'i²k. Ger., Kieselflussäure, Kieselfluorwasserstoffsäure. Syn.: silicofluoric acid. A dibasic acid, H₂SiF₆, formed by dissolving silicon tetrafluoride in water or by treating silica with hydrofluoric acid. Its concentrated aqueous solution is a fuming, colorless, very acid liquid. [B, 3.]

HYDROGALA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²g'a²(a²)-a². Gen., -act'os (-act'is). From υδρω, water, and γάλα, milk. A preparation consisting of 250 parts of cow's milk and 750 of spring-water, sweetened with syrup or syrup of currants. It was used by the ancients in fevers and diseases of the throat and stomach. [B, 38 (a, 38); L, 80, 108.]

HYDROGALVANIC, adj. Hid-ro-ga²l-a²n'i²k. Of or pertaining to galvanism generated by the action of fluids. [B, 116.]

HYDROGARDENIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-ga²r-de²n'i²k. A compound, C₁₄H₁₄O₆, or C₁₄H₁₄O₈, obtained by treating gardenic acid with aqueous sulphuric acid. It crystallizes in brilliant needles, fusing at 190° C., soluble in benzene, acetic acid, and boiling alcohol. [B, 46 (a, 30); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xviii (a, 14).]

HYDROGARON (Lat.), HYDROGARUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu⁶d)-rog'a²r-o²n-u²m(u²m). Gr., υδρογαρον (from υδρω, water, and γαρος, a sauce made of brine). Of Aetius and Gorreus, a mixture of garum and water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROGASTER (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ga²st(ga²st)'u²r(ar). Gen., -gast'eros (-is), -gast'ri. Gr., υδρογαστρον (from υδρω, water, and γαστήρ, the belly). Ger., Bauchwassersucht. Ascites. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROGASTOR (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ga²st(ga²st)'o²r(or). Gen., -gast'or'os (-is). Gr., υδρογαστρον. Dropsical; as a n., a person affected with ascites. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROGASTRIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ga²st(ga²st)'ri²-a². From υδρω, water, and γαστήρ, the stomach. Fr., hydrogastrie. A disturbance of the stomach by fluid due to constriction of the pyloric and oesophageal orifices, described by Rivière and Rhodius. [a, 40.]

HYDROGASTRORRHÉE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-ga²s'tro-ra. From υδρω, water, γαστήρ, the stomach, and ροια, a flowing. A copious watery effusion into the cavity of the stomach. [L, 82.]

HYDROGEN, n. Hid'ro-je²n. Lat., hydrogenium (from υδρω, water, and γεννάν, to engender). Fr., hydrogene. Ger., Wasserstoff. It., idrogeno. Sp., hidrógeno. A non-metallic element discovered by Cavendish in 1766. It is one of the components of water and of many other inorganic substances, and is a nearly constant constituent of organic compounds. It is a colorless, tasteless, odorless, inflammable gas, and is the lightest substance known, its sp. gr., in relation to that of air, being as 1 to 14.435, and to water as 1 to 11, 160. Its density is, accordingly, selected as the unity of density for gases. Under a very low temperature (-140° C.), combined with the application of very great pressure (650 atmospheres = nearly 5 tons to the square inch), it is liquefied, forming a bluish, opaque liquid. By some, h. is considered a metal. In composition, it forms the essential element in the class of compounds called acids, which are hence denominated salts of h., and, united with carbon, it forms the important class of organic compounds called hydrocarbons. In compounds it never replaces more than one atom of another element, and hence its combining power is regarded as a unit, to which that of other elements is referred, and their quantivalence is measured by the number of atoms of h. which they can replace. Its atomic weight is assumed as the unit of atomic weights in general, and is hence denoted by 1. Its symbol is H. [B, 3.]—Antimoneted h., Antimonureted h. See H. antimonide.—Arseneted h. See H. arsenide.—Azotureted h. Ammonia. [B, 98.]—Bicarbureted h. Of Faraday, benzene. For other salts of hydrogen not here described, see the corresponding acid in the major list; and for compound salts of h. and another base (the so-called acid salts, e. g., h. disodium orthophosphate), see under the name of the other base. [a, 38.]—H. amide. Ammonia. [Kaue (B, 98).]—H., ammonium, and sodium phosphate. See SODIUM, ammonium and h. phosphate.—H. amylite. See AMYL ALCOHOL.—H. antimonide. Lat., hydrogenium antimoniatum, stibionia. Syn.: stibamine, stibien. Antimonureted h.; a colorless, odorless, combustible gas, SbH₃, produced by the action of nascent h. on reducible compounds of antimony, but not yet obtained pure. [B, 9 (a, 38).]—H. arsenide. Lat., arsenia. Fr., hydrogène arséné. Syn.: arsucamine, arsine. Arsenureted or arseneted h.; a compound of arsenic and h. Two varieties are known—a solid, As₂H₂; and a colorless, very poisonous gas, AsH₃, having a garlic-like odor and a neutral reaction, burning with a greenish flame, and soluble in water free from air. [B, 9 (a, 38)].—H. binoxide. See H. peroxide.—H. bismuthate. See BISMUTHIC acid.—H. bromide. Fr., bromure d'hydrogène. Fr., peroxyde d'hydrogène. Ger., Wasserstoffperoxyd. H. dioxide, oxygenized water; a colorless, oily liquid, H_2O_2 , devoid of odor, and having an astringent and bitter taste. It is soluble in water and in ether, the latter solution being called ozonic ether. H. peroxide is readily decomposed, and, owing to the facility with which it gives up one of its atoms of oxygen, it acts as a strong oxidizing, bleaching, and disinfectant agent. It has been used as an antiseptic, particularly in nasal and aural surgery. [B, 3, 5].—H. persulphide. Fr., persulfure d'hydrogène. Ger., Wasserstoffpersulfür. A yellow, oily liquid, H_2S_2 , of disagreeable, acid taste, and giving off irritant vapors of a pungent, repulsive odor, resembling that of sulphureted h. According to Alberto, it is the most powerfully antiseptic of the sulphur compounds. [B, 3, "Sem. méd.," Aug. 3, 1889, p. 263 (a, 18)].—H. phosphide. Fr., phosphure d'hydrogène. Ger., Phosphorwasserstoff. 1. Gaseous h. phosphide, or phosphureted h. 2. Liquid h. phosphide. 3. Solid h. phosphide. [B.]—H. tetrylate. See BUTYL alcohol.—H. tritylate. See PROPYL alcohol.—Light carbureted h. Marsh gas, or methane, CH_4 , so called in opposition to the denser olefant gas, or heavy carbureted h. [B.]—Liquid h. phosphide (or phosphureted h.) An unstable substance, P_2H_4 , forming a colorless, highly refracting liquid, which burns with a bright flame as soon as it is exposed to the air. [B, 3].—Oxidized h. Lat., hydrogenium. H. absorbed by palladium or other metals. By some, h. is held under these circumstances to act as a metal, and to form an alloy with the palladium. [B, 3].—Olefant h. Ethylene. [a, 38].—Phosphoreted h. Fr., hydrogène phosphoré. Phosphine, gaseous h. phosphide; a colorless gas, PH_3 , having an odor like that of rotten fish. It dissolves in water, is very inflammable, and acts as a powerful poison when inhaled. [B, 3].—Seleniureted h. H. selenide, SCH_2 ; a colorless, inflammable gas, of intensely disagreeable, irritant odor. Inhaled, it causes inflammation of the respiratory mucous membrane. Its aqueous solution has an acid reaction, and is often called hydro-selenic or selenhydric acid. [B, 3].—Solid h. arsenide. A polymeric modification of arseniureted h., As_2H_2 , a brownish solid. [B, 3].—Solid h. phosphide. A yellow powder, P_2H_2 . [B, 3].—Sulphureted h. Fr., hydrogène sulfuré. Ger., Schwefelwasserstoff. H. monosulphide, sulphur hydride, sulphuric acid, hydrosulphuric acid; a colorless gas, H_2S , having a strong, disagreeable odor of rotten eggs, and a sweetish taste, condensing under pressure into a colorless liquid, which freezes at $-85^\circ C.$ and boils at $-61.8^\circ C.$ It is inflammable. Water dissolves 3 or 4 times its volume of the gas, forming a solution of acid reaction, and an odor like that of the gas. Both the gas and its solution are much employed as chemical reagents. It has been used by rectal injection as a remedy for pulmonary tuberculosis. [B, 3].—Tellureted h. Tellurium hydride, h. telluride; a colorless, inflammable gas, TeH_2 , of foetid odor, and soluble in water, the solution being sometimes called hydrotelluric or tellurhydric acid. [B.]

HYDROGENATED, adj. Hid/ro-je²n-at e²d. Lat., hydrogenatus. Fr., hydrogéné. Containing hydrogen in combination. [L, 107.]

HYDROGENATION, n. Hid-ro-je²n-a'shu²n. The act or process of causing to combine with hydrogen.

HYDROGENOSULPHURETUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²j²(ro³)'e²n-o(o²)-su²(su⁴)'-fu²(fu⁴)-ret(rat)'u²m(u⁴m). A hydrosulphide. [a, 39.]

HYDROGENOUS, adj. Hid-ro²j²e²n-u²s. From ὑδωρ, water, and γεννάω, to engender. Pertaining to hydrogen. [L, 56.]

HYDROGÈNURE (Fr.), n. E-dro-zha-nu⁶r. A hydride. [a, 38.]

HYDROGEROUS, adj. Hid-ro²j²e²r-u²s. Lat., hydrogerous (from ὑδωρ, water, and gerere, to bear). Fr., hydrogère. Containing or carrying water. [L, 24.]

HYDROGETON (Lat.), n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-je²t(gat)'o²n. From ὑδωρ, water, and γείτων, a neighbor. 1. Of Loureiro, the genus Potamogeton. 2. Of Persoon, the genus Ouviranda. [B, 42, 121 (a, 35)].—H. fenestrale. The Ouviranda fenestralis. [a, 35.]

HYDROGETONIS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-je²t(gat)'o²n-i²s. From ὑδωρ, water, and γείτων, a neighbor. Fr., hydrogétone. Of plants living in the water. The Hydrogetones of Link are an order of the Endogenææ. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).]

HYDROGLOSSA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-glo²s(glos)'sa². From ὑδωρ, water, and γλῶσσα, the tongue. Fr., hydroglosse. See RANULA.

HYDROGURES (Fr.), n. pl. E-dro-zhu⁶r. The hydrogen acids. [B, 88 (a, 39).]

HYDROGURET, n. Hid-ro²g²u²r-e²t. See HYDRIDE.

HYDROGURETED, adj. Hid-ro²g²u²r-e²t-e²d. See HYDROGENATED.

HYDRO-HÆMATOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-he²m(ha²-e²m)-a²t(a²t)-o(o²)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hi-dro-he²m'a²-t-o²-sel. Gen., -cel'es. See HYDREMATOCELE.

HYDROHÆMIC, adj. Hid-ro-he²m'i²k. See HYDRÆMIC.

HYDRO-HÆMOSTAT, n. Hid-ro-he²m'o²-sta²t. From ὑδωρ, water, αἷμα, blood, and στάσις, to make to stand. An instrument for arresting hæmorrhage by hydrostatic pressure. [E.]—Gouley's h.-h. A metallic catheter the shaft of which is incased in a rubber bag, which may be distended with water through a small rubber tube. [E.]

HYDROHÆMOTHORAX (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-he²m(ha²-e²m)-o(o²)-thor'a²x(a²x). Gen., -thor'acos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, αἷμα, blood, and θώραξ, the chest. Fr., hydro-hématorax. A condition in which hydrothorax and hæmatothorax are associated. [A, 385.]

HYDROHÉMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-e²-me. See HYDRÆMIA.

HYDROHYDRASTINE, n. Hid-ro-hid-ra²'s'ten. A substance, $C_{26}H_{21}NO_4$, analogous in composition to hydroberberine; formed by the absorption of 4 atoms of hydrogen by hydrastine. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxxii (a, 14).]

HYDROHYMENTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)'ro(ro³)-hi(hu⁶)-me²n(man)-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -i'idos (-idis). See HYDRYMENTIS.

HYDROHYSTERA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-hi²st(hu⁶st)-e²r-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and ὑστέρη, the womb. See HYDROMETRA.

HYDROICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro'i²k-u²s(u⁴s). From ἵδρωα, heat spots. Fr., hydroïque. Relating to or partaking of the character of hydroa. [G.]

HYDROID, adj. Hid'roid. From ὑδωρ, water (1st def.), or ὑδρα, the hydra (2d def.), and εἶδος, resemblance. Fr., hydroïde. Ger., wasserähnlich (1st def.). 1. Resembling water. 2. Resembling the Hydra. The Hydroïda are a subclass of the Hydrozoa, comprising animals most closely allied to Hydra. [B, 28 (a, 27).]

HYDRIODICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-i²o²d(od)'i²k-u²s(u⁴s). See HYDRIDIC.

HYDROJOBOLOUS, adj. Hid-ro-jo²b'o²-lu²s. Lat., hydrojobolus (from ὑδωρ, water, and ισβάλος, shedding venom). Fr., hydrojobole. Aquatic and venomous. The Hydrojoboli of J. A. Ritgen are a family of ophidian reptiles comprising those serpents which are aquatic and venomous. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYDROJODAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-jod(yod)'a²s-(a²s). Gen., -at'is. See HYDRIODATE.

HYDROJODICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-jod(yod)'i²k-u²s(u⁴s). Hydriodic; with the name of a base, the hydroiodate (iodide) of the base. [B.] Cf. KALI hydrojodicum.

HYDROKALI (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²k'a²l(a²l)(e). A supposititious compound of hydrogen and potassium. [a, 38.]—H. carbonicum. Acid potassium carbonate. [a, 38.]—H. tartaricum. Acid potassium tartrate. [a, 38.]

HYDROKEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d) ro(ro²)-ke²f'-a²l(a²l)-n²s(u²s). See HYDROCEPHALUS.

HYDROKINETICS, n. sing. Hid-ro-ki²n-e²t'i²ks. From ὕδωρ, water, and κινῆσις, for putting in motion. The science which relates to the motions of fluids and the forces acting upon fluids. [B, 116.]

HYDROKINONE, n. Hid-ro-ki²n'on. See HYDROQUINONE.

HYDROKONION (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-kon(ko²n'i²o²n). See HYDROKONIOS.—Siegle's Dampf-H. (Ger.). A steam suction atomizer resembling Weir's. [Gottstein (A, 319 [a, 21]).]

HYDROL (Fr.), n. E.drol. Of Béral, a natural or artificial mineral water. [L, 41, 49, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROLACTOMETEER, n. Hid-ro-la²k-to²m'e²t-u²r. From ὕδωρ, water, lac, milk, and μέτρον, a measure. An instrument for measuring the amount of water present in milk. Zemec's h. consists of two graduated bottles with a filter of paper. A known quantity is placed in one bottle, warmed and coagulated with hydrochloric acid, and filtered into the second bottle. As it is known how much serum normal milk should contain, the percentage in the sample tested will give its purity. [L, 225.]

HYDROLEUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-le²(a²l'e²)-u²m-(n²m). From ὕδωρ, water, and ἔλαιον, oil. See HYDRELEUM.

HYDROLAPATHUM (Lat.), HYDROLAPATHUS (Lat.), n²s n. and m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-la²p(a²l'a²p'a²th(a²th)-u²m(u²m)-n²s-(u²s). From ὕδωρ, water, and ἄραθον, sorrel. The Rumex aquaticus. [B, 121 (a, 35).]—Radix et herba hydrolapathi. The root and herb of Rumex hydrolapathum. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

HYDROLAT (Fr.), n. E.dro-lat. Lat., hydrolatum (from ὕδωρ, water). See Eau distillée (3d def.).—H. simple. See Acqua destillata.

HYDROLATURA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-la²t(la²t)-u²(u²-ra²). From ὕδωρ, water. Fr., hydrolature. Ger., Wasserauszug. Of Béral, an aqueous medicinal preparation. [A, 385.]

HYDROLÉ (Fr.), n. E.dro-la. From ὕδωρ, water. An aqueous solution, decoction, or infusion of a medicinal substance. [B, 46 (a, 39); L, 41, 49, 77 (a, 14).]—H. animal. An aqueous solution of a medicinal substance of animal origin. [B, 46 (a, 39).]—H. mercuriel alcoolisé. See Liquor HYDRARGYRI oxyaurialis.—H. mercuriel calcaire. See Lotio HYDRARGYRI lutea.—H. tartarique. See Solutio TARTARI depurati.—H's végétaux. Aqueous solutions of vegetable medicinal substances. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROLEA (Lat.), n. f. sing. and n. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²le²a². From ὕδωρ, water, and ἔλαια, the olive-tree. 1. (Sing.) a genus of the Hydrophyllaceae, tribe Hydroleae. 2. (Pl.) of R. Brown, the Hydrophyllaceae of Choisy, a tribe of the Hydroleaceae (Fr., Hydroleaceae), which are the Hydrophyllaceae. The Hydroleae (Fr., Hydroleae) of Benth and Hooker are a tribe of the Hydrophyllaceae; the Hydroleae of Reichenbach are the same. [B, 42, 170 (a, 24).]—H. zeylanica. Beng., kauchra ishlangula. Mal., tsyernvallet. A species found in the East Indies. A pulp made of the leaves is applied to malignant ulcers. [B, 19, 172 (a, 24).]

HYDROLEATE, n. Hid-ro²le²-at. Fr., hydroleate. A salt of hydroleic acid. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROLEIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²le²i²que. Fr., acide hydroléique. Ger., Hydroleinsäure. A substance, C₁₇H₃₄O₂, obtained by the action of boiling water on sulpholeic or sulphomargaric acid. It forms yellow crystals, insoluble in water, very soluble in alcohol or ether. [B, 38, 48, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROLEINE, n. Hid-ro²le²-i²n. From ὕδωρ, water, and oleum, oil. A proprietary emulsion of cod-liver oil, borax, and pancreatin. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

HYDROLEROS (Lat.), HYDROLERUS (Lat.), n²s m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-le²(a²l'a²ro²s, -ru²s(ru²s)). From ὕδωρ, water, and ἄσπος, chatter. Fr., hydrolère. Ger., urruhiger Wahnsinn. A form of mania characterized by restlessness. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROLEUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-le²-u²m(u²m). See HYDROLEUM.

HYDROLICUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²l'i²k-n²m(u²m). From ὕδωρ, water. 1. Of Béral, see HYDROLÉ. 2. See LEMONADE.

HYDROLOGY, n. Hid-ro²l'o²-j²i². Lat., hydrologia (from ὕδωρ, water, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., hydrologie. Ger., Hydrologie. That department or division of medical science which treats of the use of waters, especially mineral waters, for therapeutic purposes. [D.]

HYDROLOTIF (Fr.), n. E.dro-lo-tef. From ὕδωρ, water. An aqueous lotion. [L, 41.]

HYDROLYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²l'i²s(u²s)-i²s. Gen., -ly²sis (-ol'ya²is). From ὕδωρ, water, and λύειν, to loose. Chemical decomposition undergone by a substance in consequence of the assumption of the elements of one or more molecules of water. [B.]

HYDROLYTE, n. Hid-ro²l't. From ὕδωρ, water, and λύσις, soluble. It., idrolito. 1. A solution in water prepared without distillation. It corresponds to the liquor of the U. S., Br., and Ger.

Ph's, and the soluté of the Fr. Cod. [B.] 2. One of the few mineral substances which are nearly or quite soluble in water. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

HYDROLYTIC, adj. Hid-ro²l'i²t'i²k. From ὕδωρ, water, and λύσις, that which loosens. 1. Causing the elimination of water. 2. Of ferments, acting only in the presence of water and producing fermentation by hydration. [B, 116.]

HYDROMA (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²ma². Gen., -om'atos (-atis). Gr., ὕδρωμα (from ὕδωρ, water). Fr., hydrome. Ger., Wasserbulg. Of Ritgen, a morbid growth containing water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMANIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-man(ma²n'i²a²). From ὕδωρ, water, and μανία, madness. Fr., hydromanie. Ger., Hydromantie. 1. An insatiable thirst. 2. Diabetes insipidus, from the excessive thirst characterizing it. [D, 72; L, 50 (a, 14).] 3. A mania for suicide by drowning. [A, 326 (a, 21); D, 72; L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMARGARATE, n. Hid-ro²ma²rg'a²-rat. A salt of hydromargaric acid. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROMARGARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²ma²rg'a²-r'i²k. Fr., acide hydromargarique. Ger., Hydromargarinsäure. A crystalline acid, C₁₇H₃₄O₂ + H₂O, readily soluble in ether or alcohol, insoluble in water, and melting at 60° C. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROMARGARITATE, n. Hid-ro²ma²rg'a²-r'i²tat. A salt of hydromargaritic acid. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROMARGARITIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²ma²rg'a²-r'i²t'i²k. Fr., acide hydromargaritique. Ger., Hydromargaritinsäure. A solid crystalline acid, C₁₇H₃₄O₂, soluble in ether or alcohol, insoluble in water, and melting at 68° C.; a decomposition product of margaritic acid, by Berzelius considered as the product of the highest degree of oxidation of the radicle ptiotin, and called ptiotic acid. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14, a, 38).]

HYDROMECHANICS, n. sing. Hid-ro²me²k-a²n'i²ks. The mechanics of liquids. [B.]

HYDROMECONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²me²ko²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydroméconique. Ger., Hydroméconsäure. An acid, C₇H₁₀O₇, formed by the addition of 6 atoms of hydrogen to meconic acid through the agency of sodium amalgam and water. It forms a stable, syrupy liquid of an astringent taste. [B, 41 (a, 38); B, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROMEDIASTINUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-me²-c(mad)-i²a²st(a²st)-in(en)'u²m(u²m). From ὕδωρ, water, and mediastinum (q. v.). Fr., hydromédiastine. Ger., Mittelfellwassersucht. Dropsy of the mediastinum. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMEDUSÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-me²-d(med²)-u²(u²)se(sa²e²). From ὕδωρ, water, and Μέδουσα, Medusa. Ger., Schirmquallen. A class of the Cnidaria, or (of Lankester) of the Nematophora. [L, 228; "Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," p. 443, 1877 (L).]

HYDROMEL, n. Hid-ro²m-e²l. Gr., ὕδρωμελι (from ὕδωρ, water, and μέλι, honey). Lat., hydromeli. Fr., h. Ger., H., Honigwasser (3d def.). It., idromele. 1. Of the ancients, a fermented beverage made of honey and water. 2. Any medicinal liquid mixture containing honey. 3. A beverage consisting of 6 parts of white honey in 10 of water. [B, 10, 270 (a, 38), 78 (a, 14).]—Ant-asthmatic h. Lat., h. antasthmaticum, h. asthmaticum. Fr., h. antiasthmatique. An infusion of fresh digitalis-leaves, containing vinegar, honey, tincture of benzoin, and liquor ammonii anisatus. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—H. composé. See Tisane pectorale.—H. fermenté de Rousseau (Fr.). See LAUDANUM de Rousseau.—H. infantum [Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph.]. Roum., h. [Roum. Ph.]. A mixture of 3 parts of the infusum laxativum of the Austr. Ph. and 1 part of syrup of senna with manna. [B, 95.]—H. simplex. See H. (3d def.).—H. vineux (Fr.). See Vinous h.—Simple h. See H. (3d def.).—Vinous h. Lat., hydromeli vinosum. Fr., h. vineux. A preparation made by fermenting 2,500 parts of pure honey and 64 of beer yeast in 12,500 of warm water; or by boiling 1,687 parts of honey in 18,000 of water till a quarter is boiled away, then fermenting 5 or 6 weeks, and adding 8 parts of isinglass and a nutmeg. [B, 119 (a, 38).]

HYDROMELI (Lat.), n. n. indecl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-me²l-i(i²). See HYDROMEL.—H. vinosum. See Vinous HYDROMEL.

HYDROMELLE (Fr.), n. E.dro-me²l-a. From ὕδωρ, water, and μέλι, honey. Of Béral, a medicament made of hydromel and extracts. [A, 385.]

HYDROMELLEA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-me²l'e²a². From ὕδωρ, water, and μέλι, honey.

HYDROMELLIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²me²l'i²k. Fr., acide hydromellique. See HYDROMELLITIC ACID.

HYDROMELLITIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²me²l'i²t'i²k. Fr., acide hydromellitique. Ger., Hydromellithsäure. An acid, C₆H₆(CO.OH)₆, formed when plumbic mellitate is decomposed with sulphureted hydrogen, and occurring as an indistinctly crystalline mass. When kept it passes into the isomeric isohydromellitic acid, forming hard, tetragonal prisms, soluble in water, insoluble in hydrochloric acid. [B, 3, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDROMELLONE, n. Hid-ro²me²l'on. Fr., hydromellon. Ger., Hydromellon. A substance, C₆N₆H₁₂, produced by the oxidation of melam, melamine, ammeline, urea, etc. It was discovered by Liebig, who at first did not recognize the presence of hydrogen, and called it mellon. It forms a yellow powder insoluble in water, alcohol, ether, acids, and diluted alkalis. It is isomeric and perhaps identical with diexauramide. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROMELLONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²me²l'o²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydromellonique. Ger., Mellonwasserstoffsäure. A hydrogen acid, C₆H₁₂N₆H₁₂ = N₆(C₆N₆:NH)₆, forming a series of salts called mellonides. [B.]

HYDROMELON (Lat.), HYDROMELUM (Lat.), n. s. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mel(mal)²-n, -u³m(u¹m). Gr., ὑδρόμηλον (from ὑδωρ, water, and μέλον, an apple). Fr., hydromèle. Ger., Aepffelrank. 1. A beverage made by boiling apples or quinces in water. 2. A mixture consisting of honey, quinces, and boiled water. [L, 84 (a, 14).]

HYDROMENINGITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-me²n-(man)-i²n(i²n²)-ji²ge(i²s). Gen., -i²idos (-idis). From ὑδωρ, water, and μῆνιγξ, a membrane (see also -itis*). Fr., hydroméningite. Ger., Hirnhautwassersucht (1st def.). 1. Hydrocephalus. 2. An old term for serous iritis. [F.]

HYDROMENINGOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-me²n-(man)-i²n(i²n²)-go(o²)-se(ka)¹le(la); in Eng., hid-ro-me²n-i²n²-go-sel. Gen., -cel²-es (-æ). 1. See ENCEPHALOCELE. 2. That form of spina bifida in which the sac is composed of skin and the membranes of the cord, but not of the cord itself. [E.]

HYDROMENINX (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-men(man)-i²n²x. Gen., -in²gos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, and μῆνιγξ, a membrane. Fr., hydroméninge. Ger., Hirnhautwassersucht. Dropsy of the membranes of the brain. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMENTHENE, n. Hid-ro-me²nth'en. A substance, C₁₀H₁₈, formed by treating menthol with hydrochloric acid, and then removing hydrogen and chlorine from the product. [Am. Jour. of Pharm., July, 1888, p. 307 (B).]

HYDROMETER, n. Hid-ro²m²e²t-u³r. Lat., hydrometrum (from ὑδωρ, water, and μέτρον, a measure). Fr., aréomètre. Ger., H. An instrument for measuring the density, etc., of fluids.—Baumé's h. A glass tube with a bulb blown in its end and loaded with mercury so as to float upright in a liquid. For determining the densities of liquids lighter than water the stem of the h. is so graduated that 10° mark the level to which it sinks in distilled water, and 0° the level to which it sinks in a solution of 10 parts of salt in 90 of water; the graduation being continued upon the same scale up to the top of the instrument. For liquids heavier than water, the h. is so made that the point marked 0° is at the top of the stem and indicates the level to which it sinks in distilled water; the lower part of the stem is then so graduated that 15° represents the level to which it sinks in a mixture of 15 parts of salt and 85 of water. [B.]—Cartier's h. See Cartier's ALCOHOLMETER.—Fahrenheit's h. A glass tube loaded with mercury like Baumé's h., and having a standard mark on the stem and a scale-pan on the top. The h. is floated in the liquid to be examined, the specific gravity of which can then be deduced from the weight of the load that has to be placed in the scale-pan in order to sink the stem to the mark. [B.]—H. of constant volume. Ger., Gewichtssaräometer. A h. in which, like Nicholson's h. and Fahrenheit's h., the stem is always immersed to the same extent, while the load which the h. carries varies in each case and by the amount of its variation indicates the specific gravity. [B.]—H. of constant weight. Ger., Sealen-Äröometer. A h., such as Baumé's, in which the load remains constant and the amount to which the stem is immersed varies, the amount of the variation indicating the specific gravity sought. [B.]—H. of variable volume. See H. of constant weight.

H. of variable weight. See H. of constant volume.—Nicholson's h. A hollow metal cylinder loaded with lead so as to float upright in water, and having a standard mark on its stem and a scale-pan at the top of the stem, and also one at the bottom of the cylinder. The body whose specific gravity is to be determined is placed first in the upper and then in the lower (or submerged) pan, and the weight of the additional load that has to be placed in the upper in each case in order to sink the h. to the level of the standard mark is ascertained. From a comparison of these weights and of the weight required to sink the h. to the same level when no substance is added, the specific gravity can be determined. [B.]

HYDROMETRA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-me²t(mat)¹ra³. From ὑδωρ, water, and μήτρα, the womb. Fr., hydromètre. Ger., Gebärmutterwassersucht. A collection of watery liquid in the uterine cavity. [A, 326 (a, 21); D.]—Ascitic h. Lat., h. ascitica. H. proper, as distinguished from oedema of the uterus. [A, 85.]—Essential h. Fr., hydromètre essentielle. A h. that is not necessarily amniotic. [A, 15.]—H. gravidarum. Dropsy of the amnion. [a, 40.]—Hydatid h. Fr., hydromètre hydatique. An accumulation of serum in one or more cysts attached to the endometrium. It is doubtful if they are ever true accephalocysts. [a, 40.]—Lateral h. A h. of one horn of a double uterus. [a, 40.]—H. vetularum. H. characterized by a frequent spontaneous opening of the os uteri internum and the evacuation of the uterine contents. [Gruelich [A, 319 (a, 21)].]—Oedematous h. Lat., h. oedematosa. Oedema of the uterus. [A, 85.]

HYDROMÈTRE (Fr.), n. E-dro-me²tr¹. See HYDROMETRA.—H. intra-membraneuse. A term applied by Devilliers to a case of hydramnios of rapid formation, following an injury, and supposed by him to be of an inflammatory nature. [A, 15.]

HYDROMETRECTASIA [Piorry] (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-me²t(mat)-re²k-ta(ta³)/zi²(si²)²-a³. From ὑδωρ, water, μήτρα, the womb, and ἔκτασις, a stretching. Fr., hydrométrectasie. Distention of the uterus by hydrometra. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMETRIC, adj. Hid-ro-me²t¹m²k. From ὑδωρ, water, and μέτρον, to measure. Of or pertaining to the hydrometer or to its employment.

HYDROMETRY, n. Hid-ro²m²e²t¹r¹. From ὑδωρ, water, and μέτρον, a measure. Fr., hydrométrie. Syn.: areometry. The art of using the hydrometer; the measurement of specific gravities by means of the hydrometer.

HYDROMICRENCEPHALY, n. Hid-ro-mi-kre²n-se²f¹a²l¹-i². From ὑδωρ, water, μικρός, small, and ἑγκέφαλος, the brain. A disease consisting first of microcephalus, succeeded by atrophy of the brain, and this in turn by effusion of serum into the cavities and subarachnoid spaces. [a, 40.]

HYDROMICROCEPHALUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi²k-ro(ro³)-se²f(ke²f¹)a²(a³)-u³s(u¹s). From ὑδωρ, water, μικρός, small, and κεφαλή, the head. The accumulation of serum in the ventricles and other portions of the brain following cerebral atrophy in the microcephalic. [a, 40.]

HYDROMPHALOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-m-fa²(fa²)-o(o²)-se(ka)¹le(la); in Eng., hid-ro²m-fa²/o-sel. Gen., -cel²-es (-æ). From ὑδωρ, water, ὄμφαλος, the navel, and κύλη, a tumor. A cystic tumor formed by the accumulation of serum in the sac of an umbilical hernia, the neck of which has been obliterated. [a, 40.]

HYDROMPHALON (Lat.), HYDROMPHALUM (Lat.), HYDROMPHALUS (Lat.), n. s. n., n., and m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-m-fa²(fa²)-o(o²)-n. -u³m(u¹m), -u³s(u¹s). Gr., ὑδρόμφαλον, ὑδρόμφαλος (from ὑδωρ, water, and ὄμφαλος, the navel). Fr., hydromphale. Ger., Nabelwassergeschwulst. A tumor at the umbilicus containing serum. [E.]

HYDROMUCONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-mu²-ko²n¹i²k. Fr., acide hydromuconique. Ger., Hydromuconsäure. A dibasic crystalline acid, C₄H₆(COOH)₂ = C₆H₈O₄, or muconic acid plus two atoms of hydrogen. It is slightly soluble in ether and in cold water, readily soluble in boiling water. [B, 3, 4; B, 46 (a, 39), 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROMYCA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-m²i²(u³)²-ka³. From ὑδωρ, water, and μύκης, a fungus. Fr., hydromyce. Ger., Wasserschwamm. A watery fungus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROMYELIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi(mu⁶)-el(e²l)¹i²a³. From ὑδωρ, water, and μυελός, the marrow. 1. See HYDRORRHACHIS interna. 2. See Excavating MYELITIS.

HYDROMYELITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi(mu⁶)-e²l(i²e)¹i²s. Gen., -i²idos (-idis). From ὑδωρ, water, and μυελός, marrow (see also -itis*). See HYDRORRHACHIS interna.

HYDROMYELOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi(mu⁶)-e²l(o²)-se(ka)¹le(la); in Eng., hid-ro-mi⁶e²l-o-sel. Gen., -cel²-es. From ὑδωρ, water, μυελός, the marrow, and κύλη, a tumor. 1. Spina bifida in which the tumor is covered by the remnants of the spinal cord. To be distinguished from hydromeningocele. [E.] 2. An excessive collection of fluid in the central canal of the spinal cord. [A, 326 (a, 21); E.]

HYDROMYELUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi(mu⁶)²e²l-u³s(u¹s). From ὑδωρ, water, and μυελός, marrow. See HYDRORRHACHIS interna.—H. aquisitus. Acquired dilatation of the central spinal canal. [D, 35.]—H. congenitus. See HYDRORRHACHIS interna.

HYDROMYRINGA (Lat.), HYDROMYRINK (Lat.), n. s. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-mi²(mu⁶)²r-i²n²g-a³, -mir(mu⁶)r¹y¹i²n²x. Gen., -ing¹os (-ing¹is). From ὑδωρ, water, and myringa, the membrana tympani. Ger., Paukenhöhlenwassersucht (2d def.). 1. Dropsy of the membrana tympani. i. e., that condition of the membrane in which it is distended with fluid and forms bullae; as is often the case in acute and chronic myringitis. [B, 2.] Dropsy of the tympanum, an accumulation of fluid in the drum of the ear, giving rise to difficulty of hearing or slight deafness. [F, 40.]

HYDRONAPHTHOL, n. Hid-ro-na²p¹tho¹l. A medicinal preparation apparently identical with isonaphthol (β-naphthol). [B, 270 (a, 38); G. R. Fowler, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Oct. 3, 1885, p. 374.]

HYDRONCUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-n²k²u³s(u¹s). From ὑδωρ, water, and ὄγκος, a tumor. See ANASARCA and ŒDEMA.

HYDRONEPHRECTASIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-ne²f-re²k-taz(ta³)¹i²a³. From ὑδωρ, water, νεφρός, the kidney, and ἔκτασις, distention. Fr., hydronéphrectasie. Dropsical distention of the kidney. [A, 322.]

HYDRONEPHROS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-ne²f¹ro²s. From ὑδωρ, water, and νεφρός, a kidney. Ger., Wasserniere (1st def.). 1. A dropsical kidney. 2. Hydronephrectasia. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRONEPHROSIS [Rayer] (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-ne²f-ro²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-os²is). From ὑδωρ, water, and νεφρός, a kidney. Fr., hydronéphrose. Ger., H., Hydronephrose, Harnanhäufung im Nierenbecken. It., idronefrosi. Sp., hidronefrosis. A badly formed word (nephrydrosis is better) purporting to denote a morbid accumulation of the urine in the pelvis of the kidney, due to obstruction or occlusion of the lumen of the ureter, causing dilatation of the renal pelvis and calices, and giving rise to pyelitis, suppurative nephritis, or renal atrophy. [D, 5.]—H. paraplegia. H. associated with paraplegia. [D, 70.]—Intermittent h. Ger., intermittierende Hydronephrose. Of Landau, a h. due to flexion of the ureter, this in turn being due to a movable kidney. [a, 40.]—Partial h. H. in which there is dilatation of only one or a few of the calices. [D, 70.]

HYDRONEPHRUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-ne²f¹ru²s(ru¹s). See HYDRONEPHROS.

HYDRONÉVRAxie [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-na-vra²x-e. From ὑδωρ, water, νεύρον, a nerve, and axis, an axis. Dropsy of the central nervous system. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYDRONÉVRIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-na-vre. From ὑδωρ, water, and νεύρον, a nerve. Dropsy of the nerves. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYDRONOSOS (Lat.), HYDRONUSOS (Lat.), n. s. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-n²o²s-o²s, -ro²n²-u³(u¹)²so²s. From ὑδωρ, water, and νόσος, or νόσος, a disease. Any disease attended with dropsy or watery effusion. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRO-OLIGOCYTHÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-o²l¹-i²g-o(o²)-si²th(ku⁶th)-em¹(a³e²m)-i²a³. From ὑδωρ, water, ὀλίγος, few, κύτος, a cell, and ἄλμα, blood. A certain form of secondary anemia in which the proportion of the serum to the corpuscular elements in the blood is much increased. It is commonly found after mineral poisoning, especially with lead and mercury. [a, 40.]

HYDROOPHORIA (Lat.), HYDROOPHORON (Lat.), HYDROOPHORUM (Lat.), n's f., n., and n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-o(o²)-fo(rfo²r¹i²-u³)-o²f'o²r-o²n.-u³m(u⁴m). From ūdōp, water, φόν, an egg, and φορέω, to bear. Fr., hydrophorie. See HYDROOVARION.

HYDROORTHOCUMARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-o²r-tho-ku-ma²r¹i²k. Fr., acide hydro-orthocumarique. An acid, C₉H₁₀O₅, or C₁₀H₁₀O₆, occurring in Melilotus officinalis, and formed by the action of sodium amalgam on an alcoholic solution of coumarin or on orthocumaric acid. It crystallizes in fine needles, slightly soluble in cold water, freely soluble in hot water, in alcohol, and in ether, and fusible at 82° C. It is isomeric with hydroparacumaric acid. [B, 88 (a, 39), 93 (a, 14).]

HYDRO-OVARIVM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-o-o(va³y¹-ri²-u³m(u⁴m)). From ūdōp, water, and ώάριον, a small egg. See HYDROOVARION.

HYDRO-OXIDE, n. Hi-dro-o²x¹i²d(id). See HYDROXIDE.

HYDROXYATHYLCHINOLIN (Ger.), n. Hu⁶-dro-ox-u⁶-a-tu¹-eh²-en-o-len⁷. Hydride of ethylic oxyquinoline, the base kairine A. [B.] See KAIRINE.

HYDRO-OXYDATUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-o²x-i²d-(u³d)-at(a²t'u³su⁴s). Combined with hydrogen and oxygen; with the name of a base, the hydroxide of that base. [B.]

HYDROXYMETHYLCHINOLIN (Ger.), n. Hu⁶d-ro-ox-u⁶-ma-tu¹-eh²-en-o-len⁷. The base kairine M.

HYDROPARACUMARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pa²r-a³-ku-ma²r¹i²k. Fr., acide hydro-pa-ro-cumarique. Ger., Hydroparacumarinsäure. An acid, C₉H₈(OH)C₆H₄CO.OH (according to some, C₁₀H₁₀O₆), obtained by treating paracumaric acid with sodium amalgam and in other ways, and occurring in small crystalline prisms, soluble in water, in alcohol, and in ether, and melting at about 125° C. The acid is found in normal human urine, and among the products of putrefaction of flesh. [B, 3, 4, 270 (a, 38); B, 93; *Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., *xvii (a, 14).]

HYDROPARASTATES (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pa²r-(pa²r)-a²st(a²st'a²t'a²t'e-z(a²t)-ez(a²s)). Gen., -a²st'atu (-ae). From ūdōp, water, and παραστάτης, one who stands by. Ger., Wasseransammlung im Nebenboden. A watery effusion in or about the epididymis. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPARÉSIE (Fr.), n. E-dro-pa²-ra-zé. From ūdōp, water, and παρέσις, paralysis. An affection prominently characterized by dropsy and paresis. [B. Féris, "Gaz. hebd. de méd. et de chir.," June 8, 1883, p. 383.]—H. névrouvasculaire. A collective term for myxœdema and beri-beri. [B. Féris, l. c.]

HYDROPAROTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pa²r-(pa²r)-o²i²s. Gen., -o²i²dis (-idis). From ūdōp, water, and παρωτις, the parotid gland. Fr., hydroparotide. Ger., Ohrdrüsenwassersucht. 1. Edema of the parotid gland. [L, 30, 50 (a, 14).] 2. A watery cyst of the parotid gland. [A, 385.]

HYDROPATHIC, adj. Hid-ro²p'a²th-i²k. Pertaining to hydropathy.

HYDROPATHIST, n. Hid-ro²p'a²th-i²st. Hid-ro²p'a²th-i²st. An adherent or practitioner of hydropathy (2d def.).

HYDROPATHY, n. Hid-ro²p'a²th-i². Lat., hydropathia (from ūdōp, water, and πάθος, disease). Fr., hydropathie. 1. Originally, a disease caused by water; dropsy. 2. Of Oertel, hydriatics. [L, 41, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

HYDROPEDESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²d(pad)-e-(a²)i²s. Gen., -es'es (-es'is). See HYDROPEDESIS.

HYDROPEGE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe(pa²)je(ga). Gen., -es'es (-ae). From ūdōp, water, and πηγή, a spring. Fr., hydropege. Ger., Wasserquell. 1. A spring. 2. Spring-water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPELTIS [Michaux] (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²l'i²s. Gen., -ell'is. From ūdōp, water, and πέλτρα, a small shield. Fr., h. hydropellide. The water-buckler, a genus of the Hydro-peltidæ (Fr., Hydropellitidæ), which are: Of De Candolle and the others, the Cabombæ of Benthams and Hooker; of Bartling, a class of the Chlamydoblastæ, comprising the Cabombæ, Nymphaæceæ, and Netumbonææ. [B, 19, 34, 42, 170 (a, 24).]—H. purpurea. Purple water-buckler; a species found in the United States, Canada, Australia, and the Himalayas. It contains starch, and in America is considered nutritious. The leaves are astringent, and have been used in phthisis and dysentery. [B, 19, 34, 42 (a, 24).]

HYDROPERICARDE (Fr.), HYDROPERICARDIE [Piory] (Fr.), n's. E-dro-pa-re-ka²rd, -ka²r-de. See HYDROPERICARDIUM.

HYDROPERICARDITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²r-i²-ka²rd-i(e)²i²s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From ūdōp, water, περί, around, and καρδία, the heart (see also itis). Fr., hydropericardite. Ger., entzündliche Herzbeutelwassersucht. Inflammation and dropsy of the pericardium. [L, 30, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPERICARDIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²r-i²-ka²rd-i²-u³m(u⁴m)). From ūdōp, water, περί, around, and καρδία, the heart. Fr., hydropericardie. Ger., Herzbeutelwassersucht, Hydropericardie. An accumulation of serous fluid in the pericardium; a form of dropsy which (a) depends upon an increase of the normal liquor pericardii, due to a decrease in the size of the heart, thus reducing the pressure upon the pericardium from within, or occurring when the lungs become adherent to the pericardium, and are reduced in volume, either from atrophy, failure to regain their normal size after absorption of a pleuritic effusion, or contraction from chronic pneumonia; or (b) is associated with an obstruction of the veins of the right heart, when h. may precede dropsy of any other part of the body. Another form may be regarded as the effect of a "dropsical crasis." It appears, usually after some time, in diseases in which the blood has a tendency to lose its albumin, and the serum to transude (e. g., Bright's disease, chronic affections of the spleen, the cancerous cachexia, etc.). [D, 21.]—Active h.

Of Walshe, dropsy of the pericardium without dropsy in any other part of the body. [a, 40.]—Mechanical h. Dropsy of the pericardium due to pressure on the great veins occasionally found in aortic aneurysm and carcinoma. [a, 40.]—Passive h. A dropsy of the pericardium occurring with general dropsy. [a, 40.]

HYDROPERIDIDYMI [Piory] (Fr.), n. E-dro-pa-re-de-de-me. From ūdōp, water, περί, around, and δίδυμος, the testicle. See HYDROCELE.

HYDROPERIONE, n. Hid-ro-pe²r'i²-on. From ūdōp, water, περί, around, and ίενα, to go. Fr., hydroperione. Ger., Hydroperione. Of Breschet, a liquid described as contained between the decidua vera and the decidua reflexa; designed, he thought, to nourish the embryo at an early period of gestation. [A, 45.]

HYDROPERIONIC, adj. Hid-ro-pe²r-i²-o²n'i²k. Pertaining to the hydroperione.

HYDROPERIPNEUMONIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²r-i²-nu²(pnu²)-mon(mon²n²)i²-a². From ūdōp, water, περί, around, and πνεύμων, a lung. Fr., hydroperipneumonie. Ger., Lungenentzündung mit wässriger Ausschüttung. Pneumonia resulting in pleuritic effusion or hydrothorax. [A, 322.]

HYDROPERITONEUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²r-i²-to²n-e'(a²e²)-u³m(u⁴m)). From ūdōp, water, and περιτόναιον, the peritoneum. Fr., hydroperitonite. See ASCITES.

HYDROPERITONITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pe²r-i²-to²n-i(e)²i²s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From ūdōp, water, and περιτόναιον, the peritoneum (see also itis). Fr., hydroperitonite. Ger., entzündliche Bauchfellwassersucht. Peritonitis with watery effusion. [L, 41, 95 (a, 14).]

HYDROPHALLUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fa²(fa²l¹)-lu³s(hu⁴s). From ūdōp, water, and φαλλός, the penis. (Edema of the penis. [L, 30, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYDROPHENYL, n. Hid-ro-fe²n'i²l. See BENZENE.

HYDROPHILE (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²f'i²-el(a²e²). From ūdōp, water, and φίλος, loving. Dismegamorphic plants that are fertilized with the aid of water. [Müller (a, 24).]

HYDROPHILOUS, adj. Hid-ro²f'i²-u³s. Lat., hydrophilus (from ūdōp, water, and φίλος, loving). Fr., hydrophile. Ger., hydrophil. 1. See AQUATIC. 2. Bibulous, absorbent, hygroscopic. ["Practitioner," Feb., 1888, p. 132.] 3. Fertilized by means of water currents (said of flowers). [B, 299 (a, 24).]

HYDROPHIMOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fi(fe)-mo²si²s. Gen., -os'es (-os'is). From ūdōp, water, and φίμωσις, phimosis. Fr., hydrophimose. Ger., Wassergeschwulst der Vorhaut. See PHIMOSIS adenatodes.

HYDROPHILEGMASIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fi(fe)-gma²ma²/zi²(si²)²-a². From ūdōp, water, and φλεγμασία, inflammation. Of Rayer, an acute inflammation in which the cellular tissue is infiltrated with serum. [a, 40.]—H. textus cellularis. Serous effusion into the cellular tissue due to inflammation of the tissue itself, in distinction from that due to mechanical causes or diseases of other portions of the body. [a, 40.]

HYDROPHLOGOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-flo(flo²)-go²si²s. Gen., -os'es (-os'is). From ūdōp, water, and φλόγωσις, a burning. Fr., hydrophlogose. An inflammatory process associated with an accumulation of watery fluid. [D.]—H. ventriculorum cerebri [Lobstein]. Acute internal hydrocephalus. [D.]

HYDROPHLORONE, n. Hid-ro-flor'on. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrophloron. A colorless, crystalline substance, C₆H₁₀O₂ = C₆H₈(OH)₂, bearing the same relation to phlorone that hydroquinone does to quinone. It is freely soluble in water, in alcohol, and in ether. [B, 4; B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROPHOBIA, n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fob(fob²)i²-a². Gr., ύδροφοβία (from ūdōp, water, and φοβος, fear). Fr., hydrophobie (rabique). Ger., H. Hydrophobie, Wasserscheu. It., idrofobia. Sp., hidrofobia, mal de rabia. 1. Morbid horror of water or of drinking, especially when due to rabies. 2. Of Celsus, rabies canina. [A, 311.]—H. hysterica. See Hysterical h.—H. simplex [Cullen]. It, without rage or inclination to bite. [a, 40.]—Hysterical h. Nervous h. Lat., h. hysterica. A transitory form of h., not dependent on rabies; generally connected with other hysterical phenomena. [A, 326 (a, 24).]—Phantom h. A disturbed condition, due to dread of h., which may be prolonged, accompanied by imitations of the disease, until it is ultimately fatal. ["Lancet," Apr. 14, 1883, p. 647 (D).]—Spontaneous h. See Hysterical h.

HYDROPHOBIC, adj. Hi-dro-fob'i²k. Gr., ύδροφοβικός (from ūdōp, water, and φοβειν, to fear). Lat., hydrophobicus. Fr., hydrophobique. Pertaining to, affected with, or resembling hydrophobia. [D.]

HYDROPHOBINE (Fr.), n. E-dro-fo-ben. Lat., hydrophobium (from ύδροφοβία, hydrophobia). The virus of rabies. [L, 41.]

HYDROPHOBOPHOBIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-fob(fob²)-o(o²)-fob(fob²)i²-a². From ύδροφοβία, hydrophobia, and φόβος, fear. See Phantom HYDROPHOBIA.

HYDROPHOBOS (Lat.), HYDROPHOBUS (Lat.), adj's. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²f'o²b-o²s, -u³s(u⁴s). Gr., ύδροφόβος (from ūdōp, water, and φόβος, fear). Affected with hydrophobia. [A, 311.]

HYDROPHONE, n. Hid-ro²-fon. From ūdōp, water, and φωνή, the voice. An instrument invented by Allison, and modified by Cammann, similar to a binaral stethoscope in shape, but in which the sound is transmitted through a solid column of water. It is used in auscultatory percussion. [D. M. Cammann, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Feb. 27, 1886, p. 241 (a, 40).]

HYDROPHATHALIC ACID, n. Hid-ro'f-tha'2'i'k. Fr., acide hydrophathalique. Ger., Hydrophthalsäure. See DIHYDROPHATHALIC ACID, TETRAHYDROPHATHALIC ACID, and HEXAHYDROPHATHALIC ACID.

HYDROPHATHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f-tha'2'(tha'3)'-mi'a-3. From ὕδωρ, water, and ὀφθαλμία, ophthalmia. Fr., hydrophathalmie. Ger., Hydrophthalmus, Wassergaugenwasser-sucht. It., idroftalmia. Sp., hidroftalmia. 1. A disease characterized by a uniform, spherical bulging of the anterior part of the eye. It is generally congenital, and seems to be due to a thinning and diminution in the power of resistance of the cornea, generally secondary to a severe inflammation. The cornea may be either transparent or opaque. [A, 326 (a, 21); F.] 2. An enlargement of the eye due to an increase in the quantity of the vitreous. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Conical h. Lat., h. conica. 1. Anterior staphyloma of the cornea. 2. Conical cornea. [F.]—H. anterior. Fr., hydrophathalmie antérieure. Ger., vorderer Hydrophthalmus. See KERATOGLUBUS.—H. congenitus. H. caused by intra-uterine iridochorioiditis, and involving the whole eyeball. The tension of the eye is abnormal, normal, or subnormal. [Klein (A, 319 (a, 21)).]—H. congenita anterior. See H., KERATOGLUBUS, and BUPHTHALMIA.—H. cruenta. See HEMOPHTHALMIA.—H. postica. Fr., hydrophathalmie postérieure. Ger., hinterer Hydrophthalmus. It., idroftalmia posteriore. Sp., hidroftalmia posterior. See H. (2d def.).—H. totalis. H. which involves both the anterior and posterior portions of the eye. [A, 319 (a, 29).]—H. totalis congenita. A congenital form of h. totalis. [A, 319 (a, 29).]

HYDROPHATHALMIC, adj. Hid-ro'f-tha'2'i'mi'k. Lat., hydrophathalmicus (from ὕδωρ, water, and ὀφθαλμία, ophthalmia). Fr., hydrophathalmique. Pertaining to or affected with hydrophathalmia. [L, 41.]

HYDROPHATHALMION (Lat.), HYDROPHATHALMIUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f-tha'2'(tha'3)'mi'2-o'n, -u'm(u'm). From ὕδωρ, water, and ὀφθαλμιον, a little eye. An old term for an oedematous swelling of the conjunctiva. [F.]

HYDROPHATHALMOS (Lat.), HYDROPHATHALMUS (Lat.), n's m. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f-tha'2'(tha'3)'mo's, -mu's(mu's). From ὕδωρ, water, and ὀφθαλμός, an eye. See HYDROPHATHALMIA.

HYDROPHATHORA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f-tho'r'a-3. From ὕδωρ, water, and φθορά, decay. [F.] Pelletan, hydrofluoric acid. [B, 78 (a, 14).]

HYDROPHATHORIC ACID, n. Hid-ro'f-tho'r'i'k. Fr., acide hydrophathorique. Hydrofluoric acid. [a, 38.]

HYDROPHYLLIA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-fi'2'(fu'1)'-li'a-3. From ὕδωρ, water, and φύλλον, a leaf. Ger., Deckstücke. Overlapping appendages or plates, frequently called "bracts," which protect the polyrites in some of the oceanic Hydrozoa. [B, 28 (a, 27).]

HYDROPHYLLUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-fi'2'(fu'1)'-li'm(hu'm). From ὕδωρ, water, and φύλλον, a leaf. Fr., hydrophyllie. Ger., Wasserblatt. Water-leaf, bur-furflower; of Tournefort, a genus of the Hydrophyllaceae (Fr., hydrophyllaceae), or hydrophylls of Lindley, which are: Of De Candolle, an order of the Corolliflorae, comprising H. Nemophila, Ellisia, Phacelia, Cosmanthus, etc.; of Bentham and Hooker, an order of the Polemoniales. The Hydrophyllae (Fr., hydrophyllées; Ger., Hydrophyllen) are: Of R. Brown and others, the Hydrophyllaceae; of Bentham and Hooker, a tribe of the Hydrophyllaceae, comprising H. Nemophila, and Ellisia. The Hydrophyllideae of Dumortier are the Hydrophyllaceae. [B, 19, 34, 42, 170, 180 (a, 24).]—H. canadense, H. verum. Ger., canadische Rinnenblume. A species the root and herb of which are used in decoction in snake-bites, and in poisoning by Rhus toxicodendron. [B, 38, 180 (a, 24).]—H. virginicum. In Kansas, the bur-furflower. The leaves, called the Shanese salad, are eaten. [B, 19 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix (a, 14).]

HYDROPHYSOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-fi(fu'1)'-so(so'3)-se(ka'le)a; in Eng., hi-dro-fis'so-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From ὕδωρ, water, φύσα, wind, and κύλη, a tumor. Ger., Wasserwindbruch. A hernia containing gas and serum. [E.]

HYDROPHYSOMETRA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-fi(fe)-so(so'3)-me(ma'v)tra'3. From ὕδωρ, water, φύσα, wind, and μήτρα, the womb. Fr., hydrophysométre. An accumulation of serum and gas in the uterus. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPHYTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f'i'2'(u't)-a'3. From ὕδωρ, water, and φυτόν, a plant. Fr., hydrophytes. Ger., Wasserpflanzen. The Algae; by Lyngbye divided into three grand divisions: (1) those with continuous fronds (Fr., hydrophytes à frondes continues), (2) those with jointed fronds (Fr., hydrophytes à frondes articulées), and (3) the gelatinous hydrophytes (Fr., hydrophytes gélatineuses). The Hydrophyte are: 1. Of Richard and others, the Algae. 2. Of Gray, a family of the Algae, consisting of the Oscillatorideae, Bangideae, Lemanideae, Vaucherideae, Diatomideae, Conjugatideae, Hydrodictyonideae, and Confervideae. 3. Of Link, a subclass of the Ezogenae, consisting of the Hydrocaryes and Nymphaeaceae. The Hydrophyte locutatae of Bonnemais are a division of the Hydrophyte, containing several groups: (1) Vaginaria, Linckia, Trichophora, etc.; (2) Dasytricha, Dictiderma, etc.; (3) the Confervae; and (4) Lemanea and Noctoch. Trichophytes which comprised the Epidermeae and Ceramiaceae. The Hydrophytes (Fr., h.) are the Algae. [B, 1, 77, 170, 180 (a, 24).]

HYDROPHYTOGRAPHY, HYDROPHYTOLOGY, n's. Hid-ro-fit-o'2'ra'2'f'i'2, -o'2'i'2. Lat., hydrophytographia, hydrophytologia (from ὕδωρ, water, φυτόν, a plant, and γράφειν, to write, or λόγος, understanding). The botany of the Hydrophyta. [L, 41.]

HYDROPHYTON, n. Hid(hu'd)-ro'f'i'2'(u't)-o'n. From ὕδωρ, water, and φυτόν, a plant. The common basis of the trophosome by which its zooids are connected into a single colony. [L, 193.]

HYDROPIC, adj. Hid-ro'p'i'k. Gr., ὕδρωπικός. Lat., hydropticus. See DROPSICAL.

HYDROPICA (Lat.), n. f. sing. and n. pl. Hid(hu'd)-ro'p(ro'p)'-i'k-a-3. 1. (Sing.) the Menyanthes trifoliata. [B, 180 (a, 24).] 2. (Pl.) diuretic medicines. [L, 135 (a, 39).]

HYDROPICAL, adj. Hid-ro'p'i'k-l. See DROPSICAL.

HYDROPICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu'd)-ro'p(ro'p)'i'k-u's(u's). Gr., ὕδρωπικός (from ὕδωρ, dropsy). Dropsical; as a n., dropsy.

HYDROPIODES (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu'd)-ro'p'i'2'-od'ez(as). Gr., ὕδρωπιώδης (from ὕδωρ, dropsy, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., hydropiéux. Dropsical. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPIPER (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu'd)-ro'p'i'2'p-e'2. Gen., -pip'eris. Gr., ὕδρωπέπερι (from ὕδωρ, water, and πέπερι, the pepper-tree. The Polygonum h. and Elatine h. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—Herba hydropipervis. The herb of Polygonum h. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

HYDROPIPERIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pi'2'-pe'r'i'k. Fr., acide hydropiérique. A crystalline acid, C₂H₂O₄, obtained by treating piperic acid with caustic potash, and afterward with sodium amalgam, and adding hydrochloric acid. Two isomeric forms are known: one, CH₂<O>C₆H₃.CH₂CH:CH.CH₂.CO.OH, obtained when enough hydrochloric acid is added to keep the solution faintly alkaline, and occurring in large crystals, easily soluble in alcohol, slightly soluble in water, and melting at 78° C.; the other, CH₂<O>C₆H₃.CH₂CH₂.CH:CH.CO.OH, obtained when the solution is kept strongly alkaline, and crystallizing from alcohol in needles which melt at 131° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROPISCH (Ger.), adj. Hu'd-ro'p'i'sh. See DROPSICAL.

HYDROPSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-pi'2's'i'a-3. Fr., hydropsie. See DROPSY.

HYDROPSIE (Fr., Ger.), n. E-dro-pe-ze, hu'd-ro'3-pe-ze'. See DROPSY and HYDROPS.—H. aiguë (Fr.). See Acute dropsy.—H. articulaire (Fr.). See ARTHROEDEMA and HYDRARTHROPSIS.—H. brightlighte (Fr.). Dropsy due to Bright's disease. [Jaccoud (A, 339).]—H. de la chambre antérieure (Fr.). See FERATECTASIA and KERATOGLUBUS.—H. de la poitrine (Fr.). See HYDROTHORAX.—H. de la tête (Fr.). See HYDROCEPHALUS.—H. der Sehnerven-scheide (Ger.). See DROPSY of the optic sheath.—H. der vorderen Kammer (Ger.). See KERATOGLUBUS.—H. des villosités choroidales (Fr.). See DROPSY of the chorionic villi.—H. du sac ventre (Fr.). H. du péritoine (Fr.). See ASCITES.—H. du sac lacrymale (Fr.). See HYDROPS sacci lacrymalis.—H. du vagin du nerf optique (Fr.). See DROPSY of the optic sheath.—H. névrosculaire (Fr.). Dropsy resulting from deranged action of the vaso-motor nerves [B. Férus, "Gaz. hebdom. de méd. et de chir.," June 8, 1853, p. 383].—H. sous-choroïdienne (Fr.). See Subchorioid dropsy.

HYDROPSINE (Fr.), n. E-dro-pe-sen. See METALBUMIN.

HYDROPSIS (Lat.), HYDROPSISMUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Hid(hu'd)-ro'p'i'2'-si's, -ro'p-i'2'(i's)'mu's(mu's). Gen., -is'eos (-op'isis), -is'mi. See DROPSY and HYDROPS.

HYDROPLASTÉMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-pla's-te'2. From ὕδωρ, water, πλαστός, molded, and αἷμα, blood. The presence of fibrin in suspension in the blood plasma. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYDROPLATINIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pla'2-i'n'i'k. Fr., acide hydroplatinique. An acid compounded of hydrogen and platinum. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROPLATINOCYANIC ACID, n. Hid'ro-pla'2'i'n'o-si-a'n'i'k. Fr., acide hydroplatinocyanique. Ger., Platinocyanwasserstoffsäure. A hydrogen acid, H₂PtC₂N₄, forming golden acicular crystals, or, with five molecules of water of crystallization, vermilion-hued crystals; the source of the platinocyanides. [B.]

HYDROPLEURIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-plu'2'ri'a-3. From ὕδωρ, water, and πλευρά, the side. Fr., hydropleurie [Piorry]. See HYDROTHORAX.

HYDROPLEURITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-plu'2'-ri'(re)'-ti's. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From ὕδωρ, water, and πλευρά, a rib (see also *-itis). Fr., hydropleurite [Piorry]. Ger., entzündliche Brustfellwassersucht. Pleurisy with effusion. [L, 50 (a, 14), 82.]

HYDROPLEUMATIC, adj. Hid-ro-nu'2'-ma'2'i'2'k. Lat., hydropleumaticus (from ὕδωρ, water, and πνεύμα, air). Fr., hydropleumatique. Pertaining to water and gas; employed in the collection of gases (said of a vessel of water or other fluid used in chemical experiments). [L, 41, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

HYDROPLEUMATOCOLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-nu'2'-ma'2'(ma'2't)-o(o'3)-se(ka'le)a; in Eng., hi-dro-nu'2'-ma'2'-o'2'm'fa'2'l-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From ὕδωρ, water, πνεύμα, air, ὀμφαλός, the navel, and κύλη, a tumor. Ger., Wasserhümbelbruch. An umbilical hernia containing serum and gas. [E.]

HYDROPLEUMATOMPHALOCOLE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-nu'2'(pnu'2)-ma'2'(ma'2't)-o(o'3)-se(ka'le)a; in Eng., hi-dro-nu'2'-ma'2'-o'2'm'fa'2'l-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From ὕδωρ, water, πνεύμα, air, ὀμφαλός, the navel, and κύλη, a tumor. Ger., Wasserhümbelbruch. An umbilical hernia containing serum and gas. [E.]

HYDROPLEUMATOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-nu'2'(pnu'2)-ma'2'(ma'2't)-o'o'si's. Gen., -os'el'es (-os'is). From ὕδωρ, water, and πνεύμα, air. 1. Any morbid collection of water and gas. 2. Pulmonary oedema. [A, 322.]

HYDROPLEUMON (Lat.), HYDROPLEUMONIA (Lat.), n's m. and f. Hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-nu'2'(pnu'2)'mo'2'(mon), hid(hu'd)-ro(ro'3)-nu'2'(pnu'2)-mon(mo'2)'i'a-3. Gen., -pneum'onos (-is), -mon'i'a. From ὕδωρ, water, and πνεύμων, the lung. Fr., hydropleumonie. Ger., wässrige Lungenentzündung. Pulmonary oedema. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPNEUMONYPOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-nu²(pnu²)-mo²n-i²pu(u²)-o²st²a²-si²s. Gen., as'eos (-post²asis). From ὑδρωπ, water, πνεύμων, the lung, and πύστας, hypostasis. Fr., hydropneumonypostase. Ger., Lungenwassersenkung. Cedematous hypostatic pneumonia. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPNEUMOPERICARDIA (Lat.), HYDROPNEU-
MOPERICARDIUM (Lat.), n's f. and n. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-nu²-
(pnu²)-mo²(mo²)-pe²r-i²-ka²r'd¹²-a², -u²m(u²m). From ὑδρωπ, water, πνεύμα, air, περ, around, and καρδία, the heart. Fr., hydropneumopéricardie. An accumulation of fluid and gas in the pericardium. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROPNEUMORRHÉE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-dro-nu⁶-mora. From ὑδρωπ, water, πνεύμων, the lung, and ροία, a flowing. A watery discharge from the lungs. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYDROPNEUMOSARCA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-nu²-
(pnu²)-mo²(mo²)-sa²r'k'a². From ὑδρωπ, water, πνεύμα, air, and σάρξ, flesh. Fr., hydropneumosarque. An abscess containing water, air, and fleshy detritus. [A, 325].

HYDROPNEUMOTHORAX (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-nu²-
(pnu²)-mo²(mo²)-thor'a²x(a²x). Gen., -thor'acos (-acis). From ὑδρωπ, water, πνεύμα, air, and θώραξ, the chest. Fr., h. A collection of air and fluid in the pleural cavity. [D.]—Closed h. A condition in which there is a combination of serous effusion and air in the pleural cavity without any opening into it, either external or internal. [a, 40].—Fistulous h. A h. having a larger or smaller orifice between the pleural cavity and the lung itself. [a, 40].

HYDROPEIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-pe²(e²)-i²a². From ὑδρωπ, water, and ποιεῖν, to make. Fr., hydropeie. Ger., Wassermachen. 1. The formation of water. 2. The manufacture of mineral waters. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPOID, adj. Hid'ro-poid. Gr., ὑδροποιεῖς. Lat., hydropoides (from ὑδρωπ, dropsy, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., hydropoïde. Resembling dropsy, dropsical. [a, 17].

HYDROPOIESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-poi-e(a)²si²s. Gen., -es'eos (-es'is). From ὑδρωπ, water, and ποιεῖς, a making. See HYDROPEIA.

HYDROPORES, n. pl. Hid'ro-porz. From ὑδρωπ, water, and πόρος, a passage. Of Barrande, organs which are thought to be respiratory in certain of the Cystidea. ["Nature," July 18, 1889, p. 26 (a, 39).]

HYDROPOSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu^d)-ro(ro³)-po(po²)-si²a². Gr., ὑδροποσία (from ὑδρωπ, water, and πόσις, a drinking). Ger., Wassertrinken. The drinking of water. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPOTA (Lat.), HYDROPOTES (Lat.), n's m. Hid(hu^d)-ro²p'o²t-a², -e²zias). Gr., ὑδροποτής (from ὑδρωπ, water, and πότις, a drinker). A water-drinker. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROPREHNITIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pre-nit'ri²k. Ger., Hydroprehnitinsäure. A tetrabasic acid, C₄H₆(CO.OH)₄, obtained by treating an aqueous solution of prehnitic acid with sodium amalgam; a gummy mass. [B, 3, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDROPS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu^d)-ro²ps(ro²ps). Gen., -rop/os (-is). Gr., ὑδρωψ. 1. See DROPSY. 2. (Obs.) any watery discharge. [Aristotle (A, 311).] 3. (Obs.) a dropsical person. [Hippocrates (A, 311).] 4. (Obs.) diabetes. [Galen (A, 311).] 5. In Young's nosology, a genus of the Paraphymata. [L, 290.]—Entzündlicher H. (Ger.). Inflammatory dropsy. See HYDRARTHROSIS.—H. articuli (seu articulorum) intermittens. A painful swelling of a joint, intermittent in character, but without regular periodicity, the attacks coming on with lightning-like suddenness, and subsiding gradually. It has been regarded as a vaso-motor neurosis. [Pierson, "Dtsch. med. Woch." 1881, No. 13; "Arch. f. Kinderheilk." lll, 7 to 8, 1882, p. 330.]—H. articuli (seu articulorum) tuberculosus [König]. A primary tuberculosis of the synovial membrane with serous effusion. [A, 520 (a, 29).]—H. ascites. See ASCITES.—H. ascites adiposus. II. adiposus of the peritoneum. [D, 18.]—H. ascites chylosus. H. chylosus of the peritoneum. [D, 18.]—H. ascites diffusus. Ascites. [D, 18.]—H. ascites saccatus. HYDROPSY, n. Hid'ro-ps'i². Lat., hydropsis (from ὑδρωπ, dropsy). See DROPSY.

HYDROPTISANA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²p-ti²s'a²n(a³n)-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and πτισάνη, peeled barley. Fr., hydroptisane. See HYDROCRITHE.

HYDROPYOPNEUMOTHORAX (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pi(pu⁶)⁶-o(o³)-nu²-mo(mo³)-thor'a²x(a³x). Gen., -thor'acos (-acos). From ὑδωρ, water, πνών, pus, πνεύμα, air, and θώραξ, the chest. A disease in which inflammation or injury of the pleura produces first a hydrothorax; the absorption or removal of the serum is followed by an escape of air from the lung into the pleural cavity, and this in turn is followed by a collection of pus in the cavity, more or less of which may be discharged through the lung by expectoration. [A, 40.]

HYDROPYOSALPINX (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pi(pu⁶)⁶-o(o³)-sa²(sa³ly)/pi²n²x. Gen., -salpin'gos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, πνών, pus, and σάλπιγξ, a trumpet. A collection of watery and purulent fluid in the oviduct.

HYDROPYRETOS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-pir(pu⁶r)⁶-e²t-o³s. Gr., ὑδροπυρετος (from ὑδωρ, water, and πυρετος, burning heat). See Succating FEVER.

HYDROPYROCINCHIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pi-ro-si²n²-ko²n²i²k. A triatomic, crystalline acid, C₁₆H₁₆O₇, prepared by the action of sodium amalgam on pyrocinchic acid. [B, 2.]

HYDROPYROMELITIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-pi-ro-me²-i²t'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxymelilique. A tetrabasic acid, C₁₀H₁₀O₈ = C₆H₄(CO.OH)₄. Two isomeric forms are known, one amorphous, the other crystallizing in needles with 2 molecules of water which are lost at 120° C., and melting at about 200° C. [B, 3, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDROQUADRISULPHATE, n. Hid-ro-qua⁴d-ri²-su²l'fat. Fr., hydroquadrifulfate. A hydrosulphate containing three times as much sulphur as hydrogen. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROQUINIDINE, n. Hid-ro-kwi²n²i²d-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydroquinidin. An alkaloid, C₂₀H₂₆N₂O₂ + 2H₂O, obtained from quinidine by oxidation with permanganate of potassium; probably identical with hydroconchinine. It is easily soluble in hot alcohol and in chloroform, slightly soluble in ether, and melts at 167° C. [B, 81 (a, 38); Forst and Böhringer, "Berichte d. dtsh. chem. Gesellsch.," xx, 1656, cited in "Drugg. Circ. and Chem. Gaz.," Dec., 1882, p. 181.]

HYDROQUININE, n. Hid-ro-kwi²n²i²n. A cinchona alkaloid, C₂₀H₂₆N₂O₂, easily soluble in alcohol and ether, and melting at 168° C. Dr. Seifert found it an antipyretic superior to salicylic acid and kairine, reducing the pulse and temperature with abundant transpiration, without disagreeable effect by continued use. [B, 81 (a, 38); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxx, xxxiv (a, 14); Hesse, "Ber. d. dtsh. chem. Gesellsch.," xv, p. 854; "Pharm. Jour. and Trans.," May 6, 1882; "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," July, 1882, p. 361.]

HYDROQUINONE, n. Hid-ro-kwi²n²on. Fr., h. Ger., Hydrochinon. It., idrochinone. Syn., idrochinone, hydroquinone. A substance having the composition of quinone with hydrogen added, C₆H₆O₂H₂, and obtained by the action of nascent hydrogen or of reducing agents on that body. It may also be obtained by the oxidation of quinic acid, and by decomposition of arbutin. It forms colorless laminar and prismatic crystals of sweetish taste, which melt at 169° C. In chemical composition h. is para-dioxybenzene; i. e., benzene in which two hydrogen molecules at opposite points of the closed carbon chain are replaced by hydroxyl = C₆(H.OH.H.OH.H.OH.H). It is isomeric with resorcin and pyrocatechin. It acts rapidly in typhoid fever, acute rheumatism, and erysipelas, as an antiseptic and antiferment. It lowers both the pulse and temperature and acts on the respiration and the arterial pressure. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvii (a, 14); B, 4, 9, 93, 270 (a, 38).]—H.-sulphuric acid. Ger., Hydrochionschwefelsäure. The form under which arbutin is excreted in the urine. [B.]

HYDRORCHIS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-ki²s(ch²i²s). Gen., -ror'chios (-ror'chis), -ror'cheos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ὄρχις, the testicle. Fr., hydrorchite. Ger., Hodenwassersucht. See HYDROCELE.

HYDRO-RENAL adj. Hid²d'-ro-re'n'l. From ὑδωρ, water, and ren, the kidney. Pertaining to dropsy of the kidney.

HYDROROSATUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ro(ro³)-sa²(sa³t)u³m(u³m). Gr., ὑδρορόσαστον. Fr., hydrorose. 1. Rose-water. [Orbanius (A, 311).] 2. Of Paulus Ægineta, a drink made from honey, rose-leaves, and water. [L, 50, 84 (a, 14).]

HYDRORRHACHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-rak(ra³ch²)²-i²-a². See HYDRORRHACHIS.

HYDRORRHACHIOCENTESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-ra²l(ra³ch²)²-i²-o(o³)-se²n(ke²n)-te(ta)/si²s. From ὑδωρ, water, ράχτις, the spine, and κέντρος, a pricking. Gen., -es'eos (-es'is). Fr., hydrorrhachiocentèse. Ger., Anstechen der Rückgratswassersucht. The operation of acupuncture for spina bifida. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRORRHACHIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-ra²l(ra³ch²)²-i²s. Gen., -orrhach'eos, -orrhach'ios (-or'rhach'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and ράχτις, the spine. Fr., hydrorrhachis. Ger., Rückgratswassersucht, Hydrorrhachie. It., idrorrachide, idrorrachite. Sp., hidrorrachis. A dropsical condition of the spinal cord or its menbranes.—Congenital h. Lat., h. congenita. See SPINA BIFIDA.—External h. Lat., h. externa. An exaggeration of h. interna in which the canal of the spinal cord communicates freely with the cavity of the spinal arachnoid. This condition frequently occurs in spina bifida. [D, 35.]—H. dehiscens. See SPINA BIFIDA.—H. externa anterior. That form of anterior spina bifida in which the spinal cord and nerves enter the sac and blend with its walls. [Humphry, "Lancet," Mar. 28, 1885, p. 557.]—H. externa posterior. That form of posterior spina bifida in which the spinal cord does not pass within the sac, and is not attached to it. [Humphry, l. c.]—H. in columnis. See HYDRORIS CAVITATIS COLUMNÆ VERTEBRALIS.—H. interna. Dropsy of the central canal of the spinal cord.

HYDRORRHACHITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-ra²k-(ra³ch²)²-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From ὑδωρ, water, and ράχτις, the spine (see also -*itis). Of Franck, an inflammatory hydrorrhachis. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRORRHÉE (Fr.), n. E-dror-ra. See HYDRORRHŒA.—H. des femmes enceintes. See HYDRORRHŒA GRAVIDARUM.

HYDRORRHIZA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-riz(rez)²-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and ρίζα, a root. The proximal end of the hydrophyton, by which the colony fixes itself to other bodies. [L, 193 (a, 39).]

HYDRORRHODEORRHETIN, n. Hid-dro²r-rod'²e²-o²r-ret'²-i²n. A light-brown, amorphous substance, C₁₂H₁₂O₂₁, obtained by combining rhodeorrhetin (from jalap resin) with basic oxides, whereby it absorbs 1 equivalent of H₂O. It is soluble in water, alcohol, and acetic acid, insoluble in ether, and melts above 100° C. into a yellowish liquid. [B, 48 (a, 14).]

HYDRORRHODINON (Lat.), HYDRORRHODINUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-ro(ro³d)'²i²n-o²n. -u³m(u³m). From ὑδωρ, water, and ρόδον, a rose. Fr., hydrorrhodinon. An ancient mixture of water and oil of roses, used as an emetic in poisoning. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDRORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-re'(ro²e²)²-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and ρῶα, a discharge. Fr., hydrorrhée [Piorry]. Ger., Wasserfluss, Hydrorrhœe. It., idrorrea. Sp., hidrorrea. A watery discharge. [L, 30, 44, 50, 95 (a, 14).]—H. gravidarum, H. puerperarum, H. uteri gravidi. Fr., hydrorrhée des femmes enceintes, métrorrhée, fusses eaur. Ger., Hydrorrhœe, Schwangerer. A discharge of serous fluid from the gravid uterus. The source of the discharge is disputed. Authorities sustain the following theories: 1st, that it is discharged from the cavity between the decidua vera and the decidua reflexa, due to hypertrophied decidua glands; 2d, that it comes from a rent in the amniotic sac so high up as to allow only a small portion of its fluid to escape at once; 3d, that an excessive secretion of the glands of the cervix produces it. No successful treatment has been devised other than those means directed to prevent miscarriage. [a, 40.]—Non-gravid h. Ger., Hydrorrhœe, Nichtschwangerer. Of J. Oliver, a copious watery discharge from the non-gravid uterus in sudden gushes. ["Brit. Med. Jour.," June 21, 1884, p. 1205.]

HYDRORRHŒIC, adj. Hid-ro²r-ro'i²k. Lat., hydrorrhœicus (from ὑδωρ, water, and ρῶα, a discharge). Fr., hydrorrhœique. Pertaining to hydrorrhœa. [L, 116.]

HYDRORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²r-thop-ne'(pno²e²)²-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and ὀρθόρῳα, upright breathing. Fr., hydrorhœpne. Ger., Schwerathmen von Brustwassersucht. Orthopnea occurring in hydrothorax. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDRORUBIANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-ru²b-i²-a²n-i²k. Ger., Hydrorubiansäure. See THIOOXAMIDE.

HYDROSACCHARUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-sa²k-(sa³k)'²a²r(a³r)-u³m(u³m). From ὑδωρ, water, and σάκχαρον, sugar. Of Forestus, sweetened water, syrup. [L, 50, 84 (a, 14).]

HYDROSADENITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ros-a²d(a³d)-e²n-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -it'idos (-idis). From ὑδωρ, water, and ἀδών, a gland (see also -*itis). See HYDRAENITIS.

HYDROSALICYLAMIDE, n. Hid-ro-sa²l-i²-si²l'a²m-i²d(id). A substance, C₂₁H₁₈N₂O₂, produced by the action of ammonia on salicylic aldehyde, occurring in prismatic crystals, insoluble in water and in cold alcohol, but soluble in ether and in boiling alcohol, and melting at 300° C. [B, 38, 93 (a, 38); B, 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROSALPINX (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-sa²(sa³ly)/pi²n²x. Gen., -salpin'gos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, and σάλπιγξ, a trumpet. Fr., hydrosalpingite. Ger., Eileiterswassersucht. A collection of watery fluid in the oviduct, causing distention.

HYDROSANTONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-sa²n-to²n-i²k. Fr., acide hydrosantonique. A substance, C₁₆H₂₂O₄, obtained by the action of nascent hydrogen on santoniac acid. It occurs in colorless hexagonal crystals fusible at 170° C. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROSARCA (Lat.), HYDROSARCIDIUM (Lat.), n's f. and n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-sa²r'ka³-sa²r-si²d(ki²d)'²i²-u³m(u³m). From ὑδωρ, water, and σάρξ, flesh. Fr., hydrosarque. 1. See ANASARCA (1st def.). 2. Of M. A. Severin, a tumor containing water and fleshy tissue. [L, 50.]

HYDROSARCOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-sa²r'k-o(o³)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hid-ro-sa²r'k'o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From ὑδωρ, water, σάρξ, flesh, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hydrosarcocele. Ger., Fleischwassersucht. It., idrosarcocele. Sp., hidrosarcocele. Sarcocele complicated with hydrocele. [L, 30, 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSAURIA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-sa⁴(sa³u⁴)²-ri²-a². From ὑδωρ, water, and σαύρα, a lizard. A subclass of saurian reptiles, comprising animals of considerable size, with teeth wedged into the jaws, a leathery skin, and swimming fins or powerful feet the digits of which are connected by webs. The crocodile is a member of this group. [L, 353 (a, 39).]

HYDROSCHECELE (Lat.), HYDROSCHEON (Lat.), HYDROSCHEUM (Lat.), n's f., n., and n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²s-ke²(ch²e²)²-o(o³)-se(ka)'le(la); in Eng., hid-ro²s'ke²-o-sel; hid(hu⁶d)-ro²s'ke²(ch²e²)²-o²n, -u³m(u³m). From ὑδωρ, water, σχεον, the scrotum, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hydroschécele, hydroschéonie. Ger., Hodensackwassersucht. A scrotal hernia containing watery fluid. [A, 322.]

HYDROSCHONCUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²s-ko²n²-i²(ch²e²)²-u³m(ku³s). From ὑδωρ, water, σχη, the scrotum, and ὄγκος, a tumor. Fr., h. Ger., Wasseransammlung im Hodensack. A collection of water in the scrotum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSCOPIC, adj. Hid-ro-sko²p'i²k. Gr., ὑδροσκοπικός (from ὑδωρ, water, and σκοπεῖν, to examine). Lat., hydroscopicus. Fr., hydroscopique. Pertaining to hydroscopy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSCOPY, n. Hid-ro²s'ko-pi². Gr. ὑδροσκοπία (from ὑδωρ, water, and σκοπία, a lookout). Lat. hydroscopia. Fr. hydroscopie. Ger. Wasseruntersuchung (1st def.), Hydromantia (3d def.). It., idroscopia (1st def.). 1. Inspection of water, or hydrometry. 2. Divination from water. [L., 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSÉLÉNATE (Fr.), n. E-dro-sa-la-ne-a²t. See SÉLÉNIDE.

HYDROSELENIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-se²l'e²n'i²k. Fr. acide hydro-sélénique. Ger. Hydroseten, Hydroselensäure. Hydrogen selenide or its aqueous solution. [B.]

HYDROSELINUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-sel(se²l)-in(en)'u²m(u⁴m). Gr. ὑδροσέλινον (from ὑδωρ, water, and σέλινον, parsley). 1. Of Appuleius, the marsh Selinum. 2. The Apium graveolens. [B., 114, 180 (a, 24).]

HYDROSEPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-se²p(sap)'si²s. Gen., -seps'eos (-seps'is). From ὑδωρ, water, and σήψις, decay. Fr. hydrosepsie. Ger., Wasserfäule. A foul or turbid condition of water. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSIDERUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-si²d-e(a)'ru³m(ru⁴m). From ὑδωρ, water, and σίδηρον, iron. Iron phosphide. [a, 38.]

HYDROSILICATE, n. Hid-ro-si²l'i²-kat. Fr., h. A hydrated silicate. [a, 38.]

HYDROSIN, n. Hid'ro²s-i²n. See BAREGINE.

HYDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro³si²s. Gen., -ros'eos (-ros'is). From ὑδωρ, water. See HIBROSIS.

HYDROSOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-so'ma². Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὑδωρ, water, and σῶμα, the body. An entire organism or colony of a hydrozoan. [B., 28 (a, 27); L., 193.]

HYDROSORBIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-so²rb'i²k. Fr. acide hydro-sorbique. Ger. Hydrosorbinsäure. α-propylacrylic acid, C₆H₁₁O₂ = C₃H₅COOH = CH₂CH₂CH₂CH:CH.CO.OH, a monobasic acid derived from sorbic acid by the addition of two atoms of hydrogen. It is liquid at ordinary temperature. Its density is 0.969 at 19° C., and it boils at 208° C., and does not solidify at -8° C. It is slightly soluble in water, and has an odor like that of sweat. [B., 3, 4 (a, 38); B., 46, 93 (a, 39).]

HYDROSPERMATIC, adj. Hid-ro-spi²rm-a²t'i²k. Lat., hydro-spermatikus (from ὑδωρ, water, and σπέρμα, seed). Fr. hydro-spermatique. Pertaining to a watery state of the semen. [A., 322.]

HYDROSPHYMOGRAPH, n. Hid-ro-sfi²g'mo-gra²f. Lat., hydro-sphygmographus. Fr. hydro-sphygmographe. Ger., H. It. idro-sfigmografe. Of François-Franck and Mosso, an instrument for inclosing an entire organ, or part of an entire limb. It is then filled with water, and by means of a registering apparatus the fluctuation in the volume of the inclosed organ due to the arterial diastole and systole is registered. [Baumgarten (J., 55).]

HYDROSPIRE, n. Hid'ro-spi²re. From ὑδωρ, water, and σπείρα, a spire. See HYDROPORE.

HYDROSPHROMETER, n. Hid-ro-spi²ro-m'e²t-u²r. From ὑδωρ, water, spirare, to breathe, and μέτρον, a measure. An instrument devised to take the place of the more expensive compressed-air spirometers. It consists of a small jar fitted with three tubes through one of which air is admitted and through another water, and through the third the patient breathes. The resistance to expiration is produced by the lifting of the column of water into a vessel on a higher level. [a, 40.]

HYDROSPHYROXYLIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-spi²ro-ly²i²k. Fr., acide hydro-spiroylique. Volatile oil of Utnaria. [B., 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROSPONGUS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-spo²n²gu²s-(gu⁴s). From ὑδωρ, water, and σπόνγιος, a sponge. See HYGROMYCES.

HYDROSTATIC, adj. Hid-ro-sta²t'i²k. Fr. hydrostatique. Ger., hydrostatisch. Pertaining to hydrostatics or to liquid in a condition of equilibrium.

HYDROSTATICS, n. sing. Hid-ro-sta²t'i²ks. Lat., hydrostatica (from ὑδωρ, water, and στατική, statics). Fr., hydrostatique. Ger., Hydrostatik. The physics of liquids in a state of equilibrium. [B., 46 (a, 39).]

HYDROSTEON (Lat.), HYDROSTEUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro³st'e²-o²n, -u²m(u⁴m). From ὑδωρ, water, and στέον, a bone. Ger., Knochenmassericht. A deposit of serum in and around the extremities of the long bones, occurring in dropsy of the joints. [L., 30, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROSTOMIE (Fr.), n. E-dro-sto-me. From ὑδωρ, water, and στόμα, the month. An excessive buccal secretion. [Hutchinson, "Sem. méd.," Jan. 30, 1889, p. 38 (a, 40).]

HYDROSTOPATHY, n. Hid-ro-su²-do²p'a²th-i². From ὑδωρ, water, and stop, sweat, and πάθος, a condition. Ger., Hydro-stopathie. The treatment of all diseases by the internal and external uses of water, and by sweating. [a, 40.]

HYDROSULFAT (Ger.), HYDROSULFATE (Fr.), n's. Hu⁴d-ro-zu²lf-a²t', e-dro-zu²lf-a²t'. See HYDROSULPHATE, and for other words in Hydrosulf-, not here given, see the corresponding words in Hydrosulf-.—Hydrosulfatsäure (Ger.). See Sulphureted HYDROGEN.

HYDROSULFURE (Fr.), n. E-dro-su²l-fu²r. See HYDROSULPHIDE.

HYDROSULFURÉ (Fr.), adj. E-dro-su²l-fu²-ra. Combined with hydrogen and sulphur. [B., 119.]

HYDROSULPHAS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-su²l(su⁴l)-fa²s(fa²s). Gen., -at'is. See HYDROSULPHATE.—H. stibicus. Kermes mineral. [B., 92.]

HYDROSULPHATE, n. Hid-ro-su²l-fat. Lat., hydro-sulphas. Fr., hydrosulfate. 1. A salt of hydrosulphuric acid. 2. A hydrated sulphate. [B., 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROSULPHIDE, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f'i²d(id). Lat., sulpho-hydras, sulphyras, hydrosulfuratus (agreeing with the name of the base). Fr., sulphhydrate, hydrosulfure, hydrosulfate. Syn.: sulphhydrate. A compound of an element or radicle with hydrogen and sulphur. The h. of a univalent hydrocarbon is called a mercaptan. [B.]

HYDROSULPHOCARBONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f-o-ka²rb-o²n'i²k. See THIOCARBONIC ACID.

HYDROSULPHOCYANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f-o-si-a²n'-i²k. See THIOCYANIC ACID.

HYDROSULPHURATUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-su²l'f(su⁴l)-u²r(u⁴r)-at(at²)'u²s(u⁴s). Combined with hydrogen and sulphur. [B., 119.]

HYDROSULPHURET, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f'u²-re²t. See HYDROSULPHIDE.

HYDROSULPHURETICO-ACIDULUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-su²l'f(su⁴l)-fu²r(fu⁴r)-e²t(at)'i²k-o(o³)-a²s(a²k)-i²d'u²l(u⁴l)-i²s(u⁴s). Acidulous and containing hydrogen sulphide. [B., 97.]

HYDRO-SULPHURETICUS (Lat.), adj. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-su²l'f(su⁴l)-u²r(u⁴r)-e²t(at)'i²k-u²s(u⁴s). Containing hydrogen sulphide. [B., 97.]

HYDROSULPHURETTED, adj. See HYDROSULPHURETED.

HYDROSULPHURETUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-su²l'f(su⁴l)-u²r(u⁴r)-et(at)'u²m(u⁴m). See HYDROSULPHIDE.—H. stibiosum. Kermes mineral. [B., 119].—H. stibiosum cum sulphure. Antimony pentasulphide. [B., 119.]

HYDROSULPHURIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f-u²'ri²k. Fr., acide hydrosulfurique. Ger., Hydrothionsäure. Sulphureted hydrogen or its aqueous solution. [B.]—Test solution of h. a. [U. S. Ph.]. Distilled water freshly saturated with h. a. gas obtained by treating ferrous sulphide with dilute sulphuric acid. [B., 5 (a, 38).]

HYDROSULPHUROUS ACID, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f'u²-ru²s. Fr., acide hydrosulfureux. An acid, H₂SO₃, supposed to be formed from anhydrous, sulphurous acid (dioxide of sulphur) by combination with hydrogen. It is the same as true hyposulphurous acid. [B.]

HYDROSULPHYLL, n. Hid-ro-su²l'f'i²l. The univalent radicle, SH'; also this radicle occurring in the free state with the double molecular formula, S₂H₂ (hydrogen persulphide). The symbol Hs is sometimes given it. [B., 159.]

HYDROTELLURATE, n. Hid-ro-te²l'u²-rat. A salt of hydro-telluric acid. [B., 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROTELLURIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-te²l-u²'ri²k. Fr., acide hydrotellurique. Ger., Hydrotellursäure. Tellurhydric or tellurhydric acid; tellureted hydrogen or its aqueous solution. [B.]

HYDROTELLUROCYANIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-te²l-u²-ro-si-a²n'i²k. Lat., acidum hydrotellurocyanicum. Fr., acide hydro-tellurocyanique. An acid in which hydrogen, tellurium, and cyanogen are united. [B., 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROTIECA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-the(thu⁴)'ka². From ὑδρα, a hydra, and θήκη, a chest. The cup-like chitinous receptacle which protects the hydra in the calyptoblastic genera. [L., 193.]

HYDROTHERIONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-thi-o²n'i²k. See HYDROTHERIONIC ACID.

HYDROTHERAPEUSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-the²-ra²-pu²'si²s. Gen., -eus'eos (-is). From ὑδωρ, water, and θεραπεία, medical treatment. See HYDROTHERAPY.

HYDROTHERAPEUTIC, adj. Hid-ro-the²-ra²-pu²'ti²k. Fr., hydrothérapique. Of or pertaining to hydrotherapy. [B.]

HYDROTHERAPEUTICS, n. sing. Hid-ro-the²-ra²-pu²'ti²ks. See HYDROTHERAPY.

HYDROTHERAPIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-the²-ra²-p(a²)'p'i². See HYDROTHERAPY.

HYDROTHERAPY, n. Hid-ro-the²-ra²-pi². Lat., hydrotherapia (from ὑδωρ, water, and θεραπεία, medical treatment). Fr., hydrothérapie. Ger., Hydrotherapie. The systematic use of water as a curative agent. [A., 326 (a, 21); B.]

HYDROTHERMAL, adj. Hid-ro-thu⁴rm'a²l. From ὑδωρ, water, and θερμη, heat. Of or pertaining to hot water. [L., 56.]

HYDROTIOCARBONATE, n. Hid-ro-thi-o-ka²rb'o²n-at. Fr., h. A thiocarbonate. [B., 38 (a, 14).]

HYDROTIOCRONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro-thi-o-kro-ko²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydrothiocroconique. A reddish-yellow, gummy substance, C₆H₄SO₃, acting as a dibasic acid; derived from croconic acid by the action of sulphureted hydrogen. [B., 3.]

HYDROTIIION (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁴d)-ro(ro³)-thi(the)'o²n. From ὑδωρ, water, and θίον, sulphur. Ger., Schwefelwassertoff. Sulphureted hydrogen. [B., 78 (a, 14).]—H'luff (Ger.). Sulphu-reted-hydrogen gas. [L, 80].—H'säure (Ger.). See HYDROSULPHURIC ACID.

HYDROTHIONÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-thi(the)-o²n-em'(a³e²m)-i²-a³. From ὑδρω, water, θειον, sulphur, and αἷμα, blood. Ger., Hydrothionämie. A condition in which sulphureted hydrogen or hydrosulphide (hydrothionammonæmia) of ammonium enters the blood. These substances are produced in the stomach and intestines, or in the peritoneal cavity after perforation of the bowel. The symptoms are those which are produced by poisoning by these gases—viz., collapse, dizziness, frequent respirations, and small pulse. The disease is not infrequently fatal. [D, 3.]

HYDROTHIONAMMONÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-thi(the)'o²n-a²m(a³m)-mon-em'(a³e²m)-i²-a³. See under HYDROTHIONÆMIA.

HYDROTHIONATE, n. Hid-ro-thi'o²n-at. Fr., h. A salt of hydrothionic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYDROTHIONIC ACID, n. Hi-dro-thi-o²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydrothionique. Ger., Hydrothionsäure, Schwefelwasserstoffgas. Hydrosulphuric acid. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

HYDROTHIONURIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-thi(the)-o²n-u²(u²)'ri²-a³. From ὑδρω, water, θειον, sulphur, and ουρον, urine. Fr., hydrothionurie. The presence of hydric sulphide (H₂S, sulphureted hydrogen) in the urine. Betz attributes it to either the intravascular decomposition of pus, blood, or albuminoid substances; intestinal absorption of this gas and its elimination by the kidney; or the passage of the gas from the intestine into the bladder. ["Rev. des sci. méd.," Apr. 15, 1889, p. 438 (a, 18).]

HYDROTHIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-thi(the)'u³m-(u⁴m). See HYDROTHION.

HYDROTHORACIC, adj. Hi-dro-tho-ra's'i²k. Pertaining to hydrothorax. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROTHORAX (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-tho'r'a²x-(a³x). Gen., -thor'acos (acis). From ὑδρω, water, and θώραξ, the chest. Fr., h. Ger., H., Brustwassersucht, It., idrotorace. Sp., hidrotorax. Dropsy of one or both pleural cavities, not due to pleurisy; hence to be distinguished from pleuritic effusion.—H., chylosus. H. due to the establishment of a communication between the pleural cavity and the thoracic duct or the ductus lymphaticus dextra. [L, 128].—H., purulentus. An accumulation of pus in the pleural cavity. [a, 40].—H., torpidus. Chronic h. [L, 128.]

HYDROTIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²t'i²k. See HYDROTIC ACID.

HYDROTIMESIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi²d(hu⁶d)-ro²t-i²-me(ma)'si²-a³. See HYDROTIMETRY.

HYDROTIMETER, n. Hid-ro²t-i²m'e²t-u⁶r. Fr., hydrotimètre. An apparatus used in hydrotimetry. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROTIMETRIC, adj. Hid-ro²t-i²-me²t'ri²k. Fr., hydrotimétrique. Pertaining to hydrotimetry. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROTIMETRY, n. Hid-ro²t-i²m'e²t-ri². From ὑδροτης, moisture, and μετρέω, to measure. Fr., hydrotimétrie. The determination, by means of soap, of the proportion of calcareous salts contained in water. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYDROTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro²t'i²s. Gen., -ot'idis (-idis). From ὑδρω, water, and οἶς, the ear. Fr., hydrete, hidropisia de la caisse du tympane. Ger., Wassersucht des Mittelohres. It., idrote, idropie dell' orecchio medio. Sp., hidropesia de la caja del timpano. Dropsy of the ear; an accumulation of fluid, usually mucus or muco-pus, in the tympanic cavity. [F.]

HYDROTITANE (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ti²t'a²n(a³n)-e-(a). Gen., -tit'anes. From ὑδρω, water, and τίτανος, probably gypsum. Fr., hydrotitane. Ger., Kalkwasser. Lime-water; of Hippocrates, a watery lime-paste. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROTITE (Fr.), n. E-dro-tet. See HYDROTIS.

HYDROTOMY, n. Hid-ro²t'o-mi². Lat., hydrotomia (from ὑδρω, water, and τομή, a cutting). Fr., hydrotomie. It., idrotomia. A method of dissection inaugurated by Laeanchie in 1844, which consisted in injecting water under a pressure of from 3 to 4 metres into the principal artery of the part to be examined, the infiltration increasing the transparency of the loose connective tissue and separating the resisting parts, such as the nerves, glands, etc. [L, 41, 44, 49, 50 (a, 14).]

HYDROTREMELLINÆ (Lat.), HYDROTREMELLINÆ (Lat.), HYDROTREMELLINI (Lat.), n's f., f., and m. pl. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-tre²m-e²l-lin(len)'e(a³e²), -e²-e(a³e²), -(e). Fr., hydrotremellinées. Names for all the aquatic cryptogams produced in the decomposition of animal substances. [B, 1, 170 (a, 24).]

HYDROTRISULPHATE, n. Hid-ro-tri-su³l'f-at. Fr., hydrotrisulfate. A hydrated trisulphate. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYDROTRISULPHURET, n. Hid-ro-tri-su³l'f'u³-re²t. Fr., hydrotrisulfure. A sulphide containing three times as much sulphur as hydrogen. [B, 38 (a, 38).]

HYDROTROPIC, adj. Hid-ro²t'ro²p'i²k. Fr., hydrotrophique. Ger., hydrotropisch. Exhibiting hydrotropism. [B.]

HYDROTROPISM, n. Hid-ro²t'ro²p-i²z'm. From ὑδρω, water, and τροπέω, to turn. Fr., hydrotropisme. A tendency to movement in the particles of protoplasm, induced by the presence of water in its vicinity. It is either positive or negative, according as the protoplasm tends to move toward or away from the source of moisture. ["Bot. Ztg.," 1884, pp. 151, 161, 187; "Proc. Roy. Micr. Soc.," 1884, p. 603 (B).]

HYDROTYPANUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-ti²m-(tu⁶m)'pa²n(pa³n)-u³m(u⁴m). From ὑδρω, water, and τυμπανον, a drum. A mucous or serous exudation into the cavity of the middle ear, the result of an acute or chronic otitis media. [F, 39.]

HYDROVARECTASIA (Lat.), HYDROVARIUM (Lat.), n's f. and n. Hid(hu⁶d)-ro(ro³)-va'r(wa³r)-e²k-ta(ta³)'zi²(si²)-a³, -va'r-(wa³r)'i²-u³m(u⁴m). See HYDROARION.

HYDROVAROCÉLIE (Piorry) (Fr.), n. E-dro-va³-ro-sa-le. From ὑδρω, water, ὠάριον, a small egg, and κῆλη, a tumor. See Ovarian CYSTOMA.

HYDROXANTHATE, n. Hi-dro-za²n'that. Fr., h. A salt of hydroxanthic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYDROXETHYLIDENE-TRIMETHYL-AMMONIUM, n. Hid-ro²x-e²th-i²l'i²d-en-tri-me²th-i²l-a²m-mon'i²-u³m. See NEURINE.

HYDROXIDE, n. Hid-ro²x'i²d'id. Lat., hydroxydum. Ger., Hydroxyd. A chemical compound of hydroxyl with a metal or an alcoholic radicle. In recent chemical nomenclature this word replaces hydrate, except for compounds supposed to contain water of combination or crystallization. [L, 1.]-Ferrous h. An unstable greenish-white salt, FeH₂O₂, obtained by precipitating a soluble ferrous salt with an alkali. It is not found in nature. [B, 244 (a, 27).]

HYDROXYACETAL, adj. Hi-dro²x-i²-a²s'e²t-a²l. A liquid, CH₂.OH.CH(OC₂H₅)₂, obtained by treating vinyl ethyl ether with alcoholic potash, having an agreeable odor and boiling at 167° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYACETIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-a²s-et'i²k. Ger., Hydroxyessigsäure. Glycollic acid, C₂H₃O₃, so called because it may be regarded as derived from acetic acid by the substitution of hydroxyl (OH) for hydrogen. [B, 4.]

HYDROXYADIPIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-a²d-i²p'i²k. Fr., acides hydroxyadipiques. Acids formed from adipic acid, (C₆H₁₀O₄), by the substitution of hydroxyl (OH), for an equivalent quantity of H. Of these there are: 1. Monoxyadipic acid, adipomelic acid, C₆H₁₀O₅ = C₆H₉(OH)O₄. 2. Dioxyadipic acid, C₆H₁₀O₆ = C₆H₈(OH)₂O₄, isomeric with adipotartaric acid. 3. Trioxadipic acid, C₆H₁₀O₇ = C₆H₇(OH)₃O₄. [B, 2.]

HYDROXYANTHRAQUINONE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-a²n-thra³-kw'i²n'on. Ger., Hydroxyanthochinon. A substance, C₁₄H₈O₂ = C₁₄H₇(OH)O₂, known in two isomeric forms: 1. Oxyanthraquinone, which crystallizes in yellow needles or plates melting at about 271° C. 2. Erythro-oxanthraquinone, which crystallizes in orange-yellow needles melting at about 180° C. [B, 4 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYAZOBENZENE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-a²z-o-be²nz'en. A substance, C₈H₅-N₂-C₆H₅.OH, crystallizing in yellowish-red rhombic prisms, easily soluble in alcohol, slightly soluble in water, and melting at about 154° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]-H'sulphonic acid. A crystalline acid, C₈H₅(SO₂H)N₂C₆H₅.OH, known in four varieties: (1) α-h'sulphonic acid, small reddish plates having a metallic lustre, and easily soluble in alcohol and water. (2) β-h'sulphonic acid, yellowish-red prisms having a blue surface lustre, and easily soluble in pure water. (3) γ-h'sulphonic acid, long, narrow pentagonal plates having a violet surface lustre, and easily soluble in water. (5) δ-h'sulphonic acid, precipitated by strong hydrochloric acid from a concentrated aqueous solution as small shining yellow plates, or deposited in gradual evaporation of the solution as large cherry-colored rhombic tablets or prisms. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYBENZENE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-be²nz'en. Fr., hydroxybenzène. Ger., Hydroxybenzol. Carboxylic acid. [B, 270].-H'tricarboxylic acid. A tribasic acid, C₆H₃(OH)₃(CO.OH)₃, of which two varieties are known—hydroxytrimelic (hydroxytrimesitic) acid, crystallizing from a concentrated solution in hot water as an indistinctly prismatic or acicular mass containing one molecule of water, or from dilute alcohol as long silky needles containing two molecules of water; and hydroxytrimellitic acid, C₆(CO.OH)₃(CO.OH)₃, crystallizing from alcohol in transparent compact prisms, from hot water in smaller shining prisms containing two molecules of water. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYBENZOIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-be²n-zo'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxybenzoïque. Ger., Hydroxybenzoesäure. Syn.: phenol-benzoic acid. A monobasic acid, C₆H₄(OH).COOH, of the constitution of benzoic acid in which hydroxyl replaces hydrogen. Three isomeric varieties are known: (1) salicylic acid, or ortho-hydroxybenzoic acid; (2) metahydroxybenzoic acid (often called oxybenzoic acid); (3) parahydroxybenzoic acid. [B.]

HYDROXYBENZYL ALCOHOL, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-be²nz'i²l-a²l'ko-ho²l. Ger., Hydroxybenzylalkohol. Syn.: oxybenzol alcohol. Benzyl alcohol in which hydroxyl replaces hydrogen. [B.] See ORTHOXYBENZYL ALCOHOL.

HYDROXYBENZYLURIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-be²nz-i²l-ur'i²k. An acid, C₁₁H₇N₃O₆, occurring as a crystalline mass, which melts at about 70° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYBUTYRIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-bu²t-i²r'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxybutyrique. Ger., Hydroxybuttersäure. Syn.: oxybutyric acid. A monobasic acid, C₄H₇O₃ = C₄H₆(OH)O₂, of the lactic acid series, and bearing the same relation to butyric acid that lactic acid bears to propionic acid. There are 4 isomeric varie-

HYDROXYCAMPHOR, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ka²m'fo²r. A faint-yellow liquid, $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_{16}\text{O}_2$, having a turpentine-like odor and boiling at 265° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYCAMPHORONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ka²m-fö²r-o²n'i²k. An acid, $\text{C}_9\text{H}_{14}\text{O}_4$, formed as a side product in the manufacture of camphoronic acid. It occurs in large, irregular prisms, slightly soluble in cold water, freely soluble in hot water, and fusible at from 164° to 165° C. [a, 27.]

HYDROXYCAPROIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ka²p-ro²i²k. Fr., acide hydroxy-caproïque. Ger., Hydroxycapronsäure. Syn.: oxy-caproic acid. A monobasic acid, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{10}\text{O}_2 = \text{C}_6\text{H}_{11}(\text{OH})\text{O}_2$. Several isomeric varieties, which are all crystalline solids, are known, e. g., (1) leucic acid, $\text{CH}_3\text{CH}_2\text{CH}_2\text{CH}_2\text{CH}(\text{OH})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$; (2) hydroxyisocaproic acid, $(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{CHCH}_2\text{CH}(\text{OH})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$; (3) diethoxallic acid, diethylglyoxylic acid, $(\text{C}_2\text{H}_5)_2\text{C}(\text{OH})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$. [B. 3, 4.]

HYDROXYCAPRYLIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ka²p-ri²i²k. Fr., acide hydroxy-caprylique. Ger., Hydroxycaprylsäure. A monobasic acid, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_{16}\text{O}_2 = \text{C}_8\text{H}_{17}(\text{OH})\text{O}_2$, being caprylic acid in which hydroxyl replaces hydrogen. The following isomeric varieties are known: 1. Normal h. a., $\text{C}_8\text{H}_{17}\text{CH}(\text{O}-\text{H})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, a crystalline solid. 2. Oxyoctic acid, $(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{C}(\text{OH})\text{CH}_2-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, forming prismatic crystals. 3. Dipropylaloxalic acid, hydroxyisocaprylic acid, $(\text{C}_3\text{H}_7)_2\text{C}(\text{OH})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, forming colorless acicular or prismatic crystals. 4. Disopropylaloxalic acid, $[(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{CH}]_2\text{C}(\text{OH})-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, forming acicular crystals. 5. Diethylglyoxylic acid, $\text{CH}_3\text{CH}(\text{OH})\text{C}(\text{C}_2\text{H}_5)_2-\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, a syrupy liquid. [B. 2, 3, 4.]

HYDROXYCINNAMIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-si²n-a²m'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxycinnamique. Ger., Hydroxycimmsäure. See COUMARIC ACID, PARACOUMARIC ACID, CAFFEIC ACID, and CAFFEOTANNIC ACID.

HYDROXY-COMPOUND, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ko²m''pu²-n'nd. A chemical substance formed by the substitution of hydroxyl for hydrogen. [B.]

HYDROXYCOUMARIN, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ku'ma²r-i²n. A substance, $\text{C}_{11}\text{H}_{10}\text{O}_2 = \text{C}_{11}\text{H}_9(\text{OH})\text{O}_2$, being coumarin in which hydroxyl replaces hydrogen. The following isomeric varieties are known: 1. Dimethylumbelliferone, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_9(\text{OH})\text{C}(\text{CH}_3)_2$, occurring in crystalline needles melting at 256° C. 2. Homomethylumbelliferone, $\text{CH}_2\text{C}_8\text{H}_9(\text{OH})\text{C}(\text{CH}_3)$, also forming crystalline needles, melting and partially subliming at about 250° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYCUMINIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ku²m-i²n'i²k. An acid, $(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{CHC}_6\text{H}_4(\text{OH})\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, known in two isomeric forms: 1. Orthohydroxycuminic acid, crystallizing in flat needles or plates melting at 96° C. 2. Metahydroxycuminic acid, crystallizing in long, thin needles, melting at 143° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYD (Ger.), n. Hu²-drox-u²d'. See HYDROXIDE.

HYDROXYDIPHENYLAMINE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-di-fe²n-i²pl-a²m-en. A hydroxyl substitution compound, $\text{NH}(\text{C}_6\text{H}_5)_2\text{OH}$, of diphenylamine. [B.]

HYDROXYDUL (Ger.), n. Hu²-d-rox-u²-dul'. That one of two different hydroxides of the same base which contains relatively to the amount of that base the smaller amount of hydroxyl. [B.]

HYDROXYDUM (Lat.), n. n. Hid(hu²-d)-ro²x-i²d(u²-d)-n²m-(u²n). See HYDROXIDE.

HYDROXYISOCAMPHOR, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-i²s-o-ka²m'fo²r. A substance, $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_{14}\text{O}(\text{OH})$, occurring as a crystalline mass having a slight vanilla-like smell, and melting with decomposition at about 249° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYL, n. Hid-ro²x-i²l. Fr., hydroxyle. Ger., H. It., idrossilo. Syn.: oxydryl. A univalent radicle, -OH, being water deprived of one atom of hydrogen. It enters into the composition of all hydrates (hydroxides), including the alcohols, phenols, and oxygen acids, and of all other bodies formed upon the water type. Occurring in the free state as a double molecule, $\text{HO}-\text{OH}$, it constitutes a peroxide. [B.]—H²amide. Ger., Hydroxylamid. An amide in which h. replaces an equivalent amount of hydrogen. [B.]—H²benzol. See HYDROBENZOL.—H²diphenyl. See DIPHENOL.—H²ethyloxide. See ALDEHYDE ALCOHOLE.—H²irung (Ger.). The process of combining with hydroxyl. [Salkenski,

"Ctbl. f. d. med. Wssensch.," June 3, 1882, p. 391 (B).]—H²urée (Fr.). A crystalline substance, $\text{N}_2\text{CH}_4\text{O}_2$, resulting from the union of h²amine and cyanic acid. It is very soluble in water and in boiling alcohol, and melts at about 130° C. [B. 38, 93 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYLAMINE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²l'a²m-en. Fr., h. Ger., Hydroxylamin. Syn.: oryganmonia. A substance, $\text{N}(\text{OH})\text{H}_2 = \text{NH}_2\text{O}$, or ammonia in which a molecule of hydroxyl replaces an atom of hydrogen. It is known only in aqueous solution, the latter being colorless and devoid of odor, but possessing a strong alkaline reaction. It is used as a remedy in lupus vulgaris, trichophytosis capitis, and psoriasis. [B. 3, 270 (a, 38); "N. Y. Med. Jour.," April 20, 1889 (a, 40).]—H²-disulphonic acid. Fr., acide h²-disulfonique. Sulphazotic acid; a substance, $\text{N}(\text{OH})(\text{HSO}_3)_2 = \text{NH}_2\text{S}_2\text{O}_7$, acting as a dibasic acid, but known only through its salts, the h²-disulphonates. It may be regarded as h. combined with a double molecule of sulphuric acid, the former replacing two molecules of hydroxyl in the latter, and itself losing two atoms of hydrogen. [B. 3.]—H²-hydrochloride. A compound of h. and hydrochloric acid; recommended as a substitute for pyrogallic acid and chrysarobin in skin diseases, having the advantage of not staining the skin or linen. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvi, xxxvii (a, 14).]—H²-monosulphonic acid. Fr., acide h²-monosulfonique. A monobasic acid, $\text{NH}(\text{OH})(\text{HSO}_3)$. [B. 3.]

HYDROXYLATED, adj. Hid-ro²x-i²l-a²-e²l. Fr., hydroxylé. Containing hydroxyl, forming a hydroxy compound. [B. 4.]

HYDROXYLIC, adj. Hid-ro²x-i²l'i²k. Containing hydroxyl; also of, pertaining to, or contained in hydroxyl. [B.]

HYDROXYMARGARIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-ma²r-ga²r'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxymargarique. Syn.: oxymargaric acid. An acid, $\text{C}_{17}\text{H}_{34}\text{O}_2$, occurring in crystalline plates which melt at 80° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYMETHYLPHENYLFORMIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-me²th-i²l-fe²n-i²l-fo²m'i²k. See under HYDROXYTOLUIC ACID.

HYDROXYNAPHTHOIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-na²f-tho²-i²k. Fr., acide hydroxy-naphtéique. Syn.: carbonaphthoic acid. An acid, $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_6(\text{OH})\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, existing in several isomeric forms which melt at varying points from 186° C. to 247° C. [B. 4 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYOCTIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-o²kt-i²k. See HYDROXYCAPRYLIC ACID.

HYDROXYCENANTHIC ACID, HYDROXYCENANTHYLIC ACID, n's. Hid-ro²x-i²-e²n-a²n-tho²-i²k, -thi²i²k. Fr., acide hydroxycéanthoïque, hydroxycéanthyllique. Syn.: oxy-céanthylic acid. A one-molecule hydroxyl substitution compound, $\text{C}_7\text{H}_{14}\text{O}_2 = \text{C}_6\text{H}_{11}\text{CH}(\text{OH})\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, of céanthoic acid. It is known in five isomeric forms: 1. Normal h. a., or oxy-céanthylic acid, $\text{C}_6\text{H}_{11}\text{CH}(\text{OH})\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, forming prismatic crystals melting at 65° C. 2. Amphihydroxalic acid, or hydroxyisocéanthoic acid, $(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{CHCH}_2\text{CH}(\text{OH})\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, occurring in prismatic scales, melting at 60.5° C. 3. Methylethylbutyric acid, or hydroxy a-methylethylbutyric acid, $\text{CH}_2\text{CH}(\text{OH})\text{C}(\text{CH}_3)_2\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, a

HYDROXYOLEIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-o²-le²i²k. Fr., acide hydroxyoléique. Ger., Hydroxyölsäure. See RICINOLEIC ACID.

HYDROXYPROPIONIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-pro-pi²-o²n'i²k. Fr., acide hydroxy-propionique. Ger., Hydroxypropionsäure. See LACTIC ACID.

HYDROXYQUINOL, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-kw'i²n'o²l. A substance, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_9(\text{OH})_2$, crystallizing from ether in microscopic monoclinic plates or tablets, melting at 140.5° C. [B. 3 (a, 38).]

HYDROXYQUINOLINE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-kw'i²n'o²-len. Fr., hydroxyquinoline. Ger., Hydroxychinolin. See CARBOSTYRIL.

HYDROXYTOLUENE, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-to²l'u²-en. Fr., hydroxytoluène. Ger., Hydroxytoluol. Toluene in which hydroxyl replaces hydrogen. [B.] See CRESOL and DIHYDROXYTOLUENE.

HYDROXYTOLUIC ACID, n. Hid-ro²x-i²-to²-u²-i²k. Fr., acide hydroxy-toluique. Ger., Hydroxytoluylsäure. An acid, C₆H₃(OH)CO₂H having numerous possible isomers, of which five are known, three isomeric varieties of cresotic acid and two others: α-oxytoluic acid, formed by treating sulpharotoluic acid with caustic potash, and occurring in crystalline needles, which melt at about 203° C.; and β-oxytoluic acid, obtained from nitroparotoluic acid and occurring in crystalline needles grouped in stars, and melting at about 181° C. [B, 4 (α, 38).]

HYDROZOON (Lat.), HYDROZOUM (Lat.), n's n. Hid-(hu⁶d)-ro(ro²)-zo'o²n. -u³m(u⁴m). From υδρω, water, and ζωον, an animal. Fr., hydrozoaire. An individual of the Hydrozoa, which are a class of the Cœlenterata having Hydra as the type. [B, 28 (α, 27).]

HYDRUE (Fr.), n. E-dru⁶r. See HYDRIDE.

HYDRURENIS (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ru²(ru)-re(ra)/si²s. Gen., -es'eos (-es'is). From υδρω, water, and ουρησις, urination. See HYDRURIA.

HYDRURET, n. Hid/ru² re²t. See HYDRIDE.

HYDRURIA (Lat.), n. f. Hid(hu⁶d)-ru²(ru)/ri²-a³. From υδρω, water, and ουρη, urine. Fr., hydrurie. Ger., Hydrurie. A relative increase in the water and decrease in the solids of the urine. [K.]

HYDRYALOS (Lat.), n. m. Hid(hu⁶d)-ri(ru⁶)a²(a²l)-o²s. From υδρω, water, and υαλος, glass. See Water-glass.

HYGROBLEPHARICI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ble²f-a²r(a²r)/i²-si(ke). From υγρός, moist, and βλεφαρον, the eyelid. An old term for the excretory ducts of the lacrymal gland. [F.]

HYGROBLEPHARISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ble²f-a²r(a²r)-i²z(i²s)/m²s(mu⁴s). See EPIPHORA (3d def.).

HYGROBLEPHARON (Lat.), HYGROBLEPHARUM (Lat.), n's n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ble²f-a²r(a²r)-o²n, -u²m(u⁴m). 1. A moist state of the eyelids. 2. Hydroblepharon. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

HYGROBRONCHIORRHONCHUS (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-bro²n²-ki²(ch²i²)-o²r-ro²n²ki(ro²n²ch²)/u²s(u⁴s). From υγρός, moist, βρόγχια, the bronchial tubes, and ρόγχος, rhonchus. Fr., râle bronchial humide. Ger., feuchtes Bronchialrasselgeräusch. A humid bronchial rhonchus. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

HYGROCATARACTA (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ka²t-(ka²t)-a²r-a²kt(a²kt)/a³. From υγρός, moist, and καταράκτης, a cataract. Ger., flüssiger Staar. An old term for a fluid cataract. [F.]

HYGROCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-se(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hig'ro-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From υγρός, moist, and κύλη, a tumor. See HYDROCELE and HYDROCISTOCELE.

HYGROCHARIS (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²k(roch²)/a²r(a²r)-i²s. Gen., -char'itos (-itis). From υγρός, wet, and χάρις, grace. The genus Nephrophyllum. [B, 121 (α, 24).]

HYGROCISTOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-su²rs-(ki²rs)-o(o)²-se(ka)/le(la); in Eng., hig-ro-su²rs-o-sel. Gen., -cel'es. From υγρός, wet, κυστός, a varix, and κύλη, a tumor. See HYDROCISTOCELE.

HYGROCNISSORRHONCHUS (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ni²s(skn²s)-so²r-ro²n²ki²ku²s(ch²u²s). From υγρός, wet, κνισσάν, to crackle like burning fat, and ρόγχος, a snoring sound. Fr., râle crépissant humide. Ger., feuchtes knisterndes Rasselgeräusch. A humid, crackling rhonchus. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

HYGROCOLLYRIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-ko²-li²r-(hu⁸r)¹²-u²m(u¹m). Gr., ὑδροκολλύριον, υδροκολλῦριον. Fr., hydrocollyre. An ancient name for a liquid collyrium.

HYGROCROCIS (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²k²ro²-si²s(ki²s). Gen., -croc'idus (-idis). From ὑγρός, wet, and κρόκος, saffron. 1. Of Agardi, the genus Typhoderma. 2. The genus Mycoderma of Persoon (1st def.). The Hydrocrocine of Reichenbach are a subdivision of the Oscillatoria. [L, 121, 170 (a, 24).]

HYGROCYSTIS (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-si²st(ku⁶st)¹²s. Gen., -cyst'ros (-cyst'is). From ὑγρός, wet, and κύστις, a bladder. See HYDROCYST.

HYGROCYSTORRHONCHUS (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-si²st(ku⁶st)-o²r-ro²n²h²o²ch²(u⁶s). From ὑγρός, wet, κύστις, a bladder, and ῥόγχος, a snoring sound. Fr., râte vesiculaire humide. Ger., feuchtes Blasenrasselgeräusch. A humid, vesicular rhonchus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGROGEOPIHILUS (Lat.), adj. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-je(ga)-o²f¹²-u²s(u⁶s). From ὑγρός, wet, γῆ, the earth, and φιλεῖν, to love. Fr., hygrogeophile. Living upon the earth and in the water (said of molluscs). [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYGROGRAPH, n. Hig'ro gra²f. From ὑγρός, wet, and γράφειν, to write. An instrument for recording automatically the variations of atmospheric humidity. [L, 56.]

HYGRO-HEMATOCELE (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-he²m(ha²e²m)-a²(u²o²)-ce²le(ku⁶le)(a). In Eng., hig-ro-he²m-a²t-o-sel. From ὑγρός, wet, αἷμα, blood, and κύλη, a tumor. Fr., hygrohématocele. A hydrocele of the tunica vaginalis propria, around and communicating with which a hematocoele has formed. [Bureau, "Gaz. méd. de Paris," May 1, 1886, p. 205 (a, 40).]

HYGROLOGY, n. Hig-ro²l'o²-ji². Lat., hygrologia (from ὑγρός, wet, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., hygrologie. Ger., Feuchtigkeitslehre. The science of the fluids of the body. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGROM (Ger.), n. Hu⁶g-rom'. See HYGROMA.—H. der Augenhöhle. See HYGROMA of the orbit.—Reisskörpchenenthaltendes H. See Rice-grain cyst.—Schleimbeutel'. A tumor of a bursa mucosa.—Schenscheidenh'. See Rice-grain cyst.

HYGROMA (Lat.), n. n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²ma². Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὑγρός, wet. Fr., h., hygrome. Ger., H. Hygrom, Wassergeschwulst, wässrige Balggeschwulst. 1. A serous effusion into a bursa mucosa. 2. A cystic tumor containing usually a serous fluid. [D., 4.] 3. A genus of the Bothriocephalidae. [Schränck (L, 16).]—Cystic h. Lat., h. cysticum. A tumor composed of a more or less dense fibrous sac lined by epithelium and filled with serous fluid. [a, 40.]—H. blennorrhagic (Fr.). A serous effusion into a bursa due to gonorrhoeal rheumatism. [L, 88 (a, 40).]—H. cellulocysticum congenitale. A congenital cystoid h., of rapid growth, occurring in the neck, axilla, perineum, or sacral region. [A, 326 (a, 22).]—H. collis cysticum congenitum. See Congenital hydrocele of the neck.—H. cysticum. See *Cystic h.—H. durie matris. See Meningocele.—H. gangliodes. A serous cyst formed between the layers of the sheaths of tendons which may or may not communicate with the cavity of the sheath. [a, 40.]—H. gastrocnemii. A h. situated on the inner side of the popliteal space. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. iliaca posterioris. Of Chassaignac, a h. situated between the posterior superior spine of the ilium and the fascia. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. infrapatellare profundum. An elastic tumor anterior to the ligamentum patellae, which may interfere with bending of the knee. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. of the neck. See Congenital hydrocele of the neck.—H. of the orbit. Fr., hygrome de l'orbite. Ger., Hygrom der Augenhöhle. A variety of exudation cyst, first described by Hyrtl, consisting in dropsy of the bursa of the tendon of the superior oblique muscle of the eye or of the bursa sometimes found between the levator palpebrae superioris and the rectus superior muscle. [F.]—H. olecrani. A flat, roll-shaped, soft, elastic tumor, occurring on the inner side of the olecranon, sometimes containing, besides the synovial fluid, bodies like grains of rice. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. patellae. See H. prepatellare.—H. poplitei. See H. bursa mucosae tendinis poplitei.—H. prepatellare. Fr., h. prépatellien. A painful tumor in front of the patella, consisting of a subcutaneous, subfascial, or subaponeurotic enlarged bursa mucosa. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).] A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. prætibiale. A h. of the bursa prætibialis. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. prærotulien (Fr.). See H. prepatellare.—H. serrato-subscapulare. A h. formed between the subscapularis and the serratus magnus muscles. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. subacromiale. A cystic tumor developed by supersecretion or inflammation of the subacromial bursa. It lies between the acromion process, the coraco-acromial ligament, and the capsule of the joint. [a, 40.]—H. subiliacum. A bursal h., situated between the anterior surface of the pubic bone and the hip joint. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. supragenitum. A bursal h. situated just above the patella. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. trochantericum. A little subcutaneous or a large subaponeurotic bursal h. situated over the great trochanter of the femur. [Albert (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Sacral h. Fr., hygrome sacré. A cystic tumor developed by supersecretion of the sacro-coccygeal bursa, usually congenital. [a, 40.]—Sub-hyoid h. A bursal tumor situated just above the cricoid cartilage and varying in size from that of a small hazel-nut to that of a hen's egg. [Laurent, "Clinique," June 13, 1889 (a, 40).]*

HYGROME (Fr.), n. E-grom. See HYGROMA.—H. de l'orbite (Fr.). See HYGROMA of the orbit.

HYGROMETER, n. Hig-ro²m'e²t-u²r. Lat., hygrometrum (from ὑγρός, wet, and μέτρον, a measure). Fr., hygromètre. Ger.,

H. It., igrometro. Sp., higrómetro. An instrument for measuring the amount of moisture in the air, either by absorption (as with hygroscopic substances), by condensation (with dew-point instruments), or by evaporation (with wet-and-dry-bulb thermometers).

HYGROMÈTRE (Fr.), n. E-gro-me²tr'. See HYGROMETER.

HYGROMETRIC, adj. Hig-ro-me²t'ri²k. Lat., hygrometricus. 1. Pertaining to hygrometry. [L, 49.] 2. In botany, possessing the property of moving under the influence of moisture, as in the spiral curving of the awns of certain grasses when moisture is absorbed; often used in the Latin as a specific name (e. g., Fumaria hygrometrica, Lentinus hygrometricus). [B, 229, 308 (a, 35).]

HYGROMETRICITY, n. Hig-ro-me²t-ri²s¹²i². Fr., hygrométrie. The state of being hygrometric. [A, 301.]

HYGROMYCES (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²m¹²s(u⁶k)-e²(as). Gen., -e²l'os (-e²l'is). From ὑγρός, wet, and μύκης, a fungus. Ger., Wasserschwamm. Of Rütgen, a water-fungus. [B, 78 (a, 14).]

HYGROMYRON (Lat.), HYGROMYRUM (Lat.), n's n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²m¹²r(u⁶r)-o²n, -u²m(u¹m). Gr., ὑγρόμυρον (from ὑγρός, wet, and μύρον, an ointment). A perfumed oil or nearly liquid ointment. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGRON (Lat.), n. n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²n. Gr., ὑγρόν. Moisture or a liquid. [Hippocrates (A, 311).]

HYGROPADOPHLYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-pe²d-(pa²e²d)-o²f¹²li²s(hu⁶s)-f²s. Gen., -lys'eos (-oph'lysis). From ὑγρός, moist, πάσις, a child, and φλόσις, an eruption. Ger., feuchtende Kinderhitzeblattern. Moist eczema in children. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGROPHANOUS, adj. Hig-ro²f'a²n-u²s. From ὑγρός, moist, and φαίνειν, to appear. Of Fungi, having a watery, somewhat translucent appearance when moist, opaque when dry. The Hygrophani of Fries are a section of the Pholiota so characterized. [B, 121, 308 (a, 35).]

HYGROPHILA (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²f¹²i²a². From ὑγρός, wet, and φιλεῖν, to love. Fr., hygrophile. A genus of the Acanthaceae, tribe Ruellieae. The Hydrophileae of Bentham and Hooker are a subtribe of the same class and tribe. [B, 32, 42 (a, 24).]—H. longifolia. See H. spinosa.—H. obovata. A species found in the East Indies. The leaves are used to reduce oedematous swellings. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. ringens. A species found in Malabar, where the leaves are used, together with salt, as a depurative. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—H. spinosa. Ger., langblättriger Sterdorn. A prickly species found in the East Indies and Ceylon, where the root and leaves are considered tonic and diuretic, and the seeds diuretic and aphrodisiac. European investigators concur as to the powerful diuretic action of the plant. [B, 5, 42, 172, 180 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvi (a, 14).]

A species found in open pastures in England and on the Continent, where it is eaten. [B, 61 (a, 24).]—H. psittacineus. A many-tinted species found in Europe and the United States. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—H. virginicus. Fr., petite-orville. Ger., Jungfernschwamm. A very small, edible species, growing in England and on the Continent. [B, 49, 105.]

HYGROPTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²f-tha²(tha²)¹²ly-mi²-a². From ὑγρός, wet, and ὀφθαλμία, ophthalmia. Ger., feuchte Ophthalmie. An old term for irritation or inflammation of the eyeball or eyelids, accompanied by profuse lachrymation. [F.]

HYGROPTHALMIC, adj. Hig-ro²f-tha²(tha²)¹²mi²k. Pertaining to hygrophthalmia; as a n., a person affected with hygrophthalmia.

HYGROPISSA (Lat.), HYGROPISSON (Lat.), n's f. and n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-pi²s(sa²)-so²n. Gr., ὑγρόπισσα, ὑγρόπισσον (from ὑγρός, liquid, and πῖσσα, pitch). Liquid pitch. [Galen (A, 311).]

HYGROPLASMA (Lat.), n. n. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-pla²z(pla²)¹²ly-ma². Gen., -plasm'atos (-atis). From ὑγρός, wet, and πλάσμα, formed matter. Of Naegeli, the fluid part of protoplasm. [a, 24.]

HYGRORRHONCHUS (Lat.), n. m. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²r-ro²n²h²o²ch²(u⁶s)(u⁶s). From ὑγρός, moist, and ῥόγχος, a rattle. Fr., râte humide. Ger., feuchtes Rasselgeräusch. A moist rhonchus. [A, 322.]

HYGROS (Lat.), adj. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro²s. Gr., ὑγρός. Moist, watery, liquid; of the bowels, loose. [Hippocrates (A, 311 [a, 17]).]

HYGROSARCA (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-sa²rk'a². Fr., hygrosarque (Edema). [A, 385.]

HYGROSARCUS (Lat.), adj. Hig(hu⁶g)-ro(ro²)-sa²rk'u²s(u⁶s). From ὑγρός, wet, and σάρξ, flesh. Pertaining to a soft or flabby condition of the flesh. [L, 50 (a, 21).]

HYGROSCOPE, n. Hig-ro-skop. Lat., hygroscopium (from ὕψος, wet, and σκοπεῖν, to examine). Fr., h. Ger., Hygroskop. See HYGROMETER.

HYGROSCOPIC, adj. Hig-ro-sko-pi'z'k. Lat., hygroscopicus. Fr., hygroscopique. Ger., Hygroskopisch. Fit or adapted for giving evidence of moisture; hence, capable of readily absorbing moisture. [B.]

HYGROSCOPICITY, HYGROSCOPISM, n's. Hig-ro-skop-i's'i'ti-iz', -ro's'kop-i'z'm. From ὕψος, wet, and σκοπεῖν, to examine. The property possessed by plants or plant-organs by which one part either absorbs water more readily than another, or parts with it more quickly, causing rupture of the organ, or giving rise to movements which favor germination. [B, 19, 291 (a, 24).]

HYGROSCOPY, n. Hig-ro's'ko-pi'z'. See HYGROMETRY.

HYGROSYMPHILODOCHTHUS (Lat.), n. m. Ger., feuchtes Knotensyphilid. A moist tubercular syphilide. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGROTES (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu'g)-ro't-ez(az). Gen., -e't'os (-e't'is). Gr., ὕγροτης. Fr., hygrote. Ger., Feuchtigkeit. 1. Humidity. 2. A humor. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYGRUM (Lat.), n. n. Hig(hu'g)-ru'm(ru'm). See HYGRON.

HYGRUSINA (Lat.), n. f. Hig(hu'g)-ru'z(ru)-sin(sen)'a's. From ὕψος, wet, and ὄσσια, an essence. Fr., hygrusine. The fine part of essential oils (i. e., the part which remains liquid at a zero temperature). [Bizio (L, 41, 180).]

HYLÆPYRRHYNCHI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hil(hu'g)-e(a's-e'-e)-pi'r-(pu'r)-ri'z'n(ru'n'z)/ki(ch'e). From ὕλη, a wood, αἰρῆς, high, and ὄψυχος, a snout. Of J. A. Ritgen, a family of sylvan birds comprising those which have their bills elevated. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLE (Lat.), n. f. Hil(hu'g)-e(a). Gen., hyl'es. Gr., ὕλη. The primal matter, mass, or body in nature. [L, 30, 50 (a, 14).]—H. latrice. Any medicinal substance. [A, 322.]

HYLEBATOUS, adj. Hil-e'z'a't-u's. Lat., hylebatus (from ὕλη, matter, and βαίνειν, to go). Fr., hylebate. Frequenting the woods; living in the underbrush. [L, 41 (a, 14).] The Hylebata of Vieillot are a family of sylvan birds comprising those which, owing to the peculiar arrangement of their feet, live only in the underwood. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLISIS (Lat.), HYLISMUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. Hil(hu'g)-i's'i's, -i'z(i'z)/mu's(mu's). Gen., -i's'os (hylis'is), -i's'mi. Gr., ὕλις, ὕλισμος. Filtering, percolation. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYLISTER (Lat.), HYLISTERION (Lat.), HYLISTRION (Lat.), HYLISTRUM (Lat.), n's m., n., n., and n. Hil(hu'g)-i's't'r-i'z'-(r'ar), -i's't-e(a)/ri'z'-o'n, -i's't'r'i'z'-o'n, -u's'm(u'm). Gr., ὕλιστήρ, ὕλιστήριον, ὕλιστήριον. Ger., Durchseihler. A strainer or filter. [L, 135 (a, 39).]

HYLOCLASMOPTENOUS, adj. Hil-o-klaz'mo'p-ten'u's. From ὕλη, a wood, κλάω, to break, and πτερός, winged. Of J. A. Ritgen, fitted to crush objects with the bill. The Hyloclastompteni are a section of sylvan birds so characterized. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLOGENESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hil(hu'g)-o(o's)-je'n(ge'n)'e-s'i's. Gen., -e's'eos (gen'es'is). From ὕλη, matter, and γεννᾶν, to produce. Ger., Stoffbildung, Massenbildung. The origin or formation of matter. [L, 30, 50 (a, 14).]

HYLOGNOSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hil(hu'g)-o(o's)-no(gno)'zi'z(i'z)-a's. From ὕλη, matter, and γνώσις, knowledge. See HYLOLOGY.

HYLOLOGY, n. Hil-o'l'o-g'i'z'. From ὕλη, matter, and λόγος, understanding. Ger., Stofflehre, Elementarlehre. The science of elementary bodies or crude material. [L, 30, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYLOPATHISM, n. Hil-o'p'a'th-i'z'm. Lat., hylopathismus. From ὕλη, matter, and πάθος, disease. 1. The theory of the sentience of matter. 2. Any disease due to excess, deficiency, or defective constitution of matter. [L, 30, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

HYLOPHAGOUS, adj. Hil-o'p'a'z-gu's. Gr., ὕλοφάγος (from ὕλη, wood, and φαγεῖν, to devour). Lat., hylophagus. Subsisting on wood. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

HYLOPTENOUS, adj. From ὕλη, a wood, and πτερός, winged. Of J. A. Ritgen, living in the woods. The Hylopteni are sylvan birds. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLORTHORRHYNCOUS, adj. Hil-o'rth-o'r-ri'z'n'k'u's. From ὕλη, a wood, ὄρθος, straight, and ὄψυχος, a sword. Of J. A. Ritgen, having a straight beak or bill. The Hylorthorhynchus are a class of sylvan birds so characterized. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLOS, n. An old term for prolapse of the iris. [F.]

HYLOTROPIA (Lat.), n. f. Hil(hu'g)-o(o's)-tro'p(tro'p)'i'z-a's. From ὕλη, matter, and τροπέω, to turn. Fr., hylo tropie. Ger., Stoffwandel. In chemistry, a conversion of matter. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYLOTRYPANOPTENOUS, adj. Hil-o'tri'p-a'n-o'p-ten'u's. From ὕλη, wood, τρύπω, to bore, and πτερός, winged. Of J. A. Ritgen, having a bill fitted for boring or piercing. The Hylotrypanopteni are a section of sylvan birds so characterized. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYLOZOISM, n. Hil-o-zo'i'z'm. Lat., hylozoismus (from ὕλη, matter, and ζωή, life). Fr., hylozoïsme. A theory attributing to matter both primal existence and life as one of its original properties. [L, 30, 41, 49, 50 (a, 14).]

HYLUM (Lat.), HYLUS (Lat.), n's n. and m. Hil(hu'g)-u's'm-(u'm), -u's(u's). See HILUM.

HYMEN (Lat.), n. m. Hi(hu'g)-me'n(man). Gen., hym'enos (-enis). Gr., ἕμην. Fr., h. Ger., H., Scheidenklappe (2d def.), Jungfernhäutchen (2d def.). It., imene. Sp., himen. 1. Any membrane. 2. A thin fold of mucous membrane, of varying shape, but usually crescentic, which, in the virgin, closes the ostium vaginae more or less completely. It is commonly attached to the posterior portion of the vulvo-vaginal ring.—Annular h. See H. annularis.—Bifenestrate h. See H. biperforatus.—Bilabiate h., Bilobate h. Fr., h. bilobé. A h. separated into two parts by a slit. [a, 29].—Bridled h. See H. colummatus.—Cribriform h. See H. cribriformis.—Double h. See H. multiplex.—Fringed h. See H. fimbriatus.—Horseshoe h. Fr., h. en fer à cheval. A h. which is disposed on three sides of the orifice of the vagina so as to be shaped like a horseshoe. [A, 38 (a, 29)].—H. à bords déclinés (Fr.). See H. denticulatus.—H. annularis, Fr., h. (de forme) annulaire. Ger., ringförmiger H. That form which is attached to the whole circumference of the ostium vaginae, with an opening in the central portion. [A, 15].—H. biperforatus. A h. which presents two openings. [a, 29].—H. colummatus. Fr., h. en bride. That form in which the h. is divided by a median fleshy bridge which extends into the vagina, and is apparently the remains of the median septum between the two Müllerian ducts. [Dohrn, "Ztschr. f. Geb. u. Gyn.," xi, 1; "Ctbl. f. Gyn.," June 20, 1885, p. 390].—H. cribriformis. Fr., h. criblé. Ger., siebelförmiger H. A h. with a number of small openings in it. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. de forme annulaire (Fr.). See H. annularis.—H. de forme semilunaire (Fr.). See H. semilunaris.—H. denticulatus. Fr., h. à bords déclinés. That form in which the free border is serrated. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. diaphragmaton. Gr., ἕμην διαφράγματος. A mediastinal membrane. [A, 322].—H. en bride (Fr.). See H. colummatus.—H. en fer à cheval (Fr.). See Horseshoe h.—H. fimbriatus. That variety in which the free border and often the two surfaces are shaggy with delicate papillary outgrowths. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. hypertrophicus. A hypertrophic state of the hymen, rarely affecting the whole structure, but affecting especially the part nearest the meatus urinarius. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. imperforatus. See Imperforate h.—H. infundibuliformis. A h. which projects in the form of a funnel. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. linguiformis. That malformation of the h. in which a polyoid outgrowth from its posterior portion projects between the labia majora. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. multiplex. Syn: double h. The condition in which there is a membranous constriction of the vagina, resembling the h., above the latter. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. septatus. A form in which the opening is divided by a vertical median vaginal partition consisting of an extension of the posterior columna. [Dohrn, l. c.]. Cf. H. colummatus.—H. subseptatus. A variety of h. septatus in which two median partition-like structures, from the anterior and posterior columna, respectively, approach each other, but do not unite. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. semilunaris. Fr., h. (de forme) semi-lunaire. That form of h. annularis in which the preponderance of the posterior portion is shown to an unusual degree. [Dohrn, l. c.].—H. septus. See H. septatus.—H. subseptus. See H. subseptus.—Imperforate h. Lat., h. imperforata. Fr., h. imperforé. That form in which there is no opening, so that the ostium vaginae is wholly occluded.—Ringförmiger H. (Ger.). See H. annularis.—Semilunar h. See H. semilunaris.—Siebelförmiger H. (Ger.). See H. cribriformis.

HYMENÆA (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu'g)-me'n-e'(a's'e)-a's. Fr., hyménée. Ger., Lokustbaum, Heuschreckenbaum. Of Linnæus, a genus of leguminous trees, of the Amherstieae, suborder Cesalpiniæ. [B, 19, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—H. candolliana, H. confertiflora. Species found in Mexico and Brazil, having properties like those of H. courbaril. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. courbaril. Fr., (hyménée) courbaril. Ger., gemeiner Lokustbaum (oder Heuschreckenbaum). West Indian locust-tree; a species called algarroba in Panama, jatai in Brazil, simiri in Guiana, and cuapinole in Mexico. It furnishes a variety of copal (see Brown American ANIME) from which an excellent varnish is made, and which is also used in Brazil in pectoral disorders. The leaves are used as a vermifuge, and the inner bark is a mild purgative. The pulp of the pod, in which the seeds are imbedded, is eaten when ripe by the natives. [B, 5, 19, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 14).]—H. hornemanniana. The Trachylobium hornemannianum. [B, 42, 185 (a, 24).]—H. latifolia. A species found in Brazil. It yields a copal like that of H. courbaril. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. martiana. Fr., hyménée de Martius. A species found in Brazil, yielding copal. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—H. mozambicensis. The Trachylobium mozambicense. [B, 5, 42 (a, 24).]—H. olfersiana, H. sellowiana, H. stigonocarpa, H. stilbocarpa. A species found in Brazil, yielding copal. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. venosa. A species found in Guiana, yielding copal. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. verrucosa. Fr., hyménée verrucueuse. The Trachylobium verrucosum. [B, 42, 185 (a, 24).]

HYMENAL, adj. Hi'me'n-a'l. Lat., hymenicus. Fr., hyménal. Pertaining to the hymen (2d def.). [A, 322.]

HYMÈNE (Fr.), n. E-me'n. See HYMENTUM.

HYMÉNÉE (Fr.), n. E-ma-na. 1. Of PERSOON, see HYMENTUM. 2. See HYMENÆA.—H. de Martius. See HYMENÆA martiana.—H. d'Occident. See HYMENÆA stilbocarpa.

HYMENELYTROUS, adj. Hi-me'n-e'l'i't-ro'u's. Fr., hyménélytre. Having the wing-covers membranous. The Hymenelytra of Latreille and Eichwald are a family of Hemiptera, comprising those insects which have membranous elytra. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYMENTAL, adj. Hi-me'n'i'z-a'l. Fr., hyménial. Pertaining to the hymenium. [A, 385.]

HYMENIC, adj. Hi-me'n'i'z'k. See HYMENTAL.

HYMENICOLAR, adj. Hi-me'n-i'z'k'ol-a'r. From ἕμηνιον, the hymenium, and colere, to inhabit. Inhabiting the hymenium. [Cooke (a, 35).]

HYMENTION (Fr.), n. E-ma-ne-o'n. Of Noulet and Danier, see HYMENTUM.

HYMENTITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu'g)-me'n-i'ti'tis. Gen., -i'ti'dos (-idis). From ἕμην, a membrane (see also -itis). Inflammation of an internal free membrane, especially of the hymen (2d def.). [L, 30, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYMENIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-men(me²n¹)i²-u²m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑμένιον (dim. of ὑμῆν, a membrane). Fr., hymène, hyménée, hyménion, hyménion. Ger., Schlauchschichte, Sporenschichte. The fruiting surface in Fungi, the layer of spore-bearing cells in or on a sporocarp. [B, 1, 19, 123, 291 (a, 24).]

HYMENOCALIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ka²l(kal²)i²-lis. Ger., Hautliie. Of Salisbury, a genus of the Amaryllidaceae, tribe Amarylliteae. [B, 42, 180 (a, 24).]—H. americana, H. caribaea. Species found in the West Indies. The bulbs are used as an emollient application to inflammatory swellings. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. mexicana. A species found in South America and Central America, by some botanists identified with H. rotata. The bulbs are used like squills. [B, 34, 180 (a, 24).]—H. ovata, H. patens. A species found in the West Indies having the same properties as H. americana. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. rotata. A species found in marshes and low grounds, along streams, throughout the southern United States. Its bulb is used like squill. [B, 34, 180 (a, 24).]

HYMENOCARPOUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o-ka²rp¹u³s. Having the apothecia borne on a membrane—that is, on a foliaceous thallus. The Hymenocarpi are: (1) of Meyer, an order (of Link, a suborder) of lichens consisting of Parmelia and other foliaceous lichens, and corresponding to the Hymenothalami of Link. [B, 121, 170 (a, 35).]

HYMENOCHONDRODES (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ko²n(ch³o²n)-drod(ez)as. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, χόνδρος, cartilage, and εἶδος, resemblance. Fr., hyménochondroïde. Ger., Hautknorpelgewebe. Of Heusinger, partly membranous and partly cartilaginous. [A, 385; L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENODES (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-od(ez)as. Gr., ὑμενώδης from ὑμῆν, a membrane, and εἶδος, resemblance. Fr., hyménoïde. Resembling a membrane; membranous in texture; as a n., (1) of Hippocrates, a substance, such as the blood in certain fevers and the urine in leptic states, which easily forms membranous deposits; (2) of P. de Beauvois, his fourth order of Musci. [B, 1, 19 (a, 24); L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENODICTYON (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-di²kt'i²-o²n. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and δύκτυον, a net. A genus of the Rubiaceae, tribe Cinchonae. [B, 42 (a, 24).]—H. excelsum. Tel., pundarook. Bomb., kara kerrak. A species found in Ceylon and the East Indies. The inner bark, when fresh, is more bitter and astringent than cinchona-bark, for which it is locally substituted. It contains hymenodictyone and a bitter neutral principle. [C₂₂H₁₈O₁₀. [B, 5, 19, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).] "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxv, xxxi, xxxii (a, 14).]—H. flaccidum. A species found in the East Indies, said to furnish the cinchona of Sheepee. [B, 490.]—H. horsfieldianum. The H. excelsum. [B, 212.]—H. obovatum. A species known as suffed kurwah in Bombay, where the bark is used by the natives as a tonic. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxv (a, 14).]—H. thyrsoiflorum. The H. excelsum. [B, 212.]—H. utile. A species common in the Paulghat jungles, India, and in Malabar. The wood is of a loose texture, soft and hygrometric. By some it is identified with H. excelsum. [B, 212; B, 19, 172 (a, 24).]

HYMENODICTYONINE [Naylor], n. Hi-me²n¹-o-di²kt'i²-o²n-en. An alkaloid allied to quinioidine, berberine, and paricine; found in the bark of Hymenodictyon excelsum. ["Brit. and Colon. Drug.," Sept. 4, 1886, p. 243; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiii, xxxv (a, 14).]

HYMENOGANGLIITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ga²n²-ga²n²-gli²i(e)ti²s. Gen., -itidis (-idis). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and γάγγλιον, a ganglion (see also -itis). A mild form of sporadic cholera. [A, 322.]

HYMENOGASTERÆE (Lat.), HYMENOGASTEREI (Lat.), HYMENOGASTERES (Lat.), HYMENOGASTREÆE (Lat.), HYMENOGASTREI (Lat.), n's f, m, f, and m. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ga²s(ga²s)-te²r'e²-e(a²e²)-i(e), -ga²s(ga²s)-te²r'e²-ez(e²e²), -tre²-e(a²e²), -tre²-i(e). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and γαστήρ, the stomach. A subdivision of Fungi, of the Gasteromyces, resembling the truffles in habit. [B, 77, 121, 291 (a, 24).]

HYMENOGASTRIC, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o-ga²s'tri²ck. Of birds, having a membranous stomach. [L, 107, 180.]

HYMENOGENY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²i²e²n-i². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and γενᾶν, to produce. Fr., hyménogénie. The production of a pellicle by the simple contact of two liquids, as when a drop of liquid albumin falls into a liquid fat. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYMENOGRAPHY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²g'ra²f-i². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and γράφειν, to describe. Fr., hyménographie. Ger., Hautbeschreibung. See HYMENOLOGY.

HYMENOID, adj. Hi-me²n¹-oid. See HYMENODES.

HYMENOLICHENES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-lik(lech²)-en(an)'ez(e)s. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and λεχών, a lichen. See HYMENOYCETES.

HYMENOLOGY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²l'o²-ji². Lat., hymenologia (from ὑμῆν, a membrane, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., hyménologie. The anatomy, etc., of membranes. [A, 322.]

HYMENOLOPIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²l'op-i²s. Gen., -opidos (-idis). A genus of the Tenididae in the larval state. [Weinland (L, 16).]—H. flavopuncta. See TÆXIA flavopuncta.

HYMENOMALACIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ma²l-(ma²l)-a(a²)s'i²k'i²-a². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and μαλακία, softness. Ger., Hautverweichung. Softening of the serous membranes. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYMENOMYCETAL, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o-mi-set'a². See HYMENOMYCETES.

HYMENOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-mi-(nu⁴)-set(kat)'ez(e)s. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and μύκης, a fungus. Fr., hyménomycètes, hyméniées. Ger., Hautpilze, Hutpilze.

A division of the Basidiomycetes, in which the hymenium, when the spores ripen, occupies the outer surface of the sporocarp, and including the Agaricini, Polyporei, Hydnei, Auricularini, and Clavariet (i. e., all the edible mushroom [Fungi] and many of the poisonous species). They are generally of considerable size and non-parasitic. The Hymenomycei of Roques are the same. [B, 19, 77, 291 (a, 24); L, 164 (a, 27).]

HYMENOMYCETOUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o-mi-set'u³s. Of or pertaining to the Hymenomyces. [B.]

HYMENONEMA (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-ne(na)'ma². Gen., -em'atos (-atis). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and νήμα, a thread. Fr., hyménonème. Of Cassini, a genus of the Compositae, tribe Cichoriaceae. [B, 42 (a, 24).]—H. gracum, H. Tournefortii. A species indigenous to the eastern Mediterranean regions, probably the εἰσάκιον μικρόν of Dioscorides; used in gastric disorders, and externally to reduce inflammation. [B, 42, 180 (a, 24).]

HYMENOPHORE, n. Hi-me²n¹-o-for. Lat., hymenophorum (from ὑμῆν, a membrane, and φορεῖν, to bear). Ger., Schlauchschichtträger, Sporenschichtträger, Schlauchschichtboden, Sporenschichtboden. The part of a hymenomycetous fungus bearing the hymenium. [B, 1, 19, 123, 291 (a, 24).]

HYMENOPHOUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o²f'o²r-u³s. Having a membranous covering (said of ferns in which the sori are inclosed in an indusium). The Hymenophoreae of Presl are a family of indusiate ferns of the Cathelogyrate. [B, 121, 170 (a, 35).]

HYMENOPHTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²f-tha²l-(tha²l)'mi²-a². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and ὀφθαλμία, ophthalmia. An old term for membranous conjunctivitis. [F.]

HYMENOPHYLLUM (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-fi²l(fu⁶)-lu²m(lu⁴m). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and φύλλον, a leaf. A genus of the Hymenophyllaceae (Fr., hymenophyllacées; Ger., Hymenophyllaceen), which are the ferns, a family in which the annulus is transversal or oblique, and passes completely around the sporangium. The Hymenophylleae (Fr., hymenophyllées) of St. Vincent are the same; and the Hymenophylloideae of Presl are a tribe of the same family. [B, 19, 104, 121 (a, 24); B, 121 (a, 35).]

HYMENOPODOUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o²p'o²-du³s. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and πους, the foot. Having the toes partially joined by a membrane (said of birds). The Hymenopoda of Möllring are a family of birds having the above characteristics. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYMENOPOLYPUS (Lat.), n. m. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-po²l'-i²pu²(u⁴)-u³s(sus). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and πολύπους, a polypus. A polypus of the hymen. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENOPTERA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-a². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and πτερόν, a wing. Ger., Hautflügler, Aderflügler. An order of the Insecta, including bees, ants, etc., having four membranous wings. [B, 28 (a, 27).]

HYMENOPTERAL, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-l. See HYMENOPTEROUS.

HYMENOPTERAN, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-n. An individual of the Hymenoptera.

HYMENOPTEROLOGY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-o²-l'o²-ji². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, πτερόν, a wing, and λόγος, understanding. That part of entomology which treats of the Hymenoptera. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

HYMENOPTEROUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-u³s. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and πτερόν, a wing. Fr., hyménoptère. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of the Hymenoptera. [a, 17.]

HYMENOPTERYGIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²pt'e²r-i²gi²(u⁴g)'i²-n²m(u⁴m). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and πτερυγιον (see PTERYGIUM). Of Petrequin, a membranous or cellular pterygium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENORRHAPHY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²r'ra²f-i². From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and ῥάπτειν, to sew. Colporrhaphy at the situation of the hymen. [L, 107.]

HYMENORRHINUS (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²r-rin(ren)'u³s(n²s). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and ῥίς, the nose. Of birds, having a membranous covering over the nares. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENOSPOROUS, adj. Hi-me²n¹-o²s'po²r-u³s. Lat., hymenosporus (from ὑμῆν, a membrane, and σπόρος, a seed). Of lichens, having a proligerous membrane. The Hymenosporae are: (1) of Reichenbach, a group of the Ascosporeae; of Fries, the Hymenothalami. [B, 121 (a, 24).]

HYMENOSTEATIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o²s-te(te²)'a²t-(a²t)'i²s. Gen., -at'idis (-idis). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and στέαρ, fat. Of Heusinger, a membranous web containing fat in its cells. His hymenosteatides (Ger., Hautspeckzellen) are the cells of the cutaneous adipose tissue. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENOTHALAMI (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-o(o³)-tha²l'(tha²l)'a²m(a²m)-i(e). From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and θάλαμος, a chamber. Of Fries, a division of lichens. [B.]

HYMENOTOME, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²-tom. From ὑμῆν, a membrane, and τέμνειν, to cut. Fr., hyménotome. An instrument for incising membranes. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYMENOTOMY, n. Hi-me²n¹-o²l'o²-mi². Lat., hymenotomia Fr., hyménotomie. Ger., Häuteverletzung. 1. Dissection of the membranes. 2. Section of the hymen. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYMENULUM (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)-me²n¹-u²l(u⁴)-u³m(u⁴m). Dim. of ὑμῆν, a membrane. A disc containing asci, but no excludium. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

HYOBASIOGLOSSUS (Lat.), n. m. Hi(hu⁶)'o(o³)-bas(ba²s)'i²-o(o³)-glo²s(glos)'su²s(su⁴s). Of Albinus, see BASIOGLOSSUS.

HYOCHOLIC ACID, n. $\text{Hi-o-kol}^{\prime}\text{i}^2\text{k}$. From v, upsilon, and $\chi\acute{o}\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, bile. Fr., acide hyocholique (ou hyocholique). Ger., Hyocholsäure. A crystalline acid, $\text{C}_{25}\text{H}_{40}\text{O}_4$, obtained from pig's bile, insoluble in water, readily soluble in alcohol. [B, 4, 93 (a, 38).]

HYODEPIGLOTTIC, adj. $\text{Hi-od-e}^2\text{p-i}^2\text{-glo}^2\text{t}^{\prime}\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Lat., hyodepiglotticus (from $\acute{\omega}\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$, hyoid, $\epsilon\acute{\pi}\iota$, upon, and $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\sigma\sigma\alpha$, the tongue). A more correct form of hyo-epiglottic (q. v.).

HYODES (Lat.), adj. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-od}^{\prime}\text{ez}(\text{as})$. Gr., $\acute{\omega}\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$ (from v, upsilon, and $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\varsigma$, resemblance). See HYOID.

HYODYSLYSIN, n. $\text{Hi-o-di}^3\text{s}(\text{li}^2\text{s})^2\text{n}$. From v, upsilon, and dyslysin (q. v.). Fr., hyodyslysine. Ger., H. A substance, $\text{C}_{25}\text{H}_{38}\text{O}_3$, obtained by long boiling of hyocholic acid with acids. [B, 4 (a, 38).]

HYOGLOSSAL, adj. $\text{Hi-o-glo}^2\text{s}^{\prime}\text{a}^2\text{l}$. From v, upsilon, and $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\sigma\sigma\alpha$, the tongue. Pertaining to or connected with the hyoid bone and the tongue. [L.]

HYO-GLOSSE (Fr.), n. E-o-glos. See HYOGLOSSUS.—Grand h.-g. See BASIOGLOSSUS.—Petit h.-g. See HYOGLOSSUS parvus.

HYOGLOSSIAN, adj. $\text{Hi-o-glo}^2\text{s}^{\prime}\text{i}^2\text{-a}^2\text{n}$. From v, upsilon, and $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\sigma\sigma\alpha$, the tongue. Fr., hyoglossien. Pertaining to, connected with, or lying adjacent to the hyoid bone and the tongue. [L, 41.]

HYO-GLOSSO-BASI-PHARYNGIEN (Fr.), n. E-o-glos-o-ba³-se-fa³-ra²n²-zhe-a³n². From v, upsilon, $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\sigma\sigma\alpha$, the tongue, $\beta\acute{\alpha}\sigma\iota\varsigma$, a base, and $\phi\acute{\alpha}\rho\upsilon\gamma\acute{\iota}$, the throat. See MIDDLE CONSTRUCTOR OF THE PHARYNX.

HYOGLOSSUS (Lat.), n. m. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-o}(\text{o}^3)\text{-glo}^2\text{s}(\text{glos})\text{-su}^3\text{s}(\text{su}^4\text{s})$. From v, upsilon, and $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\sigma\sigma\alpha$, the tongue. Fr., hyo(chondro)-glosse. Ger., Zungengrundmuskul, Zungenbeinzungenmuskul. A flat quadrangular muscle arising from the greater cornu, the anterior surface, and the lesser cornu of the hyoid bone, and inserted into the side of the tongue. Its action is to depress the tongue and elevate the hyoid bone. It was formerly regarded as consisting of three distinct muscles, the basioglossus, ceratoglossus, and chondroglossus. [L, 31, 332.]—Great h., H. brevis. See BASIOGLOSSUS.—H. longus. See STYLOGLOSSUS.—H. magnus. See BASIOGLOSSUS.—H. parvus, Small h. Fr., petit hyo-glosse. The analogue of the lingual superior muscle of man, found in the lower animals. [L.]

HYOGLYCOCHOLATE, n. $\text{Hi-o-gli}^2\text{k-o-kol}^{\prime}\text{at}$. Fr., h. A salt of hyoglycocholic acid. [L, 41.]

HYOGLYCOCHOLIC ACID, n. $\text{Hi-o-gli}^2\text{k-o-kol}^{\prime}\text{i}^2\text{k}$. From $\delta\varsigma$, the swine, $\gamma\lambda\acute{\omega}\kappa\acute{\iota}\varsigma$, sweet, and $\chi\acute{o}\lambda\acute{\iota}\varsigma$, bile. Fr., acide hyoglycocholique (ou hyocholalique, ou hyoglycocholatique, ou hyochololalique). Ger., Hyoglycholsäure, Hyoglycholsäure. An amorphous, resinous substance, $\text{C}_{27}\text{H}_{44}\text{NO}_6$, obtained from pig's bile; readily soluble in alcohol, less soluble in ether or water. [B, 4, 270 (a, 38).]

HYOID, HYOIDEAL, HYOIDEAN, adj's. $\text{Hi}^{\prime}\text{o}(\text{d})$, $\text{hi-oid}^{\prime}\text{-e}^2\text{-a}^2\text{n}$. Gr., $\upsilon\omicron\epsilon\acute{\iota}\delta\eta\varsigma$ (from v, upsilon, and $\epsilon\acute{\iota}\delta\omicron\varsigma$, resemblance). Lat., hyoides, hyoideus. Fr., hyoïde, hyoïdien. Shaped like the Greek letter υ ; pertaining or adjacent to the hyoid bone, or to the tissues adjoining it; as a n., the h. bone. [C, a, 17.]

HYOIDEUS (Lat.), adj. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-o}(\text{o}^3)\text{-i}^2\text{d}(\text{ed})^{\prime}\text{e}^2\text{-u}^3\text{s}(\text{u}^4\text{s})$. See HYOID; as a n., a muscle connected with the hyoid bone.—H. magnus. See STYLO-HYOIDEUS.—H. parvus. See KERATO-HYOIDEUS.

HYOIDIEN (Fr.), adj. E-o-e-de-a³n². See HYOID.

HYOLARYNGIEN (Fr.), adj. E-o-la³-ra²n²-zhe-a³n². From $\acute{\omega}\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$, hyoid, and $\lambda\acute{\alpha}\rho\upsilon\gamma\acute{\iota}$, the larynx. Pertaining to or connected with the hyoid bone and the larynx. [L, 41.]

HYOMANDIBULAR, adj. $\text{Hi-o-ma}^2\text{n-d}^2\text{i}^2\text{b}^2\text{-u}^2\text{-la}^2\text{r}$. Pertaining to or connected with the hyoid bone and the inferior maxilla. [L.] Cf. H. BONE.

HYOMENTAL, adj. $\text{Hi-o-me}^2\text{n}^{\prime}\text{t}^{\prime}\text{l}$. Pertaining to or connected with the hyoid bone and the chin or lower jaw. [L.]

HYOSCIAMUS (Lat.), n. m. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-o}^2\text{s-si}(\text{ki}^2)^{\prime}\text{a}^2\text{m}(\text{a}^3\text{m})\text{-u}^3\text{s}(\text{u}^4\text{s})$. See HYOSCYAMUS.—Emplastrum hyosciami [Swiss Ph.]. See EMPLASTRUM HYOSCYAMI.—Extractum hyosciami [Belg. Ph.]. (foliorum [Hung. Ph.]). See EXTRACTUM HYOSCYAMI ALCOHOLICUM.—Extractum hyosciami seminum [Hung. Ph.]. Fr., extrait de jusquiame (semences) [Fr. Cod.]. Syn.: extractum hyosciami seminum. A preparation made by expressing the seeds of H. with dilute alcohol, then freeing from the spirit and bringing to a pilular consistence [Fr. Cod.] or, by adding dextrin, to the consistence of a dry extract [Hung. Ph.]. In the French preparation the seeds are freed of fatty oil after (in the Hung. preparation, before) treatment with alcohol. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Extractum hyosciami siccum [Hung. Ph.]. HYOSCINE, n. $\text{Hi}^{\prime}\text{os-en}$. Lat., hyoscino, hyoscium. Fr., h. Ger., Hyoscin. A semi-fluid, amorphous alkaloid, $\text{C}_{17}\text{H}_{23}\text{NO}_3$, discovered by Ladenburg, isomeric with hyoscyamine and atropine, obtained from the Hyoscyamus niger. It is easily soluble in alcohol and in ether, slightly soluble in cold water. It is said to occur in duboisia, belladonna, stramonium, and the alcoholic extract of Scopolia atropoides. According to Schmidt, it is a different alkaloid that occurs in these drugs, and commercial h. is not of constant composition or properties. H. is a good soporific for the insane, and may be used instead of morphine when the latter is contra-indicated. It is also employed in nymphomania and allied affections, and controls excessive seminal emissions. Beneficial results have been obtained with it in the treatment of whooping-cough, asthma, and epilepsy, but its special value consists in its mydriatic effect. [B, 270 (a, 38); "Ann. di chim. e di farmacol.," July, 1890, pp. 36, 37, 38 (B); B, 5 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxx, xxxi, xxxvii (a, 14).]—H. bromhydrate. See H. hydrobromide.—H. hydriodate, H. hydriodide. Lat., hyoscium hydriodatum (seu hydrojodicum). A crystalline salt having at 100° C. the composition $\text{C}_{17}\text{H}_{23}\text{NO}_3\text{HI} + \frac{1}{2}\text{H}_2\text{O}$, and occurring as small, slightly yellow, hemiedral prisms. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—H. hydrobromate, H. hydrobromide. Lat., hyoscium hydrobromicum. A crystalline salt having, when dried at 100° C., the formula $\text{C}_{17}\text{H}_{23}\text{NO}_3\text{HBr} + \frac{1}{2}\text{H}_2\text{O}$, and occurring as large, colorless, transparent prisms, very soluble in water. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—H. hydrochloride. A crystalline compound formed by the action of hydrochloric acid on h. It is of the mydriatic type, and similar in physiological action to hyoscyamine. It dilates the pupil more rapidly, but less permanently, than atropine, and is free from the disagreeable dryness of the throat produced by the latter. Its sedative power over the insane is said to be great and its toxic properties slight. [L, 40.]

HYOSCINIC ACID, n. $\text{Hi-o}^2\text{s-i}^2\text{n}^{\prime}\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide hyoscincique. Ger., Hyoscinsäure. It., acido ioscinico. An acid, $\text{C}_9\text{H}_9\text{O}_3$, obtained along with hyoscyamine when hyoscyamine is treated with boiling baryta-water. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

HYOSCINUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Hi}(\text{hu}^6)\text{-o}^2\text{s-sin}(\text{ken})^{\prime}\text{u}^3\text{m}(\text{u}^4\text{m})$. See HYOSCINE.—H. hydriodatum. See HYOSCINE HYDRIODIDE.—H. hydrobromicum. See HYOSCINE HYDROBROMIDE.—H. hydrojodicum. See HYOSCINE HYDRIODIDE.

HYOSCIPICRIN, n. $\text{Hi-o}^2\text{s-i}^2\text{p-i}^2\text{k}^{\prime}\text{ri}^2\text{n}$. From $\upsilon\omicron\sigma\kappa\acute{\iota}\alpha\mu\omicron\varsigma$, hyoscyamus, and $\pi\iota\kappa\rho\acute{\iota}\varsigma$, bitter. Fr., hyoscipecrine. Ger., H. It., ioscipecrina. A bitter glucoside obtained by Höhn from H. It., [B, 10.]

HYOSCYAMINE, n. $\text{Hi-o}^2\text{s-si}^{\prime}\text{a}^2\text{m-en}$. Lat., hyoscyamina, hyoscyomia, hyoscyaminum. Fr., h., jusquiamine. Ger., Hyoscyamin, It., jusquiamina. Sp., hyoscyamina. 1. A crystalline alkaloid, $\text{C}_{17}\text{H}_{23}\text{NO}_3$, isomeric with hyoscyne and atropine, obtained from the seeds of Hyoscyamus niger and also from Atropa belladonna and Datura stramonium; identical with the duboisine found in Duboisia myoporoides. The crystals are odorless, silky needles of very sharp taste, easily soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform, slightly soluble in cold water, and melt at 108°5' C. It is a soporific, and is used where opium is contra-indicated. Its action on the nervous system resembles that of atropine, and Ringer thinks it is equal to hyoscyne in mania. As a mydriatic it is employed less frequently than any of the others. It is preferable to duboisine, since the tendency to systemic poisoning is not so great. Its effects are shorter in duration than those of atropine. 2. An American concentration from Hyoscyamus niger. [B, 270 (a, 38); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxi, xxxiii, xxxvii (f, 14); B, 5, 173 (a, 24); "Jahresb. d. reinen Chem.," 1882, p. 512; f.]—Amorphous h. Fr., amorphe. Hyoscine. [B.]—H. sulphate. Lat., hyoscyaminus sulphas [U. S. Ph.], hyoscyaminum sulfuricum. Fr., sulfate d'h. Ger., schwefelsaures Hyoscyamin. It., solfato di giusquiamina. A tasteless substance, $C_{24}H_{33}NO_5 \cdot SO_4 \cdot H_2O$, having a sharp, bitter taste, and occurring as small yellow or yellowish crystals or as a yellowish-white amorphous powder. It is soluble in water and in alcohol, and has a neutral reaction. [B, 195 (a, 38).]

HYOSCYAMINUM (Lat.), n. n. $Hi(hu^6) \cdot o^2s \cdot si(kn^6) \cdot a^2m(a^3m) \cdot in(en)u^2m(u^4m)$. See HYOSCYAMINE.—H. sulfuricum. See HYOSCYAMINE sulphate.

HYOSCYAMUS (Lat.), n. m. $Hi(hu^6) \cdot o^2s \cdot si(kn^6) \cdot a^2m(a^3m) \cdot u^2s(u^4s)$. Gr., ὑοσκάμος (from ὑς, a pig, and κάμος, a bean). Fr., jusquiame, chenille. Ger., Bilsenkraut. It., giusquiamo. Sp., beleño. 1. Hebeaue; a genus of the Solanaceæ, tribe Hyoscyameæ. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph., and Netherl. Ph., the leaves of H. niger. [B, 5, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24); B, 95 (a, 38).]—Abstractum hyoscyami [U. S. Ph.]. Syn.: hyoscyami abstractum. A preparation made by exhausting 200 parts of freshly dried h. in No. 60 powder with alcohol, evaporating, afterward treating with enough sugar of milk to make 100 parts of abstract, and reducing to a fine, uniform (green) powder. Ger., schwarzee (oder gemeines) Bilsenkraut, Teufelsauge, Ziegenkraut, Todtenblumenkraut, Hühnerstodtkraut, Schafkraut, Giftkraut. A coarse, erect herb found throughout Europe, Egypt, Asia Minor, Persia, Siberia, and Northern India. As a weed, it became naturalized in North America before 1672, and now grows wild in waste places throughout the United States, and especially around Detroit, Michigan. It exists under two varieties—the biennial, mostly used for medicinal purposes, and the annual (H. niger, var. β-agrestis), a smaller plant coming to maturity in a single season. The biennial variety is cultivated in England and India. The foliage and green tops of the last variety are most esteemed, and are official in the pharmacopœias of Europe and America (see H. leaves). Its active properties are dependent on two alkaloids—hyoscyamine and hyos-cine (q. v.). Both are used as sedatives, hypnotics, and mydriatics. [B, 5, 18, 137, 180 (a, 24).]—H. pallidus. A variety of H. niger. [B, 64 (a, 24).]—H. peruvianus. Tobacco-leaves. HYPELEON (Lat.), HYPELEUM (Lat.), n's n. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²l(e'a²e²)-o²n, -u²m(u²m). Gr., ἑλαων (from ὑπό, under, and έλαων, oil). Ger., Oelhefen, Oelzalt. The dregs of oil. [A, 325.]

HYPELYTRUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²l'i²(u⁶t)-ru²m(ru²m). See HYPOLYTRUM.

HYEMPHRACTIC, adj. Hip-e²m-fra²k'ti²k. Pertaining to hypemphraxis. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYEMPHRAXIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²m-fra²x(fra³x)'i²s. Gen., -ax'eos (-is). From ὑπό, in slight degree, and έμφραξις, a stoppage. An imperfect obstruction, especially constipation. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYENANTIOMA (Lat.), HYENANTIOSIS (Lat.), n's n. and n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²n-a²n(a²n)-ti²-o'ma², -si²s. Gen., -ant'atios (-atis), -os'eos (-is). Gr., ὑπεναντιωμα (from ὑπό, under, and έναντιος, opposite). See ALLOPATHY.

HYENCEPHALIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²n(e²n²)-se²f-(ke²f)'n(a²l)'i²s. Gen., -al'idios (-id'is). From ὑπό, under, and έγκεφαλος, the brain. See CEREBELLUM.

HYENDOSMOSE (Fr.), n. E-pa²n²-dos-moz. Defective endosmosis. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYENE (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-pe(pa)'ne(na). Gen., -en'es. Gr., ὑνήνη. Of Lindenus, the beard under the chin. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYENEMUS (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶)-pe(pa)-nem(ne²m)'i²-u²s-(u²s). Gr., ὑπνέμιος (from ὑπό, under, and άνεμος, wind). 1. In physiology, windy. 2. Of Aldrovandus, sterile (said of eggs). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYEPIDERMIDOCARPA (Lat.), n. n. pl. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²p-i²-d²-u²m(de²rm)'i²-d(o²)-ka³rp'a². From ὑπό, under, έρμα, the skin, είδος, resemblance, and καρπός, fruit. A class of cryptogams, comprising the Algae and the Tremellini. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

HYEPIGEOCARPUS (Lat.), adj. Hi²p(hu⁶p)-e²p-i²-je(ga)-o(o²)-ka³rp'u²s(u²s). From ὑπό, under, έρτι, upon, γῆ, the earth, and καρπός, a fruit. Bearing fruit under and above the earth. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERABDUCTION, n. Hi-pu⁶-a²b-du²k'shu²n. From ὑπέρ, over, and abducere, to lead. Ger., H. See SUPERABDUCTION.

HYPERACANTHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-a²k(a²k)-a²n(a²n)-tho'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). From ὑπέρ, over, and άκανθα, a thorn. Ger., Hyperakanthose. Hyperplasia of the prickle-cell layer of the epidermis. The hyperacanthoses (Ger., Hyperakanthosen, einfache Akanthome) in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases are a family of the Acanthoses, including Verruca, Condyloma acuminatum, and Idrotadenoma. [G, 4.]

HYPERACIDITY, n. Hip-u⁶-a²s-i²d'i²-i². From ὑπέρ, over, and acidus, acid. Fr., hyperacidité. Ger., Hyperacidität. Excessive acidity: said especially of the gastric juice. [A, 326 (a, 21); "Sem. méd.," Nov. 20, 1889 (a, 18).]

HYPERACOE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-a²k(a²k)'o(o²)-e(a). Gen., -ac'o'es. From ὑπέρ, over, and άκοή, the sense of hearing. See HYPERACUSIS.

HYPERACTION, n. Hi-pu⁶-a²k'shu²n. From ὑπέρ, above measure, and actio, action. Excessive activity of a part or organ, which may or may not be pathological. [D, 1.]

HYPERACUTE, adj. Hi-pu⁶-a²k-u²t'. From ὑπέρ, above measure, and acutus, sharp. Excessively acute.

HYPERÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶(e²r)-em'(a²e²m)-i²-a². From ὑπέρ, above measure, and άμα, blood. Fr., hyperhémie, hyperémie. Ger., Hyperämie. It., ipercemia. Sp., hiperemia, hiperhemia. A superabundance of blood in any part of the body. [D.]—Accumulation h. Ger., Stauungshyperämie. See Passive h. and Engorgement h.—Active h. Lat., h. activa. See Acute active h.—Active local h. Ger., active Hyperämie. An increased and accelerated flow of blood into the arteries of a part, because either the blood-pressure of that part is increased, or the resistance of the part in proportion to the force of the blood is diminished. [D, 3.]—Acute active h. A rapidly developed h. of a part due to irritation. It consists in a relaxation of the muscular fibres of the arterioles consequent upon paresis of the vaso-motors, stimulation of the vaso-dilators, or paralysis of the muscular fibres themselves. [a, 40.]—Acute passive h. An abnormal distention of the venous capillaries of a part rapidly appearing and due to obstruction of the return-flow of blood from the part. [a, 40.]—Arterial h. Lat., h. arterialis (see activa). Ger., arterielle Hyperämie. The active local h. arising from a relaxed condition of the coats of the arteries. [D, 3.]—Asthenic h. See Relaxative h.—Atonic h. Active local h.; so called with reference to the condition of the arteries resulting in h. [D.]—Cerebral h. Ger., Gehirnhyperämie. Of Hammond, the first stage in active cerebral congestion. [D.] See CERPHALÆMIA.—Chronic passive h. Ger., chronische passive Hyperämie. A distention of the capillaries of a part by venous blood coming on gradually and without inclination to disappear: due to external or internal interference with the venous circulation of the part. [a, 40.]—Collateral h. Compensatory h. Ger., collaterale (oder compensatorische) Hyperämie. That form of h. which is compensatory to an anæmia in a near or distant area, through a transfer of the blood-pressure. It may be either arterial or venous. [D, 3.]—Congestive h. See Passive local h.—Direct neuralgic h.

H, with elevation of temperature and swelling of the affected parts, which appears during a neuralgia or remains after its disappearance. [D, 3.]—Encephalic h. See Cerebral h.—Engorgement h. Ger., Stauungshyperämie. H. due to engorgement. In Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, the engorgement h's and anemias form the family of "engorgement dermatoses," including ischæmia of the skin, cyanosis, and effusions of blood (see HÆMORRHAGIA CUTIS), or of hæmoglobin (see HÆMOGLOBINORRHEA CUTIS) due to venous engorgement of the skin. [G, 4.]—Follicular h. 1. A h. of the glandular system. 2. A congestion of the follicles in the pharynx occurring in the early stages of clergyman's sore throat. [a, 40.]—Functional h. H. due to or occasioning functional activity.—Gravitative h. See Acute passive h.—General h. The h. which occurs over more or less of the whole surface of the body under circumstances such as excitement or the reaction after fright. [a, 40.]—H. abdominis. See CELLEMA.—H. activa. See Acute active h.—H. acuta of the middle ear. Fr., hyperémie aiguë de l'oreille. Ger., akute Hyperämie des Mittelohres. Of De Rossi, an acute catarrhal inflammation of the cavity of the middle ear. [F.]—H. arterialis. See Arterial h.—H. capitis (seu cerebri). See CEPHALÆMA.—H. collateralis. See Collateral h.—Hyperæmia cutanea. Cutaneous affections of which the most important feature is h. [G.]—H. hepatica. An abnormal distention of the liver with blood. It may be congestive h., as after a full meal or in the early stages of inflammation, or it may be passive, as in obstructive disorders of the circulatory system. [a, 40.]—H. of fluxion. Active h. [D.]—H. of paralysis. H. due to paralysis or section of the nerves of the part. [a, 40.]—H. of stasis. Passive h. [D.]—H. passiva. See Venous h.—H. venosa. See Venous h.—Hypostatic h. See Chronic passive h.—Hysterical h. H. as it occurs among hysterical subjects. It may lead to profuse and frequent menstruation. [D, 30.]—Inflammatory h. The increased vascularity which marks the first stage of an inflammatory process. [D.]—Ischæmic h. Ger., ischämische Hyperämie. Of O. Weber, those arrests of the blood in the veins which occur after closure of the arteries supplying them, especially in incomplete collateral circulation. [D, 3.]—Local h. The increase of the blood contained in more or less dilated, usually lengthened, vessels of any part of the body, so that the normal fluctuations, as to the quantity of blood contained, are exceeded. [D, 3.]—Mechanical h. See Passive local h.—Neuro-paralytic h. See H. of paralysis.—Paralytic h. See H. of paralysis.—Partial h. A h. of any single organ or part of an organ in the body. [a, 40.]—Passive local h. Ger., passive Hyperämie. That form of h. in which the principal cause is the increase of resistances, often by the interposition of a mechanical force. [D, 3.]—Reflex neuralgic h. H. of a reflex nature, which may arise from a transient or from a continuous cause, perhaps during the progress of a neuralgia. [D, 3.]—Relaxative h. Ger., relaxative Hyperämie. Active local h.; so called with reference to the condition of the arteries resulting in h. [D.]—Retinal h. Fr., hyperémie rétinienne (ou de la rétine). Ger., Hyperämie der Netzhaut. An engorgement or overflowing either of the larger retinal vessels or of the capillary vessels, the latter being most marked on the optic disc. [F.]—Venous h. Lat., h. venosa. The form of h. produced by pressure on the veins above. [D, 3.]

HYPERÆMOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-em(a²e²m)-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-os²is). Gr., ὑπεραιμωσις (from ὑπέρ, above measure, and αἷμα, blood). 1. A supraabundance of blood. 2. An excessive activity or pressure of the blood. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERÆSTHESIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-e²s(a³e²s)-the(thu)²z²(si²)²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and αἰσθησις, perception by the senses. Fr., hyperesthésie. Ger., Hyperästhesie, überspannte Empfindung. It., iperestesia. Sp., hiperestesia. Morbidly acute sensitiveness to external impressions.—Acoustic h.—Auditory h. See H. acustica.—Cerebral h. A h. of any part of the body due to disease of the brain. [a, 40.]—Cutaneous h. Lat., h. cutanea. Fr., hyperesthésie cutanée. H. of the skin.—Cutaneous thermo-h. Excessive sensibility of the skin to differences in temperature. [D, 35.]—Epileptic chromatic h. The state of nervous exaltation at the beginning of an attack of epilepsy, in which the subject sees with vividness more or fewer imaginary colors. According to H. Jackson, red is usually seen first, though the other primary colors may quickly follow. [D, 34.]—Epileptic ATRA.—General h. H. affecting the whole body.—Genital h. An hysterical h. of the genital organs, especially seen in women, in which there is no excess of sexual desire, but pain during the act. [Wood (a, 40).]—Gustatory h. Lat., h. gustatoria. See HYPERGUSTIA.—H. acustica. Fr., hyperesthésie acoustique. Ger., akustische Hyperästhesie. A disorder which consists in an unpleasant, painful sensation in the ear caused by tones or noises. [F, 32.]—H. cutanea. See Cutaneous h.—H. gustatoria. H. linguæ. See HYPERGUSTIA.—H. of the cardiac plexus. Lat., h. plexus cardiaci. Of Romberg, angina pectoris.—H. of the hypogastric plexus. Hypogastric neuralgia. [D, 70.]—H. of the mesenteric plexus. Mesenteric neuralgia. [D, 70.]—H. olfactoria. See HYPEROSMIA.—H. plexus cardiaci. See H. of the cardiac plexus.—H. psychica. Hypochondriasis. [D, 70.]—Lead h. An affection incidental to lead poisoning, characterized by pain, especially in the lower limbs and trunk, and in the joints. [D, 34.]—Local h. H. affecting only a portion of the body.—Muscular h. Excessive sensitiveness of the muscles to pressure; distinct from cutaneous h. It sometimes occurs in spinal paralysis. [D, 34.]—Neural h. See NEURALGIA.—Olfactory h. Lat., h. olfactoria. See HYPEROSMIA.—Optic h. Exaggerated sensitiveness of the eye. [a, 29.]—Organic h. H. due to organic diseases of the nerve-centres. [Wood (a, 40).]—Psychical h. [Romberg]. Lat., h. psychica. Hypochondriasis. [D, 70.]—Pulmonary h. A morbid sensitiveness to pain or neuralgia of the lung substance not connected with any organic disease of the organ. [Walshe (a, 40).]—Spinal h. 1. An excessive sensitiveness of the cutaneous surface over areas supplied by nerves the posterior roots of which are involved in an acute or chronic spinal meningitis. 2. A form of local h. found in "spinal irritation" or "spinal anæmia." It consists in an excessively sensitive spot over some portion of the spinal vertebra, usually the dorsal, and is most frequently found in conjunction with general hysteria. [a, 40.]—Thermo-h. Exalted sensitiveness to impressions of heat and cold. [D, 35.]—Urethral h. A condition of abnormal sensitiveness of the urethra. [G.]—Visceral h. An abnormal consciousness of the presence and action of an abdominal or thoracic organ, usually accompanied with pain. [Seguin (a, 40).]

HYPERÆSTHESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-e²s(a³e²s)-the(thu)²z²(si²)². Gen., -es²eos (-is). See HYPERÆSTHESIA; in the pl. hyperæstheses, diseases characterized by hyperæsthesia.

HYPERÆSTHETIC, adj. Hip-u⁵r-e²s-the²t²i²k. Lat., hyperæstheticus. Fr., hyperæsthétique. Ger., hyperästhetisch. It., iperestetico. Sp., hiperestético. Pertaining to or affected with hyperæsthesia.

HYPERÆSTHETOSPASMUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-e²s(a³e²s)-the²t-o(o²)-spa²z²(spa²s)/mu³s(mu³s). From ὑπέρ, to excess, αἰσθησις, sensation, and σπασμός, spasm. Ger., Gefühlüberreizungskampf. A spasm resulting from hyperæsthesia. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERAKANTHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-a²k-(a²k)-a²n(a²n)-tho²si²s. Ger., Hyperakantose. See HYPERAKANTHOSIS.

HYPERALBUMINOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-a²l-(a²l)-bu²(bu)²mi²n-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and albumen (see ALBUMIN). Fr., hyperalbuminose. Ger., Hyperalbuminose. The presence of an excess of albumin in the blood. [D, 3.]—Absolute h. A condition, not exactly demonstrable, in which there is an increase of the entire quantity of albumin in the blood. [D, 3.]—Relative h. A transient h. brought about by losses of water and salts from the blood that are greatly out of proportion to the losses of albumin during the same time, as in cholera and after taking drastic purgatives. [D, 3.]

HYPERALGÆSIA (Lat.), HYPERALGIA (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁵r(e²r)-a²l(a²l)-je(ga)²z²(si²)²-a², -a²l(a²l)/ji²(gi)²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ἄλγος, a feeling of pain, or ἄλγος, pain. Fr., hyperalgésie, hyperalgie. Ger., Hyperalgie, Hyperalgie. Excessive sensitiveness to painful impressions. Assoc.", xix (a, 14).]—H. sessilifolium. The Vismia sessilifolia. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—H. tetrapterum. A species found in Europe having milder properties than those of H. perforatum. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. virginicum. A species growing in ditches and swamps in the United States and Canada. The whole plant is of a purplish hue. A tincture made from the flowers is used as an expectorant and stomachic. [B, 34, 180 (a, 24).]—H. vulgare. See H. perforatum.—Oil of h., Semen et summitates hyperici. The seed and flowering tops of H. perforatum. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

HYPERIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-i²d-ro³si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ἰδρῶς, sweat. Fr., épidrose spontanée, sudation morbifique. Ger., Hyperidrose, Schweissfluss. It., iperidrosi. Sp., hyperidrosis. Syn.: sudatio morbosa, epidrosis profusa (seu spontanea, seu idiopathica). 1. Excessive sweating. 2. A cutaneous disease characterized by excessive sweating under conditions in which it is normally absent or very slight. 3. In the pl., Hyperidroses (Ger., Hyperidrosen), a family of the Idroses in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, consisting of the disease H. idiopathica. [G, 4].—Blepharo-h. See the major list.—Colligative h. Lat., h. colligativa. Exhausting h. associated with fatty degeneration of the epithelia of the sweat glands. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. idiopathica. Idiopathic h. See H. (2d def.).—H. localis. Syn.: epidrosis partialis. H. affecting a limited portion of the skin. [G, 4].—H. oleosa capitis. Probably seborrhœa oleosa. ["Mutsch. f. prakt. Dermat.", 1888, p. 148 (G)].—H. unilateralis. Ger., halbseitiges Schwitzen. H. affecting the skin of one lateral half of the body. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Idiopathic h. See H. (2d def.).—Local h. See H. localis.—Unilateral h. See H. unilateralis.—Universal h. Lat., h. universalis. Ger., Schweissucht. H. affecting the entire skin. [G, 4].

HYPERINESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-i²n-e(a)³si²s. Gen., -es²eos (-es²is). Gr., ὑπερίσινος (from ὑπερίναν, to purge violently). Of Hippocrates, hypercatharsis. [A, 311 (a, 17).]

HYPERINOS (Lat.), adj. Hi(hu⁶s)-pe²r-i²n-o²s. Gr., ὑπερίνος (from ὑπερίναν, to purge violently). Violently purged. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPERINOSÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-i²n-o²s-em³(a³e²m)-i²a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, is, a muscle or fibre, and αἷμα, blood. See HYPERINOSIS (2d def.).

HYPERINOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-i²n-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-os²is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and is, a muscle or fibre. Fr., hyperinose. Ger., H., Hyperinose. 1. Excessive muscular development or activity. [A, 322.] 2. An abnormal abundance of fibrin in the blood. [D, 3.]

HYPERINOTIC, adj. Hip-e²r-i²n-o²t-i²k. Lat., hyperinoticus. Fr., hyperinotique. Ger., hyperinotisch. Of or pertaining to hyperinosis. [K.]

HYPERINUS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-i²n-u²s(u⁴s). See HYPERINOSIS.

HYPERINVOLUTION, n. Hip-u⁶r-i²n-vo-lu²shu²n. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and involvere, to roll in. An improper term for atrophy of the uterus (which is not excessive involution) after delivery.

HYPERIODATE, n. Hip-u⁶r-i²od-at. See PERIODATE.

HYPERKÉRATINISATION (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-ka-ra³-te-ne-sa³-se-o²n². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and κέρας, a horn. An excessive keratinization, producing thickening and hardening of the epithelial structures (e. g., the nails, hair, etc.). [a, 18.]

HYPERKERATOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-ke²r-a²t-(a²)-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and κέρας, a horn. Fr., hyperkératose. Ger., Hyperkeratose (2d def.). 1. Of Himly and others, see KERATOCONUS and KERATOGLOBUS. 2. Hypertrophy of the corneous layer of the epidermis. The Hyperkeratoses (Ger., Hyperkeratosen) in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases are a family of the Keratoses. [G, 4; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 23, 1887, p. 112.]

HYPERLEUCOMATIE (Fr.), n. f. E-pe²r-lu²-ko-ma²-te. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and λευκός, white. Of A. Guiber, an excess of albumin in the blood-serum. [B, 46.]-H. sanguine. See H.

HYPERLOGIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-loj(lo²g)-i²a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and λόγος, speech. Morbid loquacity. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

HYPERLYMPHATIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-li²m-fa²t-i²k. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and lymphaticus, distracted. Fr., hyperlymphatique. Excessively lymphatic. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYPERLYMPHATISME (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-la²n²-fa²-tez-m'. An extremely lymphatic temperament. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYPERLYMPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-li²m(lu⁶m)-fi²-a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and lymphica, lymph. Fr., hyperlymphie. An increase in the normal amount of lymph. [K.]

HYPERMANGANAS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-ma²n²(ma²n²)-ga²n(ga²n)-a²s(a²s). Gen., -at'is. A permanganate. [B.]—H. calcicus (Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph. (1885), Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.), H. potassicus. Potassium permanganate. [B, 95.]

HYPERMANGANATE, n. Hip-u⁶r-ma²n²-ga²n-at. See PERMANGANATE.

HYPERMASTIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-ma²st(ma²st)-i²a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and μαστός, the breast. Fr., hypermastie. General hypertrophy of the mammary gland. [A, 385.]

HYPERMEGALIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-meg(meg)-a³(a³)-i²a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and μέγας, large. Fr., hyper-mégalie. 1. Excessive development or increase in the size of a part. 2. Of Orsini, pseudo-hypertrophic muscular paralysis. [D; L, 44 (a, 14).]

HYPERMEGETHUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-me²g²(e²th-u²s)(u⁴s). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and μέγεθος, greatness. Excessive development of a part. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERMEGASTHENIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-me²g²-a²s-the²n-i²k. From ὑπέρ, exceeding, μέγας, large, and σθένος, strength. Of Zoja, unusually strong. [J.]

HYPERMNESIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-ne(mna)/zi²(si²)-a³. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and μνήσις, of memory. Fr., hypermnésie. Ger., Hypermnésie. Abnormal development of the power of memory. [L, 49 (a, 14); a, 40.]

HYPERMETAMORPHOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-me²t-a³-mo²rf-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and μεταμόρφωσις, a transformation. Fr., hypermétamorphose. It., ipermetamorfosi. A metamorphosis (as of an insect) involving a very striking transformation. [L, 44, 49 (a, 14); "Am. Nat.", v, p. 49 (a, 32).]

HYPERMETROPATHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-me²t-ro²p²a²th-i². Lat., hypermetropathia (from ὑπέρ, to excess, μήτρα, the womb, and πάθος, disease). Fr., hypermétropathie [PIORRY]. See METRYPERPATHIA.

HYPERMETROPIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-me²t-ro²p(ro²p)-i²a³. From ὑπέρ, over, μέτρον, a measure, and ὄψ, vision. Fr., hypermétropie. Ger., Hypermetropie. Far-sightedness; an ocular affection in which the parallel rays from a distant luminous point are focused (i. e., an image is formed) behind the retina. [K.]—Ab-solute h. Fr., hypermétropie absolue. Ger., absolute Hypermetropie. A variety of h. in which the eye, with its greatest power of accommodation, can not adjust itself for parallel light, but only for rays which converge toward a point behind and more or less distant from it. The whole range of its accommodation lies beyond infinity. [F.]—Axial h. Ger., Axenhypermetropie. A form of h. due to a shortening of the antero-posterior axis of the eye. Here the second principal focal distance and the radius of the refracting surface are normal, but the distance of the fovea centralis from the second principal point of the eye is too short. This distinguishes it from curvature h. [F.]—Curvature h. Fr., hypermétropie de courbure. H. due to flattening of the cornea or of the crystalline lens. [F, 24 (a, 29).]—Facultative h. Fr., hypermétropie facultative. Ger., facultative Hypermetropie. That form of h. in which the binocular near-point lies at a definite distance. Distinct distant vision with parallel visual axes, and near vision with a proper convergence, are both possible. [F.]—Latent h. Fr., hypermétropie latente. Ger., latente (oder larvinte) Hypermetropie. A variety or degree of h. which is masked or concealed under ordinary circumstances. It amounts to the interval between the manifest and the absolute far-point of distinct vision. [F.]—Manifest h. Fr., hypermétropie manifeste. Ger., offenbare (oder mani- feste) Hypermetropie. The degree of h. which is expressed by the strongest convex lens with which distinct vision is possible, without paralyzing the accommodation. [F.]—Relative h. Fr., hypermetropie relative. Ger., relative Hypermetropie. A condition in which the eye can adjust itself for parallel and even diverging light, but only when the visual axes converge upon a distance which is less than that upon which the accommodation is adjusted. [F.]

HYPERMETROPIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-me²t-ro²/i²k. Lat., hypermetropicus. Fr., hypermétrope. Ger., hypermetropisch. Pertaining to or affected with hypermetropia. [K.]

HYPERMÉTROPIE (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-ma-tro-pe. See HYPERMETROPIA.—H. de courbure. See Curvature HYPERMETROPIA.

HYPERMETROPIE (Ger.), n. Hu⁶-pe²r-ma-tro-pe. See HYPERMETROPIA.—Latvürte II. See Latent HYPERMETROPIA.—Oftēbare II. See Manifest HYPERMETROPIA.

HYPERMETROTROPHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-me²t-ro²/ro-fi². Lat., hypermetrotrophia (from ὑπέρ, to excess, μῆτρα, the uterus, and τροφή, nourishment). Fr., hypermétrotrophie [Piorry]. See METROTROPHIA.

HYPERMYELOHÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-mi-(mu⁶e)-e²l(o²)-hem'(ha³e²m)-i²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, μυελός, marrow, and αἷμα, blood. See MYELPERHÆMIA.

HYPERMYOPIE (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-me-o-pe. From ὑπέρ, over, and μυωπία, a mouse-hole. Excessive myopia. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYPERMYOSISME [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-me-o-zes-me. From ὑπέρ, to excess, μῦς, a muscle, and σεισμός, a shaking. See HYPERCINESIS (1st def.).

HYPERMYOTROPHIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-me-o-tro-pe. From ὑπέρ, to excess, μῦς, a muscle, and τροφή, nourishment. Muscular hypertrophy. [L, 82.]

HYPERNEPHROTROPHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-ne²f-ro²/ro-fi². Lat., hypernephrotrophia (from ὑπέρ, to excess, νεφρός, the kidney, and τροφή, nourishment). See NEPHROTROPHIA.

HYPERNERVIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-nu⁶(ne²r)-vi²(wi²)-a². Fr., hypernervie [Piorry]. See HYPERNEURIA.

HYPERNEKIVIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-ne²-ve. See HYPERNEURIA.—H. anglobilimie. Hyperneuria of the digestive tract. [A, 250 (a, 21).]—H. priapique. Hyperneuria of the penis. [L, 82.]

HYPERNERVISMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-ne²-vez-me. See HYPERNEURIA.

HYPERNEURIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-nu⁶ri²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and νεῦρον, a nerve. Fr., hypernervie, hypernervieme. Ger., übermässige Nerventhätigkeit. Excessive nervous action. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERNEUROMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-nu⁶-ro²-ma³. Gen., -on'atos (-atis). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and νεῦρον, a nerve. Ger., Nervenschwamm, Nervennissgewächs. An exuberant or fungous growth of nervous tissue. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERNEUROSIOS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-nu⁶-ro²-si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). Hypertrophy of nervous tissue. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERNÉVRESTHÉSIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-na-vre²-sta-ze. From ὑπέρ, to excess, νεῦρον, a nerve, and αἰσθησις, perception. See HYPERÆSTHESIA.

HYPERNIDATION, n. Hip-u⁶r-nid-a'shu²n. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and nidus, a nest. More properly, superindation; of J. H. Aveling, excessive proliferation of the menstrual decidua, with its discharge in gross masses, sometimes causing membranous dysmenorrhœa. [“Obst. Jour. of Gr. Brit. and Ire.,” July, 1874, p. 209.]

HYPERNEA (L.), HYPERNOIA (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-ne²(no²e²)-a², -no²i²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and νοεῖν, to perceive. Of Leupoldt, an excessive and abnormal mental activity. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²-a². Gr., ὑπερόφα, ὑπερόφη. The hard palate. [A, 311, 325.]

HYPEROARITROPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²-a²(a²r)-i²-trof(tro²f)-i²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, ὠάριον, an ovule, and τροφή, nutrition. Fr., hyperoaritrophie [Piorry]. Enlargement of the ovary. [a, 40.]

HYPEROCHA (Lat.), HYPEROCHE (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-o²k(o²ch²)-a², -o²-a². Gr., ὑπεροχή (from ὑπερέχειν, to be above). Ger., Hervorragung. A projection or prominence, especially that of the cervix uteri. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²-e(a). Gen., -o'es. See HYPEROEA.

HYPEROITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²(e)-i²s. Gen., -it'idion (-itidis). From ὑπερώα, the palate (see also -itis). Fr., inflammation du palais. (Ger., Gaumenzündung, Gaumenbräune. Inflammation of the palate. [E.]

HYPERONCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²n²-ko²/si²s. Gen., -os'eos, -os'is. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὄγκος, a tumor. Excessive swelling.—H. Iridis. See Iridoncosis.

HYPERONYCHIA (Lat.), HYPERONYCHOSIS (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-e²r-o²n²-i²k(u⁶ch²)-i²-a², -o²n²-i²(u⁶)-ko²(ch²o²)/si²s. Gen., -ych'iv, -os'eos, -os'is. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὄνυξ, the nail. Hypertrophy of the nails, usually associated with more or less deformity. The Hyperonychoses (Ger., Hyperonychosen), in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, are a family of the Onychoses. [G, 4.]

HYPEROCHASMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²(o²)-ka²z(ch²a²s)/ma³. Gen., -asm'atos (-atis). From ὑπερώα, the palate, and χάσμα, a yawning. Ger., Wolfsrachen. Fissure of the palate. [E.]

HYPEROPHARYNGEAN, adj. Hip-e²r-o-fa²-r-i²n'je-a²n. Lat., hyperopharyngeus (from ὑπερώα, the palate, and φάρυγξ, the pharynx). Pertaining to the palate and the pharynx. [a, 14.]

HYPEROPIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-op(o²p)/i²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὄψ, vision. Fr., hyperopie. 1. Great acuteness of vision. 2. See HYPERMETROPIA.

HYPEROPSIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²ps/i²-a². 1. Exposure of the eyes to too great light. 2. See OXYOPIA. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYPEROPTIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-o²p/ti²k. From ὑπέρ, over, and ὀπτικός, for sight. See HYPERMETROPIC.

HYPERORÉXIQUE (Fr.), adj. E-pe²r-o-rax-ek. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὄρεξις, the appetite. Increasing the appetite. [A, 385.]

HYPERORGANEMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²rg-a²n(a²n)-e(a)/ma³. Gen., -em'atos (-atis). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὀργανοῦσθαι, to be organized. Malformation by redundancy. [A, 322.]

HYPERORTHOSES (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²r-tho²/si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ὑπέρ, exceeding, and ὀρθωσις, a making straight. 1. Extreme tension or erection. 2. Tetanus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROS (Lat.), n. m. Hip²(hu⁶p)/e²r-o²s. Gr., ὑπερος. 1. A pestle. 2. A lever for making traction in cases of dislocation. [Hippocrates (A, 311).]

HYPEROSMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²z(o²s)/mi²-a². From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὀσμή, the sense of smell. Ger., Hyperosmie. Increased sensitiveness of the sense of smell; an occasional symptom of hysteria and of pregnancy. [A, 319, 326 (a, 21); Horwitz, “Ztschr. f. Geburtsh. u. Gynäk.,” ix, 1 (D).]

HYPEROSPHEZIA (Lat.), HYPEROSPHERESIS (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²s-fre(fra)/zi²(si²)-a², -si²s. Gen., -es'iv, -es'is (-es'is). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and σφραγισ, the sense of smell. See HYPEROSMIA.

HYPEROSTEON (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²st-e²o²n. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὀστέον, a bone. See Exostosis (1st def.).

HYPEROSTEOPATHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-o²st-e²o²p/a²th-i². Lat., hyperosteopathia (from ὑπέρ, to excess, ὀστέον, a bone, and πάθος, a disease). Fr., hyperostéopathie [Piorry]. A highly diseased condition of the bone. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROSTOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²st-o²-ma³. Gen., -on'atos (-atis). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὀστέον, a bone. 1. An exostosis. 2. The product of a hyperostosis (1st def.). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROSTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²st-o²/si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). Fr., hyperostose. Ger., Knochenwucherung (1st def.), Knochenvergrößerung (1st def.), Ueberbeu (2d def.). 1. An abnormal growth, hyperplasia, or general swelling of a bone. 2. An exostosis (1st def.), especially on the sheath of a tendon. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPEROVARITROPHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-o²-va³-r-i²t-ro²-fi². Lat., hyperovaritrophia (from ὑπέρ, to excess, ὠάριον, an ovule, and τροφή, nourishment). Fr., hyperovaritrophie [Piorry]. Hypertrophy of the ovary. [a, 14.]

HYPEROXIDE, n. Hip-u⁶r-o²x/i²d(d). Lat., hyperoxydum. See PEROXIDE.

HYPEROXIGENATED, adj. Hip-u⁶r-o²x/i²-je²n-at-e²d. Fr., hyperoxygéné. Ger., übersauerstoff. Combined with or containing an excess of oxygen. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERONYX (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-o²x/i²s(u⁶s). Gr., ὑπερόνυξ (from ὑπέρ, to excess, and ὄνυξ, sharp). Ger., sehr hitzig. Of Hippocrates, very acute. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPATHES (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pa²th(pa²th)-e²z(as). Gr., ὑπερπαθής (from ὑπέρ, to excess, and πάθος, a disease). Ger., überempfindlich. Excessively sensitive. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPATHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pa²th(pa²th)-i²(o²)-a². Gr., ὑπερπαθικη (1st def.), Empfindelci (2d def.). 1. Extreme sensibility. 2. Extreme illness. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPERISTROPHIK (Ger.), n. Hu⁶-pe²-ra-pe-stro-fe²k'. From ὑπέρ, to excess, περί, around, and στροφή, a turning. An exaggerated, abnormal movement of rotation (as of the foetus during labor). [A, 91.]

HYPERPERITONITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pe²r-i²t²-o²n-i²(e)-i²s. Gen., -it'idion (-itidis). From ὑπέρ, to excess, and περιτόναιον, the peritonæum (see also *-itis). Violent peritonitis. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPERITROPE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pe²r-i²t²-ro²(ro²)-pe(pa). Gen., -it'ropes. From ὑπέρ, to excess, and περιτροπή, a revolution. Of Grossi, excessive changeableness of the organic actions. [A, 322.]

HYPERPHAES (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-fa²-ez(as). Gr., ὑπερφαής (from ὑπέρ, to excess, and φάος, light). 1. Abnormally clear or light. 2. Of some modern authors, produced by excessive light. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPHYSICS, n. sing. Hip-u⁶r-fl²z'i²ks. Lat., hyperphysica (from ὑπερ, beyond, and φύσις, nature). Ger., Hyperphysik. The attempted science of prenatal phenomena. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPICROUS, adj. Hip-u⁶r-pi²k'ru³s. Gr., ὑπερπικρός (from ὑπερ, over, and πικρός, pungent). Lat., hyperpicrus. Extremely bitter. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPIGMENTATION, n. Hip-u⁶r-pi²g-me²n-ta'shu³n. From ὑπερ, exceeding, and pigmentum, pigment. Excessive pigmentation. [G.]

HYPERPIMELE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pi²m'e²l-e(a). Gen., -pin'etes. From ὑπερ, to excess, and πιμελής, fat. Fr., hyperpimélie. Obesity. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPIRA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pi(pe)ra². See BULMIA.

HYPERPLASIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pla(pla³)/zi²-(si²)-a³. From ὑπερ, to excess, and πλάσις, formation. Fr., hyperplasie. Ger., Hyperplasie. It., iperplasia. A form of progressive metamorphosis in which a part becomes enlarged or condensed by a numerical increase of its elements. [D.] Cf. Numerical HYPER-TROPHY.—Areolar h. of the uterus. Of T. G. Thomas, excessive growth of the connective tissue of the uterus with congestion and resulting hyperaesthesia. [a, 40.]—Fibrous (indurative) h. of the lymphatic glands. A hyperplastic process or condition the result of chronic or repeated inflammation. The glands become hardened and enlarged. By Ziegler two varieties—the interstitial, or trabecular, and the diffuse, or reticular—are distinguished. [D, 48.]—Glandular h. Of Virchow, increase of the cellular elements without increase of the connective tissue of a gland.—H. cystica vaginæ. See COLPOHYPERPLASIA cystica.—H. of the brain [Virchow]. Hypertrophy of the brain. [D, 70.]—Inflammatory h. An excessive growth or increase in one or more component elements of a part due to inflammation. It is usually the connective tissue that is increased. [a, 40.]—Large-celled (indurative) h. of the lymphatic glands. A chronic hyperplastic process or condition in which there is a transformation of the gland-tissue into a large-celled tissue showing none of the characters of the original structure. It consists partly of closely packed, rounded, or polygonal cells, and partly of spindle cells, and may contain patches of fibrous tissue. The lymphadenoid tissue, if any remains, is seen in the form of reticulated bands which pervade the large-celled tissues. [D, 48.]—Leucæmic h. Splenic or lymphatic h. associated with leucæmia. [D, 48.]—Lymphatic h. If of more or fewer of the elements of the lymphatic system. It is associated either with leucæmia or with pseudoleucæmia. [D, 48.]—Nodular h. (of the liver). A h. of the liver in which there are hard nodules over the surface and throughout the substance of the organ due to atheroma of the arteries. [a, 40.]—Pseudo-leucæmic h. See Leucæmic h.

HYPERPLASIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-plaz'i²jk. See HYPERPLASTIC.

HYPERPLASIE (Fr., Ger.), n. E-pe²r-pla³-ze. hu⁶-pe²r-pla³-ze'. See HYPERPLASIA.—H. conjunctive (Fr.). An exaggerated development of round cells in the interstitial or connective tissue of an organ, followed by a fibrous transformation of the tissue. [N. Rev. des sci méd., Apr. 15, 1889, p. 404 (a, 18).]

HYPERPLASMA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-pla²z(pla³s)-ma³. Gen., -plas'matos (-atis). From ὑπερ, to excess, and πλάσμα, anything molded. See HYPERANOSIS.

HYPERPLASTÉMIE [Piorry] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-pla³s-ta-me. From ὑπερ, to excess, πλαστός, molded, and αίμα, blood. See HYPERANOSIS.

HYPERPLASTIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-pla²st'i²jk. Fr., hyperplastique. Ger., hyperplastisch. Pertaining to or of the nature of hyperplasia. [D.]

HYPERPLASTY, n. Hip'u⁶r-pla²st-i². Fr., hyperplastie. See HYPERPLASIA.

HYPERPLEROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-ple(pla)-ro²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). From ὑπερ, to excess, and πληρωσις, a filling up. Fr., hyperplérose. Ger., Ueberfüllung. Extreme repletion. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPLEROTIC, adj. Hip-u⁶r-ple²r-o²t'i²jk. Lat., hyperpleroticus. Pertaining to, caused by, or affected with, hyperplerosis. [A, 322.]

HYPERPLEXY, n. Hi'pu⁶r-ple²x-i². Lat., hyperplexia (from ὑπερ, to excess, and πλήξις, a stroke. Fr., hyperplexie [Guislain]. Ecstasy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPNÉE (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-na. See HYPERPNŒA.

HYPERPNEUMOPATHY, n. Hip-u⁶r-nu²-mo²p'a²th-i². Lat., hyperpneumopathia (from ὑπερ, to excess, πνεύμων, the lung, and πάθος, disease. Fr., hyperpneumopathie [Piorry]. Any extremely severe pulmonary disease. [A, 322.]

HYPERPNEUSIS (Lat.), HYPERPNEUSTIA (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-nu²(nu²)/si²s, -sti²-a³. Gen., -pneus'eos (-is), -pneust'iae. From ὑπερ, to excess, and πνεύσις, a blowing. Excessive flatulence. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—H. gastrica. Ger., Blähsucht. Gastric flatulence. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPNŒA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-ne'(pno²e²)-a³. From ὑπερ, to excess, and πνοή, a blowing. Fr., hyperpnée. A condition, between eupnoea and dyspnœa, in which the blood is moderately deficient in oxygen, and respiration is correspondingly accelerated. [J, 18.]

HYPERPOROSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-u⁶r(e²r)-por-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). Gr., ὑπερπωρωσις. Of Paulus Ægineta, an excessive formation of callus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERPRACTICAL, adj. Hip-u⁶r-pra²kt'i²-k'l. Lat., hyperpracticus (from ὑπερ, to excess, and πρακτικός, fit for action). Ger., überthätig. Extraordinarily active. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERTONIC, adj. Hip-u^r-to²n²-i²k. Pertaining to hypertonia.

HYPERTONICITY, n. Hip-u^r-ton²-i²s²-i²-i². See HYPERTONIA.

HYPERTONUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu^p)-pe²r(-to²n)-u^s(u^se). From υπέρ, to excess, and τόνος, a straining. Fr., hypertonie. Ger., Hypertonie. That condition of the eye in which the intra-ocular tension is increased, sometimes without any organic disease being present. It is usually accompanied by dilatation of the pupil. [E.]

HYPERTRICHIASIS, HYPERTRICHOSIS (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu^p)-e^r-tri(tri²)-kⁱ²(ch²²)-a(n²)-si²s, -ho(ch²o)²-si²s. Gen., -as²-eos (-is), -os²-eos (-is). From υπέρ, to excess, and τρίχ, a hair. Fr., hypertrichie des poils. Ger., Hypertrichosis, Hypertrophie der Haare. It., ipertrichiosi. An excessive growth of hair; hirsuties. The Hypertrichoses (Ger., Hypertrophosen), in Auspitz's classification of skin diseases, are a family of the Trichoses. [G, 4, L, 150.]

—H. acquisita. H. developed after birth as a result of a nervous (or other) disorder of the skin. [G.] Cf. H. neurotica and H. irritativa.—H. circumscripta. See H. localis.—H. congenita. H. that is congenital or due to inherited tendency. [G.]—H. heterotopica localis. H. affecting a portion of the skin usually free of hair. It may be of idiopathic or neurotic origin, or it may be an h. irritativa. It is sometimes associated with an abnormal arrangement of the teeth. [Behrend (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—H. indoles hereditaria [Michelson]. See H. congenita.—H. irritativa. H. caused by cutaneous irritation. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. localis. H., especially the congenital form, affecting only a limited area of the skin. The hair of the head or the beard may show increased growth (simple h.). It may occur elsewhere in circumscribed patches, in connection with hypertrophy and pigmentation of the skin (nævus pilosus). [G.]—H. neurotica. H. resulting from neurotic causes. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—H. partialis. See H. localis.—H. universalis. H. affecting the entire surface of the body, making the person so affected resemble a hairy animal. [G.]—Hypertrophic h. See under H. localis.—Simple h. See under H. localis.

HYPERTROPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu^p)-u^r(e^r)-tro(tro²)-fi²-a³. See HYPERTROPHY.

HYPERTROPHIE (Fr.), n. E-pe^r-tro-fe. See HYPERTROPHY.—H. angihromique [Piorry]. Hypertrophy of the walls of the digestive tract. [L, 82.]—H. élephantiasique. Hypertrophy of the nature of or resembling elephantiasis arabica. [G.]

HYPERTROPHIE (Ger.), n. Hu^p-pe²-tro-fe². See HYPERTROPHY.—Adjunktive H. See HYPERTROPHY.—Exzentrische H. See Eccentric HYPERTROPHY.—Konzentrische H. See Concentric HYPERTROPHY of the heart.—Numerische H. See HYPERTROPHY.

HYPERTROPHIED, HYPERTROPHOUS, adj's. Hip-u^r-tro²-fi²-a³, -u^s. In a state of hypertrophy.

HYPERTROPHY, n. Hip-u^r-tro²f²-i². Lat., hypertrophia (from υπέρ, to excess, and τροφή, nutrition). Fr., hypertrophie. Ger., Hypertrophie, Uebernahrung. Enlargement of a part brought about by an excess of nutrition. To be distinguished from hyperplasia (q. v.). [D, 3.]—Acquired h. H. induced by over-exercise or action of a part or organ. [a, 40.]—Adjunctive h. See HYPERTROPHY.—Cardiac h. See H. of the heart.—Centripetal h. See Concentric h. of the heart.—Compensatory h. H. of an organ or part whereby it is enabled to do more work than before, so as to compensate for a defect (e. g., h. of the left ventricle of the heart in consequence of aortic insufficiency, also of one organ of a pair when the other has been lost or rendered functionally inactive). [Samuel (A, 319 [a, 21]); D, 70.]—Concentric h. of the heart [Bouillaud]. Ger., Konzentrische Hypertrophie. H. of the heart causing contraction of its cavities. [D, 1.]—Condensing h. of bone. A form of inflammatory h. of bone which consists in the centric deposition of callus in the cancellous tissue and even filling up the medullary canal without increasing the circumference of the bone. [a, 40.]—Congenital h. Excessive growth of one or more parts of the body beginning in intra-uterine life. [a, 40.]—Congestive h. The enlargement of a part due to a persistent hyperæmia.—Diathetic h. H. of certain parts of the body induced by constitutional diathesis, such as the rheumatic, scrofulous, and phthisical diathesis. [a, 40.]—Diffuse h. of bone. See OSTERTIS interna osteoplastica.—Diffused h. of the connective tissue of the brain [Griesinger]. Diffused cerebral sclerosis. [D.]—Eccentric h. Ger., exzentrische Hypertrophie. H. of the walls of a hollow organ accompanied by dilatation. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Epidemic h. An abnormal growth of the superficial layers of the skin, the foundation of several cutaneous diseases, such as cornu cutaneous. [a, 40.]—False h. 1. Hyperplasia. 2. Enlargement with degeneration.—Fatty muscular h. Of Bergeron and Lutz, spinal paralysis. [D, 40.]—Follicular h. Follicular postnasal catarrh. [a, 40.]—Functional h. The enlargement of an organ brought about by increased physiological activity. [a, 40.]—Fusiform h. Hypertrophic cervical pachymeningitis. [Cornil and Ranvier (a, 40).]—General h. Fr., hypertrophie générale. A condition in which the whole of an organ or part partakes of excessive growth; the term is especially used with reference to the heart and brain. [a, 40.]—Glandular h. Of Lebert, adenoma. [a, 40.]—H. of the brain, Lat., hypertrophia cerebri. Fr., hypertrophie du cerveau. Ger., Hypertrophie des Gehirns, Gehirnhypertrophie. A congenital or acquired disease belonging to childhood, which consists in a thickening and enlargement of the brain, due to an increase in the neuroglia, but not in the nerve elements. The disturbance of the circulation within the skull due to increase of pressure often causes cerebral irritation, paralysis, etc. [D, 1.]—H. of the heart. Lat., hypertrophie cordis. Fr., hypertrophie du cœur. Ger., Hypertrophie des Herzens, Herzübernahrung. A pathological increase in the dimensions of the muscular structure of the heart, affecting the entire organ, or one or more of its chambers, most commonly the left ventricle. It is almost always compensatory to the errors caused by diseased valves. [D, 1.] See also Active ANEURISM and Cox bovinum.—Inflammatory h. H. of a part due to prolonged inflammation. [a, 40.]—Irritative h. H. of a part produced by hyperemia due to local irritation of the part. [a, 40.]—Muscular h.—Muscular pseudo-h. Fr., hypertrophie musculaire. Ger., Muskelhypertrophie. Of Griesinger and Wernich, the pseudo-hypertrophic muscular paralysis of Duchenne. [P. Bourdel, "Rev. mens. des mal. de l'enfance," Feb., 1885, p. 54.]—Neurotic h. H. of a part due to disorder of its trophic nervous mechanism. [D, 35.]—Numerical h. See HYPERPLASIA.—Partial h. A term used to describe enlargement of some individual portion of a part or organ. [a, 40.]—Physiological h. H. due to normal physiological functions, such as the enlargement of the liver after a full meal. [a, 40.]—Progressive glandular h. See LYMPHADENOSIS.—Reflex h. The overgrowth of a part due to a hyperemia induced by nervous irritation or vaso-motor paralysis at a distant point. [a, 40.]—Simple h. of the heart. A form in which the cavities of the heart retain their normal relations of capacity to each other. [D, 1.]—Spontaneous h. H. developing without any observable cause. [a, 40.]—Transparent h. of the gums. Of Salter, a slow h. of the extreme edge of the gum, forming a pale-pink, semi-transparent projection, almost destitute of sensibility and scarcely bleeding when cut. [Heath (A, 63).]—Unilateral h. Partial h. [a, 40.]

HYPERURISIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶)-u⁵r(e²r)-u²(u)-re(ra)-si²s. Gen., -es'eos (-es'is). From urēp, to excess, and ὀφῆσις, urination. Polyuria; in Young's classification of diseases, a genus of the Apocenos. [L, 290.]—H. aquosa [Cullen]. See POLYURIA.—H. saccharina. See DIABETES mellitus.

HYPERUROCRINIA [Piory] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-u⁶-ro-kre-ne. From urēp, to excess, ουρον, urine, and κρίνειν, to separate. See POLYURIA.

HYPERURORRHEA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶)-u⁵r(e²r)-u²(u)-o²r-re(ro²e²)-a³. Fr., hyperurorrhée [Piory]. See POLYURIA.

HYPERUTERHÉMISME [Piory] (Fr.), HYPERUTÉR-RIAGISME [Piory] (Fr.), n. E-pe²r-u⁶-ta-re-mez-m', -e-pe²r-u⁶-te²r-ra³-rhez-m'. From urēp, to excess, uterus, the womb, and πεῖν, to flow, or ῥηγγίνα, to burst forth. See METRRORRHAGIA.

HYPERVENOSITY, n. Hip-u⁶r-ven-o²s'i²e². From urēp, to excess, and vena, a vein. Fr., hypervenosité. Prominence or excess of the venous system in the bodily development. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYPERVENTILATION, n. Hip-u⁶r-ve²n-ti²-la'shu²n. From urēp, exceeding, and ventilare, to fan. The treatment of ulcers, wounds, etc., by exposing them to currents of air, either natural or artificial (produced by bellows). The method has been applied to general diseases. [a, 40.]

HYPERMENOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶)-u⁶r(e²r)-i(u⁶)-me²n-o²ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From urēp, to excess, and μήμη, a membrane. A membranous tumor. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERMENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶)-u⁶r(e²r)-i(u⁶)-me²n-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). 1. Hypertrophy of a membrane. 2. The development of a hypermenoma. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPERZOODYNAMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶)-u⁶r(e²r)-zo-o-(o³)-di²n(dh⁶n)-a²m(a³m)²i²-a³. From urēp, to excess, ζῷον, an animal, and δύναμις, power. See HYPERDYNAMIA (1st def.).

HYPESTHESIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi²p(hu⁶)-e²s-the(th²)zi²(si²)-a³. See HYESTHESIA.

HYPEXODOS (Lat.), HYPEXODUS (Lat.), n. s. m. Hi²p(hu⁶)-e²x(o²d-o²s, -u⁶s(u⁶s)). Ger., υπέξοδος (from υπό, under, ἐξ, out, and ὁδός, a way). Of Hippocrates, an involuntary stool. [L, 311 (a, 21).]

HYPEZOCOS (Lat.), n. m. Hi²p(hu⁶)-e²-zok'o²s(os). Gr., υπεζώκος (from υπό, under, and ζώνναι, to undergird). See PLEURIA.

HYPHA (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f/a³. Gr., υφή. Fr., hyphæ. Ger., Hyphæ, Pitzfadensaitte. The filamentous body, consisting of one or more elongated cells, which, either singly or united with other similar bodies, forms the mycelium of Fungi. [B, 35, 54.]

HYPHĒMA (Lat.), n. n. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-a³. Gen., -em'atos (-atis). Gr., υφάμα (from υπό, under, and αἷμα, blood). 1. Anæmia. 2. An extravasation of blood; a suggestion. [L, 50, 107 (a, 39).] 3. See HĒMORRHĒMALIA. 4. See HYPHĒMALIA (3d def.).—H. oculi. See HĒMORRHĒMALIA.

HYPHĒMATOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-a²t(a³t)-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From υπό, short of, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., hyphématoise. 1. Deficient sanguification. 2. Impaired vascular action or activity. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 3. Of Maurel, a morbid condition dependent on defective respiration, allied to anæmia and chlorosis, but distinguished by a diminished susceptibility to the action of poisons and of iron; attributed to congenital narrowness of the chest. ["Prog. méd.," May 18, 1889, p. 377.]

HYPHĒMALIA (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-i²-a³. Fr., hyphémie. Ger., Hyphæmie. 1. Oligæmia. 2. Eochymosis, especially of the conjunctiva. 3. An old term for an extravasation of blood into the anterior chamber of the eye. [F.]—Intertropical h. Fr., hypohémie intertropicale. In Brazil, a peculiar anæmia due to the presence of the Anchylostoma duodenale.

HYPHĒMITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-i²(e)²i²s. Gen., -i'idos (-idis). From υπό, short of, and αἷμα, blood (see also itis). A slight inflammation of the blood. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPHĒMORRHAGIA (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-o²r-ra³(ra³g)²i²-a³. From υπό, short of, αἷμα, blood, and ῥηγγίνα, to burst. Slight hæmorrhage. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPHĒMOS (Lat.), HYPHĒMUS (Lat.), adj's. Hif(hu⁶)f-em'(a³e²m)-o²s, -u⁶s(u⁶s). Gr., υφάμος. 1. Suggillated. 2. Slightly bloody. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPHĒNE (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-en'(a³e²n)-e(a). Gen., -æn'es (-æ). From υφαίνειν, to weave. Fr., hyphène. Ger., Dum-Palme. Of Gärtner, a genus of the Boraceæ. [B, 42, 180 (a, 24).]—H. crinita, H. eucifera, H. thebaica. Ar., dum. Fr., palmier de la Thébaïde. Ger., ägyptische Dum-Palme. The doom or doom palm, or gingerbread tree; the cuci of Pliny, the Cucifera of Theophrastus; a species indigenous to Upper Egypt, Nubia, Abyssinia, and adjacent countries. It furnishes a sort of bdellium (see Egyptian BDELLIUM). The pulp of the fruit forms a part of the food of the lower classes in Egypt. [B, 19, 42, 121, 170, 180, 185 (a, 24).]

HYPHOGENOUS, adj. Hif-o²j'e²n-u⁶s. From υφή, a web, and γενᾶν, to engender. Of P. G. Unna, due to parasitic hyphe (said of a form of sycosis). ["Mntsh. f. prakt. Dermat.," 1888, 5, 6; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 28, 1888, p. 108.]

HYPHOLOGY, n. Hif-o²l'o-j'i². From υφή, a web, and λόγος, understanding. Fr., hyphologie. See HISTOLOGY.

HYPHOLOMA (Lat.), n. m. Hif(hu⁶)f-o²l'o²ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From υφή, a web, and λωμα, a fringe. See AGARICUS, subgenus 32.

HYPHOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hif(hu⁶)f-o(o³)-mi(mu⁶)-set(kat)'ez'e²s. From υφή, a web, and μύκης, a fungus. Fr., hyphomycètes. Ger., Fadenpilze, Hyphomyceten. Of Martius, a family of Fungi, embracing the sections Mucedines, Inomycetes, and Mucrores; of Fries, a class of Fungi, comprising the Phylitaceæ, Inomycetes, Stilboidei (and in 1832 the Cephalotrichie), Mucorini, Dematiei, Mucedines, and Sepedoniæ, and in 1849 a series of Haplomycetes, embracing the orders Mucorini, Mucidinei, and Sepedoniaceæ; of Lindley, an order of Fungi, comprising the same suborders as Fries's in 1832. The H. of Berkeley include the orders Isariacei, Stilbacei, Dematiei, Mucedines, and Sepedoniæ. More recently the H. have been mostly included under Ascomycetes (q. v.). [B, 19, 77, 170 (a, 24).]

HYPHOPODIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hif(hu⁶)f-o(o³)-pod(po²d'i²-u⁶m(u⁶m)). From υφή, a web, and πούς, the foot. See SETA (2d def.).

HYPHOSPORÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hi(hu⁶)f-o²s'po²r-e(a³e²e²). From υφή, a web, and σπόρος, a seed. Fr., hyphosporés. Ger., Fadenflechten. A division of Fungi with spores, variously shaped, simple or compound, borne on a filamentous receptacle. [B, 104 (a, 24).]

HYPHOSPORE, n. Hi²fo-spor. From υφή, a web, and σπόρος, a sowing. A spore borne at the extremity of an isolated filament, as in the bread-mold (Penicillium). [B, 121, 291 (a, 35).]

HYPHOSPOREÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. Hi(hu⁶)f-o²(fo³)-spor(spo²r)'e²-e(a³e²e²). See HYPHOSPORÆ.

HYPHOSTROMA (Lat.), n. n. Hi(hu⁶)f-o²(fo³)-stro'ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From υφή, a web, and στρώμα, a bed. The mycelium of Fungi. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

HYPHOTOMY, n. Hi-fo²o-mi². From υφή, a web, and τομή, a cutting. Fr., hyphotomie. The dissection of tissues. [A, 385.]

HYPHYDRÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hif(hu⁶)f-id(u⁶d)-rem'(ra³e²m)-i²-a³. From υπό, short of, ὑδρω, water, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., hyphhydrémie. 1. Moderate hydræmia. 2. Hydræmia induced experimentally in the lower animals by filling the blood-vessels with water. [K.]

HYPHYDRUS (Lat.), HYPHYDRUS (Lat.), adj's. Hif(hu⁶)f-i²d(u⁶d)-ro²s, -ru⁶s(ru⁶s). From υπό, a web, and ὑδρω, water. Dropsical. [Hippocrates (A, 311).]

HYPINOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶)p-i²n-os'i²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From υπό, short of, and ἵς, a fibre. Fr., hypinose. Ger., Hypinose. A condition of the blood in which there is a deficiency of fibrin, and hence of coagulating power (e. g., in hæmophilia). [D.]

HYPINOTIC, HYPINOTICAL, adj's. Hip-i²n-o²t'i²qk, -i²k'l. Lat., hypnoticus. Pertaining to hypnosis. [K.]

HYPNĒSTHESIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi²p(hu⁶)p-ne²s(na³e²s)-the(th²)si²s. Gen., -es'eos (-is). From υπνος, sleep, and αἰσθησις, perception. Ger., Schläfrigkeit. Of L. Martini, drowsiness. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYPNAGOGIC, adj. Hi²p-na²-goj'i²qk. From υπνος, sleep, and ἀγειν, to lead. Fr., hypnagogique. Inducing sleep or pertaining to the induction of sleep. [A, 385.]

HYPNAL, n. Hi²p'na²l. From υπνος, sleep. Of Bardet, a compound of 45 per cent. of chloral hydrate and 55 of antipyrine, named by Reuter trichloratdihyphenyldimethylpyrazol and alleged by him to be without therapeutic value. Bardet finds it valuable for inducing sleep, and having the same anodyne effect as antipyrine, when the insomnia is caused by pain. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxviii (a, 14)]

HYPNE (Fr.), n. Ep-n. See HYPNUM.—H. commun. See HYPNUM brevirostre.—H. crepui. See HYPNUM crispum.

HYPNELUS (Lat.), HYPNELUS (Lat.), adj's. H¹p(hu⁶p)-nel-(nal)u²s, -u²s(u⁴s). Gr. ὑπνελός. Somnolent. [A, 325.]

HYPNERGIA (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-ne²n-u²r(e²r)-ji(ge)a³. From ὑπνος, sleep, and ἐνέργεια, energy. Somnambulism. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPNIATER (Lat.), n. m. H¹p(hu⁶p)-ni²-at(a³t)u²r(ar). Gen. -er²os (-is). From ὑπνος, sleep, and ἰατρία, a surgeon. Fr. hypniatre. A person who professes to diagnose diseases and direct treatment for their cure while in a state of somnambulism. [A, 385.] Cf. CLAIRVOYANT.

HYPNIC, adj. H¹p²ni²k. Gr. ὑπνικός. Lat. hypnicus. 1. Pertaining to sleep. [L, 107.] 2. Inducing sleep. [A, 311.]

HYPNOBADES (Lat.), n. m. H¹p(hu⁶p)no²b/a²d(a²d)-ez(as). From ὑπνος, sleep, and βαίνειν, to go. A somnambulist. [L, 116.]

HYPNOBADCUS (Lat.), adj. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)-ba²d(ba²d)-i²k-u²s(u⁴s). Pertaining to somnambulism. [L, 116.]

HYPNOBADISIS (Lat.), HYPNOBASIS (Lat.), HYPNOBATES (Lat.), HYPNOBATIO (Lat.), n's f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)-ba²d(ba²d)is²s-i²s, -no²b/a²s(a²s)-i²s, -no²(no²)-ba²t(ba²t)-e(a³-)si²s, -ba²ba²si²(ti²)-a³. Gen., -is²eos (-bad'isis), -bas²eos (-mob'asis), -es²eos (-is), -bat'iae. From ὑπνος, sleep, and βαίνειν, to go. Ger., Nachtwandeln. Somnambulism. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPNOCYST, n. H¹p²no²si²st. From ὑπνος, sleep, and κύστις, a sac. A resting cyst; one that does not give rise to spores. [L, 121.]

HYPNODES (Lat.), adj. H¹p(hu⁶p)-nod'ez(as). Gr. ὑπνώδης (from ὑπνος, sleep, and εἶδος, resemblance). Ger., schläfrig. Sleepy. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYPNODIA (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-nod'i²a³. Gr. ὑπνώδια. Ger., Schläfrigkeit. Somnolence, drowsiness. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYPNOGENIC, HYPNOGENOUS, adj's. H¹p-no-je²n'i²z²k, -no²je²n-u²s. From ὑπνος, sleep, and γεννάν, to engender. Fr., hypnogène. Producing sleep. [A, 385.]

HYPNOGRAPHY, n. H¹p²no²g'ra²fi². From ὑπνος, sleep, and γράφειν, to write. Fr., hypnographie. See HYPNOLOGY.

HYPNOLEPSY, n. H¹p²no²le²p-si². From ὑπνος, sleep, and ἄψις, a seizure. Ger., Hypnolepsie. Morbid sleepiness. [A, 521.]

HYPNOLOGY, n. H¹p²no²l'o²-ji². Lat., hypnologia (from ὑπνος, sleep, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., hypnologie. Ger., Lehre vom Schlaf. 1. The doctrine or science of sleep. [L, 41, 50, 107 (a, 14).] 2. The science and art of hypnotism. ["Sem. méd.," Oct. 20, 1889, p. 433 (a, 18).]

HYPNONE, n. H¹p²non. Lat., hypnonum. Fr., hypnone. Ger., Hypnone. Of Dujardin-Beaumez, acetophenone, methylphenylacetone, phenylmethyl ketone + an acrid, colorless, mobile liquid, C₁₂H₁₆CO, employed as a hypnotic. [S. Limousin, "Arch. de pharm.," 1, 1; Am. Jour. of Pharm., Apr., 1886, p. 185; P. Vigier, "Gaz. heb. de méd. et de chir.," N. Y. Med. Jour., Dec. 19, 1885, p. 704. Feb. 6, 1886, p. 172; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvi (a, 14).]

HYPNERGIA (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²u²r(ne²r)-ji(ge)a³. See HYPNERGIA.

HYPNONUM (Lat.), n. n. H¹p(hu⁶p)-non'u²m(u⁴m). See HYPNONE.

HYPNOPATHY, n. H¹p²no²p'a²th-i². From ὑπνος, sleep, and πάθος, disease. See HYPNOLEPSY.

HYPNOPHILOUS, adj. H¹p²no²fi²l'u²s. From ὑπνον, moss, and φιλεῖν, to love. In botany, growing among mosses. [L, 116.]

HYPNOPHOBIA (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)-fob(fo²b)-i²a³. From ὑπνος, sleep, and φόβος, fear. Ger., Schlaffurch. A fear or dread occurring during sleep; nightmare. [L, 50 (a, 14).] Cf. EPHALTES.

HYPNOPHOBIC, adj. H¹p²no²fob'i²z²k. Pertaining to hypnophobia; as a n., a person afraid of going to sleep (e. g., a sufferer from hydrothorax). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPNOPŒOS (Lat.), HYPNOPŒUS (Lat.), adj's. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)-pe²(po²e²)-o²s, -u²s(u⁴s). Gr., ὑπνοπῆσις (from ὑπνος, sleep, and πνέω, to cause). Causing sleep. [A, 311, 322.]

HYPNOS (Lat.), n. H¹p(hu⁶p)no²s. Gr., ὑπνος. Fr., h. Ger., Schlaf. Sleep. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPNOSIA (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)/si²a³. From ὑπνος, sleep. See Sleeping drops.—Blomagnetic h. Hypnotism. [a, 40.]

HYPNOSCOPE, n. H¹p²no²skop. From ὑπνος, sleep, and σκοπεῖν, to examine. Ger., Hypnoskop. An instrument used to determine whether or not a patient is in the hypnotic state. [Ochrowski, "Lumière électrique"; "St. Petersburg. med. Woch.," July 27 (Aug. 8), 1885, p. 253 (a, 40).]

HYPNOSIS (Lat.), n. f. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). Ger., Hypnose, Einschlüferung. 1. The induction of sleep. [A, 322.] 2. See HYPNOTISM.

HYPNOTERION (Lat.), n. n. H¹p(hu⁶p)-not-e(a³)ri²-o²n. Gr., ὑπνότεριον. A certain hepatic epithem mentioned by Aetius. [Goræus (A, 325).]

HYPNOTIC, adj. H¹p²no²t'i²z²k. Gr., ὑπνωτικός (from ὑπνος, sleep). Lat., hypnoticus. Fr., hypnotique. Ger., hypnotisch. 1. Pertaining to sleep or to hypnotism. [D.] 2. Tending to induce sleep.

HYPNOTICON (Lat.), n. n. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²t(not)'i²k-o²n. The Hyoxyamus albus. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

HYPNOTISANT (Fr.), adj. Ep-no-te-za²n². See HYPNOTIC.

HYPNOTISM, n. H¹p²no²t-i²z²m. Lat., hypnotismus (from ὑπνος, sleep). Fr., hypnotisme, sommeil somnambulique provoqué (ou artificiel). Ger., Hypnotismus. It., ipnotismo. Sp., hipnotismo. Syn.: bradism. An abnormal state into which some persons may be thrown, either by a voluntary act of their own, such as gazing continuously and with fixed attention on some small bright object held close to the eyes, or by the exercise of another person's will; characterized by suspension of the will and consequent obedience to the promptings of "suggestions" from without (see SUGGESTION). The activity of the organs of special sense, except the eye, may be heightened, and the power of the muscles increased. Perfect insensibility to pain may be induced by h., and it has been used as an anesthetic. It is apt to be followed by severe headache of long continuance and by various nervous disturbances. On emerging from h., the hypnotized person usually has no remembrance of what happened during its continuance, but in many persons such a remembrance may be induced by "suggestion." About one person in three is susceptible of h., and those of an hysterical or neurotic tendency (but rarely the insane) are the most readily hypnotized. [J. Braid, "Month. Jour. of Med. Sci.," July, 1853 (D.); A, 385, 528; D, 35.]—Galvanic h. See GALVANO-HYPNOTISM.—Telepathic h. Fr., sommeil à distance. The production of sleep or other hypnotic phenomena by the will, or mental suggestion, of a person at a distance from the subject. [Myers, "Proc. Soc. Psych. Research," 1886-'87, iv, 127 (a, 40).]

HYPNOTIZATION, n. H¹p²no²-ti²-za²/shu²n. Fr., hypnotisation. Ger., Hypnotisierung. It., ipnotizzazione. Sp., hipnotización. The induction of hypnotism.

HYPNOTIZED, adj. H¹p²no²t-izd. In a state of hypnotism.

HYPNOTYPHUS (Lat.), n. m. H¹p(hu⁶p)-no²(no²)-tif(tu⁴f)-u²s(u⁴s). From ὑπνος, sleep, and τύφος, stupor. Ger., Schlaffieber. Typhus characterized by excessive sleepiness. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYPOCAUSTICUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ka²st'(ka²u⁴st)-u³st)-i²k-u³m(u⁴m). See HYPOCAUTERIUM.

HYPOCAUSTUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ka²st'(ka²u⁴st)-u³m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑποκαυστόν. Fr., hypocaustum. See CALDARIUM.

HYPOCAUTERIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ka²t(ka²u⁴t)-u³t(e)a'ri²-u³m(u⁴m). From ὑπό, short of, and καυτήριον (see CAUTERY). Ger., Brennmittel. A mild and gradually acting caustic. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOCEPHALEON (Lat.), HYPOCEPHALEUM (Lat.), n's n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-se²f(ke²f)-a²l(a³l)-e'(a³e²)-o²n. u³m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑποκεφαλαίον (from ὑπό, under, and κεφαλή, the head). Fr., Kopfkissen. A cushion for the head. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOCERCHINALEON (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-su²rk-(ke²rch²)-na(na³)le²-o²n. Gr., ὑποκερχινάλεον. Ger., getindete Heiserkeit. Slight hoarseness. [A, 322.]

HYPOCHERIS (Lat.), n. f. Hi(hu⁶)-po(po²)-ker'(ka³e'r)'i²s. See HYPOCHERIS.

HYPOCHIL, n. Hip'o-ki²l. Lat., hypochilium (from ὑπό, under, and χείλος, the lip). Ger., Unterlippen. The basal portion of the labellum of an orchid. [B, 1, 36 (a, 24).]

HYPOCHLORATE, n. Hip-o-klor'at. A salt of hypochloric acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYPOCHLORIC ACID, n. Hip-o-klor'i²ck. Fr., acide hypochlorique. See CHLORINE PEROXIDE.

HYPOCHLORIN, n. Hip-o-klor'i²n. From ὑπό, short of, and χλωρός, green. Fr., hypochlorine. Of Pringsheim, a waxy substance which he professes to have found as the first product of assimilation in certain plants. It is, he says, extruded from chlorophyll granules under the influence of certain agents. [Jahrb. f. wiss. Bot., xii, 1879-1881, p. 288; B, 167, 229 (a, 24).]

HYPOCHLORIS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-klor(ch²lor)'i²s. Gen., -chlorit'is. See HYPOCHLORITE.—H. calcicus [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., chlorure de chaux sec. Chlorinated lime. [B.]—H. calcicus aqua solutus [Fr. Cod.]. See Liquor calcis chloratæ (under CALX).—H. sodicus aqua solutus [Fr. Cod.]. See Liquor sodæ chloratæ.

HYPOCHLORITE, n. Hip-o-klor'i²t. Fr., h. A salt of hypochlorous acid. The h's are unstable bodies, which are readily decomposed by acids, giving up their chlorine, and so acting as bleaching agents. [B, 3.]—H. calcique (Fr.). See CALX chlorata.

HYPOCHLOROMELAS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-klor-(ch²lor)-o²m'e²-l'a³s(a³s). Gen., -mel'anos (-anis). Gr., ὑποχλωρομέλας (from ὑπό, short of, χλωρός, green, and μέλας, black). Having a dark and sallow skin. [A, 322.]

HYPOCHLOROUS ACID, n. Hip-o-klor'u³s. From ὑπό, under, and chlorous (q. v.). Lat., acidum hypochlorosum. Fr., acide hypochloreux. Ger., unterchlorige Säure, Unterchlorigsäure. An unstable compound, HClO. It is known only in aqueous solution. It readily parts with its oxygen, and so acts as an oxidizing and bleaching agent. By replacement of its hydrogen by a metal, it forms a series of salts called hypochlorites. [B, 3.]

HYPOCHONUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²k(o²ch²)'nu³s(u⁴s). A genus of Fungi. The Hypochini are a section of the Mucedines. [B, 180 (a, 24); B, 121 (a, 35).]—H. nigrocinctus. A species found on red and yellow cinchona-bark. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—H. rubrocinctus. A species found on the red cinchona-bark, the Cortex china regius and the Cortex adstringens brasiliensis spurius. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

HYPOCHERIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ker'(ch²o²e'r)'i²s. Fr., hypochéride, porcelle. Ger., Ferkelkraut, Saukraut. A genus of Compositæ, typical of the Hypocherideæ. The Hypocherideæ (Fr., hypocheridées; Ger., Hypocherideen) are: Of Schultze, a group of composite plants; of Bentham and Hooker, a subtribe of the Cichoriaceæ. [B, 19, 42, 64, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—H. adscendens (see dimorpha, see glabra). A species found in Europe, formerly thought to be medicinal. [B, 64, 180 (a, 24).]—H. maculata. Fr., porcelle tachetée. Ger., Ferkelkraut, Saukraut. A species found in the woods of Europe and the Caucasus. The herb and flowers (herbe costée, vel costi nostralis, vel vulgaris) were once official, but are now disused. The Laplanders eat it like cabbage. [a, 24.]—H. radicata. Fr., porcelle à longues racines, salade de porc, herbe à l'épervier, herbe au faucon. Australian cape-weed, long-rooted cat's-car; a species the herb and flowers of which, herba et flores costæ vulgaris (see hieracit macrorrhizi), were once used like taraxacum in abdominal obstructions, etc. The roots are eaten, fried, by the French peasants. [B, 19, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]

HYPOCHOLODES (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-kol(ch²o²l)-o¹(ezas). Gr., ὑποχολαδής (from ὑπό, short of, χολή, bile, and εἶδος, resemblance). Slightly bilious. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOCHONDRIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ko²n(ch²o²n²y-dri²-a²). Fr., hypochondrie, hypochondrie. Ger., Hypochondrie, Milzschucht. See HYPOCHONDRIASIS.—H. verminosa. H. due to the patient having, or believing himself to have, a tape-worm. [A, 319 (a, 40).]

HYPOCHONDRIAC, adj. and n. Hip-o-ko²n²(dri²-a²k. Gr., ὑποχονδριακός (from ὑπό, under, and χόνδρος, a cartilage). Lat., hypochondriacus. Fr., hypochondriaque. Ger., hypochondrisch (adj.), milzschüchtig (adj.) (3d def.), Hypochonder (n.), Milzschütiger (n.). 1. Situated beneath the ribs (see H. region). 2. Pertaining to hypochondriasis; as a n., a person affected with hypochondriasis. [D.]

HYPOCHONDRIALGIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ko²n(ch²o²n²)-dri²-a²l(a²l²)(a²l²)(gi²)-a². From ὑπό, under, χόνδρος, a cartilage, and ἄλγος, pain. Ger., Milzschmerz, hypochondrischer Schmerz. Pain in the hypochondriac region. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

HYPOCHONDRIASIS (Lat.), n. pl. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ko²n(ch²o²n²)-dri²-a²si²s. Gen., -as²eos (-is). From ὑπό, under, and χόνδρος, a cartilage. Fr., hypochondrie. A mental disorder which does not amount to insanity, and which takes its name from the hypochondriac region, to which feelings of distress and uneasiness are often referred. In all cases the characteristic feature is an apprehension either that some serious disease has attacked one or is about to do so; hence there is a morbid concern about one's physical condition. It is by some called the analogue of hysteria, the latter affecting principally women, the former men. [D, 5.]—Delirium h. Fr., hypochondrie délirante. Excessive h. with a low form of delirium. [a, 40.]—H. sine materia. H. without good cause. [D.]—H. cum materia. H. induced by actual disturbance of greater or less severity in some part of the body, especially the hypochondrium. [D, 70.]—Syphilitic h. Lat., h. syphilitica. H. in which the subject continually imagines that he is a victim of syphilis. [D, 36.]

HYPOPHACODES (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu²p)-o(o²)-fa(fa²)'kod'-e²(as). Gr., ὑποφακώδης (from ὑπό, short of, and φακώδης, lentil-like). Slightly lentil-colored. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOPHÆSTON (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu²p)-o(o²)-fe²s(fa²'e²)'to²n. Of Dioscorides, the Centaurea calcitrapa, Rhamnus oleoides, and Salsola tragus. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

HYPOPHARYNGEAL, adj. Hip-o-fa²r-i²n'je-a²l. From ὑπό, under, and φάρυγξ, the throat. Situated beneath the pharynx. As a n., see H. BONES.

HYPOPHARYNX (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu²p)-o²f'a²r(a²)'i²n²x(u²n²x). Gen., -yng'os (-yng'is). In certain insects, a median projection on the internal surface of the lower lip. [L, 353 (a, 39).]

HYPOPHASIA (Lat.), HYPOPHASIS (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu²p)-o(o²)-fa(fa²)'zi²(si²)'a³. -o²f'a²-si²s. Gen., -phas'ia, -phas'eos (-is). Gr., ὑπόφασις (from ὑπό, short of, and φάσις, an appearance). Fr., hypophasie. Ger., Hypophasie. Lit., a being half-seen; an old term for an affection of the eyes in which the white sclera only is seen through the opening of the eyelids, which are sometimes nearly closed. [F.] Cf. LAGOPHTHALMIA.

HYPOPHAULOS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu²p)-o(o²)-fa²l'(fa²'u²)'o²s. Gr., ὑπόφαυλος (from ὑπό, short of, and φαῦλος, low). Of diet, somewhat low. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOPHLEBOARCTIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu²p)-o(o²)-fle²b-o(o²)-a²rkt'i²-a³. Fr., hypophléboarctie [Piorry]. See PHLEBYPO-STEINOSIS.

HYPOPHLEGMASIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fle²g-ma-(ma³)/zi²(si²)-a². From ὑπό, short of, and φλεγμασία, phlegmasia. Fr., hypophlegmasie. A slight inflammation. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOPHLEGMATODES (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fle²g-ma²(ma³)-od/ez(as). Gr., ὑποφλεγματοδής (from ὑπό, slightly, φλέγμα, phlegm, and εἶδος, resemblance). Suffering slightly from phlegm. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOPHLEODAL, HYPOPHLEODIC, HYPOPHLEOUS, adj's. Hip-o-fle-od/a²l, -i²k, -fle-u²s. Lat., hypophleodes (from ὑπό, under, φλοιός, the inner bark of trees, and εἶδος, resemblance). Fr., hypophléode. Ger., unterrindig. Living in the periderm (said of certain lichens). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOPHŒSTUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fe²st/(fo²c²st)-u²m(u⁴m). See HYPOPHŒSTON.

HYPOPHORA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²f'o²r-a². Gr., ὑποφορά (from ὑποφέρειν, to carry away under). Ger., Hohlgeschwür (1st def.), Fistel (1st def.). 1. A fistulous ulcer. [H, 12]. 2. Of Hippocrates, a purging. [A, 311 (a, 17).]

HYPOPHOSPHIS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fo²s'fi²s. Gen., -phosphitis. See HYPOPHOSPHITE.—H. calcicus [Fr. Cod.]. See CALCICUM hypophosphitum.—H. ferricus. Ferric hypophosphite. [B.]—H. kalicus. See H. potassicus.—H. natrius [Netherl. Ph.]. See SODIUM hypophosphite.—H. potassicus. Potassium hypophosphite. [B.]—H. sodicus [Fr. Cod.]. Sodium hypophosphite. [B.]—Syrupus cum hypophosphite calcico [Fr. Cod.]. See Sirup d'hypophosphite de soude.—Syrupus hypophosphitum [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation made up of 35 parts of calcium hypophosphite, 12 each of potassium hypophosphite and sodium hypophosphite, 1 part of citric acid, 2 parts of spirit of lemon, 500 of sugar, and water up to 1,000 parts. [B.]—Syrupus hypophosphitum cum ferro [U. S. Ph.]. A preparation consisting of 1 part of iron lactate and 99 parts of syrupus hypophosphitum. [B.]

HYPOPHOSPHITE, n. Hip-o-fo²s'fit. Lat., hypophosphis. Fr., h. Ger., Hypophosphit. A salt of hypophosphorous acid. [B.]—Syrup of hypophosphites [U. S. Ph.]. See Syrupus hypophosphitum.—Syrup of hypophosphites with iron [U. S. Ph.]. See Syrupus hypophosphitum cum ferro.

HYPOPHOSPHOROUS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fo²s(fo²)-fo²r-os(u²s). Hypophosphorous; containing hypophosphorous acid; with the name of a base, the hypophosphite of that base. [B.]

HYPOPHOSPHOROUS, adj. Hip-o-fo²s'fo²r-u²s. Lat., hypophosphorosus. Fr., hypophosphoreux. Ger., unterphosphorig. Containing phosphorus combined with a less amount of oxygen than occurs in the phosphorous compounds. [B.]—H. acid. Lat., acidum hypophosphorosum. Fr., acide hypophosphoreux. Ger., Unterphosphorsäure. A monobasic acid, H₂PO₃ = PH(OH)₂, a white crystalline substance melting at 174° C. to a strongly acid, syrupy liquid. It forms a series of salts called hypophosphites. According to Savitsch and Buchheim, it acts therapeutically like phosphorous acid. [B, 3; Bernatzik (A, 319).]

HYPOPIRASIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fra(fra³)/zi²(si²)-a². From ὑπό, under, and πύρασις, speech. 1. Quietude and unwillingness to speak in melancholia. [A, 40]. 2. Progressive loss of control over the power of speech seen in general paresis. [a, 40.]

HYPOPIRXIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fra²x(fra³x)-i²-a². From ὑποπύρασις, to block up. Inactivity and inclination to sit or lie in one position for a long time, as seen in melancholia. [a, 40.]

HYPOPHRENIC, adj. Hip-o-fre²n'i²k. From ὑπό, under, and φρήν, the diaphragm. Ger., hypophrenisch. Situated under the diaphragm. [A, 528.]

HYPOPTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²f-tha²(tha³)y-mi²-a². From ὑποθάλαμιος, under the eyes. Fr., hypophthalmie. Ger., Hypophthalmie. An old term for hypopyon. [F.]

HYPOPTHALMION (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²f-tha²(tha³)y-mi²-o²n. From ὑποθάλαμιος, under the eyes. Of the old writers, including Hippocrates, the parts under the eye where oedema generally begins in some chronic diseases and in cachexia. [F.]

HYPOPHYLLUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fi²l(fu²l)/i²-u²m(u⁴m). From ὑπό, short of, and φύλλον, a leaf. An abortive leaf or scale growing under another leaf. [B, 19, 215 (a, 24).]

HYPOPHYLLOCARPOUS, adj. Hip-o-fi²l-o-ka²rp'u²s. Lat., hypophyllum (from ὑπό, under, φύλλον, a leaf, and καρπός, a fruit). Having the fruit beneath, or on the under surface of, the leaf. The Hypophyllocarpha of Luhneman are the ferns. The Hypophyllocarpha of Bridel are his 6th class of mosses, distinguished by the sheathed fruit (fructus vaginatus) arising beneath an accessory leaf or tegmen, and the Hypophyllocarpha of Reichenbach (the Hypophyllocarpha of Schultz) are a division of bryacean mosses also thus characterized. [B, 1, 19, 121, 170, 291 (a, 35).]

HYPOPHYLLOUS, adj. Hip-o-fi²l'u²s. Lat., hypophyllum (from ὑπό, under, and φύλλον, a leaf). Disposed or growing upon the lower aspect of a leaf. [B, 7; B, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOPHYLLUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fi²l(fu²l)/u²m(u⁴m). From ὑπό, under, and φύλλον, a leaf. See AGARICUS.—H. unguinum. See AGARICUS viperinus.—H. aromaticum. See

HYPOPHYLLUS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-fi²l(fu²l)/u²s(lu²s). See HYPOPHYLLUM.

HYPOPHYSE (Fr., Ger.), n. E-po-fez, hu⁶p-o-fu²ze². See HYPOPHYSIS.—H. pituitaire (Fr.). See HYPOPHYSIS cerebri.

HYPOPHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²f'i²(u²)-si²s. Gen., -ys'eos (-oph'ysis). Gr., ὑπόφυσις (from ὑπό, under, and φύσις, a growing). Fr., hypophyse. Ger., H., Hypophyse. Lit., an undergrowth. 1. Of Galen, a process (in the anatomical sense). [A, 311 (a, 17)]. 2. An old term for cataract. [F.] 3. Of Wilder, the h. cerebri. [K.] 4. Of Hanstein, the cell and cellular tissue from which the radicle of the embryo is formed in angeiosperms and gymnosperms. It is usually the lowest cell of the suspensor. [B, 77, 167 (a, 24)].—H. cerebralis, H. cerebri, H. diencephali [Spitzka]. Fr., hypophyse pituitaire. Ger., Hirnanhang. Syn.: glandula. The pituitary body, sac, or gland; a small ellipsoid projection caudad of the optic chiasm, resting on the sella turcica, and continuous by the infundibulum with the tuber cinereum. It consists of an anterior and posterior lobe. The former prehypophysis is the larger; it is originally developed from the ectoderm of the mouth, and consists histologically of convoluted tubules lined with epithelium, numerous blood-vessels, and frequently vesicles which result from the obliteration of the tubes. The posterior lobe (posthypophysis, the lobus infundibuli of the lower animals) is an outgrowth from the embryonic diencephalon ventricle. It consists of connective tissue inclosing pigmented cells, with but few traces of nerve-substance in man. [1, 15 (K).]

HYPOPIGROTOXIC ACID, n. Hip-o-pi²k-ro-to²x'i²k. From ὑπό, under, πικρός, bitter, and τοξικόν, a poison. Fr., acide hypopicrotoxique. Ger., Hypopikrotoxin säure, Unterpikrotoxin säure. An acid, C₁₁H₁₂O₄, obtained from the fruit of Anamirta cocculus; a brown, tough, amorphous substance, softening without dissolving in water and in ether, soluble in alkalis. [B, 48 (a, 14).]

HYPOPION (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-op'i²-o²n. Gr., ὑπόπιον (from ὑπό, under, and ὄψ, the eye). 1. Of Hippocrates, the part of the face below the eye. 2. Of Galen, a subocular bloody effusion or suppuration; an echymosis of the lower lid. 3. An erroneous spelling of hypopyon. [L, 58, 84 (a, 14); J. Tweedy, "Lancet," Jan. 9, 1886, p. 85.]

HYPOPITYS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²p'i²-i²s(u²s). Gen., -pit'uos (-yis). From ὑπό, under, and πίτυς, the pine-tree. Fr., h. Ger., Fichtenspargel. A small genus of fir-rapes parasitic on firs and beeches. [B, 19, 38, 42, 48 (a, 24)].—H. lanuginosa. False beech-nest, pine-sap, bird's-nest; a species found in North America and Europe, often having the odor of musk. In Europe it is sometimes used as a remedy for cough in sheep. [B, 19, 34, 104, 275 (a, 24).]

HYPOPLASIA [Virchow] (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-pla(pla³)y-zi²(si²)-a². From ὑπό, short of, and πλάσσειν, to mold. Fr., hypoplasie. Ger., Hypoplasie. 1. A deficient formation of tissue. 2. Incomplete (arrested) development of an organ in respect to size and weight. [A, 326 (a, 21); a, 18.] Cf. HYPERPLASIA.

HYPOPLASMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-pla²z(pla³s'y)ma². Gen., -plas'matos (-atis). From ὑπό, short of, and πλάσσειν, formed matter. See HYPINOSIS.

HYPOPLASTÉMIE (Fr.), HYPOPLASTICÉMIE (Fr.), n's. E-po-pla²s-ta-me, -pla²s-te-sa-me. From ὑπό, short of, πλάσσειν, to mold, and αἷμα, blood. Of Piorry, a state of diminished plasticity of the blood. [A, 250 (a, 21).]

HYPOPLASTRON (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-pla²s(pla³s'y)-tro²n. From ὑπό, under, and πλάσσειν, to mold. The third lateral membrane-bone of the thoracic-abdominal structure of the Chelonis. [L, 11 (a, 27).]

HYPOPLASTY, n. Hip'o-pla²st-i². From ὑπό, short of, and πλάσσειν, to mold. Fr., hypoplastic. A state of diminished formative activity. [A, 385.]

HYPOPLEURIOS (Lat.), HYPOPLEURIUS (Lat.), adj's. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-plu²r'i²-o²s, -u²s(u²s). From ὑπό, under, and πλευρά, a rib. 1. Placed beneath the ribs, substatal. 2. As n's, hypopleurium, hypopleuricus, of Galen, the pleura. [L, 50, 84 (a, 14).]

HYPOPNOIC, adj. Hip-o²p-no'i²k. Lat., hypopnoicus (from ὑπό, short of, and πνεῖν, to breathe). Producing diaphoresis. [B.]

HYPOPODIUM (Lat.), HYPOPODIUM (Lat.), n's n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-pod(po²d)/i²-o²n, -u²s(u²m). Gr., ὑποπόδιον (from ὑπό, under, and πούς, the foot). 1. The foot-rest of a surgical apparatus, especially of a hanging apparatus for fractures of the leg. 2. A cataplasim or other remedy to be applied to the sole of the foot. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 3. The stalk of the carpels. [R, 19 (a, 24).]

HYPOPSAPHAROUS, adj. Hip-o-sa²f'a²r-u³s. Gr., ὑποψάφαρος (from ὑπό, short of, and ψάφαρος, rough). Somewhat dry and rough. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOPSAPHONE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²p-sa²r(sa²r)-a²f(a²f)(a²e(a)). Gen., -phon'es. From ὑπό, somewhat, and ψάφαρος, rough, and φωνή, the voice. A dry, harsh, somewhat hoarse voice. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPORRHINION (Lat.), HYPORRHINIUM (Lat.), n's n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r-i²n(ren)/i²-o²n, -u³m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑπορρίνιον (from ὑπό, under, and ῥίς, the nose). 1. Of Hippocrates, the region immediately under the nose. 2. Of Pollux, the mustache. [A, 311 (a, 17).]

HYPORRHINOS (Lat.), HYPORRHINUS (Lat.), adj's. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r-in(ren)/o²s, -u³s(u⁴s). Gr., ὑπορρίνος. 1. Under the nose. 2. Speaking through the nose; as a n., a person so speaking. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPORRHODII (Lat.), n. m. pl. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r-rod(ro²d)/i²-i-(e). From ὑπό, under, and ῥόδον, a rose. See under AGARICUS (Series B).

HYPORRHŒA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r-re'(ro²e²)-a³. Gr., ὑπορροία (from ὑπό, short of, and ῥεῖν, to flow). A slight discharge. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPORRHŒUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r-ro(ro²)-u³s(u⁴s). Gr., ὑπορροός (from ὑπό, under, and ῥεῖν, to flow). A channel for the escape of water used in fomentations. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17).]

HYPORRHYSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²r'ri²(ru⁶)-si²s. Gen., -rhy'seos (-or'rhy'sis). Gr., ὑπορρύσις (from ὑπό, under, and ῥεῖν, to flow). 1. Of Hippocrates, a falling away of flesh. [A, 311 (a, 17).] 2. See PROLAPSUS. 3. A slight flowing down; a slight prolapse. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSALPETERSÄURE (Ger.), n. Hu⁶-po-sa²l-pat'e²r-zoir-e². Nitrogen tetroxide.

HYPOSAPROUS, adj. Hip-o-sa²p'ru³s. Gr., ὑπόσαπρος (from ὑπό, somewhat, and σαπρός, putrid). Lat., hyposapros, hyposaprus. Putrescent. [Hippocrates (A, 311 [a, 17]).]

HYPOSARCA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sa²r'k/a³. From ὑπό, under, and σάρξ, flesh. Fr., hyposarque. Ger., H. 1. See ANASARCA. 2. A collection of fluid beneath a muscle or between two muscles. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—H. aqua interea. See ANASARCA.

HYPOSARCIDIUM (Lat.), n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sa²r-si²d(ki²d)-i²-u³m(u⁴m). See ANASARCA.

HYPOSARCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sa²rk-o'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ὑπό, somewhat, and σάρκωσις, a fleshy excrescence. Ger., Fleischwärtchen. A moderate sarcosis. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSATHRIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sa²th(sa²th)/ri²-a³. From ὑπό, somewhat, and σαθρός, decayed. See BLETTING.

HYPOSCHEOTOMY, n. Hip-o²sk-e²-o²t'o-mi². Lat., hypo-scheotomia (from ὑπό, under, ὄσχεον, the scrotum, and τομή, a cutting). Fr., hypo-scheotomie. Ger., Unterhodensackschnitt. Daumont's method of puncturing a hydrocele at the bottom of the tunica vaginalis. [E, 24; L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSCLEROUS, adj. Hip-o-skler-u³s. From ὑπό, short of, and σκληρός, hard. Fr., hyposcléreur. Rather hard in texture. [A, 385.]

HYPOSEISMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sis'(se²-i²s)-ma³. Gen., -seis'matos (-atis). Gr., ὑπόσεισμα. Sifted matter. [Galen (A, 311).]

HYPOSEISMUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-se(se²)-i²z(i²s)-mu³s(mu⁴s). Gr., ὑποσεισμός (from ὑπό, short of, and σεισμός, a shaking). Slight concussion. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTAGON (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-si²(si²)-a(a³)/go²n-gon). Gen., -ag'onis (-onis). From ὑπό, under, and σταγών, the jaw-bone. The inferior maxilla. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTAGONARTHRIITIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-si²(si²)-a²g(a²g)-o²n-a²rth-ri²ri²'tis. Gen., -it'idios (-idis). From ὑπό, under, and σταγών, the jaw-bone, and ἀρθρίτις, arthritis. Ger., Unterkiefergelenkentzündung. Inflammation of the temporo-maxillary articulation. [E.]

HYPOSALADEN (Lat.), n. m. and f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-si²(si²)-a²l(a²l)/a²d(a²d)-e²n(an). Gen., -ad'eos (-enis). From ὑπό, under, σάλων, saliva, and ἀδήν, a gland. Ger., Unterkeimbäckenspeicheldrüse. The submaxillary salivary gland. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSKELETAL, adj. Hip-o-ske²l'e²-t'l. From ὑπό, under, and σκελετόν, a skeleton. Lying beneath the endoskeleton. [L, 12.]

HYPOSMIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²z(o²s)/mi²-a³. From ὑπό, short of, and ὀσμή, the sense of smell. Ger., Hyposmie. A state of impaired acuteness of the sense of smell. [A, 319 (a, 21).]

HYPOSPADE (Fr.), n. E-po-spa²d. See HYPOSPADIAN.

HYPOSPADLEOUS, adj. Hip-o-spa²d-i²-e²-u³s. Gr., ὑποσπαδαιός. Lat., hypospadiæos, hypospadiæus. Affected with hypospadias. [a, 17.]

HYPOSPADIAN, n. Hip-o-spad'i²-a²n. Lat., hypospadiæos, hypospadiæus. Fr., hypospade. A person affected with hypospadias. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSPADIAS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-spad(spa²d)/i²-a³s(a³s). Gr., ὑποσπιδιάς (from ὑπό, under, and σπᾶν, to draw). Fr., h. Ger., Hypospadiæ. 1. Of Galen, a deformity of the penis in which the glans is retracted in consequence of insufficient length of the frenum. 2. Of Galen and subsequent writers, a congenital deformity of the male urethra characterized by its external opening being situated on the lower surface of the penis or on the scrotum or perineum. [A, 530; Englisch (A, 319).] 3. In women, a deformity in which more or less of the urethra is lacking, and the urine is discharged into the vagina. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Balanic h., Glandular h., Lat., h. balanalis (seu glandis, seu glandularis). Fr., h. balanique. A variety in which the opening is situated on the lower aspect of the glands. [Englisch (A, 319 (a, 21)).]—H. pénien (Fr.). See Penile h.—Penile h., Lat., h. penialis. Fr., h. pénien. A variety in which the opening is situated on the body of the penis.—Peno-scrotal h. A variety in which the opening occupies partly the scrotum and partly the penis.—Perineo-scrotal h., Lat., h. perineo-scrotalis. A variety in which the opening is partly in the scrotum and partly in the perineum. [Englisch (A, 319).]—Perineal h., Lat., h. perinealis. Fr., h. périnéal. A variety in which the opening is in the perineum. [Englisch (A, 319).]

HYOSPADIASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-spad(spa³d)-i²-a(a³)si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-as'is). See HYOSPADIAS (2d def.).

HYSPADIC, adj. Hip-o-spadi²k. Lat., hyospadicus. Pertaining to or affected with hyospadias. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSPADICIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-spa³d(spa³d)-i²s(i²k)²-a³. See HYOSPADIAS.

HYSPASM, n. Hip-o-spa²z'm. Lat., hyospasmus (from ὑπό, short of, and σπασμός, a spasm). A slight spasm. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSPATHISMOS (Lat.), HYSPATHISMUS (Lat.), n's m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-spa²th(spa³th)-i²z(i²s)mu³s(mu³s). Gr., ὑσπαθισμός. Fr., hyospathisme. An ancient operation which consisted in making three incisions through the skin of the forehead and passing a spatula under the skin; used in cases of chronic eye-diseases and chronic headache. [A, 530; E, 6, 24; L, 135 (a, 39).]

HYSPHAGMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sfa²g(sfa²g^y-ma³). Gen., -spha²g'matos (-atis). Gr., ὑσφαγμα. Fr., hyosphagme. 1. The blood of an animal, mixed with other materials, used as a food. [A, 311.] 2. An extravasation of blood beneath the ocular conjunctiva from rupture of a small blood-vessel. [F.] See under HÆMOPHTHALMIA.

HYSPHÉNAL (Fr.), n. E-po-sfa-na³l. From ὑπό, under, and σφην, a wedge. 1. The pre-sphenoid bone in fishes. 2. The basi-sphenoid bone in fishes and the crocodile. [L, 14.]

HYSPLENIC, adj. Hip-o-sple²n²i²k. Gr., ὑσπληγνος. Lat., hyosplenicus, hyosplenus. Affected with a splenic disorder. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSPORANGEUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-spor-(spo²r)-a²n(a³n²)-ji'(ge²i²)-u³m(u³m). From ὑπό, under, σπόρος, a seed, and ἀγγεῖον, a vessel. In ferns, the indusium when it is below the spore-cases. [B, 19 (a, 24).]

HYPOSTAMINIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sta²m(sta²m)-i²n(i²a³). Fr., hypostaminie. Of Desvaux and of Jussieu, a class of plants comprising the monopetalous dicotyledons having hypogynous stamens. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

HYPOSTAS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²st'a²s(a²s). Gen., -stat'is. See HYPOSTASIS (5th def.).

HYPOSTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²st'a²-si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-ost'asis). Gr., ὑπόστασις (from ὑπό, under, and στάσις, a placing). Fr., hypostase. Ger., Hypostase, Senkungshyperämie (4th def.). It., ipostasi. Sp., hipostasis. 1. Of Hippocrates, a suppression of morbid humors (from escape at the surface); an abscess. 2. A sediment, especially a urinary sediment, which falls to the bottom. Gr. Ἐκκροεμα. 3. A morbid deposit in any part of the body. 4. Venous hyperæmia, due chiefly to the action of gravity. It occurs in places where the tissues are relaxed (e. g., under the skin of the back, in the scrotum, in the posterior and inferior parts of the lungs, at the posterior surface of the kidneys, etc.). 5. In botany, the suspensor of an embryo. [A, 311 (a, 17); B, 1, 19 (a, 24), 117; D, 2, 20, 22.]—Cadaveric h., H. (4th def.) occurring in a corpse. [D, 70.]—H. pulmonum. See Pulmonary h.—H. urinae. See H. (2d def.).—Pulmonary h., Lat., h. pulmonum. Ger., Lungenhypostase. Hypostatic congestion of the lungs.

HYPOSTATE, Hip-o²s'tat. Lat., hypostata (from ὑπό, under, and ἰστάναι, to stand). Of Dutrochet, a minute cellular process (observed especially in cucurbitaceous and rosaceous plants) originating at the base of the embryo-sac and stretching toward the base of the nucleus; regarded by Lindley as a mere appendage of the embryo-sac and not as a medium of nutrition to the latter, as in many cases it does not reach the base of the nucleus. [Lindley (a, 35).]

HYPOSTATIME (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sta²th(sta²th)-me(ma). Gen., -ath'mes (-e). Gr., ὑποστάθυη. See HYPOSTASIS (2d def.).

HYPOSTATICE, HYPOSTATICAL, adj's. Hip-o-sta²t²i²k. -sta²t²-k'l. Gr., ὑποστατικός. Lat., hypostaticeus. Fr., hypostatique. Ger., hypostatisch. Pertaining to, or of the nature of, hypostasis. [D.]

HYPOSTEMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ste(sta²)ma³. Gen., -em'atos (-atis). Gr., ὑπόστημα. See HYPOSTASIS (2d def.). [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOSTENOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ste²n-o²ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὑπό, short of, and στένωμα, a narrow place. A state of moderate contraction. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ste²n-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ὑπό, short of, and στένωσις, a being straightened. The development or course of hypostenoma. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTERNUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-stu²r'n(ste²r'n)-u³m(u³m). See HYPOPLASTRON.

HYPOSTHENIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sthe²n-i(e)a³. From ὑπό, short of, and σθένος, strength. Fr., hyposthénie. Ger., Hyposthenie. A state of diminished strength. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTHENIC, adj. Hip-o-sthe²n²i²k. Lat., hyposthenicus (from ὑπό, short of, and σθένος, strength). Fr., hyposthénique. 1. Of or pertaining to hyposthenia. [a, 17.] 2. See SEDATIVE.

HYPOSTHENIZANT, adj. Hip-o-sthe²n²i²-z'nt. Fr., hyposthénisant. Diminishing the strength. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²s-to²ma³ (1st def.), -o²s²to²m-a³ (2d def.). Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὑπό, under, and στόμα, a bone (1st def.), or ὑπό, beneath, and στόμα, mouth (2d def.). 1. An osseous tumor on the lower side of a bone. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 2. The face of insects, or that part which extends between the eyes and the base of the antennæ; also the upper lip or "labrum" of certain Crustacea (trilobites) and the distal prolongation of the hydranth which carries the mouth on its summit. [B, 28 (a, 27); L, 180, 193 (a, 39).]

HYPOSTOME, n. Hip-o-stom. See HYPOSTOMA (2d def.).

HYPOSTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²st-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ὑπό, under, and στόσιον, a bone. The development or course of a hypostoma (1st def.). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTROMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-stro²ma³. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὑπό, under, and στρομα, a mattress. Ger., Unterlage. Of Martius, the mycelium of certain Fungi. [B, 19, 78, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOSTROPHE (Lat.), HYPOSTROPHIA (Lat.), n's f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²st'ro(ro²)-fe(fa), -o²st-ro(ro²)'fi²-a³. Gen., -ost'rophes, -oph'ice. Gr., ὑποστροφή (from ὑπό, under, and στροφή, a turning). 1. Of Hippocrates, a recurrence or relapse. 2. Restlessness, jactitation. 3. Retroversion (as of the uterus). [L, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTROPHIC, adj. Hip-o-strof²i²k. Lat., hypostrophicus. Pertaining to hypostrophe. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSTRYPHNOS (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-stri²f(stru²f)-no²s. Gr., ὑποστροφῆνος (from ὑπό, short of, and στροφῆνος, astrigent). Mildly astrigent. [Hippocrates (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOSTYPSIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-sti²p(stu²p)'si²s. Gen., -yp'seos (-is). Gr., ὑποστυψις (from ὑπό, short of, and στυψις, a contracting). Mild astringency. [Theophrastus (A, 311 (a, 17)).]

HYPOSTYPTIC, adj. Hip-o-sti²p'ti²k. Lat., hypostypticus (from ὑπό, short of, and στυπτικός, astrigent). Slightly astrigent. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSULFATE (Fr.), n. E-po-su¹-fa³t. See HYPOSULPHATE.

HYPOSULFIS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-su¹(su¹)'fi²s. See HYPOSULPHITE.—H. sodicus [Fr. Cod.]. Sodium hyposulphite. [B.]

HYPOSULFUREUX (Fr.), adj. E-po-su¹-fu⁶-ru⁶. See HYPOSULPHUROUS.

HYPOSULFURIQUE (Fr.), adj. E-po-su¹-fu⁶-rek. Hyposulphuric. [a, 14.]

HYPOSULPHANTIMONITE, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²-a²n-ti²m'o²n-it. Fr., hyposulfantimonite. A thioantimonite. [B, 98, 142.]

HYPOSULPHARSENIOUS (Lat.), adj. Hip-o-su¹fi²-a²r-se²n'-i²-u³s. Containing arsenic combined directly with 2 atoms of sulphur.—H. acid. A term improperly applied to arsenic disulphide, As₂S₃, because it combines with basic sulphides to form salts termed hyposulpharsenites. [B, 2.]

HYPOSULPHARSENITE, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²-a²r'se²n-it. Fr., hyposulfarsénite. See HYPOTHIOARSENITE.

HYPOSULPHATE, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²'at. Fr., hyposulfate. A salt of hyposulphuric acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYPOSULPHINDIGOTATE, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²-n²-di²g'ot-at. Fr., hyposulfindigotate. A salt of hyposulphindigotic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYPOSULPHINDIGOTIC ACID, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²-n²-di²-g'o²t'i²k. Fr., acide hyposulfindigotique (ou hyposulfindigotique). An amorphous substance, soluble in water, formed, according to Berzelius, along with pheniconsulphuric and sulphindigotic acids by the action of fuming sulphuric acid on indigo. [B, 2.]

HYPOSULPHIS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-su¹(su¹)'fi²s. Gen., -sulphit'is. See HYPOSULPHITE.—H. natricus [Netherl. Ph., Swed. Ph.]. See Sodium thiosulphate.—H. sodicus. See Sodium thiosulphate.

HYPOSULPHITE, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²'it. Lat., hyposulphis, hyposulphis. Fr., hyposulfite. Ger., Hyposulfit. It., iposolfito. Sp., hiposulfito. 1. See THIOSULPHATE. 2. One of the salts of true hyposulphurous acid. These h's are very unstable bodies, and decompose readily with the formation of the corresponding thiosulphates. They also form normal hyposulphites, which have the general formula R'(SO₂) and R''(SO₂), and acid hyposulphites, whose general formula is R(HSO₂)_n, where R is a radicle of the quantivalence n. [B, 3.]

HYPOSULPHOBENZOIC ACID, n. Hip-o-su¹fi²-o-be²n-zo'²i²k. Fr., acide hyposulfobenzoiqne. An acid formed by the action of anhydrous sulphuric acid on benzoic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

HYPOSULPHURIC, adj. Hip-o-su³-fu²-ri²k. Fr., hyposulfurique. Containing sulphur combined with a smaller relative amount of oxygen than occurs in the sulphuric compounds. [B.]—H. acid, 1. An old name for dithionic acid. 2. Thiosulphuric acid. [B.]

HYPOSULPHUROUS, adj. Hip-o-su³/fu²-ru³s. Lat., hyposulphureus, hyposulphureus. Fr., hyposulfureux. Ger., unterschweflig. Containing sulphur combined with a smaller relative amount of oxygen than is found in the sulphurous compounds.—H. acid, Lat., acidum hyposulphurosum (see hyposulphurosum, see subsulphurosum). Fr., acide hyposulfureux. Ger., Unterschwefelsäure. 1. As commonly used, thiosulphuric acid. 2. Properly an unstable substance, H₂SO₃, known in aqueous solution. It readily undergoes decomposition with the formation of thiosulphuric acid, and from its strong affinity for oxygen acts as a powerful reducing and bleaching agent. Both acids are dibasic, and form a series of salts called hyposulphites. [B, 3.]

HYPOSYNERGIA (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-si²n(su⁶n)-u⁶r-(e²r)/ji²(g²)-a. From ὑπό, short of, and συνεργία, co-operation. Lit., weak co-operation; deficient co-ordination. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOSYSTOLIE (Fr.), n. E-po-ses-to-le. From ὑπό, short of, and συστολή, systole. A state of weakness of the cardiac systole. [Huchard, "Sem. méd.," July 31, 1889, p. 259 (a, 18).]

HYPOSTOLIQUE (Fr.), adj. E-po-ses-to-lek. Pertaining to or affected with hypostylosis.

HYPOTARSUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ta³r/su³s(su⁴s). From ὑπό, under, and ταρσός, the tarsus. In birds, the so-called calcaneum. [L, 296 (a, 39).]

HYPOTASIS (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o²t/a³-si²s. Gen., -as/eos (-ol/asis). Gr., ὑπότασις (from ὑποτείνω, to stretch under). Ger., Unterspannen. A spreading out beneath, as of a sheet under a sick person. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOTAURIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-ta⁴/(ta³u⁴)-ri²-u³m(u⁴m). Gr., ὑποταύριον. The perinaeum. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYPOTHALLINE, adj. Hip-o-tha²/in. Lat., hypothallinus. Ger., hypothallinisch, unterlagerig. Pertaining to the hypothallus. [B, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOTHALLODES (Lat.), adj. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-tha²l(th³l)-lod/ez(as). From ὑπό, under, and θαλλός, a young shoot, and εἶδος, resemblance. Ger., hypothallosidisch. Formed or proceeding from a hypothallus. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOTHALLUS (Lat.), n. m. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-tha²l(th³l)/lu³s-(lu⁴s). From ὑπό, under, and θαλλός, a young shoot. Fr., hypothalle. Ger., Unterlager. 1. In crustaceous lichens, a horizontal stratum of interlacing filaments or elongated, short, or rounded cellules, developed upon the prothallus. 2. In the Coniomycetes, delicate filaments constituting the vegetation. [B, 19, 77, 123, 167 (a, 24).]

HYPOTHECIUM (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-the(th³)/si²(ki²)-u³m(u⁴m). From ὑπό, under, and θήκη, a sheath. Fr., hypothèque. Ger., Schlauoboden, Scheidenboden. The conceptacle of the apothecia of lichens, composed of hyphal tissue lying just beneath the hymenium (thecium). It corresponds to the hypothallus. [B, 19, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

HYPOTHELE (Lat.), n. f. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-the(th³)/le(la). Gen., -the/es. From ὑπό, under, and θήλη, the nipple. See HYDNUM.

HYPOTHEMA (Lat.), n. n. Hip(hu⁶p)-o(o²)-the(th³)/ma³. Gen., -em/atos (-atis). Gr., ὑπόθημα (from ὑπό, under, and θήμα, a chest). Of Walroth, the hypothallus (1st def.). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

HYSTERIA (Lat.), n. f. $\text{H}^{12}\text{s}(\text{hu}^6)\text{te}^2(\text{e}^2)\text{'ri}^2\text{-a}^2$. From ὑστέρα , the womb. Fr., hystérie. Ger., Hysterie. It., isterismo, isteria. Sp., histeria, histerismo. 1. A functional affection of the nervous system, which is almost limited to women, and more frequently to young, unmarried women, who have no settled occupation or aim in life. It was long supposed to proceed from some disturbance of the uterus (hence the name). Later competent investigators have referred the source of the trouble to the ovary. Hammond expresses the opinion that ungratified sexual desire is not an exciting cause. The affection consists in a voluntary or involuntary imitation of some pathological condition, and the field covers the entire range of diseases susceptible of imitation. No lesion of the brain, spinal cord, or sympathetic system has ever been found to account for the phenomena, but from the character of those phenomena Hammond classes h. as a cerebro-spinal disease. [D.] See Hysterical CONVULSION. 2. A genus of the Orchideae, tribe Neottieae. 3. Of Ehrenberg, a cohort of Fungi, including Placentium, Hysterium, Solenarium, Tribidinum, and Phacidium. The Hysteraceae are: Of Rabenhorst, a subtribe of the Phacidieae; of Bonorden, a family of the Pyrenomyces, including Hysterium, Phacidium, etc. The Hysteriaceae of Corda are a family of Sclerogasteres, including the Stegiaceae, Hysteriaceae, etc. [B. 42, 170 (a, 24).]—Abdominal h. An hysterical affection characterized by swelling and tenderness of the abdomen and fever. Its relation to menstruation, the absence of increased pain from continued pressure on the abdomen, the history of the patient, the improvement under appropriate treatment, etc., may be required to dignoscate it from peritonitis. [D. 25.]—Cerebral h. Lat., h. cephalica. H. which simulates apoplexy or some other form of cerebral disease. Da Costa reports a case which was associated with ovarian disease. [D. 47.]—Epidemic h. H. or h.-like disturbances apparently acquired by association with hysterical patients. [D.]—Epileptiform h. Epileptoid h. Hystero-epilepsy. [A. 42.]—Feigned h. A simulation of the "whims and vagaries" of h. to elicit sympathy or procure compliance with wishes or caprices. [D. 47.]—H. cataleptica. H. in which the patient, instead of suffering from the ordinary convulsions of h., is seized with catalepsy, and remains in the position placed until the attack is relieved. [a, 40.]—H. febricosa. See FEBRIS tertiana asthmatica.—H. Ibbidiosa. Of Sauvages, a form of hystero-epilepsy in which the body rapidly alternates between opisthotonos and the ordinary dorsal decubitus. [D. 34.]—H. major. Fr., grande hystérie. It., grande isterismo. See HYSTERO-EPILEPSY.—H. vaga. See H. (1st def.).—Intermittent h. H. associated with the typical phenomena of intermittent fever. [D. 70.]—Masked h. Fr., hystérie fruste. A form of h. occurring principally in men, and in which the symptoms so much resemble those of organic diseases, such as tuberculosis and cerebral lesions, that the real cause is very difficult to diagnosticate. (Debove, "Bull. gen. de therap.," Dec. 15, 1882, p. 525 (a, 40).)—Toxic h. Fr., hystérie toxique. H. due to poisoning, as with carbon disulphide, lead, mercury, etc. [a, 18.]—Traumatic h. Fr., hystérie traumatique, hystéro-traumatisme. H. due to traumatism. (Bitot and Lamarque, "Jour. de méd. de Bordeaux," Dec. 9, 1888 (a, 18).)—Visceral h. Fr., hystérie viscérale. H. resulting in functional or organic visceral disease in consequence of perverted nervous action. ["Arch. de neurol.," Jan., 1885, p. 139.]

HYSTEROCYSTIC, n. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}si^2st'i^2k$. Lat., hystero-cysticus (from ὕστερα, the womb, and κύστις, the bladder). Fr., hystéro-cystique. Pertaining to the bladder and the uterus. [L, 41].

HYSTEROCYSTOCÉLE (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}si^2st(ku^2st)\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}se(ka)'le(la)$; in Eng., $hi^2st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}si^2st\text{-}o\text{-}sel$. Gen., -cel'es (-œ). From ὕστερα, the womb, and κλήη, a hernia. Fr., hystérocyستocèle. Ger., Mutterblasenbruch. A hernia containing the bladder and the uterus. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSTERO-DEMONOPATHY, n. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}de\text{-}mo^2n\text{-}o\text{-}o^2p\text{-}a^2th\text{-}i^2$. From ὕστερα, the womb, δαίμων, a demon, and πάθος, a disease. Fr., hystéro-démonopathie. Demonopathia of hysterical origin. Cf. Demonopathic HYSTERO-EPILEPSY.

HYSTERO-DYNAMOMETER, n. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}di^2n\text{-}a^2m\text{-}o^2m'\text{-}e^2t\text{-}u^2r$. From ὕστερα, the womb, δύναμις, power, and μέτρον, a measure. A long tube with a spring inclosed in one end attached to a recording dial, to measure the number, intensity, and variations of uterine contractions. [a, 40].

HYSTERO-DYNIA (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}di^2n(du^2n)\text{-}i^2\text{-}a^2$. From ὕστερα, the womb, and δύνη, pain. Fr., hystérodynie. Ger., Gebärmutterstechmerz. Pain in the uterus. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYSTERICCEDEMA (Lat.), n. n. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}e^2d(o^2\text{-}e^2d)\text{-}e(a)'ma^2$. Gen., em'atos (-atis). From ὕστερα, the womb, and οἰδημα, oedema. Oedema of the substance of the uterus. To be distinguished from dropsy of the uterus (hydrometra). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSTERO-EPILEPSY, n. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}e^2p'i^2\text{-}le^2p\text{-}si^2$. From ὕστερα, the womb, and ἐπιληψις (see EPILEPSY). Fr., hystéro-épilepsie, grande hystérie. Ger., Hystero-Epilepsie. A disease which has been most vividly described by French authors (Charcot, Rieher, et al.). During the intervals between its attacks the patient suffers from incomplete hysterical hemianesthesia, ovarian hyperaesthesia, and other hysterical symptoms. The attack is ushered in with an aura, which is of the nature of a globus hystericus, and seems to proceed from the affected ovary. The patient shrieks and falls inconvulsible, and tonic spasm results; this is quickly followed by clonic spasms, and these are succeeded by muscular relaxation, stertorous respiration, and coma. The second stage (phase des grands mouvements) consists of movements which may be rhythmical or disordered, and which are sometimes violent and ludicrous. They have been termed "attaques de clownisme." The next stage (phase des attitudes passionnelles) is marked by a rapid succession of attitudes and gestures which suggest the term phase of lubricity. Hallucinations of terror, sorrow, joy, etc., follow, after which the individual recovers consciousness. The paroxysms may recur frequently and may be provoked by slight pressure upon the region of the ovary or upon certain other hyperaesthetic parts. Sudden and firm compression of the ovary will at once arrest a paroxysm. [D, 35].—Demonopathie h.-e. It., istero-epilessia demonopatica. H.-e. in which simple hysteria develops into mania with destructive or murderous tendencies. [a, 40].

HYSTERO-EPILEPTOGENOUS, adj. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}e^2p\text{-}i^2\text{-}le^2p\text{-}to^2g'e^2n\text{-}u^2s$. From ὕστερα, the womb, ἐπιληψις, a taking hold, and γεννάω, to engender. Fr., hystéro-épileptogène. Productive of hystero-epilepsy. [a, 40].

HYSTEROGENES (Lat.), adj. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}te^2r\text{-}o(j)\text{-}og'e^2n\text{-}ez(as)$. Gr., ὕστερογενής (from ὕστερος, later, and γεννάω, to engender). Not occurring until after birth. [Aristotle (A, 311).]

HYSTEROGENIC, HYSTEROGENOUS, adj's. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o\text{-}je^2n^2i^2k\text{-}o^2j'e^2n\text{-}u^2s$. Gr., ὕστερογενής (from ὕστερα, the womb [1st def.], or ὕστερος, later [2d def.], and γεννάω, to engender). 1. Causing a hysterical attack. 2. In botany, formed in older tissues (said of intercellular spaces in plants). [B, 229 (a, 24)]. Cf. PROTOGENIC.

HYSTÉROGRAPHIE (Fr.), n. Es-ta-ro-gra^2-fe. From ὕστερα, the womb, and γραφή, a writing. See HYSTEROLOGY.

HYSTEROLITHIASIS (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}li^2th\text{-}i^2a^2)'si^2s$. Gen., -as'eos (-is). From ὕστερα, the womb, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., hystérolithie. Ger., Steinbildung in der Gebärmutter. The formation of a uterine calculus. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

HYSTEROLITHOS (Lat.), HYSTEROLITHUS (Lat.), n's m. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}li^2th\text{-}o^2s$, -u^2s(u^2s). From ὕστερα, the womb, and λίθος, a stone. Fr., hystérolithe. Ger., Mutterstein (1st def.). 1. See UTERINE CALCULUS. 2. See H. HYSTERICUS.—H. hystericus, H. vulvaris. A fossil shell or of Schlotheim, the nucleus of Spirifer speciosus, formerly suspended between the thighs as an amulet to prevent hysteria, dysmenorrhœa, etc. [B, 88 (a, 39); L, 30 (a, 14).]

HYSTEROLOGY, n. $H^{12}st\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}lo^2g'i^2$. Lat., hystero-logia (from ὕστερα, the womb, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., hystérologie. Ger., Gebärmutterlehre. The anatomy, etc., of the uterus.

HYSTEROLOGIA (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}lo^2g'i^2\text{-}a^2$. From ὕστερα, the womb, and λόγος, slanting. Fr., hystérologie. Ger., Gebärmutterumbeugung. Obliquity of the uterus. [L, 41, 50, 84 (a, 14).]

HYSTEROLYMPHANGITIS (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}li^2m^2n^2(fa^2n)\text{-}fa^2n(fa^2n^2)\text{-}je^2e^2(ie)\text{-}ti^2s$. Gen., -it'idios (-idis). From ὕστερα, the womb, lymphā, water, and ἄγγειον, a vessel (see also *-itis). Inflammation of the lymphatics of the uterus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

HYSTEROMA (Lat.), n. n. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o^2ma^2$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ὕστερα, the womb. Fr., hystérome. A fibrous tumor of the uterus. [A, 58].

HYSTEROMALACIA (Lat.), HYSTEROMALACOMA, n's f. and n. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}mal(mal^2)\text{-}a^2(a^2)'si^2(ki^2)\text{-}a^2$, *-a^2k(a^2k)\text{-}o^2ma^2. Gen., -ac'iae, -acom'atos (-atis). From ὕστερα, the womb, and μαλακία, softness. Fr., hystéromalacie. A state of softening of the uterus. [L, 41 (a, 14).]*

HYSTEROMALACOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $H^{12}st(hu^6s)\text{-}e^2r\text{-}o(o^2)\text{-}mal^2(mal^2)\text{-}a^2k(a^2k)\text{-}o^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-is). The production of hysteromalacia. [A, 322].

HYSTÉROMANE (Fr.), n. Es-ta-ro-ma³n. A person affected with nymphomania. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

HYSTEROMANIA (Lat.), n. f. Hi²st(hu⁶st)-e²r-o(o³)-man-(ma³n)¹-a³. From ὑστέρα, the womb, and μανία, a madness. Fr., hystéromanie. Ger., Mutterwuth. An old term for nymphomania. [A, 42.]

HYSTÉROMATOCIE (Fr.), n. Es-ta-ro-ma³-to-se. See Cæsarean OPERATION.

HYSTEROMETEER (Lat.), n. m. Hi²st-e²r-o²m²e²t-u⁵r. Lat., hysterometrum (from ὑστέρα the womb, and μέτρον, a measure). Fr., hystéromètre. Ger., Muttermesser. An instrument (e. g., a sound) for measuring the length of the uterine canal.

HYSTEROMETRY, n. Hi²st-e²r-o²m²e²t-ri². Measurement of the uterus or of its canal.

HYSTEROMOCHLIUM (Lat.), n's n. Hi²st-e²r-o(o³)-mok(mo²ch²)¹li²-o²n, -u³m(u⁴m). From ὑστέρα, the womb, and μοχλίον, a lever. See VECTIS.

HYSTEROMORPHOUS, adj. Hi²st-e²r-o-mo²rh²u³s. From ὑστέρα, the womb, and μορφή, form. Womb-shaped. [a, 40.]

HYSTEROMYOMA (Lat.), n. n. Hi²st(hu⁶st)-e²r-o(o³)-mi-(m³u³)²-om²a³. Gen., -om²atos (-atis). From ὑστέρα, the womb, and μῦς, a muscle. A myoma of the womb. [a, 40.]

HYSTEROMYOMETOMY, n. Hi²st-e²r-o-mi-o-mi-o-e²k²to-mi². From ὑστέρα, the womb, μῦς, a muscle, and τομή, a cutting. The removal of the whole or supravaginal portion of the uterus for a myoma of that organ. [a, 40.]

ICHORIZATION, n. I²k-o²r-i²za'shu'n. From ichōr, ichor. The changing of tissue into or formation of ichor. [a, 40.]

ICHOROID, adj. I²k'o²r-oid. Gr., ichoroidēs (1st def.) (from ichōr, ichor, and είδος, resemblance). Lat., ichoroides, ichorodes. Fr., ichoreux. Ger., jauchenähnlich, ichorähnlich (2d def.). 1. Of Hippocrates, serous. 2. Resembling ichor; like pus. [A, 311 (a, 17); L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

ICHORRHEMIA (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-ko²r(ch²o²r)-em'(a²)e²m)-i²a². From ichōr, ichor, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., ichorrhémie. Ger., Ichorrhämie. 1. A constitutional disturbance due to the absorption of septic matters into the blood. [D, 4.] 2. Of Virchow, a morbid condition produced by contamination of the blood with ichorous products of phlegmonous inflammation not of a septic character. [A, 24.]

ICHORRHOEA (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-ko²r(ch²o²r)-o²r-re'(ro²)e²-a². Gr., ichorrhōia (from ichōr, ichor, and ῥέω, to flow). An excessive ichorous discharge from a wound or inflamed surface. [a, 40.]

ICHOROUS, adj. I²k'o²r-u²s. Fr., ichoreux. Resembling ichor.

ICHTHIASIS (Lat.), n. f. I²k(i²ch²)-thi²(a²)si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-as'is). See ICHTHYOSIS.—I. cornigera. See ICHTHYOSIS hystrix.

ICHTHIDINE (Fr.), n. Ek-te-den. See ICHTHYDIN.

ICHTHIN, n. I²k'thi²n. From ichthys, a fish. Fr., ichthine, ichthine. Ger., I. The chief proteid element in the egg-yolks of various fishes, especially the rays; a transparent, granular, homogeneous substance, soluble in hydrochloric, in phosphoric, and in acetic acids and in alkaline solutions, insoluble in water, alcohol, or ether. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

ICHTHULINE (Fr.), n. Ek-tu²-len. See ICHTHYLIN.

ICHTHYDIN, n. I²k'thi²d-i²n. From ichthys, a fish. Fr., ichthidine. Of Frémy and Valenciennes, the principal nitrogenous substance found in the mature eggs of the Cyprinoidea. It is soluble in acetic and in phosphoric acids. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

ICHTHYEMATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. I²k(i²ch²)-thi²(thu²)e²m-(am)²a²t-a². Gr., ichthyēmata. It., fish-scales; hence, any small, scale-like objects. [A, 311, 325.]

ICHTHYIASIS (Lat.), n. f. I²k(i²ch²)-thi²(thu²)i²a(a²)si²s. Gen., -as'eos (-as'is). See ICHTHYOSIS.

ICHTHYIC, adj. I²k'thi²-i²ka. Ger., ichthyicós (from ichthys, a fish). Of or pertaining to fishes; fishy. [L.]

ICHTHYLIN, n. I²k'thi²l-in. From ichthys, a fish, and ἄλγ, matter. Fr., ichthuline. An albuminous, viscid substance resembling gluten, found in the eggs of the Cyprinoidea; soluble in hydrochloric, phosphoric, and acetic acids. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

ICHTHYOCHOLIN (Ger.), n. Ech-tu²-o-ch²ol-en'. Of Grmelin, a crystallizable substance obtained from the bile of various species of the Cyprineae. It has a sweetish, afterward very bitter, taste, and is soluble in water and in alcohol, insoluble in ether. [B, 48 (a, 14).]

ICHTHYOCOLLA (Lat.), n. f. I²k(i²ch²)-thi²(thu²)o(-o²)-ko²l'a². From ichthys, a fish, and κόλλα, glue. Fr., ichthyocolle [Fr. Cod.], colle de poisson [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Hausenblase, Fischeim. It., colla di pesce. Sp., icthocola, cola de pescado [Sp. Ph.]. Roum., ichthyocola [Roum. Ph.]. Syn.: colla piscium [Dan. Ph.], Ger. Ph., 1st ed., Russ. Ph., Swiss Ph.]. 1. Of the U. S., Belg., Austr., Hung., and Gr. Ph.'s, isinglass, fish-glue, a gelatinous substance prepared from the swimming bladders of Acipenser huso and other species of Acipenser; used to clarify liquors, to give lustre to fabrics, as a basis for jellies, and for court-plaster. 2. An old name for the Acipenser huso. [B, 5, 77 (a, 24), 88 (a, 39).]

ICHTHYOGRAPHY, n. I²k'thi²-o²gr'a²f-i². From ichthys, a fish, and γράφειν, to describe. See ICHTHYOLOGY.

ICHTHYOID, adj. I²k'thi²-oid. Gr., ichthooidēs (from ichthys a fish, and είδος, resemblance). Lat., ichthyoides. Resembling or having many characteristics of a fish. [L.]

ICHTHYOL, n. I²k'thi²-o²l. Lat., ichthyoleum (from ichthys, a fish, and oleum, oil). Fr., i. Ger., I, It., ittolo. Sp., ictiol. Syn.: sodium ichthiosulphonate (2d def.). 1. A transparent, yellow-brown oil, of sea-green fluorescence, prepared by distillation from a bituminous shale found in the Tyrol, containing semi-fossilized remains of fishes; introduced into dermatological practice by Unna in 1882. It has been used externally in rheumatism, and internally in rheumatism, in nutrition, eczema, etc., and as a discutient. 2. A sulphurated product of i. (1st def.), C₂₈H₃₆S₂Na₂O₆, the disodic salt of i'sulphonic acid, used as a local application in skin diseases where sulphur is indicated, and regarded as equivalent to a 10-per-cent. sulphur ointment. [Baumann and Schotten "Monatschr. f. prakt. Dermatol.," 1888, 1, 9; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Jan. 9, 1886, p. 56; "Pharm. Jour. and Trans.," Apr. 17, 1886; "Therap. Gaz.," May, 1886, p. 342.]—I-sulphonic acid. Ger., I-sulfonsäure. An acid, C₂₈H₃₆S₂O₆, derived from i. (1st def.). I. (2d def.) is its disodic salt. [B.]

ICHTHYOLOGICAL, adj. I²k'thi²-o-lo²g'i²-k'l. Pertaining to ichthyology. [L, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

ICHTHYOLOGIA, n. I²k'thi²-o²l-o²-ji². Lat., ichthyologia (from ichthys, a fish, and λόγος, understanding). Fr., ichthyologie. Ger., Fischlehre. The zoology of fishes. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ICHTHYOLUM (Lat.), n. n. I²k(i²ch²)-thi(thu²)o²l-u²m(u²m). See ICHTHYOL.

ICHTHYOPHAGIST, n. I²k'thi²-o²f'a²-ji²st. Gr., ichthophagos, (from ichthys, a fish, and φαγείν, to devour). Lat., ichthyophagus. Fr., ichthyophage. Ger., Ichthyophag. One who subsists largely on fish. [L, 56.]

ICHTHYOPHAGOUS, adj. I²k'thi²-o²f'a²-gu²s. Gr., ichthophagos. Lat., ichthyophagus. Eating, or subsisting on fish. [L, 50, 56 (a, 14).]

ICHTHYOPHAGY, n. I²k'thi²-o²f'a²-ji². The habit of subsisting largely on fish.

ICHTHYOSE (Fr.), n. Ek-te-oz. See ICHTHYOSIS.—I. ansérine des scrofuleux. Seborrhoea universalis in scrofulous persons. [G.]—I. blanche. Of Devergie, ichthyosis simplex in which the scales are not discolored. [G.]—I. brune. See ICHTHYOSIS brunea.—I. congénitale (linéaire). See ICHTHYOSIS congenita.—I. naerée. See ICHTHYOSIS nitida.—I. noire. See ICHTHYOSIS nigra.—I. noire cornée. See ICHTHYOSIS sebacea (1st def.).—I. pellagre. Of Alibert, pellagra.—I. porc-épic. See ICHTHYOSIS hystrix.

ICHTHYOSIS (Lat.), n. I²k(i²ch²)-thi²(thn²)o(-o²)si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-os'is). Gr., ichthōsis (from ichthys, a fish). Fr., ichthyose. Ger., Ichthyose, Fischschuppenausschlag, Fischschuppenkrankheit, Fischschuppenaussatz. It., ictiosis. Sp., ictiosis. Fish-skin disease; a cutaneous affection, beginning usually shortly after birth, characterized by a partial or general thickening of the epidermis, together with more or less elongation of the papillae. The surface of the skin may be simply dry, harsh, and more or less scaly, or it may be marked by horny masses of epidermis, which are usually dark-colored, and in the form of polygonal areas of varying size and thickness, separated by a network of striations or furrows corresponding to the natural lines of the skin. [G.]—False i. Lat., i. spuria. See I. sebacea (1st def.).—I. alba. See ICHTHYOSIS blanche.—I. brunea. Fr., ichthyose brune. I. cornea in which the scales are of a grayish-brown. [G, 50.]—I. circumscripta. I. affecting limited areas of the skin. [G.]—I. congenita. Fr., ichthyose congénitale (linéaire). Ger., universales diffuses (oder congenitales) Keratom der menschlichen Haut. Congenital i.; a diffuse keratosis of the skin in new-born infants, due to a malformation of the epidermis during intra-uterine life. The skin is covered by thick, horny, firmly adherent plates, usually symmetrically arranged upon the two halves of the body, and separated by furrows or intervals of thin, red, and often fissured epidermis. In all cases the infants thus affected die within a few days after birth. [G.]—Cf. I. sebacea.—I. cornea. Fr., ichthyose cornée. 1. I. characterized by rough, thick, horny scales, usually discolored from admixture of dirt. Cf. I. hystrix. 2. Cornu cutaneous. [G, 12.] 3. See I. hystrix.—I. cornea acuminata. See I. hystrix.—I. cornea verrucosa. See I. cornea.—I. cyprina. See I. serpentina.—I. diffusa. I. affecting the entire skin. [A, 326 (a, 39).]—I. furtalis. See I. congenita.—I. follicularis. Fr., acné sebacee cornée. I. occurring about the sebaceous follicles in the form of more or less prominent, sometimes spine-like, projections that are firmly adherent, and produce a roughness of the surface compared to that of nutmeg-grater. The disease resembles lichen pilaris, but differs in that the epidermic accumulations are more prominent, and more horny in character. [G.]—I. furfuracea. I. characterized by furfuraceous desquamation, especially on the eyelids and about the mouth, the neck, or the flexures of the joints. [G.]—I. glossae. See I. linguæ.—I. hystrix. Fr., ichthyose porc-épic. 1. Porcupine disease; a form of i. or of i. cornea associated with the production of horny excrescences in the form of spines, sometimes corresponding to the distribution of a cutaneous nerve. [G.] 2. See I. cornea.—I. linguæ. A morbid condition of the tongue associated with hypertrophy of the papillae, thickening and often whitening of the epithelium, and the production of deep grooves or fissures; usually the result of prolonged syphilitic or other inflammation. [G.] Cf. LEUCOPLAKIA buccalis.—I. mitis, I. mollis. See I. simplex.—

I. naerea. Fr. ichthyose naérée. See I. nitida.—I. neonatorum. Of Auspitz, a temporary form of I. observed in new-born infants, and characterized by rough, dark-colored, and easily detached scales. [Arch. f. Dermatol. u. Syph., 1869, p. 253 (g).] Cf. I. congenita and I. sebacea neonatorum.—I. nigra, I. nigricans. I. cornea with dark-colored horny plates. [G.]—I. nitida. Fr. ichthyose naérée. It. itiosi madre pertecae. I. attended with the formation of epidermic scales that have a glistening appearance, resembling mother of pearl. [G. 7.]—I. of the tongue. See I. lingua.—I. palmarum. I. of the palms. [G.]—I. palpebrarum [Arnold]. I. affecting the eyelids. [F.]—I. pellagra. Fr. ichthyose pellagre. Of Alibert, pellagra.—I. pergamentata. A cutaneous disease characterized by degeneration of the skin, which becomes stiff, parchment-like, and devoid of sensation, as though the body were incased in armor. [G. 33.]—I. plantaris. I. of the soles. [G.] Cf. KERATOMA palmare et plantare hereditarium.—I. reticulata. I. in which the thickened epidermis is marked by a network of deepened lines or furrows. [G.]—I. sauroderma. See I. sebacea (1st def.).—I. scutellata, I. scutellata. I. characterized by polygonal scales slightly depressed in the centre. [G. 10.]—I. sebacea. Fr. ichthyose noire cornée. I. a form of seborrhoea in which horny crusts form upon the skin over surfaces of greater or less extent, divided by lines corresponding to the furrows of the skin into separate plates looking like those of true I. [G. 15.] I. of Wilson, see I. cornea.—I. sebacea neonatorum. A condition sometimes observed in new-born children in which the skin is incrustated with a firmly adherent layer, chiefly composed of sebaceous matter, which, after a few days, is exfoliated, leaving the epidermis intact. [G. 3.]—I. sebacea spinosa. See I. hystrix.—I. sebacea squamosa. A term applied to a squamous form of I. sebacea, used probably in contradistinction to I. sebacea spinosa. [G. 1.]—I. serpentina. Fr. ichthyose serpentine. I. characterized by small scales or areas of thickened epidermis, usually of a dark color, occurring especially upon the extremities, and bearing some resemblance to the scales of a serpent, or of a fish (especially those of the carp). [G. 7.]—I. simplex. Syn.: xeroderma ichthyoides. A mild form of I. characterized by simple roughness of the skin or by thin scales. [G.]—I. cornea.—I. spuria. See I. sebacea.—I. vera. Of E. Wilson, xeroderma ichthyoides. [G.]—I. vulvæ. See ELEPHANTIASIS vulvæ.—Xeroderma. See XERODERMA.—Intra-uterine I. See I. congenita.—Spurious I. Lat., i. spuria. See I. sebacea.

ICHTHYOSMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2k(i^2ch^2)-thi^2(thu^6)-o^2z(o^2s)/ma^3$. Gen., -os/matos (-atis). From ἰχθύς, a fish, and σμή, a smell. See SARCOPHYTE.

ICHTHYOTIC, adj. $I^2k-thi^2-o^2t^2i^2k$. Of or pertaining to persons affected with ichthyosis. [Duhring (a, 39).]

ICHTHYOTOMY, n. $I^2k-thi^2-o^2t^2o-mi^2$. Lat., ichthyotomia (from ἰχθύς, a fish, and τέμνω, to cut). Ger., Fischanatomie, Fischzerlegung. The dissection, anatomy, or study of fishes. [L, 50 (a, 14); Owen (L).]

ILIO-LUMBO-VERTEBRAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-lu²m-bo-vu²rt'e²-br'l. Pertaining to or connected with the iliac and lumbar regions or structures and the vertebral columns. [L.]

ILION (Lat.), n. n. I²(el)'i²-o²n. See ILLUM.

ILIO-PECTINEAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-pe²k-ti²n-e'a²l. Lat., ilio-pectineus (see ILLUM and PECTEN). Fr., ilio-pectiné. Pertaining to the ilium and to the pubic bone. [A, 385.]

ILIO-PELVIC, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-pe²l'vi²k. For deriv., see ILLUM and PELVIS. Pertaining to the ilium and to the pelvic cavity.

ILIO-PERONEAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-pe²r-o-ne'a²l. Lat., ilio-peroneus (see ILLUM and PERONE). Pertaining to the ilium and to the peroneal region.

ILIO-PRÆTIBIALIS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)-i²-o(o²)-pre(pra²)-e²-ti²b(tib)-i²-a(a²)li²s. From ilium (q. v.), præ, before, and tibia (q. v.). Fr., ilio-prétié. See SARTORIUS.

ILIO-PSOAS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)'i²-o(o²)-so(pso²)a²s(a²s). See ILIACO-PSOAS.

ILIO-PSOITIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(el)-i²-o(o²)-so(pso²)-i(e)'ti²s. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). Fr., ilio-psyite. Inflammation of the iliacus internus and psoas muscles. [L, 107.]

ILIO-PUBERAL, ILIO-PUBIC, adj's. I²(el)-i²-o-pu²b'e²-r'l, -i²k. Lat., ilio-puberalis (see ILLUM and PUBES). Fr., ilio-pubien. Pertaining to or connected with the ilium and the pubic bone or region. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

ILIO-PUBI-COSTO-ABDOMINALIS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)-i²-o(o²)-pu²(pu)-bi(bi²)-ko²st-o(o²)-a²b(a²b)-do²m(dom)-i²n-a(a²)li²s. From ilium (q. v.), pubes, the private parts, costa, a rib, and abdomen, the abdomen. Fr., ilio-pubi-costo-abdominal [Dumas].

ILIO-ROTULEUS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)'i²-o(o²)-rot(ro²)-u²(ul)/e²-n²u²s(u²s). For deriv., see ILLUM and ROTULA. Fr., ilio-rotulien. Of Gerard, the triceps cruris muscle. [L, 13.]—Anterior i.-r. [Leyh]. See L.-r.—Internal i.-r. See LONG ABDUCTOR OF THE LEG.

ILIO-ROTULIEN (Fr.), n. E-le-o-ro-tu²-le-a²n². The rectus muscle of the thigh. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

ILIO-SACRAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-sak'r'l. Fr., ilio-sacré. See SACRO-ILLIAC.

ILIO-SACRO-FEMORALIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(el)'i²-o(o²)-sak-(sa²k)-ro(ro²)-fe²m-o²r-a(a²)li²s. For deriv., see ILLUM, SACRUM, and FEMUR. Fr., ilio-sacro-fémoral. See GLUTEUS MAXIMUS.

ILIO-SCIATIC, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-si-a²t'i²k. For deriv., see ILLUM and ISCHIUM. Fr., ilio-sciatique. Pertaining to or connected with the ilium and the ischium. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

ILIO-SCROTAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-skr'o²t'l. For deriv., see ILLUM and SCROTUM. Pertaining to the ilium and the scrotum. [a, 14.]

ILIO-SPINAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-spi'n'l. Lat., ilio-spinalis (see ILLUM and SPINA). Fr., i.-s. 1. Pertaining to the ilium and to the spine; as a n., the longissimus dorsi muscle. 2. A muscle in the lower animals corresponding to the longissimus dorsi and transversalis colli muscles of man, regarded by Cuvier as the combination of the longissimus dorsi, transversalis cervicis, semispinalis dorsi, and semispinalis colli muscles, and by Bourgelat, of the long dorsal, short transversal, and long spinous muscles. [L, 13.]

ILIO-TIBIAL, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-ti²b'i²-a²l. From ilium (q. v.), and tibia, the large shin-bone. Pertaining to the ilium and the tibia. [a, 29.]

ILIO-TROCHANTERIC, adj. I²(el)-i²-o-tro-ka²n-te²r'i²k. Lat., ilio-trochantericus (see ILLUM and TROCHANTER). Pertaining to the ilium and the trochanter. [a, 29.]

ILIO-TROCHANTERIEN (Fr.), n. E-le-o-tro-ka²n-ta-re-a²n². See ILIO-TROCHANTERIUS.—Grand i.-t. See ILIO-TROCHANTERIUS MAGNUS.—Moyen i.-t. See ILIO-TROCHANTERIUS MEDIUS and PARVUS.—Petit i.-t. See ILIO-TROCHANTERIUS PARVUS.

ILIO-TROCHANTERIUS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)-i²-o(o²)-tro(tro²)-ka²n(ch²a²n)-te(ta)'ri²-u²s(u²s). See ILLIACUS.—I.-t. externus. See I.-t. medius.—I.-t. magnus. Fr., grand fessier (ou ilio-trochanterien). Ger., grosser Kruppenmuskel (oder Gesässmuskel), grosser (oder mittlerer) Darmbein-Umdreher. The analogue of the gluteus medius muscle of man, found in the lower animals. [L.]—I.-t. medius. Fr., moyen ilio-trochanterien, petit fessier, fessier superficial (ou moyen). Ger., äusserer Kruppenmuskel (oder Gesässmuskel, oder Backenmuskel, oder Darmbeinumdrehermuskel), oberer Darmbeinumdrehermuskel. The analogue of the gluteus maximus muscle of man, found in lower animals. [L, 13.]—I.-t. parvus. Fr., moyen (ou petit) ilio-trochanterien (ou fessier), fessier profond. Ger., mittlerer Kruppenmuskel (oder Gesässmuskel, oder Darmbeinumdrehermuskel, oder Backenmuskel). The deep gluteus, the analogue of the gluteus minimus muscle of man, found in the lower animals. [L, 13.]

ILIO-TROCHANTEINUS (Lat.), n. m. I²(el)-i²-o(o²)-tro(tro²)-ka²n(ch²a²n)-ti²n'e²-u²s(u²s). See ILLIACUS (2d def.).

ILLUM (Lat.), n. n. I²(el)'i²-u²m(u²m). Fr., os iliaque (ou de l'hanche, ou de l'ile, ou coxal [1st def.]). Ger., Darmbein (1st def.). It., ileo, osso ileo. Sp., iliaco. Syn.: os ilii. 1. Originally the flank or haunch; hence the haunch-bone or superior expanded portion of the innominate bone. By its inferior extremity it forms a part of the acetabulum, while its upper part forms a broad expanse for the support of the abdominal viscera and for the attachment of the gluteal muscles. The external surface, or dorsum, is smooth, convex in front, deeply concave behind, and crossed by three curved lines which limit the areas of attachment of the gluteal muscles. The superior curved line commences about two inches in front of the posterior extremity of the crest and curves downward and forward toward the posterior part of the great sciatic notch; the middle curved line commences about an inch or an inch and a half behind the anterior superior spine of the i. and arches backward and downward to the upper margin of the great sciatic notch; the inferior curved line commences at the upper part of the anterior inferior spinous process and terminates at the middle of the great sciatic notch. Between the inferior curved line and the upper margin of the acetabulum is a rough surface for the attachment of the posterior head of the rectus femoris. The internal surface presents anteriorly a smooth, concave surface, occupied by the iliacus muscle, and known as the iliac fossa; posteriorly a smooth surface, which enters into the formation of the true pelvis, separated from the iliac fossa by the ilio-pectineal line, an uneven auricular surface for articulation with the sacrum, and above this a less rough surface for the attachment of the sacro-iliac ligament, and of the erector and multifidus spinæ muscles. The crest is the superior border of the bone. It is convex in general outline, bent inward anteriorly, outward posteriorly. Its surface is broadest at the posterior extremity, narrowest in the centre, and is divided into an external and an internal lip and an intermediate space, or ridge, for muscular attachments. It terminates at either end in the anterior superior and posterior superior spinous processes of the ilium. The anterior border is concave and forms the incisura iliaca minor, terminated at either end by the anterior superior and anterior inferior spinous processes. The posterior border also presents two projections, the posterior superior and posterior inferior spinous processes separated by a concavity, the great sciatic notch. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332 (a, 29).] 2. An old term for the ilium.

ILIXANTHIN, n. I-līx-a-n'thi²n. From iler (q. v.), and ξανθός, yellow. A pale-yellow crystalline extractive substance obtained from the leaves of Ilex aquifolium; soluble in water and in alcohol, and used as a dye. [B, 5 (a, 24), 46 (a, 39); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc." (a, 14).]

ILKESTON, n. I'l-ke's-t'n. A place in Derbyshire, England, where there is a ferruginous spring. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

ILLACRIMATIO (Lat.), n. f. I'l-la²k(la²k)-ri²-ma(ma²)'shi²-ti²-o. Gen., -o'nis. See EPIPHORA.

ILLAQUEATIO (Lat.), n. f. I'l-la²k(la²k)-we²-a(a²)'shi²(ti²)-o. From illaqueare, to ensnare. Of Celsus, an operation for restoring the position and direction of a single cilium in dactylitis by passing a fine needle and thread through the border of the lid and around the misplaced follicle, and drawing it into its normal position through the puncture made by the needle. [A, 326 (a, 21); F.]

ILLECEBRA (Lat.), n. f. I'l-le²s(le²k)'e²b-ra². Lit., a bait; the Sedum acre. The Illecebraceae (Fr., illecebracées) are: Of Lindley, an order of the Sileneales, consisting of the genera of Endlicher's Paronychiaceae, or (Torrey and Gray) of the tribes Illecebraceae and Sperguleae; of Bentham and Hooker, an order of the Curvumbraceae, including the Scleranthaceae, Pollichieae, Paronychiaceae, and Pteranthaceae. The Illecebreae (Fr., illecebrées; Ger., Illecebreen) are: Of R. Brown and others, an order of plants, essentially the Illecebraceae, and of De Candolle and others, a tribe of the Paronychiaceae (Illecebraceae). The Illecebrineae are: Of Dumortier, a family of the Amaranthaceae, and of Endlicher, Wood, and others, a suborder of the Caryophyllaceae, consisting of the Sperguleae and Paronychiaceae. [B, 1, 34, 42, 170, 180 (a, 24).]—I. major. The Sedum telephium. [B, 307 (a, 35).]

ILLECEBRUM (Lat.), n. n. I'l-le²s(le²k)-eb(e²b)'ru²m(ru²m). Fr., illecebre. Ger., Knoepflume. A genus of the Illecebraceae, tribe Pollichieae. [B, 19, 42 (a, 24).]—I. achyrantha. Sp., tianquippetta [Mex. Ph.]. The Achyranthes repens (q. v.). In Mexico the flowers are used as an astringent. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Mar., 1886, p. 122 (a, 24).]—I. lanatum. The Achyranthes lanata. [B, 173 (a, 35).] See also ÆRUA lanata.—I. minor. The Sedum acre. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. paronychia. The Paronychia argentea. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. sessile. The Paronychia sessilis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. vermiculare. See SEDUM acre.—I. verticillatum. Fr., herbe au panaris. A mildly astringent species used in whitlow. [B, 19, 42, 173 (a, 24).]

ILLEGITIMACY, n. I'l-le-jit'it-ma-si². Fr., illégitimité. The state of being illegitimate. [a, 18.]

ILLEGITIMATE, adj. I'l-le-jit'it-mat. Gr., vóthos. Lat., illegitimus (from in, neg., and legitimus, according to law). Fr., illégitime. Ger., illegitim. Not according to law; of a child, born out of wedlock.

ILLICIUM (Lat.), n. n. I'l-li²s(li²k)'i²-u²m(u²m). From illicere, to entice. Fr., badiane. Ger., Sternanis. 1. Star-anise; of Linnaeus, a genus of the Magnoliaceae, tribe Wintereae (Illicieae), exhaling, when bruised, the odor of anise. The Illiceeae, or Illicieae (Fr., illicées; Ger., Illicieen), are a tribe of magnoliads, the Wintereae of Bentham and Hooker. The Illicieae of Spach are a section of the Illicieae. [B, 5, 19, 34, 42, 170, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).] 2. Of the U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph., the fruit of I. anisatum (1st def.). [B.]—Fructus illicii. Star-anise fruit. See under I. anisatum.—I. anisatum. Fr., badiane anisée (1st def.), anis étoilé (ou de la Chine, ou de Sibérie) (1st def.), bois d'anis (1st def.). Ger., wahrer oder gebrauchlicher Sternanis (1st def.). 1. Of Linnaeus and of Loureiro, yellow-flowered aniseed-tree, star-anise, a highly aromatic species, indigenous to Cochinchina, where it is used as a condiment, stomachic, and carminative. In Europe it is used to flavor liquors, and in medicine. It contains a volatile oil, having anethol as its chief constituent. According to some, it is poisonous in large doses, its action resembling that of I. religiosum. The bark, cortex badiana (seu lavola, seu anis stellati), resembles cinnamon, has the taste and odor of the fruit, and was formerly used. [B, 5, 18, 19, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24).] 2. Of Bartram, see I. parviflorum.—I. floridanum. Fr., badiane de la Floride. Poison bay, Florida stink-bush (or anise-tree), a species growing in swamps in Florida and Alabama. The bark and seed have a spicy odor, and the leaves are bitter and are said to be poisonous. The capsules have been proposed as a substitute for star-anise. [B, 5, 19, 34, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—I. japonicum [Siebold]. See I. religiosum.—I. parviflorum [Michaux]. Fr., badiane à petites fleurs. Syn.: I. anisatum. A species growing on river banks in the southern United States. The bark and leaves are highly aromatic and resemble anise. The root has the odor and properties of saffron. [B, 5, 34, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. religiosum. Of Siebold, a species found in Japan, where it is called sikimi or skimmi, and the bark is used as incense; a tree from 25 to 30 feet high (twice to three times the height of I. anisatum, and differing also in the formation of its leaves and fruit, although by many botanists identified with or made a variety of the I. anisatum). The fruit has the odor of bay-leaves, and contains a crystalline principle, sikimin, which produces vomiting, convulsions, and, in sufficient doses, death; its essential oil, according to Eykman, contains safrol and eugenol. [B, 5, 18, 19, 180, 185 (a, 24).] "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc." xxxix (a, 14).—I. verum [Sir Jos. Hooker]. A species cultivated in the botanical gardens of Kew from a seedling of the true star-anise plant, and considered by Hooker as quite different from I. anisatum. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc." xxxvii (a, 14).]

ILLINCTUS (Lat.), n. m. I'l-li²n²k'(tu²s). Gen., -in²ct'us. From in, in, and inctus, a licking. See ECLEGMA.

ILLIPÉ (Fr.), n. El-le-pa. See BASSIA butyracea.—Huile d'I. See OIL OF BASSIA.—I. à beurres. See BASSIA butyracea.—I. à larges feuilles. See BASSIA latifolia.—I. à longues feuilles. See BASSIA longifolia.

ILLIS (Lat.), n. f. I'l-lī's. Gen., illidos (-idis), illi. Gr., ἰλλίος. Of Galen, one who squints. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ILLISIO (Lat.), n. f. I'l-līz(les)'i²-o. Gen., -on'is. From illidere, to strike against. Fr., illision. See ENTHLASIS.

ILLITION, n. I'l-lī'sh'u²n. Lat., illitio (from illinere, to smear). Inunction. [a, 14.]

ILLNESS, n. I'l-ne's. Fr., maladie. Ger., Erkrankung (1st def.), Krankheit. 1. The state of being out of health. 2. A disease. [D.]

ILLOS (Lat.), n. m. I'l-lo's. Gr., ἰλλός. See ILLIS.

ILLOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I'l-lo'si's. Gen., -os'eos (-is). Gr., ἰλλωσις (from ἰλλεῖν, to roll). See STRABISMUS and HELOSIS.

ILLUMINATION, n. I'l-lu²-mi²-a'shu²n. Lat., illuminatio. Fr., i. Ger., Beleuchtung. The act or process of lighting; the state of being lighted.—Axial i. In microscopy, i in the line of the axis of the instrument.—Focal i. Fr., i focale. Ger., focale Beleuchtung. It., illuminazione focale. Sp., iluminación focal. The concentration of the flame of a lamp in a darkened room, by means of a convex lens of 2 or 2½ inches focal distance, upon the point which is the special object of examination. [F.]—Lateral i, Oblique i. Fr., oblique. Ger., schiefe (oder seitliche) Beleuchtung. 1. A form of focal i, employed in ascertaining the condition of the structures of the anterior half of the eyeball. A lamp is placed somewhat in front and to one side of the patient, at a distance of about two feet and on a level with his eye, and the light is concentrated upon the cornea or crystalline lens by a strong bi-convex lens of 2 to 2½ inches focus. By shifting the cone of light from one portion of the cornea to another, the whole expanse may be thoroughly examined. 2. In microscopy, i, at an angle to the axis of the instrument.

ILLUMINATOR (Lat.), n. m. I'l-lu²(lu²)-mi²-a(a²)'to²r. In Eng., illuminator. A device for producing illumination.—Abbé's i. An i of very wide aperture for the microscope, devised by Abbé. It is not achromatic: the form of 1:20 numerical aperture consists of two, while the form of 1:40 numerical aperture consists of three, lenses. As shown by the arrows in the figures, the object should be placed in or very near the focus and, except for low powers, parallel or approximately parallel rays should be reflected on it from a plane mirror. For refraction images, as in studying histology, a diaphragm with small opening is used, but for color images, as in studying stained microbes, either a large-holed diaphragm or none at all is used. In employing the best high-angled objectives a drop of water or homogeneous immersion fluid is placed between the i, and the slide. ["Arch. f. mikr. Anat.," ix, 1873, p. 469 (J); J, 113, 156.]—Black-(or dark)-ground i. An optical instrument in which an opaque surface is introduced behind the object, while illuminating rays are directed around and about it. [a, 40.]—Electric i. Any device in which electricity is used for illuminating the cavities of the body. A small Edison lamp, suitably mounted, is generally employed. [a, 25.]—Hemispherical i. Of Wenham, a hemispherical lens attached to the under side of the slide for projecting rays of great obliquity upon the object. [J, 113, 199.]—Iris i. Of R. H. Ward, an attachment devised by him for the microscope, to be used with oblique as well as with axial illumination. It consists of a slit diaphragm mounted under the object glass, with a centering screw. [Ward, "Am. Monthl. Micr. Jour.," Jan., 1885, p. 14.]—Microscope i. A small electric lamp supported on a stand fitted with a universal joint. The incandescent electric lamp is thus made use of, giving a steady and powerful light in close proximity to objects under microscopical investigation. [a, 25.]—

ABBÉ'S ILLUMINATOR.

Parabolic i. A cylinder of glass one end of which is ground in the form of a paraboloid. The top of the paraboloid is then hollowed out so that the totally reflected rays from the paraboloid pass without refraction toward the focus of the paraboloid. A central disc is used to cut off the rays of moderate angle. This i. is used mostly for dark-ground illumination. [J, 113, 200].—Side i. A small concave mirror for throwing light upon opaque microscopic objects. [J, 199].—Smith's vertical i. An i. devised by H. L. Smith for illuminating opaque objects for high powers. It consists of an annular silver reflector placed at an angle of 45° just above the back combination of the objective. The light passes through an opening in the tube of the microscope or special piece holding the reflector, and is reflected down through the objective to the object. [J, 113].—Tolles's vertical i. A vertical i. consisting of a small rectangular prism placed above the front combination of the objective and totally reflecting the light entering the end of the prism which projects laterally through the objective. This form has been found especially excellent for investigating fine rulings on metal surfaces.

A MICROSCOPIC ILLUMINATOR.

[J, 113].—Vertical i. A reflector or prism within a microscope by which light entering the side of the tube above the objective is reflected down through the objective upon the object. The first successful form was devised by H. L. Smith. [J, 113]. Cf. Smith's vertical illuminator.—White-cloud i. A surface of plaster of Paris or ground glass for reflecting light upon microscopic objects and thus obtaining the effect of illumination from a white cloud. [J, 113].

ILLUMINISM, n. I²l-lu²m²i²n-i²z²m. A cerebral excitation during which the subject fancies that he sees or converses with supernatural beings. [L, 107.]

ILLUS (Lat.), n. m. I²l²lu²s(lu²s). See ILLUS.

ILLUSION, n. I²l-lu²zhu²n. Lat., illusio (from illudere, to play with anything). Fr., i. Ger., i. Täuschung. The misapprehension or false interpretation of external objects which really exist. [D, 21.] Cf. DELUSION.

ILLUSIONAL, adj. I²l-lu²zhu²n¹. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or affected with illusions. [D, 36.]

ILLUTAMENTUM (Lat.), ILLUTATIO (Lat.), n²s n. and f. I²l-lu²t(lu²t)-a²-me²nt²/u²3m(u²3m), -a(a²)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -ment²i-ion²is. From in, in, and lutare, to besmear with mud. Fr., illutatio. Ger., Schlammbad. Lit., a besmearing with mud, the external application of mud containing medicinal agents. [L, 41, 44 (a, 14); "Nouv. rém.," Sept. 24, 1889, p. 491.] See MUD BATH.

ILMENAU (Ger.), n. I²l²ma-na²-u²4. A place in Weimar, Germany, where there is a hydrotherapeutic establishment. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

ILOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²l-o²si²s. Gen., -os²eos (-is). See ILLUSIS.

ILOT (Fr.), n. E-lo. Lit., an islet. In the pl., i's, bits of ingrafted skin (see Skin-grafting).

ILYS (Lat.), n. f. Il(ē)l²ys(u²ys). Gen., ilyos. Gr., ίλυσ. Of Hippocrates, dregs, sediment. [A, 311 (a, 21).]

IMAGE, n. I²m²aj. Gr., εἰκών. Lat., imago. Fr., i. Ger., Bild. An optical or mental representation of a body.—Accidental i. See After-i.—Actual ophthalmoscopic-i. Fr., i. actuelle ophthalmoscopique. Ger., virtuelles ophthalmoscopisches Bild (oder Augenspiegelbild). See Indirect IMAGE.—Aerial i. The i. of an object when it appears suspended in the air. [L, 108].—After-i. An i. perceived by the retina after the exciting stimulus has been withdrawn. When these images are simply continuations of the sensation they are known as positive a-i's; when they are of a complementary color they are known as negative a-i's. [F, 25; L, 253 (a, 29)].—Catoptric i's. I's reflected from polished surfaces. [a, 29].—Consecutive i's. I's which follow one another, in regular succession. [a, 29].—Crossed i's. Fr., i's croisées. Ger., gekreuzte Doppelbilder. I's of objects existing in crossed diplopia, due to divergence of the visual axes. [F].—Demi-i. (Fr.). See Half-i.—Diffusion i's. I's formed by rays of light from an object passing through a lens and falling upon a surface not at the focus. [a, 29].—Erect i. See Upright i.—Half-i. Fr., demi-i. Ger., Halb-Bild. Of Helmholtz, one of the two double i's, cast by the same object, but not seen singly by the two eyes. [F].—Homonymous i's. Fr., i's homonymes. Ger., gleichnamige Bilder. Those double i's occurring on the side corresponding to the eye; the right i. is corresponding to the right eye, and the left i. to the left eye. This form of diplopia is caused by convergence of the visual axes. [F].—I's croisées (Fr.). See Crossed i's.—I's homonymes (Fr.). See Homonymous i's.—I. renversée. See Inverted i.—I. virtuelle. See Virtual i.—Indirect i., Inverted i. Fr., i. renversée. Ger., umgekehrtes Bild. A real, magnified i. of the fundus of an eye, in which the emerging rays are focused by means of a convex glass before entering the eye of the observer. [F].—Multiple i's. Fr., i's multiples. Ger., vielfache Bilder. It., immagini multipli. Sp., imágenes múltíplíes. See under POLYPOIA.—Real i. Fr., i. réelle. An i. formed by the convergence of reflected or refracted rays after their emergence from the reflecting source or the refracting medium; so called because actually existing at the spot at which it is seen, and capable of being thrown upon a screen placed at this spot. The i's formed by concave mirrors or concave lenses and the inverted ophthalmoscopic i. are real. [B].—Retinal i. Fr., i. rétinien. The i. formed upon the retina by rays of light which pass from an external object through the dioptric mechanism of the eye. [a, 29].—Stereoscopic i. Fr., i. stéréoscopique. Ger., stereoskopisches Bild. The i. produced on the retina of the two eyes by uniting stereoscopically the i. of two photographs taken from one and the same negative. This gives an undeniable impression of solidity, although it is simply an optical illusion. [F].—Upright i. Fr., i. droite. Ger., aufrechtes Bild. An enlarged i. of the fundus of the eye, seen with the ophthalmoscope by aid of the dioptric apparatus of the eye, without the interposition of a bi-convex lens. [F].—Virtual i. Fr., i. virtuelle. Ger., virtuelles Bild. An i. formed by the prolongation of reflected or refracted rays back behind the reflecting surface or the refracting medium; so called because not actually existing at the spot at which it appears. The i. in a looking-glass, the i's formed by concave lenses and convex mirrors, and the ophthalmoscopic i. are examples. [B].

IMPARIPINNATE, adj. $I^2m-pa^3r-i^2-pi^2n-at$. Lat., imparipinnatus (from in, neg., par, equal, and pinna, a feather). Fr., imparipinné, imparipenné. Ger., unpaarig (oder ungleichpaarig)-gefiedert. Pinnate with an odd terminal leaf. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24).]

IMPARTIBLE, adj. $I^2m-pa^3rt/i^2-b'l$. Lat., impartibilis (from in, neg., and pars, a part). Of Mörbel, not capable of spontaneous separation (said of a cremorac which does not divide into two, e. g., that of Maryland sandle). [B, 1 (a, 35).]

IMPASTATION, n. $I^2m-pa^3s-ta'shu^3n$. Lat., impastatio (from in, into, and pasta, paste). Fr., i. Ger., Einknetung. In pharmacy, the making of a paste. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

IMPATIENS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m-pa(pa^3)/shi^2(ti^2)-e^2nz$ -(ans). Gen., -ent'is. From in, neg., and pati, to suffer. Fr., balsamine. Ger., Springkraut. Touch-me-not; a genus of geraniaceous herbs of the tribe Balsamineæ; so called because the capsules are irritable. [B, 19, 34, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. balsamina. Fr., herbe impatiente, jaalousie. Balsamine, garden-balsam, snap-weed; a native of the East Indies and widely cultivated. The Japanese are said to use the juice of the plant to dye their nails red. It is like the other species in its properties. [B, 5, 19, 34, 173 (a, 24).]—I. fulva. Orange-flowered balsam, spotted jewel-weed; indigenous to North America. An ointment, prepared by boiling the plant in lard, has been used in hæmorrhoids. The properties are probably like those of I. noli-me-tangere. [B, 5, 34, 275 (a, 24).]—I. hortensis. See I. balsamina.—I. lutea, I. maculata, I. noli-me-tangere. Fr., noli-me-tangere, herbe de sainte-Cathérine. Ger., gemeines Springkraut. Common yellow balsam, touch-me-not; found in Europe and Northern Asia. Its stem and leaves, which are emetic, cathartic, and diuretic, were formerly used in medicine, especially as a diuretic, and as an external application to sores and hæmorrhoids. [B, 5, 19, 173, 180, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—I. pallida. Pale touch-me-not, the jewel-weed of Michigan and Kansas; an acid species employed as an emetic, cathartic, and diuretic. [B, 5, 275 (a, 24); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix, (a, 14).]—I. palustris. See I. noli-me-tangere.

IMPATIENTIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m-pa(pa^3)-shi^2(ti^2)-e^2n/shi^2(ti^2)-a^3$. From impatiens, impatient. Irritability. [a, 40.]—I. vesicæ. Irritability of the bladder. [a, 40.]

IMPATIINIDE (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2-pa^3-te-e-ned$. From impatiens (q. v.). Of Müller, a bitter emetic resin extracted from Impatiens noli-me-tangere. [B, 46, 93 (a, 14).]

IMPEditus (Lat.), adj. $I^2m-pe^2d-i(e)/tu^3s(tu^4s)$. From impedire, to impede. Ger., gehemmt, verhindert. Impeded, checked (said of a plant or plant-organ remaining undeveloped). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

IMPELLUCID, adj. $I^2m-pe^2l-lu^2/si^2d$. Lat., impellucidus (from in, neg., per, through, and lucidus, clear). Ger., undurchsichtig. Not pellucid. [B, 123 (a, 24).]

IMPENNATE, adj. I^2m-pe^2n-nat . Lat., impennis (from in, not, and penna, a feather). Having short wings covered with small scaly feathers, as in the penguin. The Impennes of Eichwald, Illiger, and others are an order of swimming birds, including only the penguins. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

IMPENNOUS, adj. $I^2m-pe^2n-u^3s$. Having no wings (said of insects). [L, 180 (a, 39).]

IMPERATOIRE (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2-pa-ra^3-twa^3r$. 1. See IMPERATORIA. 2. In the Fr. Cod., the Imperatoria ostruthium. [a, 24.]—I. des Alpes. The Peucedanum ostruthium. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. sauvage. The Angelica silvestris. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

IMPERATOR (Lat.), n. m. $I^2m-pe^2r-at(a^3t)'o^2r$. Gen., or'is. From imparare, to command. The Imperatoria ostruthium. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

IMPERATORIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m-pe^2r-a^2t(a^3t)-o^2ri^2-a^3$. From imparare, to command. Fr., impératoire. Ger., Meisterwurz, Meisterwurzel. A genus of the Umbelliferae, made by Bentham and Hooker a section of Peucedanum. [B, 42, 64, 180 (a, 24).]—I. alba. The I. ostruthium. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. angelica. See ANGELICA silvestris.—I. lucida. The Ligusticum actæifolium. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. major. See I. ostruthium.—I. nigra. The Astrantia major. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. nodiflora. See LIGUSTICUM nodiflorum.—I. ostruthium. Fr., imperatorie des Alpes, benjoin français (ou de montagne), ostrute. Ger., gemeine Meisterwurz, Kaiserwurz, Ostranz. False pellitory of Spain, fellow-grass, (great) masterwort; a species growing in southern and central Europe. The root proper and the rhizome, radix imperatorie (seu imperatorie alba, seu imperatorie ostruthii, seu radix ostruthii, seu magistrantie, etc.), was once used in a great variety of diseases, and was known as divinum remedium, though it is merely an aromatic stimulant inferior to angelica. It contains two crystallizable principles, imperatorine and ostruthine, and a volatile oil. It is rarely used in American medicine. [B, 5, 18, 121, 173, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—I. pratensis major, I. silvestris. See ANGELICA silvestris.—Radix imperatorie (alba). The root of I. ostruthium. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Rhizoma imperatorie (Ger. Ph.). Ger., Meisterwurzel. The rhizome of I. ostruthium. [A, 319 (a, 21).]

IMPERATORINE, n. $I^2m-pe^2r-a^2t-or'en$. Fr., imperatorine. Ger., Imperatorin. An alkaloid found in the root of Imperatoria ostruthium. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxviii (a, 14).]

IMPERFECT, adj. $I^2m-pu^3r-fe^2kt$. Lat., imperfectus (from in, neg., and perficere, to accomplish). Fr., imparfait. Ger., unvollkommen. Abnormal, irregular, undeveloped, wanting some part or organ. The Imperfectæ of Lindley are a cohort of endogones, comprising the Pandales, Arales, Typhales, Smitales, and Fiuviales. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

IMPERFECTIBRANCHIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m-pu^3r(pe^2r)-fe^2kt-i^2-bra^2n^2(bra^3n^2)/ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^3$. From imperfectus, imperfect, and βράχχια, gills. Of Hogg, see ATELEBRANCHIA.

IMPERFOLIATE, adj. $I^2m-pu^3r-fol'i^2-at$. Lat., imperfoliatus (from in, neg., per, through, and folium, a leaf). Having leaves that are not perfoliate. [L, 107.]

IMPERFORATE, adj. $I^2m-pu^3r-for-at$. Gr., ἀπρητος. Lat., imperforatus (from in, neg., and perforare, to perforate). Fr., imperforé. Ger., undurchbohrt, undurchlöchert. Not perforated, closed. [B, 123 (a, 24).] The Imperforata are a subclass of the Reticularia having the shell substance perforated with only one or two apertures or in branched forms with a small number of apertures. [L, 121.]

IMPERFORATION, n. $I^2m-pu^3r-fo-ra'shu^3n$. Lat., imperforatio. Fr., i. Ger., Undurchbohrtheit, Verschliessung, Verschlossensein. It., imperforazione. Sp., imperforación. See ATRÉSIA.

IMPERIAL, adj. $I^2m-pe^2ri^2-a^2l$. Lat., imperialis. Pertaining to an emperor or to an empire; as a n., an acid refrigerant drink made by dissolving cream of tartar in boiling water and adding sugar and fresh lemon-pear. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

IMPERIALE (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2-pa-re-a^2l$. The Fritillaria imperialis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

IMPERIALINE, n. $I^2m-pe^2ri^2-a^2l-en$. An alkaloid, $C_{25}H_{60}NO_4$, obtained by K. Fragner from the bulbs of Fritillaria imperialis. The pure base crystallizes in short colorless needles, is sparingly soluble in cold water, soluble in cold alcohol, more soluble in hot alcohol, and particularly soluble in ether. Heated, it becomes yellow at 340° C. and melts perfectly at 254° C. It acts upon the heart. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvii (a, 14).]

IMPERIALIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2r\text{-}i^2(a^3v)l^2s$. A genus of the Liliaceae made by Jussieu, by Bentham and Hooker referred to Fritillaria. [B. 42 (a, 24).]—I. comosa, I. coronata. The Fritillaria i. [B. 173 (a, 24).]

IMPERMEABILITY, n. $I^2m\text{-}pu^6r\text{-}me^2\text{-}a^2b\text{-}i^2l^2i^2t\text{-}i^2$. From in neg., and permeare, to pass through. Fr., impermeabilité. Ger., Undurchdringlichkeit. The state of being impermeable.

IMPERMEABLE, adj. $I^2m\text{-}pu^6r\text{-}me\text{-}a^2b\text{-}l$. Fr., impermeable. Ger., undurchdringlich. Incapable of being passed through (said especially of strictures that will not admit an instrument and of fabrics that are water-tight).

IMPERVIOUS, adj. $I^2m\text{-}pu^6r\text{-}vi^2u^3s$. Lat., impervius (from in neg., and perviare, to pass through). Ger., unzugänglich, unwegsam, verrannelt. Not pervious.

IMPETIGINES (Lat.), n., f. pl. of impetigo (q. v.). $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2j(eg)^2i^2n\text{-}ez(az)$. In Schönlein's nosology, a generic term for the more superficial diseases of the skin; the superficial dermatoses. [G.] See IMPETIGO (3d def.).

IMPETIGNODES (Lat.), adj. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2j(eg)\text{-}i^2n\text{-}od\text{-}ez(az)$. See IMPETIGNOSUS.

IMPETIGNOSITAS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2j(eg)\text{-}i^2n\text{-}os\text{-}i^2t\text{-}a^2s(ta^2s)$. Gen., -tat'is. See IMPETIGNOSUS.

IMPETIGNOSUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2j(eg)\text{-}i^2n\text{-}os\text{-}u^3s(u^3s)$. See IMPETIGNOSUS; as a n., a person affected with impetigo. [G., 49.]

IMPETIGNOSUS, adj. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2j^2i^2n\text{-}u^3s$. Lat., impetiginosus, impetiginodes. Fr., impétigineux, impétiginoïde. Ger., impetiginös, flechtenartig. It., impetiginoido. Sp., impetiginoso. Related to or resembling impetigo. [G.]

IMPETIGO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i(eg)^2o$. Gen., -ig'inis. From impetere, to attack. Gr., $\lambda\epsilon\chi\iota\upsilon\nu$. Fr., impétigo, dartre humide, Méligère, gourme. Ger., Krustenflechte, feuchter (oder nüssender) Grund. It., impetigine, impetigine. 1. A dermatological term employed by different writers and at different periods with varying significations. Of the four varieties of the disease described under this name by Celsus, the first, characterized by pimples (vari), pustules, vesicles, and scales, may have included, besides eczema, i. in the modern sense of the term (in infra); the second, or "red," variety was probably eczema; the third, or "black," variety, which was "thicker, harder, and more swollen," "produces fissures and corrodes violently," and was attended with the production of a spreading black scale or crust, may have been either impetiginous eczema or a gangrenous affection; the fourth variety, "not curable" and characterized by white scales the removal of which sometimes caused blood to appear, was probably psoriasis. 2. Peter Frank designated as "impetigines" (pl. of i) all chronic forms of skin disease, the acute forms being termed "exanthemata." 3. Schönlein limited the term "impetigines" to those forms of skin disease that were superficial in character, corresponding nearly to the "eczematoses" of Fuchs. 4. Plenck employed the term for a red, dry, itching eruption that tended to become general over the whole body, and terminated with the formation of "furfures," or "light scales." 5. In its modern sense, as first defined by Willan, the term signifies a disease of the skin characterized by an eruption of small, yellow, itching pustules, occurring often in groups, and ending with the production of thin, scaly, yellowish crusts. By Hebra and by many recent writers the term has been discarded as implying a disease sui generis, the eruption being regarded simply as a form of pustulation incident to eczema. [G., 9, 11, 13, 18.] See IMPETIGNOUS ECZEMA.—I. achor. Fr., impétigo du cuir chevelu. Ger., feuchter Kopfgund. Of Fuchs, impetigo eczema of the scalp. [G., 5].—I. achor granulatus. See ACHOR GRANULATUS and ECZEMA IMPETIGNOSUM.—I. achor mucosus. 1. Impetiginous eczema. [G., 5]. 2. See ACHOR MUCIFLUVUS (3d def.).—I. acniformis. See IMPETIGO ACNIFORME.—I. a pediculis. 1. associated with and due to the presence of pediculi, especially pediculi capitis. [G.]—I. capitis. 1. of the scalp.—I. conferta. See I. figurata.—I. conflens. Of Fuchs, i. sparsa. [G., 5].—I. contagiosa. Syn.: i. parasitaria. Of T. Fox, an acute, pustular, contagious disease of the skin, often beginning with fever, characterized by vesico-pustules appearing first, usually, on the face or hands, and thence extending to other parts, followed by the formation of yellowish, granular crusts. [G., 69].—I. eczematodes. Fr., impétigo eczémateux. See ECZEMA IMPETIGNOSUM.—I. erysipelatosus, I. erythematica. Fr., impétigo érysipélateux. 1. resembling erysipelas; impetiginous eczema of a decidedly inflammatory character. [G., 12].—I. exedens. See I. rodens.—I. faciei. Impetiginous eczema of the face. [G.]—I. faciei lactea. See ACHOR IN FACIE.—I. favosa. 1. attended with favus-like crusts. [G.]—I. figurata. Syn.: i. conferta. Fr., impétigo figuré. Figured scall; i. in which the efflorescences occur in clusters, forming irregular figures. [G., 12, 28.] Cf. i. sparsa.—I. granulata. Fr., impétigo granulé. 1. characterized by friable and granular crusts, owing to the decidedly purulent character of the secretion. [G.]—I. herpeticus. Fr., impétigo herpétique. A chronic pustular or vesico-pustular disease of the skin occurring in pregnant women during the latter months of gestation, and attended with grave general symptoms, often ending fatally. It is characterized by "efflorescences filled with a yellow, purulent fluid (pustules) disposed in groups or rings, which, drying, form flat, yellow scabs, beneath which the surface is red and excoriated, as in eczema rubrum, while new groups and rings of pustules appear at their periphery." [Hebra (G., 3); "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 23, 1887, p. 112.] Cf. HERPES GESTATIONIS.—I. indica. See CONAR.—I. lacrymala. Fr., impétigo larvé. Impetiginous eczema of the face with crusts covering the skin like a mask. [G., 20].—I. localis. 1. limited to a special region, such as the face. [G.]—I. mercurialis.

Impetiginous eczema due to mercurial poisoning. [G., 41].—I. parasitaria. A name given to i. contagiosa by Kaposi, who found a fungus in the efflorescences which he regarded as the cause of the disease. [G., 47].—I. pilaris. A pustular eruption, occurring usually in men, and most commonly on the legs, each pustule being traversed by a hair; regarded by Devergie as a suppurative form of lichen pilaris. [G., 50].—I. purifluens. A form of pustular eruption peculiar to a "pale, opaline, thick, and oily skin" (Devergie), the pustules breaking and leaving a red, uneven, eroded surface, from which a very abundant muco-purulent fluid of a yellowish-white color is discharged. [G., 50].—I. rodens. Fr., impétigo rongean. A chronic ulcerative disease of the skin, especially of the face, of uncertain character. According to Devergie, there are three varieties. In the first, or "diffuse," form, little efflorescences, varying in size from that of a pin-head to that of a lentil, occur at various points on the face, especially the cheeks, characterized by the formation of crusts, beneath which slightly depressed erosions or ulcers form, followed by scars. In the second, or "aggregated" (ramassée) form, the little crusts appear upon the nose and near the inner angle of the eye. These fall off and are followed by cicatrices, but the disease extends by the development, at their periphery, of other similar crusts, which pursue a like course (lupus erythematosus). In the third, or "ulcerating," form, the disease affects principally the alæ nasi, or the angles of the eye, and is attended with abundant purulent or sanious discharge and with considerable ulceration. Most writers refer i. rodens to cancer or syphilis. [G., 12, 50].—I. rodens syphilitica. A serpiginous form of i. syphilitica attended with ulceration. [G.]—I. scabida. Fr., impétigo rupiforme (ou scabieux). I. attended with much crusting. See ECZEMA IMPETIGNODES.—I. scrophulosa. Fr., impétigo scrofuleux. I. associated with scrofula; according to Bazin, one of the etiological divisions of i. [G.]—I. simplex. 1. of the common and simple form. [G.] Cf. i. contagiosa. I. sparsa. Fr., impétigo épars. Scattered running scall; i. in which the efflorescences (or pustules) are scattered over the surface at comparatively wide intervals, and without determinate arrangement. The pustules afterward break and give rise to a discharge that dries and produces yellowish laminated scales. [G., 12, 28.] See ECZEMA IMPETIGNODES.—I. sycoformis. Fr., impétigo sycoforme. A pustular affection (or an impetiginous eczema) of the upper lip, in which the pustules are deeper seated than in ordinary i., but not so deep-seated as those of sycosis. Two varieties are described, one of which occurs as the sequel of a long-continued muco-purulent discharge from the nostrils, and is most common in young persons; the other occurs only in men, and is due to the irritation of shaving. [Devergie (G., 50); "Mntsh. f. prakt. Dermat.," 1888, 3, p. 143.]—I. syphilitica. Fr., impétigo syphilitique. See IMPETIGNOUS SYPHILITIC ECZEMA.—I. ulcerata. See I. rodens.—I. variolosa. An eruption of i. pustules occasionally observed during the declining period of variola. [G., 13.]

IMPÉTIGO (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\text{-}pa\text{-}te\text{-}go$. See IMPETIGO.—I. acniforme. A chronic pustular eruption of the region of the beard. The pustules are small (miliary), rounded, and discrete, and are of short duration, drying up and forming small crusts that drop off, leaving purplish spots. Succeeding crops appear, and the disease is often very persistent. It differs from i. de la barbe in that the pustules do not form confluent crusts. [G., 51].—I. aigu. An acute skin disease of animals which manifests itself in small red papules which proceed to pustulation in a very short time and dry up, leaving a brown crust. [a., 40].—I. bénin. A benign, scrofulous form of impetigo. [B., 46 (a, 39)].—I. chronique. A cutaneous disease in animals which is characterized by successive pustular eruptions which extend from place to place, coalescing and discharging a sero-purulent fluid of exceedingly fetid odor. [L., 41 (a, 40)].—I. de la barbe. Syn.: i. sycoforme. An impetiginous eczema of the beard, characterized by the development of pustules about the hairs, followed by yellowish or greenish crusts that tend to mat the hairs together. [G., 51.] See ECZEMA BARBE and IMPETIGO SYCOFORMIS.—I. disseminé. Impetigo with pustules scattered over the surface of the body. [G.]—I. du cuir chevelu. See IMPETIGO ACHOR.—I. ecthymatiforme. A pustular skin eruption described as intermediate between impetigo and ecthyma. The pustules are larger than those of impetigo, and do not form yellowish, confluent crusts, but are not so deep-seated as those of ecthyma, are more closely aggregated (sometimes confluent), and are less apt to leave scars. [G.]—I. épars. See IMPETIGO SPARSA.—I. malin. A scrofulous, pustular form of i. [B., 46 (a, 39)].—I. rongean. See IMPETIGO RODENS.—I. rupiforme, I. scabieux. See IMPETIGO SCABIDA.—I. scrofuleux. See IMPETIGO SCROPHULOSA.—I. syphilitique bénin. Superficial or benign impetigo syphilitica. [L., 87 (a, 39)].—I. syphilitique malin. Profound or malignant syphilitic impetigo. [L., 87 (a, 39)].—I. trichophytique. Impetigo contagiosa supposed to be due to trichophyton tonsurans. [G.]

IMPETIX, n. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}i^2ks$. An old term for impetigo.

IMPETUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2m\text{-}pe^2t\text{-}u^3s(u^3s)$. Gen., -imp'etus. From impetere, to attack. Gr., $\epsilon\pi\epsilon\sigma\theta\omicron\mu\eta$. Ger., Anfall, Angriff. 1. An attack, onset, or paroxysm (of a disease). [A., 322.] 2. The force with which a body moves.—Impetum faciens. See ENONMON.—I. febris. Ger., Fieberanfall. The onset of a fever. INCUBATIVE, adj. I²n²'ku²-ba-ti²v. Pertaining to incubation.

INCUBATOR, n. I²n²'ku²-bat-o²r. From incubare, to hatch. An apparatus for maintaining objects at a uniform temperature, as in the artificial hatching of eggs. See COUVEUSE.—Tanner's i. See COUVEUSE.—1. for bacteria. An i. for bacterial culture, consisting of a rectangular chest, having a glass front, and provided with a water-jacket, a lamp or a gas-jet, and an automatic thermo-regulator for maintaining the desired temperature. [Cruikshank (a, 39).]

INCUBE (Fr.), adj. A²n²-ku²b. See INCUBOUS.

INCUBITIO (Lat.), INCUBITUS (Lat.), n's f. and m. I²n²-ku²(ku²)-bi²sh(bi²t)/i²-o, -ku²b(ku²b)/i²t-u²s(u²s). Gen., -o²nis, -cu²b-itus. See INCUBATION.

INCUBO (Lat.), n. m. I²n²'ku²(ku²)-bo. Gen., -o²nis. See INCUBUS.

INCUBOUS, adj. I²n²'ku²-bu²s. Lat., incubus (from incubare, to lie upon). Fr., incube. Imbricated from below (said of Juncus nanniacæ, in which the leaves are imbricated over each other from the base toward the apex). [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).] Cf. SUCCUBOUS.

INCUBUS (Lat.), n. m. I²n²'ku²(ku²)-bu²s(bu²s). From incubare, to lie upon. Gr., ἑφιάλης. Fr., cauchemar. Ger., Alpdrücken, Nachtmännchen, Trute. It., Sp., incubo. 1. Originally, a male demon that was supposed to attack women in their sleep, lying on them and causing nightmare. The female demon that attacked men was called Succuba. 2. Nightmare; the assemblage of sensations formerly attributed to an attack by i. (1st def.) or Succuba. It consists of some frightful dream associated with sensations of physical distress, chiefly that of oppression, as from a weight on the chest, and that of inability to escape or cry out. It ends in a loud groan and the recovery of consciousness. [A, 385, 528].—1. vigilantium. See DAYMARE.

INCUDAL, adj. I²n²-ku²d'l. From incus, an anvil. Pertaining to the incus.

INCUDEUS (Lat.), n. m. I²n²-kn²d(kud)'e²-u²s(u²s). From incus, an anvil. The laxator tympani. [L.]

INCUDO-MALLEAL, adj. I²n²-ku²'do-ma²l'e²-a²l. From incus, an anvil, and malleus, a hammer. Pertaining to the incus and to the malleus.

INCUDO-STAPEDIAL, adj. I²n²-ku²'do-sta²p-e²d'i²-a²l. For deriv., see INCUS and STAPES. Fr., incudo-stapédial. Ger., Amboss-Steigbügel. Pertaining to the incus and to the stapes.

INCUDO-TYMPANIC, adj. I²n²-ku²d'o-ti²m-pa²n'i²k. Pertaining to the incus and to the tympanum.

INCU-MALLEAL, adj. I²n²'ku²-ma²l'e²-a²l. See INCUDO-MALLEAL.

INCUMBENT, adj. I²n²-ku²m/be²nt. Lat., incumbens (from incubere, to recline upon). Fr., incumbant. Ger., auflicgend. 1. In botany, leaning or resting upon. An i. anther is one lying against the inner face of the filament. I. cotyledons are those so folded that the back of one is laid against the side of the radicle. [B, 1, 19, 123, 291 (a, 24).] 2. In ornithology, depressed or bending down upon something; laid at full length, said chiefly of the hind toe when its whole length rests on the ground or other support, owing to its low insertion. [L, 343.]

INCUNABULA (Lat.), n. n. pl. I²n²-ku²(ku)-na²b(na²)/u²l(n²l)-a². Fr., langes. Ger., Wickelband, Windel. Swaddling-clothes, swathing-bands. [A, 312 (a, 21) & a, 45.]

INCUNEATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n²-kn²(kn)-ne²-a(a²)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -o²nis. From in, in, and concavare, to plug. See GOMPHOSIS and IMPACTIO.

INCURABILITY, n. I^2n -ku²r-a²-bi²i²t-i². Fr., incurabilité. Ger., Unheilbarkeit. The state of being incurable.

INCURABLE, adj. I^2n -ku²r/a²-b¹. Lat., incurabilis. Fr., i. Ger., unheilbar. Not capable of being cured or healed. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

INCURRENS (Lat.), adj. I^2n^2 -ku⁵r(ku⁴r)re²nz(rans). Ger., anlaufend. From incurrere, to run into. See INCUBOUS. [a, 45.]

INCURSUS (Lat.), n. I^2n -ku⁵r(ku⁴r)su³(su⁴s). Gen., -curtus. From incurrere, to run into. Ger., Andrang, Anlauf. A sudden impulse. [L, 50 (a, 14); a, 45.]—I. arterie. An arterial pulsation. [A, 322.]

INCURVATE, adj. I^2n -ku⁵r/vat. See INCURVED.

INCURVATIO (Lat.), n. f. I^2n^2 -ku⁵r(ku⁴r)-va(wa³/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on'is. See INCURVATION.—I. manus. See CHEIROCYRTOUS.

INCURVATION, n. I^2n -ku⁵r-va/shu³n. Lat., incurvatio (from incurrere, to bend). Fr., i. Ger., Eiwärtsbiegung, Krümmung. It., incurvatura. Sp., encorvadura. The production of a curvature, also the state of being curved. [L, 107.]

INCURVED, adj. I^2n -ku⁵r/vd'. Lat., incurvatus, incurvus. Fr., incurvé, courbé en dedans. Ger., aufwärtsgekrümmt, einwärtsgekrümmt. Incurvate, curved inward, bending from without inward. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INCURVO-RECURVED, adj. I^2n -ku⁵rv'o-re-ku⁵rvd'. From incurrere, to bend, and recurvare, to bend backward. Curving inward and then backward. [a, 35.]

INCUS (Lat.), n. f. I^2n^2 k²u³s(u⁴s). Gen., -cus'is. From incudere, to forge with the hammer. Fr., enclume. Ger., Amboss. Lit., an anvil. 1. The second bone in the chain of ossicles of the middle ear. It has a body which resembles the crown of a molar tooth; two processes—the short, which points backward toward the entrance to the mastoid process, and the long, which, slightly bent in a direction almost parallel with the handle of the malleus, points downward and backward. On the long process there is the processus lenticularis, which articulates with the stapes. Its body is connected with the head of the malleus by a movable joint. [F, 32.]

INCUS-STAPEDIC, adj. I^2n 'ku²-sta-pe'di²k. See INCUDOSTAPEDIAL.

INCUS-TYMPANIC, adj. I^2n 'ku²-ti²m-pa²n'i²k. See INCUDOTYMPANIC.

INDAGATION, n. I^2n -da²g-a'shu³n. Lat., indagatio (from indagare, to trace out). An investigation, especially a digital examination by the vagina. [P. F. Mundé.]

INDECIDUOUS, adj. I^2n -de²s-i²d'u²-u³s. From in neg., and deciduus, falling down. Not deciduous. [a, 35.]

INDECIDUATE, adj. I^2n -de²s-i²d'u²-at. Lat., indeciduatus (from in neg., and deciduus, falling). Having the placenta not deciduate. The Indeciduata of Haeckel are a class of mammals including the Ungulata and Cetomorpha, in which at birth the placenta foetalis, or "embryonic cake," is alone removed, the placenta uterina, or "maternal cake," remaining attached to the walls of the uterus. [L, 146 (a, 39).]

INDECOMPOSABILITY, n. I^2n -de-ko²m-poz-a²b-i²l'i²t-i². From in neg., de, from, and componere, to place. The state or quality of being indecomposable. [B.]

INDEFINITE, adj. I^2n -de²i²'n-i²t. Lat., indefinitus (from in, not, and definire, to set bounds to). Fr., indéfini. Ger., unbestimmt. 1. Not definite in number. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).] 2. See INDETERMINATE.

INDEHISCENCE, n. I^2n -de-hi²s'e²ns. Lat., indehiscencia (from in, not, and dehiscere, to part). Fr., indéhiscence. Ger., Unaufspringen. The character of not opening at maturity. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INDEHISCENT, adj. I^2n -de-hi²s'e²nt. Lat., indehiscens. Fr., indéhiscant. Ger., unaufspringend. Characterized by indehiscence. [B, 1, 19 (a, 24).]

INDÉLIBROME (Fr.). n. A^2n^2 -da-le-brom. A crystallizable substance, $C_{12}H_{18}Br_2N_2O_4$, formed by the action of bromine on isamic acid; yellow, insoluble in water, slightly soluble in alcohol and in ether, and melting at a very high temperature. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

INDENOXYD (Ger.), n. I^2n 'dan-ox-u⁰l'. Isatic acid. [A, 324.]

INDENTATE, adj. I^2n -de²n'tat. Lat., indentatus (from in neg., and dentatus, toothed). Fr., indenté. Ger., ungezähnt. Not dentate. [B, 1 (a, 24).] See ENTIRE.

INDENTATION, n. I^2n -de²n-ta'shu³n. Lat., indentatio (from in, in, and dentatus, toothed). Fr., i. Ger., Verzahnung. A cut or notch in the margin of anything. [a, 24.]

INDENTED, adj. I^2n -de²n'te'd. Lat., indentatus. Fr., indenté. Ger., gezähnt. Toothed, notched, having indentations. [a, 24.]

INDEPENDENCE, n. I^2n -de-pe²nd-e²ns. In botany, the separation of organs usually entire. [B, 308 (a, 35).]

INDEPENDENT, adj. I^2n -de-pe²nd-e²nt. From in, not, and dependere, to hang from. Fr., indépendant. Ger., unabhängig. Distinct, separate; said of plant-organs which are separate though usually united. [B, 308 (a, 35).]

INDERJOB (Beng.), n. The Wrightia antidysenterica. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

INDETERMINATE, adj. I^2n -de-tu²rm'i²n-at. Lat., indeterminatus (from in, neg., and determinare, to limit). Fr., indéterminé. Ger., unbestimmt. Indefinite, uncertain, not limited. [a, 24.] See I. INFLORESCENCE.

INDEX (Lat.), n. com. I^2n 'de²x. Gen., ind'icis. From indicare, to show. Fr., indice. Ger., Anzeiger. 1. That which points out or indicates. 2. See I. FINGER. 3. In ornithology, the principal digit of the wing, often so called, but really homologous with the third or middle finger of mammals, the pollex or so-called thumb of birds being the homologue of the mammalian 1. [L, 343.]—Antebrachial i. See Radio-humeral i.—Alveolar i. Fr., indice alvéolaire. See Gnathic i.—Basilar i. Fr., indice basilaire. The ratio of the projection of the portion of the skull on a plane surface anterior to the basion to the projection of the entire skull. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—Breadth-breadth i. Ger., Breitenbreiteni. The ratio between the greatest breadth of the skull and the least distance between two corresponding points in the temporal fossæ measured with calipers. [L, 132 (a, 29).]—Breadth-height i. The ratio between the maximum breadth and the maximum height of a skull determined by the formula $\frac{100 \times \text{height}}{\text{breadth}}$. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

—Cephalic i. An i. of the cranium, especially the length-breadth i. [L.]—Cephalo-facial i. See Cerebro-facial i.—Cephalo-nasal i. See Rhino-cephalic i.—Cephalo-orbital i. Fr., indice céphalo-orbitale (ou céphalo-orbitaire, ou céphalo-orbitate). Of Mantegazza, the ratio between the capacity of the orbits and that of the skull. [L.]—Cephalo-orbito-nasal i. See Cerebro-facial i.—Cephalo-rhachidian i., Cephalo-spinal i. Fr., indice céphalo-rhachidien. Of Mantegazza, the ratio between the area of the occipital foramen, expressed in square millimetres, and the cranial capacity, expressed in cu. cm., the latter having a constant value of 100. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—Cerebral i. The ratio between the greatest transverse and antero-posterior diameters of the brain. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—Cerebro-facial i. Fr., indice cérébro-faciale. The ratio of the united capacity of the orbits and the nasal fossæ to that of the skull. [L.]—Cubic cranial i. Fr., indice cubique du crâne. The ratio which the cubic capacity of a skull bears to the cubic contents of a solid having for its diameter the greatest antero-posterior transverse and vertical diameter of the skull. [L, 87 (a, 29).]—Facial i. Fr., indice facial. Ger., Gesichts'. The ratio between the greatest breadth and the greatest length of the face. [L, 149.]—Frontal i. Fr., indice frontal. The ratio between the minimum frontal diameter and the maximum transverse diameter of the skull. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—Fronto-parietal i. The ratio of the minimum frontal diameter to the maximum breadth of the skull as determined by the formula $\frac{100 \times \text{minimum frontal diameter}}{\text{breadth}}$.

[“Arch. f. Anthropol.” (a, 29).]—Gesichts' (Ger.). See Facial i.—Gnathic i. [Flower]. The ratio between the basialveolar length and the basinasal length (= 100) of a skull. [L, 142.]—I. of height (of the skull). The proportion of the height of the skull (measured from the basion to the bregma) to its length. [C.]—I. of platycnemism. Fr., indice de la platycnémie. The ratio between the antero-posterior diameter and the transverse diameter, the latter having a constant value of 100, of a plane, perpendicular to the long axis of the bone, on a level with the nutrient foramen. [L, 150 (a, 29).]—I. of refraction. See Refractive i.—I. of the breadth of the cranium. See Cephalic i.—I. of the ear. Fr., indice de l'oreille. The ratio of the breadth of the ear to its length, the latter having a constant value of 100. [L, 150 (a, 29).]—I. of the foramen magnum. Fr., indice du trou occipital. The ratio of the greatest breadth of the foramen magnum to its greatest length. [L, 87 (a, 29).]—I. of the head. Fr., indice de la tête. The ratio of the maximum height of the face to its maximum diameter. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—I. of the ramus of the jaw. Fr., indice de la branche postérieure de la mandibule. The ratio of the length of the ramus of the jaw from the gonion to the top of the condyle to the minimum breadth of the ramus measured at right angles to the length. [L, 150 (a, 29).]—Lateral-corono-Rolandic i. The distance of the lower extremity of the fissure of Rolando from the coronal suture compared with the distance between the anterior and posterior extremities of the cerebral hemisphere measured over its lateral surface, which latter has a constant value of 100. [“Jour. of Anat. and Physiol.” Oct., 1890, p. 12 (a, 29).]—Lateral-fronto-Rolandic i. The distance of the lower extremity of the fissure of Rolando from the anterior end of the cerebrum compared with the distance between the anterior and posterior extremities of the cerebral hemisphere measured over its lateral surface, which latter has a constant value of 100. [l. c. (a, 29).]—Length-breadth i. The ratio between the maximum length and the maximum breadth of a skull determined by the formula $\frac{100 \times \text{breadth}}{\text{length}}$. [L, 149, 332 (a, 29).]—Length-height i. The ratio between the maximum length and the maximum height of a skull determined by the formula $\frac{100 \times \text{height}}{\text{length}}$. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Mesial-corono-Rolandic i.

The distance of the upper extremity of the fissure of Rolando from the coronal suture compared with the length of the upper margin of the cerebral hemisphere, which latter has a constant value of 100. [l. c. (a, 29).]—Mesial-fronto-Rolandic i. The distance of the upper extremity of the fissure of Rolando from the anterior end of the cerebrum compared with the length of the upper margin of the cerebral hemisphere, which latter has a constant value of 100. [l. c. (a, 29).]—Nasal i. Fr., indice nasal. The ratio between the vertical and horizontal diameters of the aperture pyriformis. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Orbital i. Fr., indice orbitaire. The ratio of the vertical height of the base of the orbit to the transverse width, the latter being expressed as 100. [C, 3; L, 149.] See, also, MEGASEME, MESOSEME, and MICROSEME.—Palatine i. The ratio of the maximum breadth of the vault of the palate to its maximum length. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—Pelvic i. Fr., indice pelvien. The ratio between the antero-posterior and the transverse diameter of the pelvis. [C.]—Refractive i. Fr., indice (ou exposant) réfractif. Ger., Refraktionscoefficient, Refraktionsanzeiger. The ratio (constant for the same two media) between the sines of the angle of incidence and of the angle of refraction, when a ray of light passing from one medium to another undergoes deviation. It is usually indicated by the symbol n, and when the i. for any one medium is stated without specifying the other, the latter is always understood to be air. [B.]—RHINO-CEPHALIC I. Fr., indice rhinocéphale (ou rhinocéphalique). Of Mantegazza, the ratio of the capacity of the nasal fossae to the capacity of the skull, the former being expressed by 100. [L.]—SACRAL I. Fr., indice sacré. The ratio of the greatest length of the sacrum to its greatest breadth. [Challenger (a, 29).]—SCAPULAR I. The ratio between the greatest length and the greatest breadth of the scapula, determined by the formula $\frac{100 \times \text{breadth}}{\text{length}}$. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—THORACIC I. The ratio between the antero-posterior diameter of the thorax measured at the level of the lower extremity of the sternum and the greatest transverse diameter at the same level. [L, 150 (a, 29).]

INDIAN, adj. I^{2n}/di^2-a^2n . Lat., indicus from India, a country of Asia). Fr., indien. Of or pertaining to (1) India and the Indies, or (2) the aborigines of the Western Hemisphere. [a, 17.]—I. bread, I. loaf. See TUCKAHOE.—I. mourner. The Nyctanthes arbor tristis. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

INDIAN-RUBBER, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-a^2n-ru^2b^1u^6r$. See CAOUTCHOUC.

INDIAN SPRINGS, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-a^2n-sprj^2n^2z'$. 1. A place in Butts County, Georgia, where there are springs containing magnesium carbonate and sulphate, potassium and calcium sulphates, carbonic-acid gas, hydrogen sulphide, and nitrogen. 2. A place in Martin County, Indiana, where there are springs containing magnesium and calcium carbonates and sulphates, carbonic-acid gas, hydrogen sulphide, oxygen, nitrogen, etc. [A, 363 (a, 21).]

INDIA-RUBBER, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-a^2n-ru^2b^1u^6r$. See CAOUTCHOUC.—I.-r. vine. See CRYPTOSTEGIA grandiflora.

INDICAN, INDICANE, n's. I^{2n}/di^2-ka^2n . kan. Fr., indican. Ger., Indican, Indikan. A substance, $C_{26}H_{42}NO_{17}$, or $C_8H_7NSO_4$, found in Isatis tinctoria, and also in blood, urine, sweat, etc., its antecedent here probably being indol. It forms a yellowish syrup of bitter taste and acid reaction, soluble in water, in alcohol, and in ether, and readily decomposed by heat, acids, etc., into indigotin and indiglycin. In certain diseases it is present in the urine in considerable quantity, and, decomposing spontaneously, produces a blue tint in the latter. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14); K.]

INDICANINE, n. I^{2n}/di^2-kan^2en . A substance, $C_{20}H_{22}NO_{12}$, formed by the action of alkalis upon indican. [B, 93.]

INDICANT, adj. I^{2n}/di^2-k^2nt . Lat., indicans (from indicare, to point to). Fr., indiquant. Ger., anzeigend. Indicative, indicating. [A, 322.]

INDICANURIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^{2n}/di^2-k^2a^2n(a^2n)-u^2(u)/ri^2-a^2$. An excess of indican in the urine. [B.]

INDICATED, adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-kat^2e^2d$. Lat., indicatus (from indicare, to point out). Fr., indiqué. Ger., angezeigt. Shown by the signs and symptoms to be proper or necessary to employ (said of therapeutical measures).

INDICATEUR (Fr.), n. $A^{2n}2-de-ka^2-tu^6r$. 1. See INDICATOR. 2. See INDEX FINGER.—I. sur arc. An arc-indicator. [B, 121.] See AUXANOMETER.—I. sur fil. A thread-indicator. [B, 121.] See AUXANOMETER.

INDICATING, adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-kat^2-i^2n^2$. See INDICANT.

INDICATIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^{2n}/di^2-ka^2(k^2a^2)/shi^2(ti^2)-o$. Gen., -on^2is. See INDICATION.—I. casualis. See Causal INDICATION.—I. curativa. See Curative INDICATION.—I. febris. That which indicates what is to be done for a given fever. [a, 40.]—I. hypothetica. The indication pointing out a course to be pursued upon hypothetical reasoning. [a, 40.]—I. localis. The i. called for by the local condition or constitutional condition. [B.]—I. morbi. See Curative INDICATION.—I. palliativa. See Palliative INDICATION.—I. preservativa. See Vital INDICATION.—I. prophylactica. See Prophylactic INDICATION.—I. symptomatica. See Symptomatic INDICATION.—I. topica. See I. localis.—I. vitalis. See Vital i.

INDICATION, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-ka^2/shu^2n$. Gr., ἰνδίκαισις, ἰνδείγμα (2d def.). Lat., indicatio (from indicare, to point out), indicatum (2d def.). Fr., i., symptome (1st def.). Ger., Anzeige, Symptom, Indikation. 1. A sign or symptom. 2. An inference from a patient's condition, or the grounds for such an inference, as to what is to be done to prevent, cure, or mitigate the disease.—Accessory i. See Symptomatic i. [a, 40.]—Causal i. Lat., indicatio causalis. An i. for curing a disease by abolishing the cause of its continuance. [Samuel (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Curative i. Lat., indicatio curativa (seu morbis). An i. of measures likely to cure a disease. [Samuel (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Essential i. See Principal i.—Palliative i. Lat., indicatio palliativa. An i. of measures likely to palliate a disease. [Samuel (A, 319).]—Preservative i. Lat., indicatio preservativa. See Vital i.—Principal i. That symptom which indicates the most important thing to be done under given circumstances. [a, 40.]—Prophylactic i. Lat., indicatio prophylactica. An i. of measures likely to ward off disease, such as removing the causes of infection, isolating the individual, or strengthening his powers of resistance. [Samuel (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Rational i. See Principal i.—Symptomatic i. Lat., indicatio symptomatica. An i. of measures for attacking the most prominent symptoms of a disease. [Samuel (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Therapeutic i. See I. (2d def.).—Vital i. Lat., indicatio vitalis. An urgent indication for the immediate preservation of life. [A, 88.]

INDICATOR (Lat.), n. m. $I^{2n}/di^2-k^2a^2(a^2)/to^2r$; in Eng., $I^{2n}/di^2-k^2-at^2o^2r$. Gen., or^2is. From indicare, to point out. Fr., indicateur (1st def.). Ger., Anzeiger. 1. That which points out; (a) in physics, an apparatus or mechanism which, like the hand of a clock, serves to register the progress of a movement or process; (b) in chemistry, a substance like litmus, which shows when a chemical change is indicated. [B.] 2. See EXTENSOR indicis (proprius).—Arc i. Fr., indicateur sur arc. See AUXANOMETER.—Thread-i. Fr., indicateur sur fil. See AUXANOMETER.

INDICE (Fr.), n. $A^{2n}2-des$. See INDEX.—I. alvéolaire. See Gnathic INDEX.—I. basilo-latitudinal. The ratio between the length of the naso-basilar line and the maximum transverse diameter of the skull, the former having a constant value of 100. ["Rev. d'anthropol." 1874, p. 244 (a, 29).]—I. basilo-longitudinal. The ratio between the length of the naso-basilar line and the antero-posterior diameter of the skull, the former having a constant value of 100. ["Rev. d'anthropol." 1874, p. 244 (a, 29).]—I. basilo-verticil. The ratio between the length of the naso-basilar line and the maximum vertical diameter of the skull, the former having a constant value of 100. ["Rev. d'anthropol." 1874, p. 244 (a, 29).]—I. des moyennes. An index calculated from the average measurements of a number of skulls. [L, 149 (a, 29).]—I. latitudino-basilaire. The ratio between the length of the naso-basilar line and the maximum transverse diameter of the skull, the latter having a constant value of 100. ["Rev. d'anthropol." 1874 (a, 29).]—I. longitudino-basilaire. The ratio between the length of the naso-basilar line and the antero-posterior diameter of the skull, the latter having a constant value of 100. [a, 29.]

INDICIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^{2n}/di^2s(di^2k^2)/i^2-u^2m(u^4m)$. See INDEX and INDICATION (2d def.).—I. simplex. Ger., einfache Anzeige. That which indicates the most obvious course to pursue. [D, 129, p. 30 (a, 40).]—I. universale. See Principal INDICATION.

INDICON (Lat.), INDICUM (Lat.), n's n. I^{2n}/di^2-ko^2n , ku^2m (ku^4m). Gr., ἰνδικόν. Indigo. [B, 121, 180 (a, 24).]

INDICUS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-k^2us(u^4s)$. See INDIAN.

INDIFFERENT, adj. $I^{2n}/di^2fe^2r-e^2nt$. From indifferens, in which there is no difference. 1. In embryology, supposed to form some part not specially differentiated; as the ectoderm after the neural plate and the rudiments of the special sense organs have been given off (said of cell, a cell-mass, or cell-layer). ["Amer. Nat.," 1891, p. 335 (J).] 2. In chemistry, little or not at all affected by reagents; also reacting equally and in a similar manner to reagents of opposite character. [B.] 3. In physics, affected in no way by a force which is usually capable of two opposite kinds of action; e. g., a body which is neither attracted nor repelled by a magnet. Neutral; neither positive nor negative. [B.]

INDIFFERENTISM, n. $I^{2n}/di^2fe^2r-e^2nt-i^2zm$. In embryology, not becoming specially differentiated or capable of differentiating in all directions. ["Amer. Nat.," 1891 (J, 55).]

INDIFULVIN, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-fu^2l^2vi^2n$. Fr., indivulvine. Ger., I. A substance obtained by decomposing indican with dilute acids. Two varieties are known, α -I., $C_{22}H_{22}N_2O_3$; and β -I., $C_{44}H_{44}N_4O_6$, both soluble in alcohol. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIFUSCIN, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-fu^2s^2in$. A substance, $C_{22}H_{22}N_2O_3$, obtained by decomposing indican with dilute acids. [B.]

INDIG (Ger.), n. I^{2n}/di^2g . See INDIGO.—Anil-I. See INDROPERA anil.—I-blau. See INDIGOTIN.—I-küpe. A vat in which crude indigo is prepared for use as a dye by dissolving in water and fermenting. [L, 30 (a, 14).]—I-leim. A proteid resembling gliadin, but not sticky, extracted from indigo by treating it with dilute acids. [B, 48 (a, 14).]—I-pflanze. See INDIGOFERA.—I-roth. See INDIGO red.—I-schwefelsäure. See INDIGOTINSULPHONIC ACID.—I-turie. Indoxylsulphuric acid. [a, 38.]—I-weiss. See INDIGOCEN.

INDIGENE, n. I^{2n}/di^2-jen . From indu, in, and gignere, to beget. An indigenous plant. [B, 116 (a, 24).]

INDIGENOUS, adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-je^2n-u^2s$. Lat., indigenus (from indu, in, and gignere, to beget). Fr., indigène. Ger., inländisch, einheimisch. Native to a country; not foreign. [a, 24.]

INDIGÉRÉ (Fr.), adj. $A^{2n}2-de-zha-ra$. Undigested. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INDIGESTIBLE, adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-je^2st^2i^2b^1$. Lat., indigestibilis (from in, not, and digerere, to divide). Fr., i. Ger., unverdaulich. Incapable of being digested; as commonly used, difficult of digestion. [a, 17.]

INDIGESTION, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-je^2st^2yu^2n$. Lat., indigestio (from in, not, and digerere, to separate). Fr., i. Ger., I. Unverdaulichung (1st def.). Apepsia or dyspepsia, especially acute dyspepsia.—Intestinal i. I. dependent upon derangement of the functions of the small intestine. It may be a primary disease or secondary to diseases of the liver, pancreas, or stomach. It is characterized by constant dull pain, flatulence, and constipation. The appetite is seldom impaired. [Loomis (a, 40).]

INDIGATION, n. $I^{2n}/di^2-i^2t-a^2shu^2n$. From in, into, and digitus, a digit. Fr., i. Ger., Einfingeringung. Intussusception; so called from the resemblance to intussusception of the finger of a glove. [A, 322.]

INDIGLUCIN, INDIGLYCIN, n's. $I^{2n}/di^2-glu^2s^2in$, $glis^2in$. Fr., indiglycine. Ger., Indiglycin. A decomposition product, $C_8H_{10}O_6$, of indican; a yellow, sweetish syrup, soluble in alcohol and in water, insoluble in ether. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIGNATORIUS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}/di^2-g-na^2t(na^2t)-o^2ri^2-u^2s$ (u^4s). From indignari, to be indignant. Expressive of indignation; as a n., the external rectus muscle of the eye, because its action expresses indignation. [Bartholin (A, 325).]

INDIGO, n. I^{2n}/di^2go . Gr., ἰνδικόν (n. of adj. ἰνδικός [φάρμακον understood]). Lat., indicium (n. of adj. indicium [pigmentum understood]). Fr., i. Ger., I. Indig I. It., indaco. Sp., indigo [Mex. Ph.] añil. Ar., atvil. Sanser., nili. A blue dye-stuff obtained from the leaves or green stalks of plants of the genus Indigofera, from Wrightia tinctoria, Polygonum tinctorium, Galega tinctoria, Tephrosia apollinea, Tephrosia toxicaria, Randia aculeata, etc.;

also prepared artificially. Its efficiency in coloring blue depends on the presence of indigotin, but other coloring matters are present (see I. red, I. brown, and I. gluten), besides certain inorganic substances. Internally, it is very nauseating and cathartic, discolors the urine, but without producing diuresis, and is a gastrointestinal irritant (see also the plants producing it). It has been used in epilepsy, infantile convulsions, chorea, hysteria, and amenorrhoea. 2. The Indigofera tinctoria and other i-bearing plants. [B, 5, 19, 77, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—Amer d'l. (Fr.). Picric acid. [B, 92.]—American wild i. The Baptisia tinctoria. [B, 5, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—Bastard i. Fr., i. bâtard, i. sauvage. 1. The Amorpha fruticosa. [B, 19, 173 (a, 24).] 2. The Cassia occidentalis. [B, 88 (a, 39).] Cf. Fulse i.—Bengal i. A commercial name for i. from Bengal, where the most highly esteemed kinds are prepared. There are many qualities of Bengal i., the best forming a porous, light, and easily pulverized mass, that breaks with a brilliant purple-blue color. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Chinese i. The Polygonum tinctorium and certain other non-leguminous plants, also the dye obtained from them, known in China as lan. [B, 77, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—Common dyers' i. The Indigofera tinctoria. [a, 24.]—Egyptian i. Fr., i. d'Égypte. Ger., ägyptischer Indig. A dye formerly considered the product of Indigofera argentea; now thought to be obtained from Tephrosia apollinea and Tephrosia toxicaria. [B, 19, 173, 180, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—English i., European i. The Isatis tinctoria. [B, 19, 77, 180 (a, 24).]—False i. Fr., faux i. The genera Amorpha and Baptisia, also the Galega officinalis. [B, 19, 173, 275 (a, 24).]—Gaud i. In the Punjab, sun-dried cakes of i. consisting of the crude fecula of Indigofera tinctoria or other species of Indigofera. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc." xxiv (a, 14).]—German i. Ger., deutscher Indig. The Isatis tinctoria. [B, 19, 77, 180 (a, 24).]—Indian i. The Indigofera tinctoria or its dye. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—I'baum (Ger.). The Nerium tinctorium. [B, 48 (a, 14).]—I. bâtard (Fr.). See Bastard i.—I. berry. The Randia latifolia. In India, the Indigofera paucifolia. [B, 5, 172 (a, 24).]

INDIGOFERA (Lat., n. f. I²ⁿ-di²g-o^{2f}e^{2r}-a^s. From indigo (q. v.), and ferre, to bear. Fr., indigofer. Ger., Indigoferanze, Indigo'pflanze. The indigo-plant; of Linnaeus, a genus of the Indigoferae, or Indigoferaceae (Fr., indigoferées), which are a subtribe of leguminous herbs or shrubs of the Papilionaceae, tribe Galegeae. [B, 19, 34, 42, 170, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. angustifolia. Fr., indigotier à feuilles étroites. An East Indian species producing indigo. The root is a bitter tonic and febrifuge. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. anil. Fr., anil, anir, indigo anil. Ger., Anil, Anil-Indig. A species indigenous to the West Indies, by some considered a variety of I. tinctoria, yielding much of the indigo of commerce. The root is used in the East and West Indies for calculous affections and syphilis, and the leaves are employed as a bitter tonic and febrifuge and as an external emollient application. [B, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24).] Cf. I. tinctoria.—I. arcuata. Fr., indigotier courbé en arc. A species found in the East, having properties like those of I. anil. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. argentea, I. articulata. Fr., indigotier argenté. Ger., ägyptische Indigo'pflanze, siberfarbene Indigo'pflanze. A species indigenous to Egypt, Arabia, and the East Indies. In Egypt the seeds are used as a vermifuge, in the East Indies the root and leaves are used like those of I. anil, and in the West Indies the root is used in gonorrhoea and gleet, and a decoction of the whole plant in asthma. [B, 5, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. aspalathifolia, I. aspalathoides. Malay, mavnelli. A species found on waste land in India, where the leaves, flowers, and tender shoots are used in decoction as a cooling and demulcent drink, and in elephantiasis and cancer. The root is given in toothache and aphthae, and yields an oil used as an ointment in erysipelas. The ashes of the burnt plant are used for removing dandruff, and the leaves as an application to abscesses. [B, 172, 180 (a, 24).]—I. carolinæ. Fr., indigotier bleu. An East Indian species yielding a light-blue indigo in great quantity. [B, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. caroliniana. Fr., indigotier de Caroline. A species found in sandy woods from North Carolina to Florida; said to have the same properties as I. anil. [B, 34, 173 (a, 24).]—I. ennea-phylla. Fr., indigotier à neuf feuilles. Ger., neunblättrige Indigo'pflanze. A species found in the East Indies. The juice is said to be antiscorbutic and alterative, and is used in syphilitic affections. The whole plant is given in infusion as a diuretic in fevers and coughs. [B, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. frutescens. An East Indian species used in decoction in vesical calculus. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. glabra. Fr., indigotier glabre. An East Indian species having properties like those of I. anil. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. glauca. See I. argentea.—I. helysaroides. A species used in the East Indies in abdominal and calculous diseases. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. hirsuta. Fr., indigotier velu. An indigoferous species used in the East Indies in cerebral disorders. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. indica. See I. tinctoria.—I. microcarpa. A South American species; used in Brazil in poultices. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. oblongifolia. Fr., indigotier oblong. A species found in Arabia, where a fresh decoction is used in colic. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. paucifolia. The wild indigo found in the East Indies, where it is used as an antidote to poisons, the root, boiled in milk, as a purgative, and the stem, in decoction, as a gargle in mercurial salivation. [B, 172 (a, 24).]—I. pseudo-tinctoria. Fr., indigotier faux des teinturiers. An indigoferous East Indian species. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. sumatrana, I. tinctoria. Fr., indigotier des teinturiers (1st def.). Ger.,

INDIGOFERA TINCTORIA. [A, 327.]

Färbe-Indigo'pflanze, sichelfrüchtige Indigo'pflanze (1st def.). 1. Of Linnaeus, the common indigo-plant, indigenous to the East Indies, but now disseminated throughout the tropics. The leaves are considered alterative, and are used in hepatitis; a decoction of the root is used in calculus; a poultice of the leaves is applied over the bladder to excite micturition, and the juice of the young branches is used in asthma. [B, 5, 19, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24).] See INDIGO and cf. I. anil. 2. Of Forskål, see I. argentea.—I. trifoliata. Guz., vekhario. A species found in the East. The leaves are used as an alterative, nutritive, tonic, astrigent, and demulcent. [A, 479 (a, 21).]—I. uniflora. Ger., einblättrige Indigo'pflanze. A species found in the East Indies, used like I. aspalathifolia. [B, 172, 180 (a, 24).]

INDIGOFEROUS, adj. I²ⁿ-di²g-o^{2f}e^{2r}-u^s. Lat., indigoferus (from indigo [q. v.], and ferre, to bear). Fr., indigo'fère. Ger., indigotragend. Yielding indigo. [L, 107.]

INDIGOGEN, n. I²ⁿ-di²g-o²-je²ⁿ. From ινδικόν, indigo, and γεννάω, to engender. Fr., indigo blanc. Ger., weisser Indigo. Reduced, or white, indigo; a soluble compound, C₈H₆N₂O, formed by the action of deoxidizing agents on indigo. [B, 8 (a, 24).]

INDIGOGENOUS, adj. I²ⁿ-di²g-o²j^e-u^s. Fr., indigogène. In chemistry, indigo-producing.

INDIGOTIC, adj. I²ⁿ-di²-go²t²ik. Lat., indigoticus. Fr., indigotique. 1. Pertaining to or derived from indigo. 2. Of the deepest blue. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).]—I. acid. Fr., acide indigotique. Ger., Indigosäure. Syn.: nitrosalicylic acid. An acid formed by the action of nitric acid on indigo. [B, 28, 93 (a, 14).]—I. group. Fr., groupe indigotique. A group of substances containing the radicle indyl or, according to more recent views, formed from indol by substitution. They comprise hydroxindol, hyndric acid, isatic acid, indigo-blue, indigo-white, etc. [B, 46, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIGOTIN, n. $I_2n^{d^2}g\text{-}o\text{-}i^2n$. Fr., indigotine. Ger., I. The blue coloring matter, $C_{16}H_{10}N_2O_2$, of indigo, obtainable as a blue amorphous powder, and also in shining copper-red crystals. It is insoluble in water, in dilute or cold alcohol, in dilute acids, and in cold ether; soluble in anhydrous acetic acid to which a drop of sulphuric acid is added, in boiling strong alcohol, in methyl alcohol, and in carbolic acid. [B, 270 (a, 38); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xix (a, 39).]—Disulphonic acid, I. monosulphonic acid, I. sulphonic acid. Ger., I. disulfonsäure, I. monosulfonsäure, Indigosulfosäure, Indigschwefelsäure, Indigsulfonsäure. An acid obtained from I. by treating with fuming sulphuric acid. By using 7 to 10 parts of sulphuric acid, I. monosulphonic, pheneticulphuric, or sulphopurpuric acid, $C_{16}H_8N_2O_7 \cdot SO_2H$, is obtained as a purple powder soluble in water or alcohol, insoluble in dilute acids; by using 15 parts of sulphuric acid, I. disulphonic, sulphindigotic, or sulphindyllic acid, $C_{16}H_8N_2O_7 \cdot (SO_2H)_2$, is obtained as an amorphous blue mass, easily soluble in water and in alcohol. [B, 4, 158, 270 (a, 38).]

INDIGOURIA (Lat.), n. f. $I_2nd^{d^2}g\text{-}o\text{-}u^2(u^2)r^i2\text{-}a^2$. From ινδικόν, indigo, and ουρον, urine. Fr., indigourie. Ger., Indigourie. The secretion of urine containing indigo; due to the decomposition of the normal indican. [Gilchrist, Kornblume (a, 40).]

INDIGPFLANZE (Ger.), n. $I_2nd^{d^2}g\text{-}pfla^2nts\text{-}e^2$. See INDIGOFERA.—Sichelfrüchtige I. See INDIGOFERA tinctoria.—Silberfarbene I. See INDIGOFERA argentea.

INDIGUM, n. $I_2nd^{d^2}g\text{-}u^2m$. See INDIGO.

INDIHUMIN, n. $I_2nd\text{-}i^2\text{-}hu^2m^2n$. Fr., indihumine. A product of the decomposition of indican by dilute acids, $C_{16}H_8NO_3$, probably identical with indigo-brown; insoluble in water and in alcohol, soluble in alkaline solutions. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIKATION (Ger.), n. $I_2n\text{-}d\text{-}ka^2\text{-}tse\text{-}ou^2$. See INDICATION.

INDIN, n. $I_2nd^{d^2}n$. Fr., indine. Ger., I. A substance, $C_{16}H_{10}N_2O_2$, isomeric with indigotin, obtained by rubbing together sulphisatide and alcoholic potassic hydrate, and washing the resulting mass with water. It occurs as a fine red powder [Strecker], consisting of dark rose-colored microscopic crystals, insoluble in water, slightly soluble in alcohol [Roscoe and Schorlemmer], readily soluble in boiling alcohol or ether and in sulphuric acid. [B, 3, 4 (a, 38), 93 (a, 14).]—Potassium (Ger.). See POTASSIUM indin.—I. sulphuric acid. Fr., acide I. sulfurique. Ger., Indinschwefelsäure. An oxidation product of hydrindimsulphuric acid, $C_{16}H_{10}N_2S_2O_6$, a reddish substance easily soluble in water, slightly soluble in alcohol, insoluble in ether; used to dye purple. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIPURPURIN, n. $I_2nd\text{-}i^2\text{-}pu^2r^2\text{-}pu^2r^2\text{-}i^2n$. See INDIGO-purpurin.

INDIRECT, adj. $I_2n\text{-}di\text{-}re^2kt'$. Lat., indirectus (from in, neg., and dirigere, to lay straight). Fr., Ger., I. Not direct, mediate; in cell division, caryocentric. [J; a, 45.]

INDIRIBETIN, n. $I_2nd\text{-}i^2\text{-}re\text{-}i^2n$. From ινδικόν, indigo, and ριβίνη, resin. Fr., indiribétine. A product of the decomposition of indican by dilute acids, $C_{16}H_{17}NO_3$; insoluble in water and in alcohol, soluble in alkaline solutions. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

INDIRUBIN, n. $I_2nd\text{-}i^2\text{-}ru^2b^2i^2n$. Fr., indirubine. Ger., I. See INDIGO RED.

INDISINE, n. $I_2nd^{d^2}s\text{-}en$. See FUCHSINE.

INDISPOSED, adj. $I_2n\text{-}di^2s\text{-}poz^2d'$. Fr., indisposé. Ger., unpässlich, abgeneigt. It., indisposto. Sp., indispuesto. Slightly ill. [D (a, 45).]

INDISPOSITION, n. $I_2n\text{-}di^2s\text{-}po\text{-}si^2sh^2u^2n$. From in, neg., and dispositio, a regular disposition. Fr., i. Ger., Unpässlichkeit, Uebelfinden. A slight illness or malaise. [D, 3.]

INDISSOLUBILITY, n. $I_2n\text{-}di^2s\text{-}so\text{-}l^2\text{-}u^2\text{-}bi^2l^2i^2t\text{-}i^2$. From in, neg., and dissolubilis, soluble. Fr., indissolubilité. Ger., Unauflöslichkeit. See INSOLUBILITY.

INDISSOLUBLE, adj. $I_2n\text{-}di^2s\text{-}so\text{-}l^2\text{-}u^2\text{-}b^2l$. Fr., i. See INSOLUBLE.

INDIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I_2nd^{d^2}i^2\text{-}u^2m(u^2m)$. From ινδικόν, indigo. A metallic element discovered in 1863 by Reich and Richter. It is a white, very soft and easily malleable substance, not tarnishing by exposure to air, having the sp. gr. of 7.42, and melting at 176°. In compounds it acts as a trivalent radicle, forming salts analogous to those of aluminium. Symbol, In; atomic weight, 113.4. It is very similar to cadmium in its relation to other substances. [B, 3; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xiv (a, 39).]—Hydrated i. oxide. A white substance, $In_2O_3 \cdot H_2O$, obtained by precipitating its salts. It is gelatinous when moist, horn-like when dried. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. acetate. A substance, $(C_2H_3O_2)_3In_2$, obtained by dissolving hydrated i. oxide, freshly precipitated from cold solution, in glacial acetic acid, and evaporating the solution to crystallization. It forms tufts of silky, glistening needles, readily decomposed, and consequently not of constant composition. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. alum, I. and ammonium sulphate. A compound of the formula $In_2(SO_4)_3 \cdot (NH_4)_2SO_4 + 24H_2O$. [B, 3.]—I. and potassium cyanide. A salt obtained by treating a solution of i. salt with potassium cyanide. It exists only in solution, hydrated i. oxide being deposited on evaporation. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. bichloride. A compound, $InCl_2$, obtained by heating gaseous hydrochloric acid with metallic i.; an amberyellow liquid which congeals on cooling to form a crystalline mass. It is split by water into i. trichloride and metallic i. Its vapor density is normal at high temperatures. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvii (a, 39).]—I. bromide. A white, crystalline, volatile substance, In_2Br_4 , obtained in the same manner as i. chloride. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvi (a, 39).]—I. chloride. A glistening, crystalline, scaly substance, In_2Cl_4 , obtained by heating i., mixed with carbon, in a current of chlorine. It is anhydrous, is decomposed by sodium with explosive violence, is exceedingly hygroscopic, and dissolves in water with a hissing noise, and the elimination of considerable heat. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).] See also I. bichloride and I. monochloride.—I. chromate. A substance obtained by dissolving the hydrated oxide in an aqueous solution of chromic acid. The neutral salt is insoluble; the acid salt remains, on evaporation, in the form of an uncrystallizable, syrupy mass. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. cyanide. Fr., cyanure d'i. Ger., Pcyanür. A salt, $In(CN)_2$, formed by the action of potassic cyanide or of hydrocyanic acid on a salt of i.; readily decomposed, on boiling with water, into i. hydrate. [B, 4.]—I. formate. A very soluble, minutely crystalline substance, obtained by dissolving hydrated i. oxide in formic acid. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. iodide. A yellow, very hygroscopic, crystalline mass, In_2I_4 , obtained by heating metallic i. with an excess of iodine in an atmosphere of dry carbonic acid, and distilling off the excess of iodine. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. monochloride. A dark-red fluid, $InCl$, obtained by carefully heating an excess of metallic i. in gaseous hydrochloric acid, or by heating i. bichloride with metallic i. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvii (a, 39).]—I. oxide. A light-yellow powder, In_2O_3 , obtained by heating its carbonate or nitrate to redness; also by heating metallic i. to redness for some time, by which InO is first formed, which, as the temperature increases, ignites and forms In_2O_3 . It is infusible and non-volatile, is dissolved by dilute acids with difficulty if cold, readily if hot. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. suboxide. A light-black, pyrophorous powder, InO , obtained by the reduction of In_2O_3 in a current of hydrogen at a temperature of about 300° C. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. sulphate. A substance, $(SO_4)_2In_2$, obtained by dissolving the metal in dilute sulphuric acid, evaporating to dryness, and heating sufficiently to drive off the excess of acid. Its neutral solution yields, on evaporation, a white, gum-like mass, containing 9 molecules of water. By strong heating it is converted into a basic salt. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. sulphide. A brown, infusible powder, In_2S_3 , obtained by the direct union of sulphur and i., or by heating In_2O_3 and sulphur, by which sulphurous acid is eliminated. It is not decomposed by heat. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. sulphite. A light, white, crystalline powder, $In_2O_3 \cdot 3SO_2 + In_2O_3 + SHO$, readily dissolved by acids; prepared by precipitating any of the soluble salts of i. with sodium bisulphide. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. tartrate. A substance obtained by dissolving hydrated i. oxide in a boiling solution of tartaric acid until a considerable precipitate forms. It yields on filtering and evaporating, in vacuo, a gelatinous, uncrystallizable mass. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]—I. trichloride. See I. chloride.

INDIVIDUAL, adj. and n. $I_2n\text{-}di^2\text{-}vi^2d^2\text{-}u^2\text{-}a^2i$. Lat., individialis (1st def.), individuum (2d def.) (from in, neg., and dividere, to divide). Fr., individuel (1st def.), individu (2d def.). Ger., individuell (1st def.), Individuum (2d def.). 1. (Adj.) not divided, incapable of being divided, single; pertaining to a single object or person, distinctive. 2. (N.) a single being or object. 3. (N.) in the ordinary botanical sense, a distinct plant; one of a series forming species. Sometimes a separable part of a plant (seed, root, etc.), which may, under favorable conditions, become an entire plant. In a stricter sense, the analogue in plants of the i. in the higher animals; by some regarded as the entire product of one seed even if separated into numerous plants; by others restricted to such a product only while organically united; by Thours and Braun regarded as the axis or shoot with its foliage; by others, as the phytomer (q. v.) by others, the cell; by Gray, as the cell in the lower forms of vegetation, as the phytomer in the higher. [B, 1, 229 (a, 24); Braun (a, 24); L, 56.]

INDIVIDUALISM, INDIVIDUALITY, n. $I_2n\text{-}di^2\text{-}vi^2d^2\text{-}u^2\text{-}a^2i\text{-}i^2z^2m, \text{-}vi^2d\text{-}u^2\text{-}a^2i\text{-}i^2t\text{-}i^2$. Ger., Individualität. The condition or quality of being individual; an individual existence or nature. [a, 24.]

INDIVIDUOUS (Lat.), adj. $I_2n\text{-}di\text{-}(de)\text{-}vi^2d^2(wi^2d^2)u^2(u^2)\text{-}u^2s(u^2)s$. See INDIVIDUAL (1st def.).

INDIVISUS (Lat.), adj. $I_2n\text{-}di\text{-}(de)\text{-}vi\text{-}(we)^2su^2s(u^2)s$. From in, not, and dividere, to divide. Fr., indivisé. Ger., wuzertheilt. Entire, not separated into parts; undivided. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INDOGEN, n. $I_2nd^o\text{-}je^2n$. 1. See INDULIN. 2. A bivalent radicle, $C_8H_5NO = \begin{matrix} C_8H_4 - CO \\ | \\ HN - C \end{matrix}$; occurring in indigo and many of its derivatives. [B, 3, 270 (a, 38).]

INDOL, n. $I_2nd^o\text{-}ol$. Fr., i. Ger., I. A crystalline body, $C_8H_7N = C_8H_4 \langle \begin{matrix} CH \\ NH \end{matrix} \rangle CH$, to which the peculiar odor of the fœces is supposed to be due; a product of pancreatic digestion (e. g., of blood albumin) and an antecedent of indican. It is easily soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in the hydrocarbons, less soluble in hot water, from which it crystallizes in plates melting at 52° C., and boiling with partial decomposition at about 245° C. It acts as a weak base. [B, 3, 4, 270 (a, 38); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 39).]—Pulcarboxylic acid. A dibasic acid, $C_8H_4 \langle \begin{matrix} CH \\ CO \end{matrix} \rangle C - CO.OH$, crystallizing from hot alcohol in fine needles.

dies melting at 250° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]—I. picrate. A substance, $C_9H_7N_3C_6H_5(NO_2)_2O$, occurring in long, red needles, soluble in hot benzene, less soluble in petroleum spirit or cold benzene. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

INDOLENT, adj. $I^n d^o le^2 n^t$. Lat., indolens (from in neg., and dotere, to feel pain). Fr., I. Ger., unempfindlich, unschmerzhaft, schlaf. 1. Sluggish. 2. Painless. [E.]

INDOLES (Lat.), n. f. $I^n d^o l^o (o^2 l^o) e^2 z^a s$. Gen., ind'olis (from indu, in, and olere, to grow). Fr., Eigenthümlichkeit. Natural disposition, temperament, character. [L, 50, 343 (a, 14).]—I. animi. Ger., Gemüthsbeschaffenheit. The disposition of the mind. [B, 50 (a, 14).]—I. morbi. Ger., Krankheitsnatur. The character of a disease. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INDOLOLÉMIÉ [Piorry] (Fr.), n. $A^2 n^2 do^2 lwa^3 a me$. From indoles, an inborn quality, and aima, blood. See ASIATIC CHOLERA.—I. asiaticque [Piorry]. See ASIATIC CHOLERA.—I. septémique [Piorry]. See CHOLÉRA FOUDEURIE.—I. sporadique [Piorry]. See SIMPLE CHOLERA.

INDOPHENIN, n. $I^2 n^d o fe^2 n^2 i^2 n$. Fr., indophénine. Ger., I. A condensation product, $C_{13}H_9NOS$ [Roscoe and Schorlemmer], formed when a solution of 1 part of isatin in 30 parts of sulphuric acid is shaken with benzene, and occurring as a blue powder. [B, 3, 270 (a, 38).]

INDOPHENOL, n. $I^2 n^d o fe^2 n^2 o^2 l$. A dye-stuff, $C_{18}H_{16}N_2O = N \begin{matrix} C_6H_4 \\ | \\ C_{10}H_6O \end{matrix} N(CH_3)_2$, formed by oxidizing a molecule of a paradiamine with a molecule of a phenol. The i's include: (1), phenol blue, $C_{14}H_9N_2O$, occurring in commerce as a paste; (2), trichlorophenol blue, $C_{14}N_{11}Cl_3N_2O$, crystallizing in tough elastic needles almost insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol, and easily so in ether and benzene; (3), trichlorodimethylaminindophenol, $C_{14}H_{12}Cl_3N_2OH$, crystallizing in colorless needles, becoming deep blue and melting at about 139° C.; (4), dibromomonophenolamide, $C_8H_2Br_2O : N : C_6H_4OH$, crystallizing in dark-red prisms having a metallic lustre and soluble in water; (5), galloxyanine (q. v.); (6), naphthol blue (q. v.). [B, 3, 270 (a, 38).]—I' weiss (Ger.). A dye-stuff, $C_{18}H_{16}N_2O = N \begin{matrix} C_6H_4 \\ | \\ C_{10}H_6O \end{matrix} N(CH_3)_2$, formed by warming indophenol with caustic soda and grape sugar. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

INDOSYNCLONUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2 n^d o (o^2) si^2 n (su^2 n^2) klon^2 (klo^2 n^2) u^2 s (u^2) s$. From ινδικός, Indian, σύν, with, and κλόνος, any violent, confused motion. See BERI-BERI.

INDOXYL, n. $I^2 n^d o^2 x^2 i^2 l$. Fr., indoxyle. Ger., I. A substance, C_8H_7NO , isomeric with oxindol, occurring as a brown oil, soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform, slightly soluble in hot water. [B, 3, 270 (a, 38); B, 46 (a, 39).]—I'sulphuric acid. Fr., acide indoxylsulfurique. Ger., Indoxylschwefelsäure. A very unstable acid, $C_8H_7N_2O_2SO_2$, OH, formed by the union of sulphuric acid with i.: an oxidation product of indol in the body, furnishing the indigo occurring in the urine. [B, 3, 270 (a, 38); B, 46 (a, 39).]

INDOXYLIC ACID, n. $I^2 n^d o^2 x^2 i^2 l^2 i^2 k$. Fr., acide indoxylique. An acid, $C_8H_7NO(CO.OH)$, formed by reducing orthoindophenylpropionic acid. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

INDRAJAB (Bomb.), INDRAJOW (Hind.), n's. The bark of Wrightia antidysenterica. [B, 92, 121 (a, 14, 35).]

INDRÁSANA (Sanser.), n. See HEMP.

INDRA VADHI (Sanser.), n. See MUTELLA occidentalis.

INDRÁ VÁRUNI (Sanser.), INDRAVUNKAPHUL (Decc.), INDRAYAN (Hind.), INDRÁYANA (Hind.), n's. See CYRULUS colocythis.

INDRAYAVA (Sanser.), n. The Holarrhena antidysenterica. [A, 479 (a, 21).]

INDUAR, n. A name applied at different times to various tuberous roots, supposed to have tonic and alexipharmac properties; in India, to a species of aconite found in the markets of Bombay. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvi (a, 39).]

INDUCED, adj. $I^n d^u^2 s^t$. Fr., induit. Caused to occur. [B.] See I. CURRENT.

INDUCING, adj. $I^n d^u^2 s^2 i^2 n^2$. From inducere, to lead into. See I. CURRENT.

INDUCTO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2 n^d u^2 k (du^2 k) 'shi^2 (ti^2) o$. Gen., -o'nis. 1. The coating of a surface with a plaster or cataplasma, etc. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 2. See INDUCTION.

INDUCTION, n. $I^2 n^d u^2 k 'shu^2 n$. Gr., ἐπαγωγή. Lat., inductio (from inducere, to lead into). Fr., i. Ger., Induktion, Einleitung, Einführung. It., induzione. Sp., inducción. The act or process of inducing, of causing to occur (as of abortion or premature labor).

INDUCTIVE, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 k 'ti^2 v$. Fr., inductif. Ger., einleitend, einführend, hervorbringend, Induktions-. Pertaining to induction. [a, 45.]

INDUCTORIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2 n^d u^2 k (du^2 k) to^2 ri^2 u^2 m (u^2 m)$. From inducere, to spread over. 1. A covering. [A, 312 (a, 21).] 2. An induction apparatus. [Wreden, "Arch. of Otol.," xvii, 3; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Feb. 23, 1889, p. 222.]

INDUCTRIC, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 k 'tri^2 k$. See INDUCED.

INDUCULA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2 n^d u^2 (du^2) 'ku^2 l (ku^2 l) a^2$. From inducere, to put on. Fr., gilet de force (2d def.). Ger., Zwangsjacke (2d def.). 1. Anciently, an undergarment worn by women. [A, 312 (a, 21).] 2. A strait-waistcoat. [A, 518.]

INDUGA (Tel.), n. The Strychnos potatorum. [B, 172 (a, 24).]

INDUIT (Fr.), adj. $A^2 n^2 d^u^2 e$. See INDUCED.

INDUKTOR (Ger.), n. $I^2 n^d u^2 k to^2 r$. See INDUCTORIUM (2d def.).—Funkent. An induction coil that emits sparks. [a, 27.]

INDULIN, n. $I^2 n^d u^2 l i^2 n$. Fr., induline. Ger., I. A term for certain blue-black, blue, and grayish dyes formed in various ways from benzenes and aniline. One series has the formula $C_{18}H_{15}N_2 \cdot HCl$. They are soluble in alcohol, insoluble in water. [B, 270 (a, 38).]—I'sulphonic acid, Spirit-soluble i's. The hydrochlorides or sulphates of i. bases. They are also slightly soluble in water. [B, 3 (a, 38).]—Water-soluble i's. The alkali salts of i'sulphonic acids. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

INDUMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2 n^d u^2 (u) me^2 nt^2 u^2 m (u^2 m)$. From inducere, to put on. Ger., Ueberzug. 1. In botany, any hairy or pubescent covering. 2. In ornithology, the plumage. 3. The enveloping membrane or capsule of an internal organ. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24); L, 50 (a, 14), 343.]—I. cordis. The pericardium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. nervi, I. nervorum. See NEURILEMMA and PERINEURIUM.—I. vitreum. See ENAMEL.

INDUPLICATE, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 pl i^2 k at$. Lat., induplicatus (from in neg., and duplicare, to double). Fr., induplicatif. Ger., eingefaltet, einwärtsgefaltet. Having the edges flexed or folded inward. [B, 1, 19, 77, 123 (a, 24); a, 45.] See under VALVATE ÆSTIVATION.

INDUPLICATION, n. $I^2 n^d u^2 pl i^2 k a 'shu^2 n$. From in, neg., and duplicare, to double. The state of being induplicate.

INDUPLICATIVE, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 pl i^2 k at i^2 v$. See INDUPLICATE.

INDURANT, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 ra^2 nt$. Lat., indurans (from indurare, to make hard). Fr., i, endurissant. Ger., verhärtend. Hardening (said of medicines formerly supposed to "condense," or give firmer consistence to the tissues of the body). [L, 50, 105, 135 (a, 39); a, 45.]

INDURATED, adj. $I^2 n^d u^2 rat e^2 d$. Lat., induratus (from indurare, to make hard). Fr., induré, durci. Ger., verhärtert. Hardened; of a lesion, accompanied with induration. [B, 123 (a, 24); a, 45.]

INDURATIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2 n^d u^2 (du) ra^2 (ra^2) 'shi^2 (ti^2) o$. Gen., -onis. See INDURATION.—I. adiposa neonatorum. See SCLEREMA neonatorum.—I. cutis. See SCLEREMA cutis.—I. glandularum. Scirrhus of glands. [L, 135 (a, 39).]—I. hepatis. See HEPATITIS.—I. Hunteri. See HUNTERIAN CHANCRE.—I. maligna. INDURATION, n. $I^2 n^d u^2 ra^2 'shu^2 n$. Gr., σκληρώσις. Lat., induratio. Fr., i. Ger., Verhärtung, Erhärtung, Härten. It., indurimento. Sp., induración. 1. The state of being, or the process of becoming, hardened. 2. An old term for a form of atrophy; also for a number of morbid processes consisting in hypertrophies or new formations, especially of connective tissue. [D, 3, 20.]—Atrophic pigmentary i. (of the stomach). A pigmentary change in the mucous membrane of the stomach associated with glandular atrophy and fibrous hyperplasia. The pigmentation is usually gray, being due to the presence of small, black granules, consisting of extravasated blood. The thinned condition of the mucous membrane indicates the atrophic process, and the fibrous hyperplasia, if slight, is confined to the interglandular connective tissue. [D, 48.]—Brown i. of the lungs. Fr., induration brune des poumons. Ger., braune i. der Lungen. See Pigment i. of the lung.—Cyanotic i. Fr., i. (ou endurissement) cyanotique. Ger., cyanotische i. (oder Verhärtung). An i. resulting from long-continued venous hyperæmia, the pressure on the vessels causing transudation of blood and serum and the formation of a dark, hard mass. In the liver, spleen, etc., it leads to the absorption of more or less of the parenchyma and to the formation of new connective tissue. [D, 3, 4.]—Fibrous i. of the lung. See INTERSTITIAL PNEUMONIA.—Hunter'sche i. (Ger.). See HUNTERIAN CHANCRE.—I's de voisinage [Fournier] (Fr.). Syn.: chancre successif. Isolated i's that sometimes occur at a short distance from a syphilitic chancre. It is uncertain whether they are due to metastasis from the primary chancre or correspond to separate points of inoculation. [G.]—I. follicæ [Fournier] (Fr.). The leaf-like or paper-like i. of a syphilitic chancre when it is of the lightest grade perceptible to the touch. [G.] See also Lamellar i. of the syphilitic chancre.—I. lamelleuse (Fr.). See Lamellar i. of the syphilitic chancre.—I. of chancre. See HUNTERIAN CHANCRE.—I. of the lung. Fr., i. pulmonaire. See INTERSTITIAL PNEUMONIA.—I. papyracée (Fr.). See I. follicæ.—I. parcheminée [Ricord] (Fr.). See Parchment i.—I's plastiques des tissus érectiles du pénis [Demarquay] (Fr.). See SCLEROSIS of the corpora cavernosa.—I. primitive (Fr.). See SYPHILITIC CHANCRE.—I. pulmonaire (Fr.). See INTERSTITIAL PNEUMONIA.—I. tégumentaire (Fr.). See SCLEREMA cutis.—Lamellar i. of the syphilitic chancre. Fr., i. lamelleuse. I. of the syphilitic chancre occurring as a superficial thickening in the form of a thin plate or disc. [G.]—Mitral i. Hardening of the mitral valve (e. g., in sclerotic endocarditis). It causes mitral murmurs, usually heard at the apex of the heart and exceptionally in the second intercostal space. [D, 45.]—Parchment i. Fr., i. parcheminée. The i. of a syphilitic chancre when it is of slight degree and feeling, when held between the fingers, like a piece of parchment. [G.]—Pigment i. of the lung [Virchow]. A form of interstitial pneumonia in which, after long-continued passive congestion, associated with obstruction at the mitral orifice, pigment from the blood is lodged in the lung-tissue, forming red points that can be seen on section of the lung. [D, 5.]—Plastic i's of the penis. See SCLEROSIS of the corpora cavernosa.—Primitive i. Fr. i. primitive. See Syphilitic CHANCRE.—Scaly i. Ger., schiefrige i. A form of i. found within the lungs, characterized by the presence of small masses of dry scales of pigmented connective tissue which have accumulated in the course of a diffuse process of proliferation. [D. 4.]—Specific i. Ger., spezifische i. The i. of the initial lesion of syphilis. [G.] See Syphilitic CHANCRE.

INDURATUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-du^2(rat)(ra^2t)(u^2s)(u^2s)$. Accompanied with induration (e. g., acne indurata).

INDUREScent, adj. $I^2n-du^2-re^2s^2ent$. Lat., indurescens (from indurescere, to become hard). Ger., erhärtend, hartwerdend. Gradually becoming indurated. [B. 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INDURESCENTIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-du^2(du)-re^2s-se^2n(ke^2n)/sh^2i^2(t)^2a^2$. From indurescere, to become hard. The process of becoming hardened.

INDUSIAL, adj. $I^2n-du^2-si^2a^2l$. Pertaining to the indusium.

INDUSIATE, adj. $I^2n-du^2-si^2a^2t$. Lat., indusiatius. Ger., geschleiert. Having an indusium. [B. 123 (a, 24).]

INDUSIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-du^2(n)^2-si^2-n^2m(u^4m)$. From indure, to put on. Fr., indusie. Ger., Schleierchen. A membranous covering; in botany, that of the soil in ferns; of Link, the receptacle of some Fungi. [B. 1, 123, 291 (a, 24).] 2. See AMNION (1st def.).

INDUVIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $I^2n-du^2(du)^2-vi^2(wi^2)-e(a^2-e^2)$. From induire, to put on. Fr., induvies, chenises. Ger., Fruchtdecken. 1. Floral envelopes remaining on fruit till its maturity. 2. The volva (q. v.). 3. Withered leaves remaining on a stem. [B. 119, 123 (a, 24).]

INDUVIAL, adj. $I^2n-du^2-vi^2a^2l$. Lat., induvialis (from induire, to put on). Of Mirbel, persistent and covering the fruit (said of the calyx, as in the rose). [B. 1 (a, 24).]

INDUVIATE (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-du^2-vi^2a^2t$. Lat., induviatus. Fr., induvié. Ger., fruchtdeckig. Having induviae. [B. 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INDWIJAW (Hind.), n. The Holarrhena antidyenterica. [B. 173 (a, 24).]

INÉ (Fr.), n. E-na. In the Gaboon country, Africa, kombé arrow poison. [B. 5 (a, 24).] See STROPHANTHUS kombé.

INEBRIANT, adj. $I^2n-e^2-bri^2a^2nt$. Lat., inebrians (from inebriare, to inebriate). Fr., inebriant, enivrant. Causing drunkenness; as a n., an agent having that property. Inebriating agents were divided by Linnæus into the "artificial," or alcoholic, and the "natural," or narcotic. [B. 88 (a, 39).]

INEBRIATION, n. $I^2n-e^2-bri^2a^2shu^2n$. From inebriare, to inebriate. Drunkenness.

INEBRIETY, n. $I^2n-e^2-bri^2e^2t$. Lat., inebrietas (from inebriare, to make drunk). Ger., Trunksucht. 1. The state of being drunk. 2. Habitual drunkenness.—Acute impulsive i. Ger., akute impulsive Trunksucht. A form described by Crothers as suddenly attacking persons who have not before been given to drink; occasioned either by heredity or by wasting diseases or mental shock; a forerunner of progressive paralysis or simple dementia. ["Med. Record," Sept. 13, 1884, p. 289; "Centralbl. f. kl. Med.," Dec. 27, 1884, p. 838.]

INEBRISM, n. $I^2n-e^2-bri^2-i^2z^2m$. See INEBRIETY (2d def.).

INEDIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-ed(e^2d)^2i^2a^2$. From in, neg., and edere, to eat. 1. A fasting. 2. A famine. 3. Anorexia. [L. 50 (a, 14), 135 (a, 39).]

The lesion of infarction; a plug in a duct or blood-vessel, or an extravasation of blood, together with the surrounding engorgement dependent on the obstruction. 2. A nodular deposit of chronic inflammatory products in the substance of a tissue or organ. [A. 326 (a, 21); A. 385.]—Calcareous i. Ger., Kalkinfarkt. An i. in which the plug consists of calcareous matter. [A. 326 (a, 21).]—Dissecting i. Ger., dissecirender i. An i. which has stellate branches extending out into the inflamed tissue surrounding the main infarction. [a, 40.]—Dry i. A hemorrhagic i. in which the moisture has been replaced by fat cells, and, being deprived of the oxygen and moisture necessary for putrefaction, may remain unchanged for an indefinite period. [a, 40.]—Gallenpigment i. (Ger.). The infiltration of a conical area of the kidney with bile pigment. [a, 40.]—Pigment i. Ger., Pigmenti. A form of i. described by Virchow in which large masses of pigment are found in the urinary tubules. [D. 3.]—Pyæmic i. An i. due to the obstruction of the blood-vessel supplying an area by a pyæmic embolus. It is especially seen in the lungs, kidney, and spleen. [Delafield (a, 40).]—Uterus i. (Ger.). See UTERINE INFARCTION.—Yellow i. An opaque, yellowish, white conical patch found beneath the capsule of the spleen or kidney, following the obstruction of a blood-vessel in the organ. It consists of necrosed tissue with some fragments of disorganized and decolorized blood-clot. [Ziegler (a, 40).]

INFARCTED, adj. $I^2n^2fa^2rkt^2e^2d$. 1. Wedged in. [D.] 2. Affected with infarction.

INFARCTION, n. $I^2n^2fa^2rkt^2shu^2n$. Lat., Fr., infarctus. Ger., Infarkt. Infarcirung. It., infarto. Sp., infarto, obstrucción por repleción. 1. An old term for intestinal obstruction due to hard masses of more or less imperfectly digested food. It is still sometimes used in that sense. [A. 304 (D).] 2. The formation of an infarct. 3. The state of being affected with infarctus. 4. An infarct.—Embolie i. An i. due to the obstruction of the main blood-vessel of a given area by an embolus. [a, 40.]—Fibrinous i. A form of i. in which, instead of the necrotic process, a fibrous organization of the infarct has taken place. [a, 40].—Hæmorrhagic i. Ger., hämorrhagischer Infarkt. 1. One of the consequences of embolism. It occurs in the form of a wedge-shaped spot of bloody infiltration in organs in which, between the obstruction and the capillaries, insufficient, inconstant, or no arterial anastomoses exist; also in organs in which the veins are without valves. The lungs, spleen, and kidneys are often affected. 2. A large effusion of blood connected with great separation of the tissues and with little or no destruction of them. [D, 3]. See, also, Pulmonary APOPLEXY.—Metastatic i. An i. due to obstruction of the blood-vessel supplying a given area by a metastatic embolus. [a, 40].—Red i. See Hæmorrhagic i.—Renal i. Lat., infarctus renalis. Ger., Harnsäureinfarkt der Neugeborenen. 1. of the kidney in the newly born; characterized by sharply outlined, yellowish striping of the pyramids, especially in the papillæ. [D, 29].—Uterine i. Lat., infarctus uteri. Ger., Uterusinfarkt. A term sometimes applied to subinvolution and to engorgement of the uterus.—White i. of the placenta. A hæmorrhagic i. of the placenta in which the coloring matter has been absorbed, leaving a cone-shaped mass of white solid tissue on the maternal side of the placenta. [W. L. Reed, J. Coats, "Glasgow Med. Jour.," June, 1891, p. 464 (a, 40).]

INFARCTUS (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fa²rkt'u²s(u²s). Fr., i. See INFARCT and INFARCTION.—I. hæmoptoicus Laennecii. Ger., hämoptoischer Lungeninfarkt. Infarction of the lungs as a result of hæmoptysis, first described by Laennec. It is not infrequently found in autopsies on new-born infants, and may be complicated with pyæmia, etc. [D, 29].—I. intestinum. See INFARCTION (1st def.).—I. mammae lacteus. A nodular condition of the mammary gland due to obstruction and accumulation of milk in the galactophorous ducts. [a, 40].—I. renalis. See Renal INFARCTION.—I. uraticus (Fr.). A yellowish or blanchard area of the urinary tubules shut off from the rest of the kidney by impaction of a small stone or gravel. [a, 40].—I. uteri. See Uterine INFARCTION.—Red i. See Hæmorrhagic INFARCTION.

INFARZIRUNG (Ger.), n. I²n-fartz-er'un². See INFARCTION.

INFATIGABLE (Fr.), adj. A²n²-fa²-t²ge-sa²-bl'. From in neg., and fatigare, to weary. See ACAMATHOS.

INFÉCOND (Fr.), adj. A²n²-fa²-ko²n². From infecundus, unfruitful. See STERILE.

INFECTANT, adj. I²n-fe²kt'nt. Fr., i. Ger., ansteckend. It., infettante. Sp., infectante. Capable of infecting, tainting, or producing disease. [a, 40].

INFECTED, adj. I²n-fe²kt'e²d. Fr., infecté. Ger., angesteckt. It., infetto, infectado. Sp., infecto, infectado. Tainted, affected, or infused with morbid or noxious material. [a, 40].

INFECTIEUX (Fr.), adj. A²n²-fe²kt-se-n². See INFECTIOUS.

INFECTIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n-fe²kt'shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on'is. See INFECTIO.—I. per partum. I. communicated from the mother to her infant at the time of delivery. [G.]—I. purulenta. See PYÆMIA.

INFECTIO, n. I²n-fe²kt'shu²n. Lat., infectio (from infectere, to dye). Fr., i. Ger., I., Ansteckung. It., infezione. Sp., infección. 1. The act or process by which disease is set up in an organism by the implantation of morbid germs from without, or of a part of the organism by the conveyance of such germs from another part. 2. I. differs from contagion (q. v.) in the fact that the germs are not necessarily transferred from another organism, and, as used by some writers, in the further fact that, when they are, contact of the two organisms is not requisite. 3. The material by which communicable diseases are propagated.—Acute septic i. 1. The infection of the system with septic material from a dead fœtus in utero. [Gerhard (a, 40).] 2. The i. of the system by the absorption of septic germs through a wound. [a, 40].—Auto-i. See Self-i.—I. an passage (Fr.). Infection of the child with syphilis from an initial lesion in the mother during childbirth. [a, 40].—I. by vicinity. Of Virchow, the reproduction of a tumor in a neighboring part without any visible connection between it and the original growth. [a, 40].—I. post-initial (Fr.). The transportation of the syphilitic virus from the initial lesion to a remote portion of the body. [Lang (a, 40).]—I. putride aiguë (Fr.). See GANGRÈNE gazeuse foudroyante.—I. s'fähigkeit (Ger.). 1. Capability of infecting. 2. Susceptibility to infection.—I. s'krankheit (Ger.). See the major list.—I. s'stoff (Ger.). See CONTAGIUM.—Intra-uterine i. Fr., i. intra-utérine. Syphilitic infection of the child in utero. [a, 40].—Intra-uterine septic i. (Ger.). The i. of the child in utero with septic germs due to disease of the mother. [L, 57 (a, 40).]—Intravaginale septic i. (Ger.). The i. of the child during childbirth with septic material in the vagina. [a, 40].—Miasmatic i. Ger., miasmatische I. I. arising from a miasma independently of a diseased organism. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Parish i. In England, a common term for a disease which prevails in crowded districts as the result of bad hygiene. It is of the same type with typhus and relapsing fevers. [D, 52].—Placentäre i. (Ger.). Placentari' (Ger.). Syphilitic i. of the placenta. [a, 40].—Postconceptionelle i. (Ger.). I. of the child with syphilis acquired by the mother after conception. [A, 319 (a, 40).]—Purulent i. Fr., i. purulente. See PYÆMIA.—Putrid i. Fr., i. putride. See SEPTICÆMIA.—Self-i. Fr., auto-i. Ger., Selbst-i. I. of the organism at large or of a fresh portion of it from a pre-existing source within itself.—Septic i. Ger., septic i. The invasion of a wound by septic germs such as interfere with the normal progress of healing, or induce suppuration. It may or may not be followed by septicæmia. [a, 40].—Septic i. of the blood. See SEPTICÆMIA.—Spermatische i. (Ger.). The infection of the child with syphilis through the semen of the father. [A, 319 (a, 40).]—Systemic i. I. of the organism at large with a disease previously only local.—

Telluric i. The i. of the system by miasma proceeding from the earth. [a, 40].

[a. 40.]—Circumscribed gummatous i. A circumscribed gumma developed between the bone and its adjacent membrane, whether dura mater or periosteum. [a. 40.]—Cholesterin i. See Cholesterin DEGENERATION.—Colloid i. See Colloid DEGENERATION and Amyloid DEGENERATION.—Diffuse gummatous i. A more or less diffuse deposit of gummatous tissue throughout the entire substance of a bone. [a. 40.]—Dropsical i. Ger., hydropische i. See EDEMA.—Eitrig i. (Ger.). See Purulent i.—Fatty i. Fr., i. graisseuse. Ger., Fettig i. fettige i. The i. of tissues with fatty matter brought to them in the blood. [D. 3.]—Fatty i. of the heart. Excessive development of the subpericardial fat with which may be associated fatty degeneration of the heart. [D. 68.]—Fibrinous i. The effusion of the fibrinous elements of the blood into the parenchyma of an inflaming tissue. [a. 40.]—Fibroid i. I. of an infarct with fibroid tissue. [a. 40.]—Gelatinous i. Jelly-like tuberculous i. The injection of a gray, semi-transparent, gelatinous material into the intervals between millary tubercles. [a. 40.]—Gummatous i. The invasion of the cancellous tissue of bone by gummata. [a. 40.]—Hæmorrhagic i. I. with blood.—Harn'i (Ger.). See Urinary i.—Hydropische i. (Ger.). See EDEMA.—Inflammatory i. The i. of a part with inflammatory products. [a. 40.]—Markige i. (Ger.). See Myeloid i.—Medullary i. An anatomical condition in typhoid fever in which several of the diseased intestinal glands or groups of glands coalesce; considered pathognomonic of the disease. [D. 1.]—Mucous i. Mucoid softening. [a. 40.]—Myeloid i. Ger., markige i. The i. of bone by the peculiar nucleated cells which go to make up medullary tumors. It is generally but not always benign. [a. 40.]—Edematous i. See EDEMA.—Opaque i. of bone. Of Nélaton, the second stage of tuberculous i. of bone. It is characterized by a dull yellow color of the infiltrated portion, by the absence of blood-vessels, and by hypertrophy of the cancellous tissue of the bone, which may extend to the obliteration of its spaces. [a. 40.]—Pigmentary i. See Pigmentary DEGENERATION.—Plastic i. I. with plastic material. [a. 40.]—Pneumonic i. I. of the walls of the air cells or the interstitial pulmonary tissue with material which is either the result of hyperplastic development of the original elements of the parts or is adventitious (e.g., tubercles). The latter is also called tubercular. [D. 1.]—Puriform i. of bone. See Opaque i. of bone.—Purulent i. Fr., i. purulente. Ger., eitrig i. Syn.: purulent oedema (Pirogoff). I. with pus, diffuse suppuration. [D.]—Saline i. See Calcareous DEGENERATION.—Sanguineous i. Fr., i. sanguine. Ger., Blut'. I. with blood.—Semi-transparent i. of bone. Of Nélaton, the first stage of tubercular i. of bone. It is characterized by the deposit of a gray, opaline material in the spaces of the spongy tissue, resembling brain substance in appearance, which can not be washed out by an ordinary stream of water. It does not modify the density of the bone tissue. [a. 40.]—Serous i. Fr., i. séreuse. See EDEMA.—Tubercular i., Tuberculous i. Fr., infiltration tuberculeuse. Ger., tuberculöse i. I. with tubercle.—Uratic i. Fr., i. uratique. See URATIC DEGENERATION.—Urinary i. Fr., i. d'urine. Ger., Harn'i. INFILTRIRT (Ger.), adj. $1^2n\text{-fi}^2l\text{-rert}'$. See INFILTRATED.

INFIMUS (Lat.), adj., superl. of inferus. low. Ger., unterste. Lowest (said of the relative position of plant-organs). [B, 123 (a. 24).]

INFINITE, adj. $1^2n\text{-fi}^2n\text{-i}^2t$. Lat., infinitus (from in, neg., and finis, a limit). Ger., unbegrenzt, unendlich. It., Sp., infinito. Unlimited.

INFINITESIMAL, adj. $1^2n\text{-fi}^2n\text{-i}^2t\text{-es}'\text{i}^2m$. Fr., infinitésimal. Ger., i. It., infinitesimale. Sp., i. Infinitely small. [L, 107.]

INFINITIVISME (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\text{-fe-n}\text{-to-vez-m}$. The doctrine of the infinitivists. [L, 41 (a. 14).]

INFINITIVIST, n. $1^2n\text{-fi}^2n\text{-i}^2t\text{-ov}'\text{-ist}$. Fr., infinitiviste. The follower of a doctrine according to which generation is caused by the evolution of germs contained infinitely one within the other. [L, 41, 49 (a. 14).]

INFIRM, adj. $1^2n\text{-fu}^2m'$. Fr., infirme. Ger., kränklich, schwach. It., infermo. Sp., enfermo, débil. Weak or disabled from age or disease.

INFIRMARY, n. $1^2n\text{-fu}^2m\text{'a}^2r\text{-i}^2$. Lat., infirmarium. Fr., infirmerie. Ger., Krankenstube, Krankenhaus. It., infermeria. Sp., enfermeria. A hospital or dispensary.

INFIRMIER (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\text{-fer-me-a}$. A male nurse, especially in hospitals. [L, 41 (a. 14).]

INFIRMIERE (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\text{-fer-me-e}^2r$. A female hospital nurse.

INFIRMITY, n. $1^2n\text{-fu}^2m\text{'i}^2t\text{-i}^2$. Lat., infirmitas. Fr., infirmité. Ger., Kränklichkeit. It., infermità. Sp., enfermedad constitucional. A general weakness or disease, especially if it produces disability. [L, 50 (a. 14).]

INFLAME, v. tr. and intr. $1^2n\text{-flam}'$. Lat., inflammare. Fr., enflammer. Ger., entzünden. It., inflammare. Sp., inflamar. 1. (Tr.) to set on fire; to kindle desire, to excite violently, to affect with inflammation. 2. (Intr.) to take fire; to become affected with inflammation.

INFLAMED, adj. $1^2n\text{-flam}'$. Lat., inflammatus. Fr., enflammé. Ger., entzündet. It., inflammato. Sp., inflamado. 1. Ignited. 2. In a state of inflammation. [L, 107.]

INFLAMMABILITY, n. $1^2n\text{-fla}^2m\text{-a}^2\text{-bi}^2l\text{'i}^2t\text{-i}^2$. Fr., inflammabilité. Ger., Entzündbarkeit. The quality of being inflammable.

INFLAMMABLE, adj. $1^2n\text{-fla}^2m\text{'a}^2\text{-b'l}$. Fr., i. Ger., entzündbar. Easily set on fire.

INFLAMMATIO (Lat.), n. f. $1^2n\text{-fla}^2m\text{(fla}^2m)\text{-ma}\text{(ma}^2\text{'sh)2}$. (E²)o. Gen., -ou'is. From inflammare, to set on fire. Inflammation; in Young's classification of diseases, a genus of the Pachæmasie, order Phlogismi. [L, 290.]—I. adhesiva. See Adhesive INFLAMMATION.—I. asthenica. INFLAMMATION, n. $1^2n\text{-fla}^2m\text{-ma}'\text{shu}^2n$. Lat., inflammatio (from inflammare, to inflame). Fr., i. Ger., Entzündung. It., inflammazione. Sp., inflamación. 1. "A complex morbid process characterized by a suspension of the concurrent exercise of function among the minute elements of the tissue involved by stagnation of the blood and abnormal adhesiveness of the blood-discs in the capillary vessels contiguous to the tissue elements whose functions are suspended; by contraction of the minute arteries leading to the capillaries of the affected part, with subsequent dilatation and paralysis of the contractile tissue. The nutritive relations between the blood and the minute component elements of the affected tissue become visibly altered, and, if the disease persists, an appreciably excessive interstitial exudation infiltrates the affected tissue, with a constant tendency to a profusion of growth, to which this interstitial exudation ministers abundant nutrition. This excessive exudation which follows as a result of the inflammatory state is apt to be associated with an unhealthy condition of the blood and of the blood-plasma, giving rise to varied forms of i., and associated with varied forms of new growth, according to (1) the elementary structure in which it occurs; (2) the specific constitutional or local disease with which this complex morbid process may coexist; and (3) the progress of the i., the amount and suddenness of the effusion, the extent of tissue involved, the diminished vascularity, and the powers of absorption of the surrounding parts." [A., 2.] 2. In chemistry, combustion or ignition.—Adhesive i. Lat., inflammatio adhesiva. A form of i. accompanied by plastic exudation and tending to cause adhesion of adjacent surfaces.—Adynamic i. Lat., inflammatio adynamica. See Asthenic i.—Anthracic i's. Fr., i's charbonneuses. The i's of malignant pustule. [Nysten (a. 40).]—Aplastic i. An i. accompanied by an exudate of aplastic lymph, which will not form embryonic tissue. [a. 40.]—Articular i. See ARTHRITIS.—Asthenic i. Lat., inflammatio asthenica (seu debilis). Fr., i. asthénique. Ger., asthenische Entzündung. An i. which affects parts that are poorly nourished and disposed to degenerations. The asthenic i's arise from slight irritations, and include most chronic i's. [D. 3.]—Caseous i. See Cheesy i.—Catarrhal i. See CATARRH.—Cellular i. I. of connective tissue. [E, 27.]—Cheesy i. Fr., i. caséuse. Ger., käsige Entzündung. An i. in which the purulent or fibrino-purulent exudation, or desquamated epithelium, has lost so much of its watery elements that a dry, grayish-yellow mass remains firmly imbedded in the tissue. [D. 3.]—Chronic i. Lat., inflammatio chronica. Fr., i. chronique. Ger., chronische Entzündung. I. that follows a protracted course.—Congestive i. Fr., i. congestive. Ger., congestive Entzündung. An i. chiefly due to congestive hyperæmia, characterized by redness and swelling, the latter being increased by the accompanying serous, mucous, or sero-purulent exudation. [D. 3.]—Contagious i. Of Hutchinson, i. which is propagated by the direct inoculation of its own secretions (e.g., syphilis, gonorrhœa, purulent ophthalmia, etc.). [a. 40.]—Croupous i. Ger., croupöse Entzündung. I. attended by the presence of a croupous exudate. [D. 4.]—Degenerative i. Fr., i. dégénérative. An i. which produces in the tissue involved a degenerative action such as fatty degeneration or gangrene. [a. 40.]—Delimiting i. See Eliminative i.—Desquamative i. An i. of the skin, and sometimes of the mucous membrane, characterized by excessive desquamation of the epithelial cells. [a. 40.]—Destructive i. Fr., i. destructive. See Ulcerous i.—Diffused i. An i. in which the inflammatory process and exudations are more or less diffused throughout the tissues of a part. [a. 40.]—Diphtheritic i. Ger., diphtherische Entzündung. An i. due to diphtheria. [D.]—Dry i. I. without exudation. [a. 40.]—Dyscrasic i. Fr., i. dyscrasique. Ger., dyskrasische Entzündung. Of Perls, a term (not generally accepted among pathologists), based on the theory of the humoral pathology, for an i. due to dyscrasia or abnormal mixture of the elements of the blood. It is supposed to be by virtue of this condition that a ready susceptibility to i. exists in certain parts or organs in many individuals. [D. 3, 4.]—Eliminative i. An i. set up around a tumor or foreign body for relieving the tissues of its presence. [Nysten (a, 40).]—Embolie i. 1. An i. due to the presence of a septic embolus. 2. An i. produced by the presence of an embolus in the artery supplying an area. [a, 40.]—Erethitic i. I. in which there is abnormal irritability or sensitiveness to pain in the part. [a, 40.]—Erysipelatous i., Erythematic i. See ERYSIPELAS.—Exudative i. Fr., i. exudative. An i. characterized by an exudation of serous, mucous, fibrinous, or purulent material. [L, 135 (a, 39).]—Fibrinous i. Fr., i. fibrineuse. I. characterized by a large proportion of fibrin in the exudation. [a, 40.]—Gangrenous i. See GANGRENE.—General i. Of G. Fordyce, continued fever not dependent upon any localized i. [a, 40.]—Gonorrhoeal i. See GONORRHEA.—Gouty i. I. due to a gouty diathesis. [a, 40.]—Hemorrhagic i. An i. in which the exudation is infiltrated with blood. [a, 40.]—Healthy i. Of Hunter, i. which progresses to a union of parts without any great destruction of tissue substance. [Gross (a, 40).]—Hyperplastic i. An i. chiefly characterized by the formation of new connective tissue. [E, 27.]—Hypersthenic i. Fr., i. hypersthenique. Ger., hypersthenische Entzündung. An i. in which the local transformation of tissue is so considerable that the part is destroyed by gangrene. [D, 3.]—Hypostatic i. An i. slowly developed from passive hyperemia, in which the weakened heart's action, or a pressure from without on the skin, or the products of secretion in the bronchi, lungs, urinary passages, etc., act as an irritant (e. g., a bed-sore). [D, 3.]—Indurative i. An i. which causes excessive induration of the tissues, which may persist indefinitely. [a, 40.]—Infective i. I. due to infection. [Med. Times and Gaz., 1871, p. 633 (a, 40).]—I. casæense (Fr.). See Cheesy i.—I. by contiguity. Lat., inflammatio per contiguitatem. I. that spreads to parts in contact with the seat of the primary i., but not continuous with it. [A, 335 (a, 21).]—I. by continuity. Lat., inflammatio per continuitatem. I. that spreads through a continuous tissue. [A, 336 (a, 21).]—I. d'entrailles des femmes enceintes (Fr.). Of De la Roche, puerperal fever. [A, 84.]—I. destructive (Fr.). See Ulcerous i., organisatrice (Fr.).—I. See Productive i.—Interstitial i. Lat., inflammatio interstitialis. I. of the connective tissue of an organ. [A, 336 (a, 21).]—Latent i. Ger., undeutliche Entzündung. An i. which exists for a longer or shorter time without manifest symptoms. [Gross (a, 40).]—Malignant i. I. due to the invasion of a part by malignant growths, such as sarcoma, carcinoma, etc. [a, 40.]—Membranous i. See Croupous i.—Metastatic i. An i. transferred from an inflamed part to a part more or less distant through the agency of emboli and collateral hyperemia at the obstructed part, or of an irritant in the blood. [D, 3.]—Mucous i. Ger., scheimige Entzündung. A catarrh accompanied by a copious production of mucus. [D, 3.]—Necrotic i. An i. in which the inflamed part is destroyed by the process. [E, 27.]—Necrotic-reparative i. An i. (e. g., in a bruised tissue) in which the affected part is partly destroyed, but eventually regains its activity. [E, 27.]—Neuroparalytic i., Neuropathic i. Lat., inflammatio neuroparalytica. An i. in a part due to impairment or loss of its trophic nerve supply. [D, 4.] Cf. Asthenic i.—Oedematous i. Lat., inflammatio oedematosa. I. in which there is such an amount of serum exuded into the tissue that it pits upon pressure. [a, 40.]—Parasitic i. Fr., i. parasitique. Ger., parasitäre Entzündung. I. caused by animal or vegetable parasites. [D, 3; a, 45.]—Parenchymatous i. Lat., inflammatio parenchymatosa. Fr., parenchymateuse. Ger., parenchymatöse Entzündung. I. of the parenchyma of a viscus, accompanied by serous infiltration and the separation of the affected endothelia, which are then discharged or absorbed or undergo cheesy degeneration. [D, 3.] 2. Of Virchow, i. of such a kind that the elementary components of the tissues only are involved, without any appreciable exudation in the interstices or on the free surface of a membrane—a process established locally between the capillaries, the blood, and the tissue elements, expressed by a tendency merely to such effusion of plastic material as may eventually take place from the blood-vessels. [A, 2.]—Passive i. Lat., inflammatio passiva. An i. running a prolonged inactive course, and seeming to have become in a manner habitual to a part. [a, 40.]—Pellicular i. See Diphtheritic i.—Pellicular intestinal i. See Membranous enteritis.—Phagedenic i. Lat., inflammatio phagedænica. See PHAGEDÆNA.—Phlegmonous i. Cellulitis. [a, 40.]—Plastic i. A form of i. in which the material produced not only tends to solidify as fibrin, but is loaded with elementary colorless corpuscles, peculiar, for the most part, to serous surfaces and the surfaces of wounds. [A, 2.]—Productive i. Fr., i. productive, i. organisatrice. I. in which new cells or tissue are formed. [Delafeld (a, 17).] Cf. Eruptive i.—Proliferous i. of the middle ear. Fr., i. prolifère de l'oreille moyenne. Ger., wuchernde Entzündung des Mittelohrs. Of Roosa, a chronic i. of the middle ear, characterized by connective-tissue formations in the cavity of the tympanum, a dense fibrous-tissue covering to the mucous membrane of the Eustachian tube, hypertrophy of the bony walls of the tube, obstruction of the cavities of the tube and tympanum by fibrous tissue, ankylosis of the ossicula, bands of adhesion in the mastoid cells, and occasionally exostosis and hyperostosis of the bony walls. [F, 34.]—Pseudo-membranous i. An i. attended with the formation of a false membrane. [a, 40.]—Purulent i. Fr., i. purulente. See Suppurative i.—Putrid i. Lat., inflammatio putrida. A septic i. in which the exudation is foul, putrid, or sanious. [a, 40.]—Reflex i. I. occurring in one portion of the body as the result of injury to another. [Holmes (a, 40).]—Resolving i. Of James, i. in which the inflamed part returns gradually and without suppuration to the normal state. [a, 40.]—Rheumatic i. See Inflammatory RHEUMATISM.—Secretory i. An i. of superficial tissue elements, where an increased escape of fluid takes place from the blood and conveys the new products of growth and altered secretion along with it to the surface. [A, 2.]—Scrofulous i. I. dependent upon or modified by a scrofulous infection. [a, 40.]—Septic i. I. caused by the absorption of septic germs. [a, 40.]—Serous i. Lat., inflammatio serosa. Fr., i. serreuse. I. associated with profuse serous exudations. [a, 40.]—Simple i. I. of slight intensity without suppuration or specific characteristics. [a, 40.]—Simple localized i. I. without suppuration or specific characteristics, and limited to a localized area. [a, 40.]—Specific i. Lat., inflammatio specifica. Fr., i. spécifique. I. due to a specific poison, such as that of syphilis, tuberculosis, or typhoid fever. [a, 40.]—Spongoid i. [Burns]. An old term for medullary sarcoma. [A, 42.]—Sthenic i. Lat., inflammatio sthenica. Fr., i. sthénique. A form of i. associated with hyperalbuminosis, and apt to occur in vigorous and well-nourished persons. The local phenomena and the fever are pronounced. [D, 3.]—Strumous i. See Scrofulous i.—Suppurative i. Lat., inflammatio suppurativa (sen suppurans). Fr., i. suppurative, i. purulente. Ger., Eiterungsentzündung, eiterige Entzündung. I. resulting in the formation of pus. [A, 2.]—Sympathetic i. See Reflex i.—Symptomatic i. Lat., inflammatio symptomatica. I. which is the sign or symptom of another disease. [a, 40.]—Torpid i. See Passive i.—Toxic i. Fr., i. toxique. Ger., Intoxikationsentzündung. An i. due to poisoning of the blood or tissues or to the contact of corrosive substances. [D, 3.] Cf. Parasitic i. and Septic i.—Traumatic i. Lat., inflammatio traumatica. I. due to an injury.—Tuberculous i. Lat., inflammatio tuberculosa. Fr., i. tuberculose. Ger., tuberkulöse Entzündung. Of Virchow, that process in tubercular disease which resembles i. in that an exudate is poured out, which becomes loosely organized, then dies, breaks down, and leaves a node or tubercle. [D.]—Typhoid i. I. associated with the symptoms of severe typhoid fever, such as low mutterings, involuntary evacuations, etc. [a, 40.]—Ulcerative i., Ulcerous i. Lat., inflammatio ulcerativa (sen erulcerans). Fr., i. ulcéralive, i. ulcéreuse. Ger., geschwürige Entzündung, Verschwärungsentzündung. A form of i. which, eventually approaching a cutaneous or mucous surface, induces a breaking up of the surface and the formation of an ulcer. [A, 2.]—Unhealthy i. Of John Hunter, i. of great violence and accompanied by great structural change. [Agnew (a, 40).]—Vascular i. An i. (usually exudative) in which the vessels of the affected part exhibit the most marked inflammatory changes. [E, 27.]

INFLAMMATIUNCULA (Lat.), n. f. I²n-fla²m(flā³m)-ma-(ma³)-shi²(ti²)-n³n²(u³n²)-ku²(ku³)-la³. Dim. of inflammatio. A mild inflammation. [L, 135.]

INFLAMMATORY, adj. I²n-fla²m'a²-to-ri². Lat., inflammatorius. Fr., inflammatoire. Ger., inflammatorisch, entzündlich. 1. Pertaining to or of the nature of inflammation. 2. In chemistry, capable of producing combustion. [B; D.]

INFLAMMATUS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fla²m(flā³m)-mat(ma³)*n³s-(u³s). See INFLAMED.

INFLATED, adj. I²n-flat'e²d. Lat., inflatus (from inflare, to blow into). Fr., enflé. Ger., aufgeblasen, aufgebläht, wulstig. Distended with air or gas; of plant-organs, bladder, puffed out. [B, 1, 19, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

INFLATINE, n. I²n-flat'en. Fr., i. Ger., Inflatin. A secondary alkaloid obtained from the seeds of Lobelia inflata. [A, 319 (a, 21).]

INFLATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n-fla(flā³)/shi²(ti²)*o. Gen., -o'nis. 1. See INFLATION. 2. See Flatulent colic.—I. parotidum. See CYNANCHE parotidæa.—I. uteri. See PHYSOMETRA.

INFLATION, n. I²n-fla/shu³n. Lat., inflatio (from inflare, to blow into). Fr., i. Ger., Aufblähung. 1. The act or process of distending with gas. Cf. INSUFFLATION. 2. The state of being inflated. [a, 45.]—Cellular i. See Subcutaneous EMPHYSEMA.—I. of the tympanum. The distention of the tympanic membrane of the ear by air blown into the middle ear through the Eustachian tube. INFLEXCHI (Fr.), adj. A²n²-fla she. See INFLEXED.

INFLECTED, adj. I²n-flē²kt'e²d. See INFLEXED.

INFLECTION, n. I²n-flē²kt'shu³n. Fr., i. See INFLEXION and DIFFRACTION.

INFLEXED, adj. I²n-flē²xd'. Gr., καμπτός. Lat., inflexus (from inflectere, to bend in). Fr., féchi, recourbé. Ger., eingebogen, einwärtsgebogen, eingeschlagen. Bent or turned abruptly inward. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24); a, 45.] Cf. REFLEXED.

INFLEXIBILITY, n. I²n-flē²x-i²-bi²*i²it²-i². Lat., inflexibilitas. Fr., inflexibilité. Ger., Unbiegsamkeit. The state of being inflexible.

INFLEXIBLE, adj. I²n-flē²x/i²-b'l. Lat., inflexibilis (from in, neg., and flexere, to bend). Fr., i. Ger., unbiegsam. Incapable of being bent, unyielding. [a, 41.]

INFLEXION, n. I²n-flē²kt'shu³n. Lat., inflexio (from inflectere, to bend). Fr., i. Ger., Einknickung, Beugung, Biegung. It., infessione. Sp., inflexión. A bending, especially a bending inward.—I. de la colonne vertébrale (Fr.). See CURVATURE of the spine.

INFLEXIOSCOPE, n. I²n-flē²x/i²-o-skop. Lat., inflexioscopium (from inflexio, a bending, and σκοπεῖν, to examine). Fr., i. Ger., Inflexioskop. An instrument for demonstrating diffraction. [L, 30, 41 (a, 14).]

INFLEXUS (Lat.), adj. I²n-flē²x/n³s(u⁴s). See INFLEXED.

INFLORESCENCE, n. I²n-flor-e²s/e²ns. Lat., inflorescentia (from inflorescere, to begin to blossom). Fr., i. Ger., Blütenstand. 1. The particular way in which flower-clusters are arranged on the axis. 2. The flower-cluster itself. [B, 1, 19, 77, 104, 123, 215 (a, 24).]—Abnormal i. Any form of anthosis in which the relations of the flower to the axis are much obscured or complicated by real or apparent departures from the type (see Suprafoliaceus i.). [a, 35].—Acropetal i., Ascending i., Axillary i., Botryose i., Botrytic i. Lat., inflorescentia ascendens. Fr., i. acropète, i. ascendante. Ger., akropetaler (oder aufsteigender, oder botrytischer) Blütenstand. Indeterminate i. [B, 215 (a, 24)]. See also ACROPETAL, ASCENDING, AXILLARY, etc.—Centrifugal i. Lat., inflorescentia centrifuga. Fr., i. centrifuge. Ger., centrifugaler Blütenstand. Determinate i. [B, 110, 215, 291 (a, 24)].—Centripetal i. Lat., inflorescentia centripeta. Fr., i. centripète. Ger., centripetaler Blütenstand. Indeterminate i. [B, 1, 104, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Clustered i. An i. in which the flowers are collected into a bunch of any sort. [a, 35.] See CYME, FASCICLE, GLOBUS, GLOMERULE, and THYRSE.—Compound cymose i., Compound definite i. An i. in which the terminal axes for one or more earlier generations bear a cyme instead of a single flower. [B, 77 (a, 35)].—Compound i. Lat., inflorescentia composita. Fr., i. composée. Ger., zusammengesetzter Blütenstand. Any aggregation of similar i's into a common whole (e. g., a compound cyme, a compound raceme, or a thyrus). [B, 1, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Compound racemose i. A racemose i. in which the lateral axes are themselves branched and bear clusters instead of single flowers. [Gray (a, 35)].—Cymose i. Lat., inflorescentia cymosa. Fr., i. cymeuse. Ger., trugdoldiger Blütenstand. A variety of determinate i. in which the primary floral axis, before ending in a flower, gives off one or more lateral unifloral axes which repeat the process. [B, 1, 104, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Definite i. Fr., i. définie. See DETERMINATE I.—Descending i. Lat., inflorescentia descendens. Fr., i. descendante. Ger., absteigender Blütenstand. A variety of determinate i. in which the terminal flower on the rachis opens first, and the others open in succession below it. [B, 167 (a, 24)].—Determinate i. Lat., inflorescentia determinata. Fr., i. déterminée. Ger., bestimmter Blütenstand. Definite or terminal i., cymose i. without a pseud-axis; an i. in which the expansion of the flowers is centrifugal (i. e., from apex to base or from centre to circumference). [B, 1, 77, 123, 291 (a, 24)].—Heterogeneously compound racemose i. A compound racemose i. in which the secondary or tertiary ramifications are unlike the primary. [Gray (a, 35)].—Indefinite i., Indeterminate i. Lat., inflorescentia indeterminata. Fr., i. indéterminée. Ger., unbestimmter Blütenstand. An i. in which the expansion of the flower is centripetal (i. e., from base to apex or from circumference to centre). [B, 177, 123, 167, 215, 291 (a, 24)]. See also SPICATE I. and PANICLED I.—L. bulbifère (Fr.). That form of i. in which bulbils are developed in place of flowers. [A. St.-Hilaire (B, 121)].—I. capsulifère (Fr.). That form of i. in which at first flowers appear and are followed by capsules. [A. St.-Hilaire (B, 121)].—I. épité (Fr.). See SPICATE I.—Mixed i. Fr., i. mixte. An i. in which both the determinate and indeterminate types are represented. The flowers on the primary axis may be arranged on the opposite plan from those on the branches, or the flower-heads (in composite plants) or whorls (in labiate plants) may be developed centrifugally, while the florets open centripetally. It includes the mixed panicle, thyrse, spiked verticillaster, etc. [B, 77, 104, 167, 215 (a, 24)].—Monopodial i. [Sachs]. Indeterminate i. [a, 24].—Panicled i. Lat., inflorescentia paniculata. Fr., i. paniculée. Ger., rispiger Blütenstand. A panicle-like i., a form of indeterminate i. arising when the lateral axes from the rachis themselves branch. It includes forms in which the axes are elongated, such as the true panicle (e. g., in the grapevine), and the compound panicle composed of spikes (e. g., in an ear of wheat); and forms in which the axes are shortened, such as the compact spike-like panicle (e. g., in ears of barley), and the compound umbel (as in most Umbelliferae). [B, 1, 123, 167 (a, 24)].—Pure i. I. of a single type (i. e., wholly determinate or indeterminate). [B, 215 (a, 24)]. Cf. Mixed i.—Racemose i. Lat., inflorescentia racemosa. Ger., traubiger Blütenstand. Of Sachs and others, Indeterminate i. According to Gray, the term is inapplicable to some forms of the latter. [a, 24].—Simple cymose i. A simple definite i.; an i. in which the terminal axis of each generation is one-flowered. [B, 77 (a, 35)].—Simple i. Lat., inflorescentia simplex. Fr., i. simple. Ger., einfacher Blütenstand. An i. in which the flower-clusters are not compounded. [B, 1, 123, 215, 291 (a, 24)].—Solitary i. 1. The solitary axillary (or indefinite) i.; a form of indefinite i. in which a lateral shoot produced in the axil of a single foliage leaf ends in a single flower. 2. The solitary terminal (or definite) i.; a form of determinate i. in which the axis terminates in a single flower, no other flowers being produced on the plant. [B, 77 (a, 35)].—Spicate i. Lat., inflorescentia spicata. Fr., i. épité. Ger., ähriger Blütenstand. A form of indeterminate i. arising when the lateral axes first produced from the rachis do not themselves branch, and are all floral axes. It includes the spike, spadix, and raceme, in all of which the rachis is elongated, and the capitulum and simple umbel, in both of which the rachis is abbreviated. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24)].—Suprafoliaceus (or suprafoliate) i. A form of abnormal i. in which the flower-stalk coalesces with the axis above the subtending bract (in a simple i.) or last leaf (in a sympodial i.). [a, 35].—Sympodial i. Of Sachs and Gray, a cymose i. with a pseud-axis; that form of determinate i. arising from the development of a sympodium (q. v.). [B, 167, 215 (a, 24)].—Terminal i. Definite or determinate i.; so called because the primary and secondary axes both terminate in a flower (e. g., the poppy and columbine). [B, 77 (a, 35)].

INFLUENS (Lat.), adj. I²n-flu²(flu⁴)-e²nz(ans). Gen., -ent'is. From influere, to flow into. Fr., influent. Ger., einflussend. See AFFERENT.

INFLUENTIA (Lat.), n. f. I²n-flu²(flu⁴)-e²n'shi²(ti²)-a³. 1. A flowing in. [L, 50 (a, 14)]. 2. See INFLUENZA.

INFLUENZ (Ger.), n. I²n-flu²(flu⁴)-e²nz'a³. See INFLUENTIA.—Nordische I. See INFLUENZA.

INFLUENZA (Lat.), n. f. I²n-flu²(flu⁴)-e²nz'a³. An Italianized form of influentia, because the disease was ascribed to some mysterious influence. Fr., grippe. Ger., I. Influenz, russischer Katarrh, Blitzkatarrh, epidemisches Katarrhalieber, Schnupfenieber. It., i. catarro russo. Sp., catarro epidémico. Syn.: catarrhus epidemicus (seu a contagio [Cullen]), defluxio catarrhus [Young], coryza maligna [Underwood], rheuma epidemicum [Sauvages]. 1. A specific catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membrane of the air-passages with severe constitutional disturbance. The disease is invariable in its essential characteristics, frequently prevailing as an epidemic, attended with lassitude and prostration to an extreme degree, with special and early implication of the naso-laryngo-bronchial mucous membrane. Chills occur, and great sensibility to cold exists over the surface of the skin; the eyes become injected, and tend to fill with tears, the nostrils discharge an acrid fluid, and there is fixed and intense pain in the head, mostly frontal, sometimes attended with giddiness. The nights are sleepless, with delirium or lethargy, cough prevails with yellow expectoration, most troublesome at night and tending greatly to increase the headache. Fever attends the disorder, sometimes slight and sometimes severe, and of a type varying in different epidemics and localities. The duration of the fever is from four to eight days. The sense of taste is generally much disordered, and there are great anxiety and oppression in the region of the heart. After the acute symptoms have subsided there is great debility, which often lasts for many months. [D, 1; H. Macdonald, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Jan. 11, 1890, p. 40.] 2. In the horse, a disease resembling typhoid fever. [A, 523].—I. europæa. See I. (1st def.).

INFLUENZOID, adj. I²n-flu²-e²nz'oid. From influenza (q. v.), and eidōs, resemblance. Resembling influenza.

INFLUX, n. I²n-flu²x. Lat., influxus (from influere, to flow into). Fr., i. Ger., Einfließen (1st def.), Einwirkung (2d def.). 1. A flowing into. [a, 14.] 2. Influence. [A, 322.]

INFOLIATE, adj. I²n-fol'iat. Lat., infoliatus (from in, neg., and folium, a leaf). Fr., infeillé. See APHYLLOUS.

INFORMIS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fō²rm'is. From in neg., and forma, form. Deformed, shapeless; as a n., in the pl., Informes, of Illiger, an order of multungulated mammals, including those which have the subcutaneous tissue so filled with fat as to efface their form. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

INFORMITAS (Lat.), n. f. I²n-f²o²r^mi²-ta²s(ta²s). Gen., -at'is. From informis, shapeless. See DEFORMITY.

INFORTUNUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-f²o²r-tu²(tu)²ni²-u²m(u²m). From in neg., and fortuna, fortune. See CONTRAFISSURA.

INFRA-ACROMIO-HUMERALIS (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-a²k-(a²k)-ro²/mi²-o-hu²(hu)-mu²r(me²r)-a(a²)li²s. Fr., sous-acromio-huméral [Chaussier]. See DELTOID.

INFRA-ARYGLOTTIDEUS [E. Coues] (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-a²r(i²)-i²(u²)-glo²t(glot)-ti²d'e²-u²s(u²s). From infra, below, ἀρύττω, a pitcher, γλωττίς, the glottis, and εἶδος, resemblance. See ARYTENO-EPIGLOTTIDEUS inferior.

INFRA-ATLOIDEUS (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-a²t(a²t)-lo(lo²)-i²d-(ed)²e²-u²s(u²s). From infra, below, atlas (q. v.), and εἶδος, resemblance. The second cervical nerve. [L, 41 (a, 29).]

INFRA-AXOIDEUS (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-a²x(o²x)-o(o²)-i²d-(ed)²e²-u²s(u²s). From infra, below, and axis (q. v.). The third cervical nerve. [L, 41 (a, 29).]

INFRACOSTAL, adj. I²n-fra²-ko²s't'l. Lat., infracostalis (from infra, below, and costa, a rib). Pertaining to the lower surface of a rib. [a, 29.]

INFRA-COSTALIS (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-ko²s't-a(a²)li²s. Gen., -al'is. From infra, below, and costa, a rib. A fasciculus of aponeurotic and muscular tissue which arises from the inner surface of a rib, passes obliquely downward and backward, and is inserted into the inner surface of the first, second, or third rib below. [L, 172 (a, 29).]

INFRACTION, n. I²n-fra²-k'shu²n. Lat., infractio (from infringere, to break to pieces). Fr., i. Ger., Infraktion. See Greenstick FRACTURE.

INFRACTOUS, adj. I²n-fra²-k'tu²s. Lat., infractus (from infringere, to break to pieces). Ger., eingeknickt. See GENICULATE (1st def.).

INFRADIAPHRAGMATIC, adj. I²n-fra²-di-a²-fra²-g-ma²t'i²-i²k. Situated below the diaphragm. [a, 29.]

INFRA-ÉPINEUX (Fr.), adj. A²n²-fra²-a-pe-nu²s. See INFRASPINOUS.

INFRAGENUAL, adj. I²n-fra²-je²n'u²-a²l. From infra, below, and genu, the knee. See SUBPATELLAR.

INFRAGLENOID, adj. I²n-fra²-glen'o'id. From infra, below, γλήνη, a cavity, and εἶδος, resemblance. Situated below the glenoid cavity. [a, 29.]

INFRAGLOTTIC, adj. I²n-fra²-glo²t'i²k. From infra, below, and γλωττίς, the glottis. Situated below the glottis. [a, 29.]

INFRA-HYOID, adj. I²n-fra²-hi'o'id. From infra, below, and ὑοειδής, resembling the letter upsilon. Situated below the hyoid bone or apparatus. [a, 29.]

INFRA-INGUINAL, adj. I²n-fra²-i²n²-gwi²-n'l. From infra, below, and inguen, the groin. Of Luschka, situated below the inguinal region. [a, 29.]

INFRALEMNISC, n. I²n-fra²-le²m'ni²sk. From infra, below, and lemniscus, a pendant. Of Wilder, the inferior lamina of the lemniscus. [K.]

INFRAMAMMARY, adj. I²n-fra²-ma²m'a²-ri². From infra, below, and mamma, the breast. Fr., sous-mammaire. Situated beneath the mamma.

INFRAMARGINAL, adj. I²n-fra²-ma²r'j'i²-n'l. From infra, below, and margo, a margin. See SUBMARGINAL.

INFRAMAXILLARY, adj. I²n-fra²-ma²x'i²l-a-ri². Lat., inframaxillaris (from infra, below, and maxilla (q. v.)). Fr., sous-maxillaire. Pertaining or adjacent to the inferior maxilla; as a n., the lower mandible. [L, 343; a, 45.]

INFRAMAXILOSTERNODYMIA (Lat.), n. f. I²n-fra²-ma²x'xy'i²l-lo(lo²)-stu²r(ste²rn)-o(o²)-di²m(du²em)²-i²a². From infra, below, maxilla (q. v.), στήρνον, the sternum, and δῆμος, twin. A form of double monstrosity in which the individuals are united by the sternum and the lower jaw. [a, 40.]

INFRA-OBLIQUUS [E. Coues] (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-o²b-li-(le)²'kwu²s(kwu²s). From infra, below, and obliquus, slanting. See OBLIQUUS inferior.

INFRA-OCCIPITAL, adj. I²n-fra²-o²k-si²p'i²-t'l. From infra, below, and occiput, the back part of the head. Fr., sous-occipital. Situated beneath the occiput.

INFRA-ORBITAL, INFRA-ORBITAR, INFRA-ORBITARY, adj's. I²n-fra²-o²rb'i²-t'l, o²rb²-i²ta²r, -i²ta-ri². Lat., infra-orbitalis, infra-orbitarius (from infra, below, and orbis, a ring).

Fr., infra-orbitaire. Ger., infra-orbital. Situated in the floor of the orbit or the region below the orbital margin.

INFRA-ORBITALIS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fra²-o²rb-i²-t-a(a²)li²s. See INFRA-ORBITAL; as a n., a bundle of muscular fibres, frequently found, which arise from the lower margin of the orbit and are inserted into the nasal process of the superior maxilla. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

INFRAPUBIAN, adj. I²n-fra²-pu²b'i²-a²n. From infra, below, and pubes (q. v.). Fr., sous-pubien. Ger., untergeschlechts-theilig. See SUBPUBIC.

INFRARECTUS [E. Coues] (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fra²-re²kt(rakt)²-u²s(u²s). From infra, below, and rectus, straight. See Rectus inferior oculi.

INFRASCAPULAR, adj. I²n-fra²-ska²p'u²l-a²r. Lat., infrascapularis (from infra, below, and scapula, the shoulder-blade). Fr., sous-scapulaire. Ger., Unterschulterblatt. Situated beneath the scapula. [a, 14; a, 45.]

INFRASPINALIS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fra²-spi²n(spen)-a(a²)li²s. See INFRASPINOUS; as a n., see INFRASPINATUS.

INFRASPINATUS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fra²-spi²n(spen)-a(a²)li²s(u²s). From infra, below, and spina, the spine. Fr., sous-épineux. Infraspinal; as a n., a triangular muscle which occupies the greater part of the infraspinoous fossa of the scapula. It arises from the fascia covering it, from the lower surface of the spine of the scapula and from the inner two thirds of the infraspinoous fossa except at the lower angle and along the external border. The fibres converge to a tendon which is inserted into the middle facet of the great tuberosity of the humerus. [L, 31, 113, 117, 142, 172 (a, 29).]—I. accessorius, I. minor, I. secundus. Of certain authors, the upper portion of the infraspinoous which arises from the spine of the scapula. [L, 34 (a, 29).]

INFRASPINOUS, adj. I²n-fra²-spi²n'u²s. From infra, below, and spina, the spine. Fr., sous-épineux. Situated beneath the spine of the scapula.

INFRATEMPORAL, adj. I²n-fra²-te²m'po-r'l. From infra, below, and tempus (see TEMPLE). Fr., i. Situated beneath the temple. [a, 45.]

INFRATHORACIC, adj. I²n-fra²-thor-a²s'i²k. From infra, below, and θώραξ, the thorax. Situated below the thorax. [a, 29.]

INFRATROCHANTERIC, adj. I²n-fra²-tro-ka²n²-te²r'i²k. From infra, below, and τροχάντρον, a trochanter. Fr., i-trochantérique. Situated below one or both of the trochanters. [a, 29.]

INFRATROCHLEAR, adj. I²n-fra²-tro²k'le-a²r. From infra, below, and trochlea, a case containing one or more pulleys. Fr., infra-trochléaire. Situated below the trochlea. [a, 29.]

INFRAVAGINAL, adj. I²n-fra²-va²j'i²-n'l. From infra, below, and vagina, the vagina. Fr., sous-vaginal. Situated below the junction of the vault of the vagina with the cervix uteri.

INFRICTION, n. I²n-fri²kt'shu²n. From infricare, to rub in. Fr., i. Ger., Einreibung. A rubbing in, as of an ointment. [a, 45.]

INFRIGIDATION, n. I²n-fri²ji²-i²d-a²'shu²n. From in intens., and frigidus, cold. See REFRIGERATION.

INFRACTUOSE, INFRUGIFEROUS, adj's. I²n-fru²kt'tu²-os, i²n-fru²-j'i²f'e²r-u²s. Lat., infructuosus (from in neg., and fructuosus, fruitful, or frux, fruit, and ferre, to bear). Fr., infructueux. Ger., unfruchtbar. Barren; not bearing fruit. [L, 56 (a, 43; a, 45).]

INFUNDIBULAR, adj. I²n-fu²n-di²b'u²-la²r. From infundibulum, a funnel. Like or pertaining to a funnel. [B, 123 (a, 24).] See INFUNDIBULIFORM.

INFUNDIBULIFORM, adj. I²n-fu²n-di²-bu²li²-fo²rm. Lat., infundibuliformis (from infundibulum, a funnel, and forma, form). Fr., infundibulé, infundibuliforme. Ger., trichterförmig. Funnel-shaped. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24; a, 45).]

INFUNDIBULO-OVARIAN, adj. I²n-fu²n-di²b'u²-lo-o²-va²-ri²-a²n. From infundibulum, a funnel, and ovarium, the ovary. Pertaining to the oviduct and to the ovary. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

INFUNDIBULO-PELVIC, adj. I²n-fu²n-di²b'u²-lo-o²-pe²l'vi²k. From infundibulum, a funnel, and pelvis (q. v.). Fr., infundibulo-pelvien. Pertaining to the oviduct and to the pelvis. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

INFUNDIBULUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-fu²n(fu²n)-di²b'u²(u²l)-u²m(u²m). From infundere, to pour in. Fr., i. entonnoir, tige pituitaire (2d def.). Ger., Trichter. Lit., a funnel. 1. A tubular passage more or less closely resembling a funnel. [a, 29.] 2. A hollow process that forms the continuation of the tuber cinereum and terminates in the pituitary body. [I, 6 (K).]—Base de l'. (Fr.). See TUBER cinereum.—I. cerebri. See I. (2d def.).—I. cochleæ. Ger., I. der Cochlea, Gehörbecher. An imperfect funnel around which the gyri of the cochlea pass. Its apex is common with that of the modiolus, and its base is covered by the apex of the cochlea (the cupola). [F, 40.]—I. cordis. See CONUS arteriosus.—I. femoralis vasculare. See Femoral CANAL (1st def.).—I. lacrimale. See Lacrimal SAC.—I. of the brain. See I. cerebri.—I. of the cochlea. See I. cochleæ.—I. of the ear. See I. cochleæ.—I. of the ethmoid bone. A long, flexuous cellular canal, which passes from the frontal sinus through the anterior ethmoidal cells to the front part of the middle meatus of the nose. [L, 142, 172 (a, 29).]—I. of the Falloppian tube. See I. tubæ.—I. of the frontal sinus. See I. of the ethmoid bone.—I. of the heart. See CONUS arteriosus.—I. of the hypophysis. See I. (2d def.).—Infundibula of the kidney. Lat., infundibula renis. Ger., Nierenrichter. The three prolongations of the pelvis of the kidney, the subdivisions of which constitute the calices. [A, 478 (a, 17).]—Infundibula of the lungs. Lat., infundibula pulmonum. Fr., infundibule des poumons. Ger., Luengentrichter. The extreme enlarged ends of the bronchioles. [K (a, 45).]—I. of the nasal fosse. See I. of the ethmoid bone.—I. of the right ventricle of the heart. See CONUS arteriosus.—I. ovaricum. See I. tubæ.—Infundibula pulmonum. See Infundibula of the lungs.—I. renis. See Infundibula of the kidney.—I. tubæ (Falloppl). Ger., Franze der Falloppischen Röhre. The funnel-shaped cavity formed by the fimbriae of the oviduct.—I. ventriculi. See CESOPHAGUS.—I. ventriculi tertii cerebri. See I. cerebri.

INFUNDIRBÜCHSE (Ger.), n. I²n-fund-er'bu'ch'z's-e². A percolator. [A, 521.]

INFUSE, v. tr. I²n-fu'z'. Lat., infundere. Fr., infuser. Ger., infundieren. 1. To pour into. 2. To steep.

INFUSÉ (Fr.), adj. Infused; as a n., see INFUSION (3d def.). [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INFUSED, adj. I²n-fu'z'd'. Lat., infusus. Fr., infusé. Ger., eingeweicht. Subjected to the process of infusion.

INFUSIBILITY, n. I²n-fu'z-i²-bi'ti'ti-i². The quality of being infusible.

INFUSIBLE, adj. I²n-fu'z'i²-b'l'. From in neg. and fundere, to melt. Fr., i. Ger., unschmelzbar. Incapable of being melted. [L, 107.]

INFUSION, n. I²n-fu'zhu'n. Gr., ἔγχυσις (1st and 2d def's), ἐχχυμα (3d def.). Lat., infusio (1st and 2d def's), infusum (3d def.). Fr., i. infusé (3d def.). Ger., Eingießung (1st def.), Einweichen (2d def.), Aufguss (3d def.). 1. A pouring into; as distinguished from transfusion (q. v.), the gentle injection of any other liquid than blood into a vein. 2. The process of making an i. (3d def.). 3. A solution (generally aqueous) of those portions of a crude drug that are soluble in the menstruum used, without the aid of boiling. [Bernatzik (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Cold i. An i. (3d def.) made with cold water.—Darmi' (Ger.). See ENTEROCOLYSIS (1st def.).—Guthrie's i. See INFUSUM Guthriei.—Hot i. An i. (3d def.) made with hot water.—I. amère (Fr.). See INFUSUM GENTIANÆ compositum. 2. A preparation made by infusing 15 parts of species amarae in 1,000 parts of boiling water, and straining; or by digesting 15 parts each of wormwood and juniper in 180 parts of boiling water, and straining. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—I. astringente (Fr.). See Tinctura ROSARUM acidula.—I. vulnèralre (Fr.). Of the old pharmacopœias, an i. of equal parts of Agrimonia eupatoria, Solidago virgaurea, and Hypericum perforatum. [D, 133; L, 85.]

INFUSO-DECOCTION (Lat.), n. n. I²n-fu'z(fu)-so(s)-de(da)-ko'kt(u)m(u)m. From infundere, to infuse, and decoquere, to boil away. Fr., infuso-décoction. Ger., Infusodecoct, Aufguss-Absud. A preparation made by mixing an infusion with a decoction of the same substance. [L, 30, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

INFUSOR (Lat.), n. m. I²n-fu'z(fu)-so'r. Gen., -oris. From infundere, to pour in. Ger., Eingesser. An instrument devised by Hunter for the parenchymatous injection and infusion of medicines, especially carbonic acid. It consists of a long glass cylinder graduated from above downward, into c. c. and half c. c., to the number of 15. Its lower end is drawn out for the attachment of a long flexible tube; to the other end of this tube is attached a long hypodermic needle with multiple apertures. The needle is introduced into the subcutaneous tissue, and the cylinder raised so that the medicine is infused by gravitation. [a, 40.]

INFUSORIA (Lat.), n. n., pl. of adj. infusorius. I²n-fu'z(fu)-so'ri'a. Fr., infusoires. Ger., Infusorien, Infusionsthierchen. Unicellular animals, so called because often developing in organic infusions; formerly, of von Siebold and Stannius, a class of the Protozoa, characterized by having cilia or flagella used in locomotion, or for the prehension of food; more recently, according to Packard, the highest division of the Protozoa (the Ciliata). According to Hilgard, all the I., as well as the Protozoa, the Protophyta, and the fresh-water Algae, are only "the immature, but even thus self-multiplying germs of higher (or adult) forms of plants and animals, otherwise well known for themselves." According to Bennet, both vegetable and animal I. occurring in organic fluids originate in oleo-albuminous particles there formed, which, floating on the surface, constitute the primordial mucous layer of Burdach (the proligerous pellicle of Pouchet), and, under the influence of proper temperature, light, air, and chemical exchanges, pass into the lower forms of vegetable and animal life. [B, 28 (a, 27); B, 46 (a, 39); L, 231; "Am. Nat.," vi, p. 317 (a, 32); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvii (a, 39).]—Intestinal I. Microscopic animalcula formed in the animal and human intestines, and multiplying by gemmation. [Leckart (a, 40).]

INFUSORIAL, adj. I²n-fu'z-o'ri'a². Pertaining or belonging to the Infusoria.

INFUSORIUS (Lat.), adj. I²n-fu'z(fu)s-o'ri'u's(u)s. Pertaining to infusion (1st and 3d def's).

INFUSUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-fu'z(fu)-su'm(su'm). See INFUSION (3d def.).—Decocto'i. See INFUSO-DECOCTUM.—I. amarum vinosum. See Vinum GENTIANÆ compositum.—I. concentratissimum. Ger., höchst concentrirter Aufguss. An infusion in which 5 parts of colature represent 1 part of the drug. [Bernatzik (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—I. concentratum. Ger., concentrirter Aufguss. An infusion in which 20 parts of colature represent 3 of the drug. [Bernatzik (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—I. Guthriei. An infusion of 8 parts of sodium sulphate, 2 each of coriander- and fennel-seeds, and 1 part of senna-leaves in 16 parts of water. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," v (a, 39).]—I. laxans. A preparation made by infusing 3 parts of senna-leaves in 31 of an aqueous solution of magnesium sulphate containing 9 of the sulphate. [B, 270 (a, 38).]—I. laxativum (viennense). It, acqua lassativa di Vienna. A purgative draught made by infusing 25 parts of Alexandrian senna in 200 of boiling water for four hours, and adding 35 of manna. [A, 314.]—I. pectorale. See PORTON pectorale.

INGA, n. I²n'ga². Fr., i. Ger., I. A genus of tropical or subtropical leguminous plants of the Ingeæ. Many of the species are now referred to Pithecolobium. [B, 19, 42, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—Cortex ingæ. Syn.: cortex virginalis. The bark of Mimosa saponaria. [B, 48 (a, 14).]—I. adstringens. Fr., i. astringent. Port., figueirinha. A Brazilian species. The bark is astringent. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. à fruits ronds (Fr.). See PITHECOLOBIUM cyclocarpum.—I. ailé (Fr.). See I. vera.—I. alba. A species found in Guiana; of Grisebach, the I. Bourgoni. [a, 24.]—I. anomala. See ANSELLEA grandiflora.—I. astringens, I. astringent (Fr.). See I. adstringens.—I. avarenometo. The Pithecolobium avarenometo. [B, 121.]—I. balsamica. A species the leaves of which are vulnerary. [B, 88 (a, 39).]—I. barbatimão. The Strypnodendron barbatimão. [B, 121.]—I. bark. See Cortex INGÆ.—I. bigemina. Fr., i. bigéminé. See PITHECOLOBIUM bigeminum.—I. biglobosa. Fr., i. biglobuleux. The Parkia africana. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. Bourgoni. Fr., i. bordé. A species found in the West Indies and South America. The bark is astringent and the fruit is edible. [Spach (B, 173, 180 [a, 24]).]—I. caven. A species found in Chili, where the pods are considered astringent, and are used to make ink. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. camatchilli. A plant (probably the Pithecolobium dulce) found in Manila, where the seeds, which are thick, white, pulpy, and aromatic, are eaten. [B, 88 (a, 39), 173 (a, 24).]—I. circinalis. A species found in Santo Domingo and the Bahamas; a source of mesquite gum. [De Candolle (B, 104 [a, 24]).]—I. cochilocarpus. See I. adstringens.—I. comosa. See PITHECOLOBIUM comosum.—I. cyclocarpum. Fr., i. à fruits ronds. See PITHECOLOBIUM cyclocarpum.—I. de Sainte-Marthe (Fr.). See I. Marthe.—I. dulcis. See PITHECOLOBIUM dulce.—I. élégant (Fr.). See I. spectabilis.—I. fœculifera. A West Indian species having edible fruits. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. fagifolia. See I. Bourgoni.—I. faroba. A plant (probably a species of an allied genus) found in Senegal, where its fruit is eaten. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. fastuosa. Fr., i. fastueux. A species found at Caracas, having edible fruit. [Spach (a, 24).]—I. fétide (Fr.). See I. fœtida.—I. Feuille. The Pacay-tree of Peru and Guiana, cultivated for its fruit, the white pulp of which is edible. [B, 19, 77, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—I. fœtida. Fr., i. fétide. A West Indian species. The leaves and roots have an alliaceous odor. [Spach, De Candolle (a, 24).]—I. guadalupeensis. A plant used like Pithecolobium unguis cati. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. insignis. Fr., i. remarquable. A species found in tropical America, having edible fruits. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. jurema. See I. adstringens.—I. kœringa [Kostel]. The Mimosa kœringa. [B, 42, 180 (a, 24).]—I. latifolia. See PITHECOLOBIUM latifolium.—I. leucantha. The Pithecolobium unguis cati. [Grisebach (a, 24).]—I. marginata. See I. Bourgoni.—I. Marthe. Fr., i. de Sainte-Marthe. A species found in Colombia, where the pods (called algarovilla) are used as an astringent. [B, 88 (a, 39), 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. niopo. The Acacia niopo. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. ongle-de-chat (Fr.). See PITHECOLOBIUM unguis cati.—I. pois sucrin (Fr.). See I. vera.—I. punctata. Fr., i. ponctuée. A species found in the Antilles, where the pods are used as a laxative. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. remarquable (Fr.). See I. insignis.—I. salutaris. Fr., i. solitaire. A species found in New Granada, where the bark is used as a diuretic and astringent. INGBER (Ger.), n. I²n²'be'r. Ginger. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I'-kluhen. See I.

INGENIUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n(i²n²)-jen(ge'n²)/i²-n²m(u)m. From in, in, and gignere, to beget. 1. A congenital quality; a primordial characteristic. 2. Natural intelligence, mentality, or genius. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. morbi. The nature or special character of a disease. [a, 40.]

INGERENDUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(i^2n^2)\cdot je^2r(ge^2r)\cdot e^2nd^2u^3m\cdot (u^3m)$. From ingerere, to carry into. Ger., Einzuführende. Any substance to be ingested. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INGEST, v. tr. $I^2n\cdot je^2st'$. Lat., ingerere (from in, into, and gerere, to carry). Fr., ingérer, englober. Ger., aufnehmen. To eat, to take up, to perform ingestion (q. v.). [J.]

INGESTA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $I^2n(i^2n^2)\cdot je^2s(ge^2s)/ta^2$. From ingerere, to carry into. Fr., i. Ger., L, Eingeführten. Things taken into the stomach. Cf. EGESTA.

INGESTION, n. $I^2n\cdot je^2st^2u^3n$. Lat., ingestio (from ingerere, to carry into). Fr., i. Ger., Aufnahme. It., ingestione. Sp., ingestión. 1. The introduction of anything into the alimentary canal by the mouth. 2. The act by which a cell takes into its substance particles of foreign matter. This has been observed in the amoeba, in many amoeboid cells, especially white blood-corpuses, and in the mesodermic cells of invertebrates. [Metschnikoff, "Quart. Jour. of Micr. Sci.," Jan., 1884 (J).] 3. See INTRUSUSCEPTION.

INGLUVIATION, n. $I^2n\cdot glu^2\cdot vi^2\cdot a^2/shu^2n$. From ingluvies (q. v.). The process of storing up food in a special receptacle of the body (e. g., the crop in birds) for use in future digestion. [B.]

INGLUVIES (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2\cdot glu^2(2glu^2)/vi^2(wi^2)\cdot ez(as)$. Gen., -vie'i. Perhaps from in, in, and gula, the gullet. 1. The pharynx, especially if it is large. 2. The crop, or craw, of a bird. 3. The first stomach of ruminants. 4. Bulinia. [L, 50 (a, 14), 343.] 5. See CHIN.

INGLUVIN, n. $I^2n^2\cdot glu^2\cdot vi^2n$. A digestive preparation made out of the crops of chickens. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

INGO [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. $I^2n^2\cdot go$. See ASAFETIDA.

INGRAIN (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\cdot gra^2n^2$. The Triticum spelta. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

INGRASSIAL, adj. $I^2n\cdot gra^2s^2/a^2$. Described by Ingrassias, a Sicilian physician. [a, 14.] See I. BONE.

INGRATUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n\cdot grat(gra^2t)/u^3s(u^4s)$. From in neg., and gratus, pleasant. Fr., ingrat. Ger., unangenehm. Of plants, disagreeable to the smell and taste. [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INGRAVESCENT, adj. $I^2n\cdot gra^2v\cdot e^2s^2ent$. Lat., ingravesces (from ingravescere, to grow heavy). Growing more and more severe. [C. L. Dana, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 19, 1890, p. 80.]

INGRAVIGATION, n. $I^2n\cdot gra^2v\cdot i^2\cdot da^2/shu^2n$. From ingravidare, to make pregnant. See IMPREGNATION.

INGREDIENT, n. $I^2n\cdot gred^2/i^2\cdot e^2nt$. Lat., ingrediens (from ingredi, to go into). Fr., i. Ger., Bestandtheil. A substance which enters into the composition of a mixture. [a, 17.]

INGRESSUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n^2\cdot gre^2s^2/su^2s(su^4s)$. Gen., -gres^2sus. From ingredi, to go into. Ger., Hineingehen. An entrance or opening (into a cavity). [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. superior. See CARDIA (2d def.).

INGROWING, adj. $I^2n\cdot gro^2\cdot i^2n^2$. Growing in an inward direction; as a n., see INGROWTH.—I. of a nail. Lat., incarnatio unguis. Ger., Nageleinwachstung. Onyxis. [a, 40.]

INGROWN, adj. $I^2n\cdot g^2ron$. Having grown in.

INGROWTH, n. $I^2n\cdot gro^2th$. A process of growth proceeding inward (e. g., the penetration of vascular shoots from the perichondrium of the embryo into the inclosed cartilage). [A, 70.]

INGUEN (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n^2\cdot gwe^2n$. Gen., inguinis. 1. See GROIN. 2. See BUBO.—I. gonorrhoeum, I. gonorrhoeum. See GONORRHOEAL BUBO.—I. induratum. See SYPHILITIC BUBO.—I. suppurans. See SUPPURATING BUBO.—I. syphiliticum. See SYPHILITIC BUBO.—I. virulentum. See VIRULENT BUBO.

INGUÉRISABLE (Fr.), adj. $A^2n^2\cdot ge\cdot res\cdot sa^2\cdot b'$. Incurable. [L, 41.]

INGUINAL, adj. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n^2$. Lat., inguinalis (from inguen, the groin). Fr., inguinaire. Ger., Leisten-. Pertaining to or situated in the groin. [C.]

INGUINALIS (Lat.), adj. and n. f. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot a(a^3)/i^2s$. 1. (Adj.) see INGUINAL. 2. (N.) the Aster amellus, Aster inula, and Buphthalmum spinosum. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

INGUINARIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot a(a^3)/ri^2\cdot a^3$. From inguen, the groin. The Rubia cruciata. [B, 88 (a, 39), 121 (a, 35).]

INGUINO-ABDOMINAL, adj. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot o\cdot a^2\cdot b\cdot do^2m^2\cdot n^2$. From inguen, the groin, and abdomen, the abdomen. Fr., i-c. Pertaining to the groin and to the abdomen.

INGUINO-CRURAL, adj. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot o\cdot kru^2\cdot r^2$. From inguen, the groin, and crus, the leg. Fr., i-c. Pertaining to the groin and to the thigh.

INGUINO-CUTANEOUS, adj. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot o\cdot ku^2\cdot tan^2\cdot e\cdot u^3s$. Lat., inguino-cutaneus (from inguen, the groin, and cutis, the skin). Fr., inguino-cutané. Pertaining to the skin of the inguinal region. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INGUINO-INTERSTITIAL, adj. $I^2n^2\cdot gwi^2\cdot n\cdot o\cdot i^2\cdot n\cdot tu^2\cdot sti^2\cdot sh^2$. From inguen, the groin, and interstes, that is between. In the tissues of the inguinal region. [a, 29.]

INGULATION, n. $I^2n^2\cdot gu^2\cdot la^2/shu^2n$. From in, into, and gula, the throat. The introduction of anything into the throat. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

INGURGITATION (Fr.), n. $A^2n^2\cdot gu^2\cdot r\cdot zhe\cdot ta^3\cdot se\cdot o^2n^2$. From in, in, and gurgitare, to gulf. See DEGLUTITION.

INGWER (Ger.), n. $I^2n^2\cdot ve^2r$. See GINGER (1st def.) and ZINGIBER.—Aechter I. The Zingiber officinale. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Aetherisches Pextrakt. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

INHABITIVENESS, n. $I^2n\cdot ha^2b^2\cdot ti^2\cdot v\cdot ne^2s$. Of the phrenologists, a propensity to remain in an accustomed habitation; the love of home and country. [a, 40.]

INHERENS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n\cdot her^2(ha^2\cdot e^2r)\cdot e^2nz(ans)$. From inhære, to stick in. See INHERENT.

INHALATEUR (Fr.), n. $E\cdot na^2\cdot la^2\cdot tu^2r$. See INHALER.

INHALATIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n\cdot ha^2l(ha^2l)\cdot a(a^3)/shi^2(ti^2)\cdot o$. Gen., -onis. See INHALATION and CUTANEOUS ABSORPTION.

INHALATION, n. $I^2n\cdot ha^2l\cdot a^2/shu^2n$. Lat., inhalatio (from inhalare, to breathe at). Fr., i. Ger., Einathmung, I. It., aspirazione, inalazione. Sp., inhalación. 1. The inspiration of air, of a gas, or of vapor, especially when impregnated with a medicament, or of itself physiologically active, as in the case of an anæsthetic. 2. Absorption, especially by the lungs. [J, 33.] 3. A medicinal preparation the vapor or spray of which is to be inhaled.

INHALANT, adj. $I^2n\cdot hal^2\cdot a^2nt$. Serving for inhalation; as a n., see INHALATION (3d def.).

INHALATOR (Lat.), INHALATORIUM (Lat.), n's m. and n. $I^2n\cdot ha^2l(ha^2l)\cdot a(a^3)/o^2r, -a^2t(a^2t)\cdot o^2ri^2\cdot u^3m(u^4m)$. See INHALER.

INHALENT, adj. $I^2n\cdot hal^2\cdot e^2nt$. See INHALANT.—Buttles's I. An instrument consisting of an olive-shaped nozzle attached to a long flexible tube for inflation and medication of the Eustachian canal with vaporized medicinal agents. [a, 40.]

INHALER, n. $I^2n\cdot hal^2\cdot u^2r$. Lat., inhalatorium (from inhalare, to inhale). Fr., inhalateur. Ger., Inhalateur, Inhalationsapparat, ALLIS'S ETHER INHALER.

HUTCHISON'S ETHER INHALER.

Respirationsapparat. An apparatus for inhalation (1st def.). [E.]—Allis's ether i. Ger., Allis'scher Aetherinhalateur. A leather face-piece containing a wire framework. The wires are parallel and and an ordinary dentist's rubber hood to fit over the mouth. [a, 40.]—Iodine I. A hard rubber olive-shaped bulb, one end of which is formed into a nasal nozzle. Cotton or other porous material is introduced into the bulb charged with iodine, and the air inhaled through this is thus impregnated. [a, 40.]—Junker's I. An i. consisting of a rubber mouth-piece on the one hand, and a set of air-bulbs on the other, attached by separate tubes to a dark bottle containing methylene, which substance is vaporized by the compressed air and used as an anesthetic. [a, 40.]—Lente's ether I. A metallic cone fitted with a hair-cushion edge, to adapt it to the face, and connected with the ether-bottle by a rubber tube. [E.]—Mackenzie's I. An i. resembling Roe's, except that it is more elaborate, and is provided with a lamp and a pressure gauge. [E.]—Roe's I. An i. composed of one metallic cylindrical can within another, each having a bent conical top, the internal one fitting closely to the external one at their upper extremities, to which is attached a flexible mouth-piece. There are multiple apertures in the upper part of the external and in the lower part of the internal can. Hot water is placed in the former and a medicinal agent in the latter, so that the patient inhales hot, moist air charged with the medicament. [a, 40.]—Siegle's I. A very simple form of steam atomizer, consisting of a lamp, a boiler, a cup for medicinal agents, and a bifurcated spray tube. [a, 40.]—Squibb's ether I. An hour-glass-shaped muslin bag one end of which is funnel-shaped to receive the face. The narrow part of the bag receives a tin tube about seven inches long and two in diameter, the only object of which is to distend this part to allow of free access of air from the expanded end of the bag to the face. The large end of the bag is partially filled with a roll of flannel and blotting-paper to hold the ether. [E.]

INHALT (Ger.), n. $I^2n^{\prime}ha^3lt$. 1. The contents of anything. 2. The amount of any particular substance in a mixture.

INHAPECANGA, n. The Smitax syphilitica. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

INHERENT, adj. $I^2n\text{-}her^{\prime}e^2nt$. Lat., inhærens (from inhabere, to stick in). Fr., inhérent. Ger., inhärent. Belonging to anything naturally, originally, and not as the result of circumstances; of cauterization, deep.

INHERITANCE, n. $I^2n\text{-}he^2r^{\prime}i^2\text{-}t^2ns$. Fr., hérédité. Ger., Erbschaft. 1. The reception of characteristics transmitted from one's ancestors. 2. That which is so derived.—Abridged I. Of Haeckel, the fusion or omission of certain characteristics in an offspring which were present and in the ancestors. [J, 9.]—Amphigonus I. Of Haeckel, in sexual generation, the i. of character from both father and mother. [J, 9, 201.]—Homochronous I. Of Haeckel, i. of a character in an offspring at an age corresponding to that in which the character appeared in the parent. [J, 9, 201.]—Homotopic I. Of Haeckel, the i. of acquired character. [J, 9, 201.]

INHERITED, adj. $I^2n\text{-}he^2r^{\prime}i^2t\text{-}e^2d$. Fr., hérité. Ger., erbet. Acquired by inheritance. [D.]

INHIBITION, n. $I^2n\text{-}hi^2b\text{-}i^2sh^{\prime}u^2n$. Gr., ἐπίσχεσις. Lat., inhibitio (from inhibere, to keep back). Fr., i. Ger., Hemmung. It., inibizione. Sp., inhibición. A preventive or restraining action. [K.]—Reflex I. Lat., inhibitio reflexa. Fr., i. reflexe. Ger., reflexische Hemmung, Reflexhemmung. An i. (e. g., of cardiac action) the result of a shock caused by an irritation or an injury to a peripheral tissue, which is carried to the brain, and thence is reflected by an efferent nerve to the inhibited organ. [K.]—Vasomotor I. A restraint of the nervous mechanism tending to narrow the calibre of the blood-vessels. It may be brought about by depressor or vaso-dilator fibres. [J, 19, 57.]—Voluntary I. Ger., willkürliche Hemmung. The voluntary restraint of reflex actions, such as the arrest of winking when the eyeball is touched. [J, 57.]

INHIBITOR (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n\text{-}hi^2b\text{-}i^2t\text{-}o^2r$. Ger., -tor's. Fr., inhibiteur. Ger., Verhinderer, Hemmungsgagent. That which causes inhibition.

INHIBITORY, adj. $I^2n\text{-}hi^2b\text{-}i^2t\text{-}o\text{-}ri^2$. Lat., inhibitorius. Fr., inhibitoir. Ger., hemmend. Exercising inhibition. [K.]

INHUMATION, n. $I^2n\text{-}hu^2\text{-}ma\text{-}shu^2n$. From inhumare, to bury in the ground. Fr., i., enterrement. Ger., Beerdigung. Burial in the earth. [L, 107.]

INIAC, adj. $I^2n\text{-}i^2\text{-}a^2k$. From ινιον, the nape of the neck. Fr., iniaque. Pertaining to or connected with the inion. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INIAD, adv. $I^2n\text{-}i^2\text{-}a^2d$. Toward the inial aspect. [L, 141.]

INIAL, INIAN, INIAQUE (Fr.), adj's. E-ne-a³, -a²n², -a²k. See INIAC.

INIENCEPHALUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n(en)\text{-}i^2\text{-}e^2n(e^2n^2)\text{-}se^2f(ke^2f)\text{-}a^2(a^2)\text{-}u^2s(u^2s)$. From ινιον, the nape of the neck, and ἐγκεφαλος, the brain. Fr., iniencephale. Having the skull fissured posteriorly and inferiorly; as a n., an exencephalic monster in which the cranial anomaly is complicated by a spinal fissure. [L, 41, 44, 87 (a, 39); a, 34.]

INIMBOJA (Port.), n. En-¹²m-bo³zha³. The Cesalpinia bonducella. [B, 18 (α, 24).]

INIODYMUS (Lat.), n. m. I(e)-ni²-o²d¹m(u⁴m)-u³s(u⁴s). From iviov, the nape of the neck, and διδυμος, double. Fr., iniodyme. It., iniodimo. A double monster having a single body, and two heads united at the posterior parts. [L, 49.]

INIO-FACIAL, adj. I²n-i²-o-fa³si²a²l. Pertaining to the inion and to the face (see I. f. ANGLE).

INIO-GLABELLAR, adj. I²n-i²-o-gla²b-e²l'a³r. Pertaining to the inion and to the glabella. [L, 141.]

INIO-MESIAL, adj. I²n-i²-o-me²zi²a²l. Pertaining to the inion and to the meson. [L, 141.]

INION, n. I(e)/ni²-o²n. Gr., iviov. 1. The occiput. 2. The back part of the neck. [A, 322.] 3. The external occipital protuberance; used in craniometry as a point from which measurements are made. [C; L, 149.]

INIOPS (Lat.), adj. I(e)/ni²-o²ps(ops). Gen., -op³os (-is). From iviov, the nape of the neck, and ψ, the face. Fr., iniopie. It., iniopie. A double syncephalic monster having two bodies, distinct below the umbilicus, but joined above. The head is incompletely double, presenting on one side a complete face (which distinguishes it from the janiceps), the incomplete face having a single eye and one or two ears. [L, 41 (α, 14); 44, 87 (α, 39).]

INIRRITABILITAS (Lat.), n. f. I²n-i²r-rit(rit)-a²(a³)-bi²i²-ta²s(ta³s). Gen., -tat³is. From in neg., and irritabilitas, irritability. See ANERETHISIA.

INITIAL, adj. I²n-i²sh¹l. Lat., initialis (from initium, a beginning). Fr., i. Ger., anfänglich. It., iniziale. Sp., inicial. Pertaining to or marking the beginning of anything.

INITIS (Lat.), n. f. I(n)en-(e)/ti³s. Gen., -it³idos (-idis). From is, a muscle (see also *-itis). 1. Inflammation of muscular tissue. 2. Inflammation of a tendon. 3. Of Feuerstein, rheumatism. [L, 50 (α, 14); L, 107, 135 (α, 39).]

INITIUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-i²sh(i²t)²i²-u³m(u⁴m). A beginning or entrance; the first portion of anything. [L, 50 (α, 14).]—I. asperæ arteriæ. See LARYNX.—I. extuberans coli. The cæcum. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

INIUM (Lat.), n. n. I(e)/ni²-u³m(u⁴m). See INION.

INJACULATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n-ja²k(ya³k)-u²(u⁴l)-a(a³)/shj²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on³is. From in, into, and jaculari, to throw. 1. The propulsion of semen into the vagina. 2. Of Van Helmont, a sudden and violent spasmodic pain in the stomach. [L, 50 (α, 14).]

INJECT, v. tr. I²n-je²kt'. Lat., injicere. Fr., injecter. Ger., einspritzen. To force a liquid or gas into a cavity.

INJECTED, adj. I²n-je²kt'e²d. Fr., injecté, engorgé. Ger., injiziert. Filled or distended with fluid; engorged with blood.

INJECTEUR (Fr.), n. A²n²-zhe²k-tu²r. See INJECTOR.—Gazo-i. See the major list.—I. de gaz à regulateur. An apparatus for the injection of a gas into the natural cavities of the body, under a determinate and readily controllable pressure. [H. Hénoque, "Gaz. hebdomadaire de méd. et de chir.," Aug. 3, 1883, p. 522 (B).]

INJECTIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n-je²k(ye²k)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on³is. See INJECTION.—I. ad leucorrhœam, I. adstringens. See LIQUOR ALUMINIS COMPOSITUS.—I. anatomica. See ANATOMICAL INJECTION.—I. fellea. A preparation consisting of 4 parts of thickened oxgall, $\frac{3}{4}$ part of gum ammoniac, and 90 parts of infusion of saponaria. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. hypodermatica, I. hypodermica. See HYPODERMIC INJECTION.—I. jodata Velpeau. Sp., inyección iodada de Velpeau [Sp. Ph.]. A preparation made by treating 15 parts of tincture of iodine with 100 parts of distilled water, and filtering. [B, 95 (α, 38).]—I. liquorum in vasa. See ANATOMICAL INJECTION.—I. subcutanea. See HYPODERMIC INJECTION.

INJECTION, n. I²n-je²k/shu²n. Lat., injectio (from injicere, to throw into). Gr., εισβολή (1st def.). Fr., i. Ger., I. Einspritzung (1st def.). It., infezione. Sp., inyección. 1. The act of injecting. 2. The state of being injected. 3. A substance which is thrown in (i. e., into a cavity, vessel, or tissue of the body) by the use of a syringe or injector. [D; α, 17.] 4. See ENEMA.—Anatomical i. Lat., injectio anatomica. Fr., i. cadavérique. Ger., anatomische Einspritzung. An i. of some suitable substance, usually a liquid capable of solidifying on cooling, into the vessels of a cadaver to facilitate dissection. [L, 50 (α, 14).]—Antiseptic i. See I. antiseptique.—Astringent i. See I. astringente.—Coarse i. An anatomical i. of some colored material that fills the larger vessels, but which does not traverse the capillaries. Used to facilitate the dissection of vessels. [J.]—Collodion i. An i. in which the mass is colored collodion. It is frequently employed in making corrosion preparations. [J.]—Dry i. See Trockene Einspritzung.—Ernährende i. (Ger.). See Nutrient i.—Fine i. The i. of the blood-vessels or lymphatic vessels or gland-ducts with some substance like colored melted gelatin which will penetrate to the finest ramifications. Fine i's may be opaque or transparent, depending upon the coloring substance. [J, 300.]—Forced i. An i. used for the purpose of distending a sac or cavity. [α, 40.]—Gamberini's i. An i. consisting of 1 part of tincture of aloes and 8 parts of water; used in gonorrhœa. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," x (α, 39).]—Gelatin i. An i. in which the body of the mass is gelatin or glue. It may be coarse or fine, opaque or transparent, according to the coloring matter. [J.]—Hypodermic i., Hypodermic i. Fr., i. hypodermique. Ger., hypodermatische I. It., infezione ipodermica. An i. of a medicinal or other agent under the skin. [D.]—I's abortives (Fr.). Strong i's used in the early stages of hemorrhage with the intent to abort the disease. [L, 38 (α, 40).]—I. antiseptique (Fr.). 1. A preparation made by boiling 14 parts of cinchona in 518 parts of water, and adding

4 parts of liquid myrrh; used in chronic gonorrhœa. 2. A preparation made by boiling 60 parts of willow-bark in 360 parts of water till $\frac{1}{2}$ reduced, then adding a mixture of 2 parts of camphor and 30 parts of clarified honey. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. astrigente (Fr.). 1. See Hydrole de sulfate de cuivre. 2. A preparation made by dissolving 5 parts of iron sulphate in 240 parts of water. [B, 119 (α, 38).] 3. See I. de sulfate de zinc. 4. See INJECTIO cuprata.—I. Bron. A preparation consisting, according to Hager, of an unfiltered mixture of 180 parts of water, 1 part of zinc sulphide, 2 parts of lead acetate, and 4 parts each of tincture of catechu and Sydenham's laudanum. [B, 270 (α, 38).]—I. cadavérique (Fr.). See Anatomical i.—I's coagulantes (Fr.). I's of astringent fluids into tumors or aneurysms with the intent of coagulating the blood therein and thus curing them. It was first proposed by Monteggia. [L, 88 (α, 40).]—I. de Priegle (Fr.). See Liquor ALUMINIS COMPOSITUS.—I. détersive de Lentin (Fr.). A preparation made by dissolving in 184 grammes of water enough isinglass to make a thick solution, and adding 4 grammes of solution of myrrh. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. excitante (Fr.). See INJECTIO fellea.—I. mucligaigneuse (Fr.). A preparation made of 23 parts of flax-seed and water enough to make 1,000 parts. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. prophylactique de Girtanner (Fr.). A preparation made by dissolving 1 part of caustic potash in 300 parts of distilled water. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. saturnine myrrhée (Fr.). A preparation made by dissolving 4 parts of lead acetate in 180 parts of distilled water, and adding a mixture of 7 parts each of solution of myrrh and tincture of opium. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I. sèche (Fr.). See Trockene Einspritzung.—I. térébenthinée (Fr.). A preparation consisting of 15 parts of Venetian turpentine and 240 parts of water, with 7 parts of tincture of benzoin added. [B, 119 (α, 38).]—I's transparentes (Fr.). In microscopy, the i's which, though coloring the specimens, still leave them transparent. [α, 40.]—Interstitial i. Fr., i. interstitielle. Ger., interstitielle I. 1. An i. of water or a medicated fluid into a mucous cavity or canal, or into an abscess, fistula, or wound. [Bernatzik [A, 319 [α, 21]].] 2. See Parenchymatous i.—Intestinal i. See ENEMA.—Intra-arterial i. An i. into an artery.—Intra-bronchial i. Bennett's method for i. of medicinal agents into the bronchial tubes through a laryngeal catheter. [L, 57 (α, 40).]—Intradermic i. Fr., i. intradermique. An i. into the substance of the derma. ["Sem. méd.," Aug. 16, 1889, p. 385 (α, 18).]—Intraparenchymatous i. See PARENCHYMATOUS.—Intraperitoneal i. An i. into the cavity of the peritoneum.—Intrapleural i. An i. into the pleural cavity.—Intrapulmonary i. An i. into the substance of the lung or into a pulmonary cavity. [B. Robinson, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Nov. 14, 1885, p. 533.]—Intratracheal i. Fr., i. intra-trachéenne. An i. into the trachea. [α, 18.]—Intra-uterine i. Fr., i. intra-utérine. Ger., Uterus, Einspritzung in die Uterushöhle. An i. into the cavity of the uterus.—Intravascular i. An i. into a blood-vessel.—Intravenous i. Fr., i. intraveineuse. An i. into a vein.—Muscular i. The i. of medical agents into the muscular tissue. [α, 40.]—Natural i. An engorgement of the capillaries and smaller blood-vessels with blood, thus simulating a fine i. [J, 2.]—Nutrient i. Ger., ernährende I. 1. See Nutrient ENEMA. 2. The i. of a nutrient fluid.—Opaque i. An i., either coarse or fine, in which the mass is opaque. [J.]—Parenchymatous i. Ger., parenchymatöse I. An i. of a medicated fluid into the substance of a tissue. [Vogel [A, 319 [α, 21]].]—Percutaneous i. Fr., i. percutanée. An i. in which medicine is introduced into the lung by puncturing the skin and trachea with a hollow needle and then injecting the liquid. [α, 40.]—Plaster i. A coarse anatomical i. in which the mass is plaster of Paris mixed with about an equal volume of water. [J, 100.]—Preservative i. The i. of a solution of some antiseptic substance like zinc or mercuric chloride, arsenic, carbolic acid, alcohol, etc., into the blood-vessels or body cavities, or both, to prevent decomposition. [J.]—Rectal i. See ENEMA.—Starch i. A coarse i. in which starch mixed with about an equal volume of water or other liquid forms the mass. The liquid exudes, leaving the solid starch. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," June 7, 1884, p. 629 (J).]—Subcutaneous i. Fr., i. sous-cutanée. Ger., subcutane I. See Hypodermic i.—Submucous i. Fr., i. sous-muqueuse. Ger., submucöse I. An i. beneath a mucous membrane.—Urethral i. An i. into the urethra.—Uterus (Ger.). See Intra-uterine i.—Vaginal i. An i. into the vagina.—Valerian's i. An i. consisting of 1 drachm of tincture of valerian, 2 drachms of alum, 16 drops of tincture of opium, 1 oz. of starch, and 1 pint of decoction of althæa; used in dysentery.—White opaque i. An i. made by mixing cold saturated solutions of lead acetate and sodium carbonate, allowing the precipitate to settle, washing the latter with warm water, and finally adding to the solution a 5-per-cent. solution of gelatin. [A, 510.]—Yellow opaque i. An i. made like the white opaque i., potassium bichromate being substituted for sodium carbonate. [A, 510.]

INJECTOR (Lat.), n. m. I²n-je²k(ye²k)/to²r. From injicere, to throw into. Fr., injecteur. Ger., I. An apparatus for injecting.—Guyou's i. A syringe graduated in cu. cent., and having a sharp screw-point to fit into a soft-rubber catheter through which the deeper portions of the urethra may be injected. [α, 40.]—Hartwell's drop i. A hollow vulcanite tube curved for introduction into the larynx and fitted into a straight handle. At the junction of the tube with the handle on the upper side is a circular cavity covered with a thin piece of rubber and communicating with the interior of the shaft. By pressure upon this rubber the fluid is thrown out into the larynx, either diffused or in a single direction, according to which tip is used. [α, 40.]—Intratympanischer I. (Ger.). An i. devised by Schwendt composed of a Hartmann's Eustachian catheter fitted to a compression bulb for injecting the middle ear with fluids through the Eustachian canal. ["Aerztlich. Polytechnik," December, 1890, p. 269 (α, 40).]—Intra-uterine i. An i. devised by Goutillon for injecting the cavity of the uterus. It is composed of a glass-barreled syringe with a long flexible metallic nozzle which can be introduced into the cavity of the uterus. [α, 40.]—Rauchfuss's i. A rubber bulb fitted to a long vulcanite tube curved for introduction into the larynx. In the upper side of the tube is a cavity into which powder is put, covered by a movable tubular shield. It is used for the insufflation of powders. [a, 40.] —Urethral I. A hypodermic syringe graduated to half-minims and fitted with a silver male catheter having a small aperture in its end instead of at the side, so that minute quantities of medicated fluids may be injected into any portion of the urethra. [a, 40.]

INJECTUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-jē²k(yē²k)(tu²m(tu²m)). From injicere, to throw into. See INJECTION (3d def.).

INJICIREN (Ger.), v. tr. I²n-ye-tse²re²en. See INJECT.

INJURY, n. I²n²ju²-ri². Gr., ἀδικία, τραῦμα. Lat., injuria (from in neg., and jus, right). Fr., injure. Ger., Verletzung. Harm, damage, especially that resulting from mechanical violence.

INK, n. I²n²k. Mid. Eng., enke. Gr., ἔγκαιστρον. Lat., encavatum. Fr., encre. Ger., Dinte, Tinte. It., inchiostro. Sp., tinta. A coloring matter used to produce impressions on paper or other material. [a, 24.]—Black I. An I. of black color, usually prepared from a tannin-yielding body and a salt of iron. It is a ferrous-ferric gallate held in suspension in water. [a, 24.]—China I. See Indian I.—Diamond I. An I. for writing on glass with a common pen; a mixture of barium sulphate, ammonium fluoride, and sulphuric acid; kept in glass bottles which are coated on the outside with asphaltum varnish and on the inside with wax. [“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xxix (a, 39).]—Indelible I. Incorrodible I., made by combining lamp-black with resinous substances. A very good sort is prepared by rubbing down Indian I. in ordinary black I. [B, 5, 77 (a, 24).] See also Marking I.—Indian I., Indian I. A dried mixture of fine lamp-black and size or thin ghuin. [a, 24.]—I. berry. See the major list.—I. plant. In New Zealand and South America, the Coriaria ruscifolia and the Coriaria thymifolia. The juice of these plants, locally termed canchi, is at first of a somewhat reddish color, but becomes intensely black in a few hours. The juice may be used without preparation; it corrodes less, and resists the action of chemical reagents better than ordinary I. [“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xvi (a, 39); B, 155, 275 (a, 14).]—I. root. The Stalix caroliniana. [Griffith (a, 35).]—Invisible I. See Sympathetic I.—Marking I. An I. used chiefly for marking linen. It is composed of a silver salt in solution in water or ammonia, thickened with a little gum. [a, 24; “Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xvi (a, 39).]—Portable I. An I. prepared by saturating several sheets of paper with aniline black, and pressing them together into a compact, portable mass. For writing, a piece of this paper is torn off and steeped in a little water. [“Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xxii (a, 39).]—Sympathetic I. An I. employed for forming characters which become visible only when heat or some chemical reagent is applied. [a, 24.]

INKARADIYA (Ar.), n. The Semecarpus anacardium. [A, 479 (a, 21).]

INKBERRY, n. I²n²k²be²r-ri². 1. The Ilex (Prinos) glaber (U. S. Ph.). 2. In the West Indies, the Randia aculeata. [B, 5, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—Queensland black I. The Kibara macrophylla. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

IN-KNEE, n. I²n²ne. See GENU valgum.

INKMANKOMO, n.; written also uncomocomo. Of the Kafirs of South Africa, the rhizome of Aspidium athamanticum. [B, 5 (a, 24).]

INLÄNDISCH (Ger.), adj. I²n²land-i²sk. See DOMESTIC (2d def.) and INDIGENOUS.

INLET, n. I²n²le²t. Lat., introitus. Ger., Bingang. An opening of entrance.—I. of the pelvis, Pelvic I. Lat., introitus pelvis. Fr., détroit supérieur du bassin. Ger., Beckeneingang. The superior strait of the pelvis, corresponding to the boundary between the true pelvis and the false pelvis; so called because the fetus enters the pelvic canal by that orifice in parturition.

INMORTAL [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. I²n²mor-ta²l. See GOMPHRENA procumbens.

INNATATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n²na(na²)-ta(ta²)sh²i²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on²is. From innare, to float in. See ANAPLEUSIS.

INNATE, adj. I²n²nat². Lat., innatus (from innasci, to be born in). Fr., inné, naturel. Ger., angeboren (1st def.). 1. Congenital. 2. Indigenous. 3. Of fruits, apparently immersed in the substance of a part. 4. Of an anther, adherent to the apex. [B, 1, 19, 123, 291 (a, 24).] See also ADNATE.

INNATO-FIBRILLOSE, adj. I²n²na-to-fi²bril²lo-s. From innasci, to be born in, and fibrilla, a small fibre. Clothed with adherent fibrillae, like the cottony down adhering to the epidermis of most rootlets. [B, 308 (a, 35).]

INNATENESS, n. I²n²nat²-ne²s. From innasci, to be born in. The quality of being innate.

INNENBLATT (Ger.), n. I²n²ne²n-bla²t. See ENTODERM.

INNENHAUT (Ger.), n. I²n²ne²n-ha²t. An inner or lining membrane. [a, 29.] See ENDOCARP, SPORANGIDIUM, and TUNICA intima.

INNENKOLBEN (Ger.), n. I²n²ne²n-ko²l²b-e²n. See Azile CORPUSCLE and CORE.

INNENKÖPFIG (Ger.), adj. I²n²ne²n-ku²pf-i²g. See ENDOCEPHALUS.

INNERKIP, n. I²n²ne²-ki²p. A sea-side resort in Renfrewshire, Scotland, on the Firth of Clyde. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

INNERLEITHEN, n. I²n²ne²-leth²e²n. A place in Peebleshire, Scotland, where there are earthy saline springs; the St. Roman's Well of Sir Walter Scott. [L, 30, 57 (a, 14).]

INNERLICH (Ger.), adj. I²n²ne²r-li²ch². Inward, internal.

INNERVATE, adj. I²n²nu²rv²at. Lat., innervatus. See INNERVED.

INNERVATION, n. I²n²nu²rv²a²shu²n. Fr., i. Ger., I. It., innervazione. The special action of the nervous system on a given organ; also the distribution of nerves to a part. [L, 41, 44, 49 (a, 14).]—Collateral I. The supply of nervous influence, through an adjacent or surrounding nerve tract, to a part the original nerve supply of which has been injured or destroyed. [a, 40.]

INNERVED, adj. I²n²nu²rv²d². Lat., innervis (from in neg., and nervus, a nerve). Fr., innervé. Ger., nerulos, rippeulos. Having no nerves or veins (said of the leaves of certain mosses and many Algæ). [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INNERVIS (Lat.), adj. I²n²nu²r(ne²r)²vi²s(wi²s). See INNERVED.

INNICHEN (Ger.), n. I²n²ne²-chi²e²n. A place in the Tyrol, Austria, where there are four mineral springs, one of them containing sodium carbonate and rich in free carbonic acid. [L, 30, 37 (a, 14).]

INNOCENT, adj. I²n²no-se²nt. Lat., innocens (from in neg., and nocere, to injure). See BENIGN and INNOXIOUS.

INNOCUOUS, adj. I²n²no²k²u²-u²s. From in neg., and nocere, to injure. Not injurious.

INNODATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n²nod(no²d)-a(a²)shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on²is. From innodare, to fasten with a knot. Fr., Verknötung. A knotting together, especially of intestines. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INNOMINATE, adj. I²n²no²m²i²n-at. Gr., ἀνόνομος. Lat., innominatus (from in neg., and nominare, to name). Fr., innomé, innominé. Ger., unbenannt. Without a name.

INNOVANS (Lat.), adj. I²n²no(no²)-va²nz(wa²ns). From innovare, to renew. Ger., verjüngend, innovierend, sprossend. Sprouting, forming innovations. [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INNOVATIONS, n. pl. I²n²o-va²shu²nz. Lat., innovationes (from innovare, to renew). Fr., i. Ger., neue Triebe, Jahrestriebe. Newly formed shoots; in mosses, the new shoots which appear at the end of the stem (terminal i.) or in the axils after the completion of fructification. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]—Terminal I. Lat., innovationes terminales. Ger., Gipfeltriebe. See I.

INNOVIREND (Ger.), adj. I²n²no-fer²e²nd. See INNOVANS.

INNOXIOUS, adj. I²n²no²k²shu²s. Lat., innocuus (from in, not, and nocere, to injure). Fr., innocent. Ger., unschädlich. It., innocente. Sp., innocente. See INNOCUOUS.

INNUTRITIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n²nu²(nu)-tri²sh²i²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on²is. See INNUTRITION.—I. ossium. See RHACHITIS.

INNUTRITION, n. I²n²nu²-tri²sh²u²n. Lat., innutritio (from in, neg., and nutrire, to nourish). Fr., i. Ger., mangelnde Ernährung. Deficiency of nutrition. [D.]

INNUTRITIOUS, adj. I²n²nu²-tri²shu²s. 1. Pertaining to innutrition. 2. Deficient in nutritious properties. [D.]

INOBLAST, n. I²n²o-bla²st. From ίς, a fibre, and βλαστός, a sprout. Ger., Inoblaste. A general name for a connective-tissue corpuscle or a cell giving rise to connective tissue. [J, 42, 67, 140.]

INOCARCINOMA (Lat.), n. n. I(e)-no²(no²)-ka²r-si²n(ki²n)-o²-ma². Gen., -on²atos (-atis). From ίς, a fibre, and καρκίνωμα, a cancer. See CROCODYCARCINOMA.

INOCARPIN, n. I²n²o-ka²rp²i²n. Fr., inocarpine. A red coloring substance contained in the sap of Inocarpus edulis; soluble in water and in alcohol, insoluble in ether. [B, 93 (a, 14); B, 46 (a, 39).]

INOCARPOUS, adj. I²n²no-ka²rp²u²s. Lat., inocarpus. From ίς, a fibre, and καρός, a fruit. Having fibrous fruit; used chiefly in the Latin as a botanical specific name. [a, 35.]

INOCARPUS (Lat.), n. m. I(e)-no²(no²)-ka²rp²u²s(u²s). From ίς, a fibre, and καρός, a fruit. A genus of leguminous, smooth, unarmed trees of the tribe Dalbergieæ, indigenous to the islands of the Pacific and the Indian Archipelago. The Inocarpus of Reichenbach are a section of the Sapoteæ genuina. [B, 19, 42, 170 (a, 24).]—I. edulis. Fr., i. comestible. South Sea chestnut, Fiji or Otahitei chestnut; a species found in the Indian Archipelago. The seeds, boiled or roasted, are used by the natives as food, and a decoction of the astringent bark is employed in chronic diarrhoea and dysentery. [B, 19, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24); “Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.,” xvi (a, 39).]

INCHONDRITIS (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-no²(no²)-ko²nd(ch²o²nd)-ri(re)²ti²s. Gen., -it²idos (-idis). From ίς, a fibre, and χόνδρος, cartilage (see also -itis). Ger., Schmen- und Knorpelentzündung. Inflammation of the tendons and cartilages. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

INOCULABILITY, n. I²n²o²k²u²l-a²-bi²l²i²t². Fr., inoculabilité. Ger., Uebertragbarkeit, Inoculabilität. The quality of being inoculable.

INOCULABLE, adj. I²n²o²k²u²l-a²-b²l. Fr., i. Ger., übertragbar, impfbar. Capable of being inoculated. [L, 41.]

INOCULAR, adj. I²n²o²k²u²l-a²r. From in, in, and oculus, the eye. Fr., inoculaire. Inserted in the eyes (said of antennæ). [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INOCULATE, v. tr. I²n²o²k²u²l-at. Lat., inoculare. Fr., inoculer. Ger., einimpfen, inokulieren. To introduce into a living organism, by means of a solution of continuity, matter capable of giving rise to a specific disease. [A, 523.]

INOCULATIO (Lat.), n. f. I²n²o²k²u²l(u²l)-a(a²)shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on²is. See INOCULATION.—I. vaccine. See VACCINATION.

INOCULATION, n. I²n²o²k²u²l-a²shu²n. Lat., inoculatio (from inoculare, to ingraft). Fr., i. Ger., Einimpfung, Ueberimp-

fung, Inokulation. It., inoculación. Sp., inoculación. 1. The operation of grafting a bud. 2. The process of inoculating, especially (as formerly used) of inoculating with the virus of small-pox. [A, 322.]—Cow-pox i. See VACCINATION.—Endermic i. The introduction into the system of medicine or specific virus by placing it in contact with scarified skin. [a, 40.]—Hypodermic i. The introduction of medicine or specific virus into the system through a hollow needle inserted beneath the skin. [a, 40.]—I. antirabique (Fr.). See Preventive i. of rabies.—I. hypodermique par enchevillure (Fr.). Of Lafargue, the introduction into the subcutaneous tissue of morphine, atropine, or veratrine in the form of a paste rolled into thin cylinders. [Bernatzik (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Jennerian i. See VACCINATION.—Medicinal i. The introduction of medicinal agents into the system through the skin, whether by scarification or hypodermic injection. [a, 40.]—Pasteur's system of i. A system of i. for rabies in which a portion of the spinal cord of a rabid dog is used to inoculate a rabbit, which contracts the disease in about thirteen days. The spinal cord of this rabbit is used to inoculate another, and this a third, and so on through a long series of cases. The cords of these are dried and collected, some stale and powerless, others fresh and virulent. The system consists in beginning with the weakest for i. and progressing gradually to those of the greatest intensity, when the patient is supposed to be proof against the disease. [a, 40.]—Preventive i. of rabies. Fr., i. (ou vaccination) antirabique. The i. with a mitigated virus of rabies to induce insusceptibility to the disease or with the view of limiting its intensity when it is already established. ["Med. Times and Gaz.," "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Nov. 21, 1885, p. 591 (a, 40).]—Self-i. Fr., auto-i. Ger., Selbstinokulation. Syn.: auto-i. The i. of the organism at large from a diseased part of the same organism.—Lacto-variolic i., Modified i. The practice of inoculating small-pox virus mixed with cow's milk, founded on a theory that cow-pox is the result. [T. Layton, "N. O. Med. and Surg. Jour.," Dec., 1883, p. 461.]

INOCULATOR (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n-o^2k-u^2l-at(a^2t)^o^2r$; in Eng., $I^2n-o^2k-u^2l-at-o^2r$. Gen., -or'is. From inoculare, to graft. 1. One who practices inoculation. 2. An instrument for performing inoculation.

INOCULISTE (Fr.), n. E-no-ku⁶-lest. From inoculare, to graft. One who favors inoculation (of small-pox). [L, 41.]

INOCYSTIS (Lat.), n. f. $I(e)-no(n)^2-si^2s(ku^6s)^ti^2s$. Gen., -cyst' eos (-cyst' eos). From is, a fibre, and κύστις, a bag. Fr., inocyste. Ger., Sehnenbalg. A fibrous cyst. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INODESMA (Lat.), n. n. $I(e)-no(n)^2-de^2z(de^2s)^ma^3$. Gen., -des'matos (-atis). From is, a fibre, and δέσµα, a band. Ger., Sehnenband. A fibrous band. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INODORATE, INODOROUS, adj's. $I^2n-od'o^2r-at, -u^2s$. Gr., ἄοσμος. Lat., inodorus (from in, neg., and odorare, to perfume). Fr., inodore. Ger., geruchlos. Without odor. [a, 24.]

INODULAR, adj. $I^2n-od'u^2l-a^2r$. From ινώδης, fibrous. Fr., inodulaire. Ger., inodulär. It., inodulare. Fibrous and cicatricial. [A, 385.]

INODULE (Fr.), n. E-no-du⁶l. Fibrous cicatricial tissue. [L, 41, 42, 44 (a, 14).]

INOGEN, INOGENE, n's. $I^2n-o^2je^2n$. -jen. From is, a muscle, and γεννᾶν, to engender. Fr., inogène. A hypothetical substance of muscles, susceptible of being broken up, during contraction and chemical actions, into lactic and sarcolactic acids and myosin. [B, 49, 93 (a, 39).]

INOGENESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I(e)-no(n)^2-je^2n(ge^2n)^e^2s-i^2s$. Gen., -es'eos (-gen'esis). From is, a fibre, and γένεσις, a begetting. Fr., inogénèse. Ger., Faserbildung. The formation of fibres. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INOHYLOMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-hil(hu^6l)-o^2ma^3$. More properly written ingyloma. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From is, a fibre, and ὄλη, matter. A fibrous tumor. [E, 6.]

INOHYMENTITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-hi(hu^6l)-me^2n(man)-i(e)^ti^2s$. More properly written inymentitis. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From is, a fibre, and μῆνις, a membrane (see also *-itis). Inflammation of fibrous tissue. [E, 6.]

INOKULABILITÄT (Ger.), n. $I^2n-o-ku-la^3-be-le-tat'$. See INOCULABILITY.

INOLITH, n. $I^2n-o-li^2th$. Lat., inolithus (from is, a fibre, and λίθος, a stone). A fibrous concrement. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INOMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(en)-o^2ma^3$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From is, a fibre. See SCIRRUS and FIBROMA.

INOMYCETES (Lat.), n. m. pl. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-mi(mu^6)-set(kat)^e^2z(e^2s)$. From is, a fibre, and μύκης, a mushroom. Of Martius, Fries, and Sprengel, a section or order of the Hypophyces, containing, according to Fries, the Mucedines and Byssacei. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

INONCTION (Fr.), n. $I^2n-o^2n^2k-si^2-o^2n^2$. See INUNCTION.

INONDÉ (Fr.), adj. $I^2n-o^2n^2-da$. See INUNDATE.

INOPERCULAR, INOPERCULATE, adj's. $I^2n-o-pu^2rk'-u^2l-a^2r$, -at. Lat., inoperculatus (from in, neg., and operculum [g. v.]). Fr., inoperculé. Having no operculum. The Inoperculata are a division of the pulmonate Gasteropoda so characterized. [B, 28 (a, 27).]

INOPEXIA, n. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-pe^2x(pa^2x)^i^2-a^3$. From is, a fibre, and πῆξις, a coagulation. Fr., inopexie. Ger., Inopexie. Of Vogel, a condition of the blood, observed especially in lying-in women, in which it is prone to coagulate spontaneously. [A, 38; Hayem, "Union méd.," Dec. 31, 1885, p. 1076.]

INOPHLOGISMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-flo(flo^2)-ji^2z(gi^2s)^-ma^3$. Gen., -gis'matos (-atis). From is, a fibre, and φλόγισμα, the blister of a burn. Inflammation of fibrous tissue. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INOPHLOGOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-flo(flo^2)-go^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-osis). From is, a fibre, and φλόγισμα, a burning. The formation of inophlogisma. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INOPHYLLOUS, adj. $I^2n-o-fi^2l'u^2s$. From is, a fibre, and φύλλον, a leaf. Fr., inophylle. Of plants, having leaves provided with very distinct reticulated veins. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INOPOLYPUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-po^2l'i^2p(u^6p)-u^2s(us)$. From is, a fibre, and πολύπους, a polypus. Fr., inopolyte. Ger., Faserpolyp. A fibrous polypus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INORGANIC, adj. $I^2n-o^2r-ga^2n'i^2k$. Lat., inorganicus (from in, neg., and ὄργανον, an organ). Fr., inorganique. Ger., inorganisch. It., inorganico. Sp., inorgánico. In chemistry, not forming a part of an organic compound, hence not containing carbon; thus water, H₂O, is an inorganic substance; alcohol, C₂H₆O, an organic substance. [a, 38.]

INOSATE, n. $I^2n'os-at$. Fr., i. Ger., inosinsaures Salz. A salt of inosic acid. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

INOSCLEROMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-skle^2r(sklar)-o^2ma^3$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From is, a fibre, and σκληρώμα, induration. Fr., Faserhautgewebverhärtung. Indurated fibrous tissue. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INOSCLEROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-skle^2r(sklar)-o^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-is). Inflammation and hypertrophy of fibrous tissue. [a, 40.]

INOSCULATE, v. intr. $I^2n-o^2s'ku^2-lat$. See ANASTOMOSE.

INOSCULATIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-o^2sk-u^2l(u^4l)-a(a^2)^shi^2(ti^2)-o$. Gen., -on'is. See ANASTOMOSIS.—I. vasorum. See ANASTOMOSIS (2d def.).

INOSCULATION, n. $I^2n-o^2s-ku^2-la'shu^2n$. Lat., inosculatio (from in, into, and osculum, a little mouth). Ger., Einnündung. See ANASTOMOSIS.

INOSIC ACID, n. $I^2n-os'i^2k$. From is, a muscle. Fr., acide inosique. Ger., Inosinsäure. An acid, C₁₀H₈N₂O₁₆HO, or C₆H₈N₂O₆, or C₁₀H₁₄N₂O₁₁, discovered by Liebig in the flesh and muscular tissue, together with creatine; a syrupy substance soluble in water, insoluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 38, 48, 93, 125 (a, 14); Munk (A, 319 [a, 21]).]

INOSIN, n. $I^2n'os-i^2n$. Fr., inosine. Ger., I. See INOSITE.

INOSINIC ACID, n. $I^2n-os-i^2n'ik$. See INOSIC ACID.

INOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)-o^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From is, a fibre. See HYPERINOSIS and INOGENESIS.

INOSITE, n. $I^2n'os-it$. From is, a muscle. Fr., i. Ger., Inosit. Muscle sugar; a carbohydrate, C₆H₁₂O₆ + 2H₂O, occurring under the form of efflorescent prismatic crystals of a sweetish taste, moderately soluble in water. It is found in the juice of muscles, especially cardiac muscle, in the lungs, liver, spleen, kidney, brain, and blood, and pathologically in the urine and in the liquid of some hydatid cysts; it also occurs in some Leguminosæ, in asparagus, and in the vine. It has been obtained by Tauret and Villiers from the leaves of the Juglans regia. In chemical structure it is a hexatonic alcohol of the formula C₆H₈(OH)₆. [B, 4, 9, 93, 125; "Bericht. d. dtseh. chem. Gesellsch.," xiv, p. 2250 (B).]

INOSITOSE, n. $I^2n'os-it-os$. Ger., I. Of Scheibler, inosite. [B.]

INOSITURIA (Lat.), n. f. $I(e)-no(n)^2-si^2s(i^2)-tu^2r(tu^2)^i^2-a^3$. From is, a muscle, and ὄσπον, urine. Fr., inositurie. See INOSURIA.

INOSTEATOMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-ste(ste^2)-a^2t(a^2)^t(u^6t)-o^2ma^3$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From is, a fibre, and στεάτωμα. Fr., inostéatome. A tumor composed of fibrous tissue and steatomatous matter. [E, 6.]

INOSURIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)-os(o^2)-u^2r(tu^2)^i^2-a^3$. From is, a muscle, and ὄσπον, urine. Fr., inosurie. Ger., Inosurie. It., Sp., i. A morbid condition characterized by the presence of inosite in the urine. [Cochot, "Paris méd.," 1882, No. 5; "Sperimentale," May, 1882, p. 515.]

INOTAGMATA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $I^2n(en)-o(o^2)-ta^2g(ta^2g)^ma^2t-(ma^2t)^a^3$. From is, a muscle, and τάγμα, that which has been arranged. Fr., inotagmes. Ger., Inotagmen. Of Engelmann, the hypothetical contractile elements of contractile protoplasm. Like the disdiaclasses of Brücke, they are supposed to be positively uniaxial and doubly refracting. ["Quart. Jour. Micr. Sci.," 1884, p. 411 (J, 140, 175).]

INOVULATE, adj. $I^2n-ov'u^2l-at$. Lat., inovulatus (from in, neg., and ovum, an egg). Fr., inové. Not ovulate, without an ovule (said of the two sterile cells of the ovary in the Arctidiæ). [a, 35.]

INOWRACLAW, n. A place in the province of Posen, Prussia, where there is a spring rich in sodium and magnesium chlorides, also a modern bathing establishment. [L, 30, 37, 57 (a, 14).]

INOXIDIZABLE, adj. $I^2n-o^2x-i^2d-iz-a^2-b'l$. Fr., inoxidable. Ger., innoxidierbar. Incapable of oxidation.

INQUEST, n. $I^2n'kwe^2st$. See INQUISITION.

INQUIETUDE, n. $I^2n-kwi^2e^2t-u^2d$. Lat., inquietus, inquietudo (from inquietare, to disquiet). Fr., inquiétude. Ger., Unruhe. Restlessness.

INQUILINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $I^2n^2-kwi^2l-i(e)^ne(na^3-e^2)$. From inquilinus, an inhabitant of a place that is not his own. The guest gall-flies, a section of the Hymenoptera which are unable to produce galls themselves, as they do not secrete the gall-producing poison. [L, 196 (a, 39).]

INQUILINE, adj. $I^2n^2kwi^2lin$. Lat., inquilinus. Of or pertaining to the Inquilinæ. [L, 196 (a, 39).]

INQUINATE, v. tr. P²n²kw²i²-nat. Lat., inquinare. To pollute, defile. [a, 38.]

INQUISITION, n. P²n²kw²i²-zi²sh²u²n. Lat., inquisitio (from inquire, to inquire into). The inquiry by a jury or commission into the facts of a case, civil or criminal, or into an individual's mental condition, such inquest being generally in lieu of trial at the bar. [a, 40.]

INRADIANT, adj. P²n²-rad²'i-a²nt. Lat., inradians (from in, neg., and radius, radiant). Fr., i. Ger., unstrahlend. Not radiating (said of a capitulum of flowers in which rays are not formed by the enlargement of outer florets). [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 35).]

INSACCATION, n. P²n²-sa²'k-ka'shu²n. Lat., insaccatio. Ger., Einsackung. An inward pitting or dimpling of the wall of a hollow organ. [A, 322.]

INSALIFIABLE (Fr.), adj. A²n²-sa²'l-i²-fi²-a²-bl'. From in, neg., sal, a salt, and feri, to become. Unable to form a salt (said of certain bases). [B, 38 (a, 14).]

INSALIVATION, n. P²n²-sa²'l-i²-va'shu²n. Lat., insalivatio (from in, into, and saliva, saliva). Fr., i. Ger., Einspeichelung. The process of mixing the saliva intimately with the food while it is being chewed. [K, 11.]

INSALUBRIOUS, adj. P²n²-sa²'l-i²-u²s. Lat., insalubris (from in, neg., and salubris, health-giving). Fr., insalubre. Ger., unheilsam, ungesund. Unwholesome. [L, 30, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

INSALUBRITY, n. P²n²-sa²'l-i²-u²-ri²t². From in, neg., and salubris, healthfulness. Fr., insalubrité. Ger., Insalubrität. The quality of being insalubrious.

INSALUTARY, adj. P²n²-sa²'l-i²-u²-ta-ri². See INSALUBRIOUS.

INSANABILIS (Lat.), adj. P²n²-sa²'n(sa²)-a²-b(a²)'i²-i²s. From in, neg., and sanare, to cure. Incurable.

INSANE, adj. P²n²-san'. Lat., insanus (from in, neg., and sanus, sound). Fr., fou, aliéné. Ger., irrsinnig, toll, wahnsinnig. It., pazzo. Sp., demente, loco. Affected with or of the nature of insanity. [D.]

INSANIA (Lat.), n. f. P²n²-san(sa²)'i²-a²s. See INSANITY.—I. cadiva. See EPILEPSY.—I. lupina. A form of delusional insanity in which the patient believes himself transformed into a wolf and imitates the voice and habits of that animal. [a, 40.]—I. puerperum. See Puerperal INSANITY.

INSANIFEROUS, adj. P²n²-sa²'n-i²-f'e²r-u²s. From insanus, unsound, and ferre, to bear. Conducing to or producing insanity. [a, 45.]

INSANITARY, adj. P²n²-sa²'n-i²-ta-ri². From in, neg., and sanitas, health. Not sanitary, unwholesome. [D.]

INSANITY, n. P²n²-sa²'n-i²-ti². Gr., ἀφροσύνη, παραφροσύνη. Lat., insanitas (from insanus, unsound). Fr., insanité, folie. Ger., Tolltheit, Wahnsinn, Irssinn. It., pazzia, insanìa, follia. Sp., demencia, locura. According to Hammond, a result of certain forms of disease of the brain in which there is derangement, more or less complete, of the mental faculties, with weakening, perversion, or even destruction of mental freedom. According to Spitzka, inability to correctly register and reproduce impressions, and the resulting conceptions that serve as proper guides to action, and to limit one's self to the registration of impressions transmitted by the peripheral organs of sensation as subjective realities. According to others, imperfect power of co-ordinating mental impressions and following them to logical ends. This want of power excludes the influence of sleep, trance, and somnambulism, the ordinary phenomena of the general neuroses, also those of febrile delirium, coma, acute intoxications, intense mental preoccupation, also the well-recognized immediate effects of nervous shock and injury. [D, 36.]—Acute confusional i. See Primary confusional i.—Acute metepileptic (or post-epileptic) i. Fr., grand (et petit) mal intellectuel [Fabret]. The acute i. immediately following the convulsive paroxysm of epilepsy; subdivided by Samt into (1) simple stupor, (2) morbid conditions of fever or fright, simple or complicated with reasoning mania or great excitement, and (3) mania. [D, 36.]—Affective i. Of Maudsley, one of the general divisions of i., including mania sine delirio, simple melancholia, and moral alienation proper. [D, 36.]—Alcoholic i. Fr., folie alcoolique. See Chronic alcoholic i.—Alternating i. See Periodical i.—Ambitious i. See DELIRIUM grandiosum.—Amenorrhoeal i. Of Skae, i. in which irregularities in the catamenia are the obviously immediate and essential cause. [a, 40.]—Anemic i. Of B. Tuke, i. produced by anæmia. [a, 7.]—Anomalous i. I. in which the symptoms of several forms are so intimately associated that it can not be positively classified. [a, 40.]—Asthenic i. Of Skae, a variety of idiopathic i. characterized by the slight intensity with which the mental derangement is manifested. [D, 43.]—Cataleptoid i. I. associated with catalepsy, although rarely due to it. [Mann (a, 40).]—Catatonic i. See CATATONIA.—Choreic i. Aberration of mind accompanying or resulting from chorea and due to the same causes as the chorea. Emotional, intellectual, and perceptual faculties are all affected by this disease, and it may end in maniacal delirium. [Hammond (a, 40).]—Chronic alcoholic i. Chronic i. secondary to an alcoholic neurosis; especially characterized by hallucinations, delusions, and delirious exacerbations. [D, 36.]—Circular i. Lat., cyclothymia. Fr., folie circulaire (ou à double forme, ou paralytique circulaire à double phase). A variety of periodical i. characterized by alternations of mania and melancholia in regularly recurring periods. [D, 36.]—Chlormacteric i. I. occurring in women at the menopause, especially those predisposed to i., the extent to which the mind is influenced by the physiological changes of that period not being exactly known. [D, 43.]—Communicated i. Fr., folie communiquée (ou à deux, ou épidémique, ou par imitation). Ger., induziertes Irresein. I. transferred from one person to another, or depending on some association or special relation between two persons. Tuke includes cases

(1) in which a lunatic of relatively stronger mind or will infects (a) another lunatic or (b) a weak-minded or hereditarily predisposed person with the same delusions (see Imitative i.); (2) in which a nurse or keeper becomes insane from the shock or strain incidental to his work; (3) in which two persons become insane simultaneously from the same cause; and (4) in which twins become insane contemporaneously, although living apart, from a supposed special sympathy between them. [D, 36; "Med. Chron.", Apr., 1888, p. 78 (a, 17); a, 34.]—Compound i. Of Hammond, i. in which two or more groups of mental faculties are markedly involved. [a, 40.]—Confusional i. See Primary confusional i.—Congenital i. Fr., folie congénitale (ou morphologique). Of Ball, a division of i. including idiocy, imbecility, and cretinism. [a, 34.]—Congestive i. I. due to congestion of the brain. [a, 40.]—Consecutive i. I. succeeding and due to some injury or disease other than of the brain. [a, 40.]—Constitutional i. Those forms of i. which are the result of a physiological or pathological condition or of some specific morbid influence affecting the general system. [Hammond (a, 40).]—Cretinic i. See under CRETINISM.—Cyclic i., Cyclical i. See Circular i.—Delusional i. See Primary delusional i. and Secondary delusional i.—Demonomaniacal i. See DEMONOMANIA.—Depressive i. See MELANCHOLIA.—Diabetic i. I. associated with or due to diabetes. [D, 43.]—Diathetic i. An i. brought on by very slight cause in a person of insane diathesis. [Mann (a, 40).]—Doubtful i. See Folie du doute.—Emotional i. Fr., folie émotive (ou impulsive). I. in which perversion of the emotions is the essential feature, as in mania and melancholia. [D, 36.]—Epidemic i. Fr., folie épidémique. See Communicated i.—Epileptic i. Fr., folie épileptique. Ger., epileptischer Irssinn. I. in its various forms, either induced or precipitated by epilepsy. 2. Of Samt, i. resembling one of the forms of metepileptic i. [D, 36.]—Erotic i., Satyriasis. [a, 40.]—Exophthalmic i. I. connected with exophthalmic goitre and due to the same affections of the sympathetic nervous system as the goitre. [a, 40.]—Febrile i. Mania or protracted delirium due to hyperpyrexia. [Savage (a, 40).]—Feigned i. Fr., folie simulée. Ger., simulirter Irssinn. I. which has no existence in fact, but is simulated for a purpose. [D, 43.]—Furious i. 1. Homicidal destructive mania. 2. An old Roman division signifying violent and excited i. [a, 40.]—Gastroenteric i. I. due to some functional or organic disease of the alimentary tract. [a, 40.]—General i. Of Maudsley, a general term for mania and melancholia. [D, 36.]—Gouty i. I. due to gout. [D, 36.]—Hepatic i. An i., usually hypochondriacal, due to real or imaginary disease of the liver. [a, 40.]—Hereditary i. Fr., folie des dégénérés (ou instinctive). I. usually appearing at some physiological crisis, such as puberty or the climacteric and due to hereditary influences. [Mann (a, 40).]—Homicidal i. Fr., folie homicide. A form of impulsive i. in which the patient, though conscious of the criminal nature of the act, is irresistibly impelled to kill, often those nearest or dearest to him. It is associated with mental or physical strain or exhaustion, and there is usually some form of mental degeneration to which the i. can be traced. [Pepper (a, 40).]—Hypochondriacal i. Fr., folie hypochondriaque. I. manifested by delusions as to bodily sensations or morbid conditions. [D, 36.]—Hysterical i. Chronic i. secondary to an hysterical neurosis. It preserves the characteristics of hysteria as to simulative tendencies. [D, 36.]—Ideal i. Arnold's first general division of i. in which he embraces all those forms in which the ideas dependent upon the special senses are perverted. [Arnold (a, 40).]—Ideational i. Of Maudsley, a division of i. including (1) general i., comprising mania and melancholia; (2) partial i., comprising monomania and melancholia; (3) dementia, either primary or secondary; (4) general paralysis; and (5) idiocy and imbecility. [D, 36.]—Ideoprenic i. See Ideational i.—Idiopathic i. Fr., folie idiopathique (ou essentielle, ou primitive, ou résanique). I. depending (1) on conditions said to be sine materia (i. e., in which no appreciable lesion is found); (2) on conditions in which there are material lesions; or (3) on alterations of the blood. [Voisin (a, 34).]—Imitative i. The second form of communicative i., consisting of an imitation of the insane characteristics of another. [a, 40.]—Imposed i. Fr., folie imposée. An i. in which the lunatic imposes his delirious conceptions on another morally and intellectually weaker than himself. [Hammond (a, 40).]—Impulsive i. A term often used in the courts, especially in pleadings in defense for crime, in which it is alleged that i. and consequent non-responsibility existed at the moment when a crime was committed, the subject being rational before and afterward. Hamilton and others deny the existence of such a condition. [D, 43.]—Infantile i. Of Spitzka, i. of infant life, whether congenital or acquired. [Keating (a, 40).]—I. from intoxication. See Toxic i.—I. of acts. Fr., folie des actes. See Reasoning MANIA.—I. of adolescence. See I. of puberty.—I. of childbirth. See Puerperal i.—I. of childhood. An i. occurring in early life brought on by some patent cause and not due to any congenital defect or hereditary influence. [a, 40.]—I. of delivery. 1. Puerperal i. 2. Hysterical mania the result of escape from some great peril. [a, 40.]—I. of febrile disorders. See Febrile i.—I. of gestation. See Puerperal i.—I. of grauderc. See DELIRIUM grandiosum.—I. of lactation. Fr., folie des nourrices. The i. of nursing women, a variety of puerperal i.; of Voisin, mania occurring during the first six weeks, or after several months, of nursing or at weaning. [a, 34.]—I. of masturbation. The i. of pubescence when due to masturbation. [D, 36.]—I. of oxaluria. A form of hypochondriacal i. associated with excess of oxalates in the urine. [Skae (a, 40).]—I. of persecution. See DÉLIRE des persécutions.—I. of phosphaturia. Of Skae, a form of i. found in mentally overworked men, and associated with excessive phosphates in the urine. [a, 40.]—I. of pregnancy. See Puerperal i. and Preparient i.—I. of puberty. I. of pubescence. Fr., folie de l'adolescence (ou de la puberté, ou pubérale). Ger., Hebephrenie. Of Skae and Maudsley, a form of i. occurring at or soon after the period of puberty and supposed to be due to vital depletion from masturbation, the inception of menstruation, or overstudy, in those predisposed by heredity; characterized by a period of melancholic depression, followed by mental enfeeblement, silliness, delusions, and, finally, complete dementia. [D. 36.]—I. of self-abuse. See I. of masturbation.

—I. of the feelings. See Emotional i.—I. of the muscles. Fr., folie musculaire. Ger., musketiger Wahnsinn. I. appearing during the course or with the inception of menstruation or at the menopause (see Climacteric i.). In some women there is a periodical i. at each menstrual epoch, not the result, according to Spitzka, of the menstrual condition, but only excited thereby. [D. 36; a. 34.]—Metastatic i. I. due to the metastasis of a disease from one part of the body to another, possibly to the brain itself. [D. 43.]—Monomaniacal i. See MONOMANIA.—Moral i. Fr., folie morale. An uncontrollable violence of impulses, instincts, and emotions, associated with more or less progressive mental impairment and change of character, taste, and disposition. [a. 40.]—Notional i. Of Arnold, that form of i. in which the patient sees, hears, or otherwise perceives objects as they really exist, yet conceives such notions of them as are obviously and grossly erroneous. [a. 40.]—Onaustic i. See I. of masturbation.—Opium i. An acute or chronic i. due to chronic opium poisoning. Its phenomena may resemble those seen in the various types of alcoholic i. [D. 36.]—Organic i. Fr., folie organique. Of Ball, a class of insanities including acute delirium, aphasia, general paralysis, etc. [a. 34.]—Ovarian i. Of Skae, i. due to ovarian disease, usually of melancholic or hysterical form. [a. 40.]—Paralytic i. The general paralysis of the insane. [D.]—Paroxysmal i. A form of recurrent i. in which the patient is seized with paroxysms of mental aberration, hallucinations, delirium, and mania (sometimes epileptic) which are temporary, and the patient remains more or less perfectly well in the interims. [a. 40.]—Partial i. See MONOMANIA.—Pathetic i. See Affective i.—Pellagrous i. Of Spitzka, a form of i. dependent on a primary pellagrous condition. [D. 36.]—Perceptual i. An i. in which the patient has perceptive sensations when no external object to excite such sensations has impressed the senses. [a. 40.]—Periodical i. Fr., folie périodique (ou intermittente). A form of i. which recurs at intervals, with apparent mental soundness between the attacks. It is usually hereditary, but may be due to traumatism, alcoholic excesses, etc. [D. 36.] See also Menstrual i.—Phthisical i. Fr., folie phthisique. A form of i. developed in the course of phthisis. [D. 36; G. H. Roger, "Encéphale," No. 5, p. 597.]—Post-conjugal i. Of Skae, an acute mania in men of previously rigid virtue brought on by the first sexual orgasm after marriage. ["Brit. Jour. of Ment. Sci.," 1873, p. 503 (a. 40).]—Post-epileptic i. See Acute methleptic i.—Post-febrile i. A disordered mental condition which occurs in the convalescent period of some acute febrile diseases. [D. 36.]—Post-puerperal i. Puerperal i. occurring after delivery.—Preparturient i. Puerperal i. occurring before labor.—Pre-epileptic i. Of Spitzka, a form of mental disturbance preceding an epileptic convulsion (or its equivalent), and increasing in intensity until the onset of the paroxysm. [D. 36.]—Primary confusional i. Mental derangement characterized by incoherence and confusion of ideas, but with no essential emotional disturbance, or true dementia. [D. 36.]—Primary delusional i. A form of hereditary i. arising primarily from no preceding psychosis and in which the delusions, though fixed and systematized, are yet limited and associated in its early stages with no great mental enfeeblement. [a. 40.]—Primary i. A chronic i. not induced by any preceding neuro-psychosis. [Spitzka (a. 40).]—Primordial i. See Primary i.—Pubescent i. See I. of pubescence.—Puerperal i. Lat., manis (seu melancholia, seu vesania, seu encephalopathia) puerperalis (seu puerperarum, seu in puerpera, seu lactea). The termination of a nerve by its filaments in a muscle or other portion of the body. [L. 50 (a, 29).]—I. perigyua. See Perigyuous INSERTION.—I. velamentosa (funis umbilicalis). Fr., insertion vélamenteuse du cordon umbilical. Ger., velamentöse Insertion des Nabelstranges. Syn.: i. marginalis bifida (Hyrtl). That form of insertion of the umbilical cord into the placenta in which the vessels of the cord diverge from each other before entering the placenta, and the cord as a whole is really inserted into the chorion, near the margin of the placenta. [A, 19.]—I. velamentosa furcalis. See I. funiculi furcata.

INSERTION, n. $I^2n^2su^{2r}shu^{2n}$. Fr., insertio. Lat., insertio (from inserere, to introduce into). Fr., i. Ger., Einfügung, Anheftung. It., inserzione. Sp., inserción, ingestión. 1. The act of inserting. 2. The particular way in which anything is inserted; in botany, the manner or place of attachment of a body; especially a stamen, on the organ that bears it. [B. 1, 123, 291 (a, 24).] 3. Of a muscle, the site of its attachment to the part that its action tends to move.—Epigyuous I. Lat., insertio epigyua. Fr., i. epigyne. Ger., epigyuische Anheftung. An i. of the stamens upon the ovary. [B. 1 (a, 24).]—Eccentriche I. des Nabelstranges (Ger.). See INSERTIO eccentrica funis umbilicalis.—Gabeli' des Nabelstranges (Ger.). See INSERTIO funiculi furcata.—Hypogynous I. Lat., insertio hypogyna. Fr., i. hypogyne. Ger., hypogyuische Anheftung. An i. of a part upon the receptacle of the flower (i. e., beneath the pistil). [B. 1, 123 (a, 24).]—Immediate I. Lat., insertio immediata. Fr., i. immédiate. Ger., unmittelbare Anheftung. An i. in which the points of origin and i. are the same, the organ inserted proceeding directly from the part. [B. 1, 19 (a, 24).]—Pastelle (Ger.). The site of i. [L.]—I. vélamenteuse en forme de fourche (ou en fourche). See INSERTIO funiculi furcata.—Mediate I. Lat., insertio mediata. Fr., i. mediata. Ger., mittelbare Anheftung. In botany, an i. in which the apparent and actual places of attachment are different. [B. 1 (a, 24).]—

Marginal i. of the umbilical cord. Lat., insertio marginalis. Fr., i. marginale. That form of i. of the cord in which the character of the latter as a whole is maintained up to its i. at the margin of the placenta, giving rise to the formation termed battledore placenta. Cf. Velamentous i.—Perigyuous i. Lat., insertio perigyua. Fr., i. périgyne. Ger., perigyuische Anheftung. An i. around the pistil (i. e., an adnation which carries up the apparent place of attachment to some distance above or away from the receptacle). [B. 1, 19, 123, 291 (a, 24).]—Vaginal i. Ger., Vaginalanheftung. Syn.: utero-vaginal junction. The line of junction of the upper end of the vagina with the neck of the uterus.—Velamentöse I. des Nabelstranges (Ger.). See INSERTIO velamentosa (funis umbilicalis).—Velamentous i. (of the umbilical cord). See INSERTIO velamentosa (funiculi umbilicalis).

INSERTUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n^2su^{2r}(se^{2r})tu^{2s}(tu^{2s})$. See INSERTED.

INSESSIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2se^{2s}si^{2}o$. Gen., -on'is. From insidere, to sit in anything. The use of a sitz-bath. [B, 270.]

INSESSORES (Lat.), n. m. pl. $I^2n^2se^{2s}sor^{2}ez(as)$. From insidere, to sit in anything. See PASSERES.

INSESSORIAL, adj. $I^2n^2se^{2s}so^{2}ri^{2}a^{2}l$. Of or pertaining to the Insessores. [L. 343.]

INSESSUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n^2se^{2s}su^{2s}(su^{2s})$. From insidere, to sit in anything. Gr., ἐγκάθισμα, ἐγκάθισμός (from: ἐκαθίζεω, to sit in anything). A sitz-bath. [B. 48; L. 50 (a, 14).]—I. vaporous. A steam bath for the hips. [L. 50 (a, 14).]

INSEXED, adj. $I^2n^2se^{2xd}$. Lat., insexus (from in neg., and sexus, sex). Fr., insexé. Ger., geschlechtslos. Of plants, without sex; neuter. [B. 1 (a, 24).]

INSIDENT, adj. $I^2n^2si^{2}d^{2}e^{2nt}$. Lat., insidens (from insidere, to sit upon). Ger., aufsitzend. Sitting upon; of fruits, placed upon a carpophore (carpophoróusidens). [B. 123 (a, 24).] The film, etc., found on the surface of urine were formerly termed insidentia. [A, 325.]

INSIDIIOUS, adj. $I^2n^2si^{2}d^{2}i^{2}u^{2s}$. Lat., insidians (from insidiari, to lie in ambush). Fr., insidieux. Ger., insidiös. It., Sp., insidioso. Of diseases, coming on stealthily, so that they are apt to have become confirmed before their presence is recognized.

INSINUATION, n. $I^2n^2si^{2n}a^{2}shu^{2n}$. Lat., insinuatio (from insinuare, to insinuate into). Ger., Einfügung. The introduction of anything (e. g., an instrument into a winding canal) by a series of oblique or spiral movements. [a, 17.]

INSIPID, adj. $I^2n^2si^{2}p^{2}id$. Lat., insipidus (from in neg., and sapidus, savory). Fr., insipide. Ger., geschmacklos, unschmackhaft. Tasteless, flat, vapid. [a, 24.]

INSIPIENS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n^2si^{2}p^{2}i^{2}e^{2nz}(ans)$. Gen., -ent'is. From in neg., and sapiens, wise. Ger., albern, unklug. Silly, simple. [L. 50 (a, 14).]

INSIPIENTIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2si^{2}p^{2}i^{2}e^{2n}shi^{2}(ti^{2})a^{2}$. From in neg., and sapientia, wisdom. Ger., Abernheit, Thorheit. 1. Silliness; simplicity. 2. A mild form of insanity. [L. 50 (a, 14).]—I. ingenta. Imbecility. [a, 40.]

INSISTENT, adj. $I^2n^2si^{2}s^{2}nt$. From insistere, to set foot upon. Lit., treading or pressing upon (said of a bird's hallux when its tip only touches the ground). [L. 221.]

INSITIENCY, n. $I^2n^2si^{2}t^{2}i^{2}e^{2n}si^{2}$. From in neg., and sitis, thirst. Freedom from thirst. [L. 56.]

INSITIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2si^{2}sh(sit^{2})i^{2}o$. Gen., -o'nis. From inserere, to ingraft. 1. A putting into place. 2. Grafting or implantation. 3. Inoculation or vaccination. [E; L. 50 (a, 14); a, 45].—I. ciliorum. An old term for an operation for the restoration of the eyelashes to their normal position, and indirectly of the eyelid to its proper shape. [F.]—I. dentium. The implantation of teeth. [L. 50 (a, 14).]—I. variolarum. Small-pox inoculation. [L. 50 (a, 14).]

INSOLATION, n. $I^2n^2sol^{2}a^{2}shu^{2n}$. Lat., insolatio (from insolare, to expose to the sun), solis ictus (2d def.). Fr., i. coup de soleil (ou de chaleur) (2d def.). Ger., I., Sonnenstich (2d def.). It., insolazione, colpo di sole (2d def.). Sp., insolación. 1. Exposure of a person or thing to the direct rays of the sun; a sun-bath. [B. 48.] 2. Properly, that form of heat fever known as sunstroke; as generally employed, any form of prostration by extreme heat.—Electric I. See Coup de soleil électrique.—Local I. The effect of extreme sun heat upon any localized portion of the body or the nerves contiguous thereto. [a, 40.]

INSOLAZIONE (It.), n. $I^2n^2sol^{2}a^{2}ts^{2}e^{2}o^{2}na$. See INSOLATION.—I. di primavera. Lit., spring sunstroke. See PELLAGRA.

INSOLINIC ACID, n. $I^2n^2so^{2}l^{2}i^{2}n^{2}i^{2}k$. Fr., acide insolinique. Ger., Insolinsäure. See TEREPHTHALIC ACID.

INSOLUBILITY, n. $I^2n^2so^{2}l^{2}i^{2}bi^{2}l^{2}i^{2}t^{2}$. Fr., insolubilité. Ger., Unlöslichkeit. The quality of being insoluble.

INSOLUBLE, adj. $I^2n^2so^{2}l^{2}i^{2}b^{2}l^{2}$. Lat., insolubilis (from in neg., and solubilis, soluble). Fr., i. Ger., unlöslich, unauflöslich. It., insolubile. Sp., i. Incapable of being dissolved. [L. 41 (a, 14).]

INSOMNIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n^2so^{2}m^{2}ni^{2}a^{2}$. From in neg., and sonnus, sleep. Fr., insomnie. Ger., Insomnie, Schlaflosigkeit. Sleeplessness. [D.]—Alcoholic I. An i. due to acute alcoholism. [a, 40.]—Congestive I. A persistent form of i. due to congestion of the brain. [a, 40.]—Febriile I. The i. which attends the evolution of the various specific fevers. It may be due to hyperpyrexia, irritation of the eruption, or exhaustion in the later stages. [Pepper (a, 40).]—I. of exhaustion. I. produced by over-work, debilitating discharges, mental strain, parturition, or any cause capable of causing mental and physical exhaustion. [Pepper (a, 40).]—Lithæmic i. I. originating in over-feeding, and consisting in an irritation of the brain through the intervening nervous apparatus. [Pepper (a, 40).]

INSOMNIOUS, adj. I^n -so^m'ni²-u³s. From in neg., and sonuus, sleep. Sleepless.

INSOMNIUM (Lat.), n. n. I^n -so^m'ni²-u³m(u⁴m). A dream. [A, 322.]

INSPECTION, n. I^n -spe^k'shu³n. Lat., inspectio (from inspicere, to look into). Fr., i. Ger., Inspektion, Adspektion, Besichtigung, Besehen. It., ispezione, ispezione. Sp., inspección. Ocular examination. [D.]

INSPIRGATION, n. I^n -spu^r-ga'shu³n. From inspergere, to sprinkle into. The application of a fine powder or spray to a surface, as of the eye, by sprinkling or dusting. [Alt., "Am. Jour. of Ophth.," Nov., 1885; "Am. Jour. of the Med. Sci.," Apr., 1886, p. 630 (a, 29).]

INSPIRATEUR (Fr.), adj. A^{2n} -spe-ra³-tu³r. See INSPIRATORY.

INSPIRATION, n. I^n -spi²-ra'shu³n. Gr., εισπνοή. Lat., inspiratio (from inspirare, to blow into). Fr., i. Ger., Einathmung, I. It., inspirazione. Sp., inspiración. 1. The act of drawing in the breath. [J.] 2. The act or property of plant-organs, especially leaves, of absorbing gases from the atmosphere. [B, 1 (a, 24).]—Crowing i. The peculiar, noisy i. made in laryngismus stridulus or spasmodic croup. [D, 63; L. Elsberg, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Dec. 20, 1884, p. 685 (D).]—Deferred i. I. which is not audible until shortly after the beginning of the inspiratory act. During this interval the air-cells have become distended, and at its close the inspiratory murmur is heard as a short wheeze; and at its close the inspiratory murmur is heard as a short wheeze; and observed in emphysema, bronchitis, etc. [D, 1.]—Difficult i. Forced i. Forcible i. Fr., i. forcée. Ger., forcierte i. Syn., labored i. I. (2d def.) in which the ordinary muscles of i. are assisted by the so-called inspiratory auxiliaries (i. e., the muscles attached to the chest which by their contraction can increase the thoracic cavity directly or indirectly by furnishing fixed support whereby other muscles may act more advantageously). If the movements become excessively labored, there is brought into co-ordinate action every muscle in the body which can either directly or indirectly increase the cavity of the thorax. [J, 18, 40, 53, 198.] See Muscles of i.—Full i. Fr., i. profunde. Ger., tiefe Athmung. Syn., full breath. I. in which the lungs are filled as completely as possible (voluntarily, as in determining the amount of complementary air, or involuntarily, as in cardiac dyspnea). [J.]—I. of blood. The increased flow of venous blood into the heart, due to and during the act of i. [K.]—I. profunde (Fr.). See Full i.—I. sdruck (Ger.). See PRESSURE of i.—Isabelle (Ger.). The wave-like movement of l. [J.]—Jerking i. Ger., saccadire i. An inspiration the murmur of which, instead of being regular and continuous, is interrupted and wavy. It is associated with incipient pleurisy, pleurodynia, and asthma. [a, 40.]—Labored i. See Forced i.—Non-expansive i. I. in which the expansile movement of the chest is deficient or altogether absent, owing to emphysema, pleuritic adhesions, or obstruction to the entrance of air into the lung. [a, 40.]—Saccadire i. (Ger.). See Jerking i.—Unfinished i. I. prematurely and abruptly stopped; one of the disorders of the respiratory rhythm. [D.]

INSPIRATORY, adj. I^n 'spi²-a²-o-ri². Lat., inspiratori inserviens. Fr., inspirateur. Ger., inspiratorisch. Pertaining to, associated with, or subserving inspiration. [J.]

INSPISSANS (Lat.), adj. I^n -spi²'sa²'sa²'ns. From inspissare, to thicken. Fr., inspissant, épaisissant. Ger., verdickend, eindickend. Thickening. The inspissantia (Ger., verdickende Mittel) are agents that thicken the blood or other liquids. [A, 322.]

INSPISSATED, adj. I^n 'spi²'s-at-e²d. Lat., inspissatus. Fr., inspissé, épaisi. Ger., verdickt. Made thicker; partially evaporated or dehydrated. [a, 17.]

INSPISSATION, n. I^n -spi²'s-sa'shu³n. Lat., inspissatio (from inspissare, to thicken). Fr., i., épaississement. Ger., Verdickung. The act or process of becoming or of making thicker in consistency. [a, 17.]

INSPISSATUS (Lat.), adj. I^n -spi²'s-sat(sa²t)'u³s(u⁴s). See INSPISSATED.

INSTABILIS (Lat.), adj. I^n -sta(sta³)'bi²-i²s. From in neg., and stabilis, that stands firm. Fr., instable. Ger., unbeständig. See UNSTABLE.

INSTAMINATE, adj. I^n -sta²m'i²n-at. Lat., instaminatus (from in neg., and stamen [q. v.]). Fr., instaminé. Destitute of stamens. [B, 1 (a, 24); a, 45.]

INSTAURATION, n. I^n -sta²-ra'shu³n. Lat., instauratio (from instaurare, to establish). Fr., i. The establishment of a function (e. g., menstruation). [A, 385.]

INSTEP, n. I^n 'ste²p. Fr., cou-de-pied. Ger., Fussbiege. It., collo del piede. Sp., empeine, garganta. The convexity of the upper side of the foot near its junction with the leg. [C.]

INSTILLATION, n. I^n -sti²l-a'shu³n. Lat., instillatio (from instillare, to drop in). Fr., i. Ger., Eintröpfeln. The act of pouring in a liquid drop by drop. [B, 88 (a, 39).]

INSTINCT, n. I^n 'sti²n²kt. Lat., instinctus (from instinguere, to instigate). Fr., i. Ger., Naturtrieb. A natural propensity independent of reasoning; the natural faculty, as seen in the lower animals, of doing the right thing without knowing why. [L, 343.]

INSTINCTIVE, adj. I^n -sti²n²'kt-i²v. Fr., instinctif. Determined by instinct. [a, 17.]

INSTIPULATE, adj. I^n -sti²p'u²lat. Lat., instipulatus. Fr., instipulé. Not stipulate. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INSTITA (Lat.), n. f. I^n 'sti²-ta³. From insistere, to step, tread upon. Lit., the founce or border of a Roman lady's tunic; hence, the portion stepped upon; a bandage. [A, 312 (a, 21); a, 45.]

INSTITUTE (or INSTITUTIONS) OF MEDICINE, n. pl. I^n 'sti²-tu²z, I^n -sti²-tu²'shu³nz. From instituere, to put into place.

A collective term sometimes used to denote the elementary principles of physiology, general pathology, therapeutics, and hygiene. [A, 2.]

INSTRUMENT, n. I^n 'stru²-m'nt. Gr., ὄργανον. Lat., instrumentum (from instruere, to build). Fr., i., outil. Ger., I. Werkzeug. It., strumento, utensile. Sp., instrumento. 1. A tool, an implement. 2. An agent, an organ. [E.]—Aecouchiri (Ger.). An obstetrical i.—Allingham's i. for fistula. An i. composed of a steel director and a strong pair of scissors the back of one blade of which is ground to fit into the tunneled groove of the director, so that the blade can not slip out of the groove as it is forced through the fistula tract. [a, 40.]—Canaliculus i. An i. devised by Greenslade consisting of a fine director, in the groove of which is a sliding knife manipulated by the action of the thumb upon a small button in the handle of the i. It is used for widening the lacrymal canal. [a, 40.]—Davidson's spray i. An atomizer consisting of a bottle with a concavity on one side, into which the compression bulb fits, and a spray tube having tips directing the spray in various directions. [a, 40.]—Deutch's i. An i. consisting of an intra-uterine stem attached to a double wing-shaped pessary, and manipulated by a screw, so that the womb can be flexed into any desired position. [a, 40.]—Earle's i. for the extraction of cataract. Fr., i. d'extraction. Ger., I. zur Staarerausziehung. A small lancet, not now used, moving backward and forward between the blades of a forceps. The i. was introduced through the sclerotic and choroid; the lancet was withdrawn by means of a spring in the handle, and the blades of the forceps were then opened and the cataract seized and brought away. [F.]—Electromassage i. An i. devised by Butler, composed of a magnet and three cylinders, revolved by multiplying cog-wheels and developing magneto-electricity. It is said to possess the advantages of electricity and massage combined. [a, 40.]—Erweiterungs! (Ger.). See DILATORIUM.—Geburts-hilffliches i. (Ger.). An obstetrical i.—Goetz's suture i. An i. composed of a curved needle fitted into a hollow handle, in which is a bobbin holding the suture silk and dealing it out as needed, thus obviating the necessity of frequently threading the needle. [a, 40.]—Grant's i. for oedema of the glottis. A small cap with a sharp hook attached fitted on to the end of the finger like a thumb, and used for scarifying. [E.]—Gross's foreign-body i. for the ear. A small steel shaft with an ear-scoop on one end and a fine bent point on the other for removing foreign bodies from the ear. [a, 40.]—Hoff's automatic suture i. An i. consisting of a long shaft with flared end and internal sliding bar, manipulated by a finger-ring. It is designed to introduce serrefines instead of sutures into wounds. [a, 40.]—Ibesteck (Ger.). See Operating case.—Sim's intra-uterine-stem i. A Hodge pessary, with an intra-uterine stem movable upon an axis, thus facilitating its introduction and allowing motion to the uterus. [a, 40.]—Squarey's i. A straight self-retaining stem pessary, without any vaginal support. It is held in place by the automatic dilatation of its intra-uterine extremity. [a, 40.]

INSTRUMENTARIUM (Lat.), n. n. I^n -stru²(stru)-me²nt-a²(a³)ri²-u³m(u⁴m). From instrumentum, an instrument. A collection or supply of instruments.

INSTRUMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. I^n -stru²(stru)-me²nt-u³m(u⁴m). See INSTRUMENT.—I. chirurgicum. A surgical instrument.—I. digestivum. Ger., Verdauungsorgan. An organ of digestion. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. instrumentorum. The hand. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INSUCCATION, n. I^n -su²k-ka'shu³n. From in, into, and succus, juice. Ger., Insukktion. A method pursued in making an extract from very hard bodies, like wood or hard fruit-rinds, consisting in steeping them for 2 or 3 days in cold water before extracting them with hot water. [B, 49.]

INSUCCATUS (Lat.), adj. I^n -su²k(su⁴k)-kat(kat²t)'u³s(u⁴s). From insucare, to soak in. Dissolved in or treated with vegetable juices (see ALOE insuccata). [B, 57.]

INSUFFICIENCY, n. I^n -su²f-i²sh'e²n-si². Lat., insufficiencia (from in, neg., and sufficiens, a sufficiency). Fr., insuffisance. Ger., Insufficienz, Unzulänglichkeit. The state of being insufficient for its purpose.—Absolute i. I. due to thickening, induration, or other change in the cardiac valves themselves. [a, 40.]—Active i. of a muscle. A muscular contraction only equal to that usually observed at the beginning of shortening, when the origins and insertions of certain muscles in the neighborhood of joints are brought too near together, the muscles being thus aorte to contract at a mechanical disadvantage. [Landois (K).]—Aortic i. Fr., insuffisance aortique. Ger., Aortenklappentinsufficienz. An imperfect closure of the aortic orifice by the aortic valves. It may be due to the rupture of a valve, or to endocarditis, especially to sclerotic endocarditis. [D, 45.] See also CORRIGAN'S DISEASE.—Functional mitral i. Fr., insuffisance mitrale anorganique (ou fonctionnelle). Ger., anorganische Mitraltinsufficienz. Mitral i. due to deficient muscular contractility in the heart itself. [Heider (a, 40).]—I. of the ocular muscles. Fr., insuffisance des muscles oculaires. Ger., Insufficienz der Augenmuskeln. An absence of dynamical equilibrium of the ocular muscles, due either to an inherent weakness of one set of muscles or to an elastic preponderance of another set of muscles. [E.]—Mitral i. Fr., insuffisance mitrale (ou de la valve mitrale). That pathological condition in which the mitral valve inefficiently closes its orifice with the rhythmic action of the heart. [D.]—Muscular i. Fr., insuffisance musculaire. Ger., Muscularinsufficienz. I. A condition in which a muscle (especially one of the ocular muscles) is relatively weak compared with its antagonist, so that an effort on the part of this muscle is required in order to maintain equilibrium. [B.] Cf. I. of the ocular muscles. 2. See Active and Passive i. of a muscle.—Passive i. of a muscle. The disabled condition of a muscle in the neighborhood of a joint when so stretched by the action of other muscles that it can not contract perfectly. [Landois (K).]

INSUFFICIENZ (Ger.), n. I^2n -suf-fe-tse-e²ntz'. See INSUFFICIENCY.—Aortenklappenl'. See Aortic INSUFFICIENCY.—I. der Augenmuskeln. See INSUFFICIENCY of the ocular muscles.—Muscularl'. See Muscular INSUFFICIENCY.

INSUFFISANCE (Fr.), n. A^2n^2 -su²ff-fe-sa²n²s. See INSUFFICIENCY.—I. de la valve mitrale. See Mitral INSUFFICIENCY.—I. mitrale anorganique (ou fonctionnelle). See Functional mitral INSUFFICIENCY.—I. rénale. See Renal INADEQUACY.

INSUFFLATION, n. I^2n -su²ff-fla²shu²n. Lat., insufflatio (from insufflare, to blow into or upon). Fr., i. Ger., I., Einblasung. It., insufflazione. Sp., soplo. The act of blowing a gas, a vapor, air (often charged with a finely divided medicament), or a powder into a cavity of the body (either natural or pathological). [E; a, 17].—Pulmonary i. Fr., i. pulmonaire. The act of injecting the lung with air by blowing it into the mouth or nose, or (more recently) by the use of a bellows inserted into an opening in the trachea, the air being artificially warmed and charged with the proper moisture; used in the asphyxia of new-born children, and in that due to opium, coal-gas, submersion, etc. 2. The i. into the trachea and bronchi, and even the ultimate air-passages, of air (sometimes compressed or rarefied) charged with medicinal vapors or impalpable powders. [B, 88 (a, 39); a, 17].—Relative i. 1. due to cardiac dilatation. [a, 40.]

INSUFFLATOR (Lat.), n. m. I^2n -su²ff(su²f)-fla(fl²)²to²r; in Eng., I^2n -su²ff-flat-o²r. Gen., or'is. Fr., insufflateur. Ger., Insufflator. It., insufflatore. Sp., insufador. An instrument for performing insufflation.—Clay's i. An i. resembling Elsberg's. [E].—Duke's vaginal i. An i. composed of a compression ball connected by a long, narrow tube with an elliptical box with a movable lid for holding powder. By pressure upon the ball the lid is raised and the powder insufflated. ["Aerztlichen Polytec." Sept., 1890, p. 190 (a, 40)].—Elsberg's i. A delicate cannula with a small soft-rubber bulb attached, for holding and forcing out the powder. [E].—Mallez's powder i. A tube with a rubber bulb at the end, for blowing powders into the urethra. [E].—Politzer's i. Fr., insufflateur de Politzer. Ger., Politzer'scher Apparat zum Einblasen. An i. for blowing powder into the ear, made of metal or hard rubber, and consisting of a powder-chamber fastened on a tube, and communicating with the cavity of the latter by suitable openings. By a half-turn of the tube the openings are closed, and the powder which has penetrated into the tube is blown into the meatus by an air-balloon fixed at the outer end. [F, 32].—Ranchfuss's i. See Ranchfuss's INJECTOR.—Tube i. An i. consisting of a long vulcanite tube, shaped for introduction into the larynx, in which there is a cavity covered by a movable shield for holding the powder, and just back of this a valve to prevent the powder being blown backward by air from the larynx. Attached to this vulcanite tube is a flexible tube with a mouth-piece attached, into which the operator blows to insufflate the powder. [a, 40.]

INSULA (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -su²(su²)²la². Gr., $\nu\eta\sigma\sigma$. Fr., i., i. de Reil (1st def.). Ger., Insul, Inseltappen (1st def.), Stamiltappen (1st def.), versteckter Lappen (1st def.), Zwischenlappen (1st def.). An island or inlet. 1. A group of convolutions, situated within the beginning of the fissure of Sylvius. It covers the lenticular nucleus, and is itself concealed by the operculum. 2. A lobule of the liver. See ACINUS (1st def.). [I, 15 (K); J].—I. cerebri, I. de Reil (Fr.), I. fissure Sylvii. See I. (1st def.).—Insule griseae cornu Ammonis. Patches of gray matter in the cornu Ammonis. [L, 7 (a, 29)].—I. hepatica, I. hepatis. See I. (2d def.).—Insule Peyerii. See PEYER'S GLANDS.—I. Reilii. See I. (1st def.).—I. sanguinis. An old term for a blood-clot. [K.]

INSULAR, adj. I^2n -su²la²r. From insula, an island, Fr., insulaire. Ger., insularisch. Pertaining to or of the character of an island.

INSULATED, adj. I^2n -su²la²-e²d. Lat., insulatus (from insula, an island). Fr., isolé. Ger., abgesondert, isotirt. 1. See ISOLATED. 2. In electro-physics, protected by a non-conductor. 3. Having a part distinct and free from other parts (said of the wings of certain insects). [L, 180 (a, 39).]

INSULATING, adj. I^2n -su²la²-i²n². Serving to insulate.

INSULATION, n. I^2n -su²la²-shu²n. Lat., insulatio. Fr., i. Ger., Absondern, Isolirung. 1. The act or process of insulating. 2. The state of being insulated.

INSULATOR (Lat.), n. n. I^2n -su²la²(su²)²-a(a²)²to²r; in Eng., I^2n -su²la²-at-o²r. Gen., -tor'is. Fr., insulateur. Ger., Isolator. That by means of which insulation is accomplished.

INSULTUS (Lat.), n. m. I^2n -su²lt(su²lt)²-u²s(u²s). Gen., -sult'us. From insultare, to spring upon a thing. An attack, onset, or paroxysm, as of a disease.—I. apoplecticus. An attack of apoplexy.—I. eclampticus. A convulsive attack.—I. epilepticus. An attack of epilepsy. [D].—I. hystericus. An hysterical paroxysm.—I. maniacalis. An attack of mania.

INSUPPURABLE, adj. I^2n -su²p²u²r-a²b²l. Lat., insuppurabilis (from in neg., and suppurare, to suppurate). See ANEPYCETOUS.

INSUSCEPTIBILITY, n. I^2n -su²s-se²pt-i²-bi²'i²l²-i². Fr., insusceptibilité. Ger., Unempfänglichkeit. The state of being insusceptible.

INSUSCEPTIBLE, adj. I^2n -su²s-se²pt-i²-b²l. Lat., insusceptibilis. Fr., i. Ger., unempfänglich. Not susceptible, incapable of being affected.

INSYMMETRIC, adj. I^2n -si²m-me²t'r'i²k. From in neg., συμ, with, and μετρον, a measure. Fr., insymétrique. Ger., unsymmetrisch. See ASYMMETRIC.

INTACT, adj. I^2n -ta²kt'. Lat., intactus (from in neg., and tangere, to touch). Fr., i. Ger., unangerührt (1st def.), farblos (2d def.), ungefärbt (2d def.). 1. Uninjured, entire. 2. In botany, unstained, not sphacelate (q. v.). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INTACTILE, INTANGIBLE, adj's. I^2n -ta²kt'i²l, -ta²n'ji²-b²l. From in neg., and tangere, to touch. Fr., i. Ger., unföhlbar. Incapable of being felt by the sense of touch. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTEGER (Lat.), adj. I^2n -te²-ju²r'(ge²r). From in neg., and tangere, to touch. 1. See INTACT (1st def.) and ENTIRE. 2. Branching so that the axis may be traced to the top. [B, 1, 123 (a, 24).] Cf. DELICUESCENT (2d def.).

INTEGERRIMUS (Lat.), adj. I^2n -te²-je²r'(ge²r)'r'i²m-u²s(u²s). Superl. of integer. Ger., ganzrandig. Quite entire, having the margin filled out to an even line (said of a leaf). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INTEGRATION, n. I^2n -te²-g-r'm'shu²n. Lat., integratio (from integrare, to make whole). Fr., intégration. A fusion of parts previously separate in the embryo.

INTEGRIFOLIATE, INTEGRIFOLIOLIOUS, adj's. I^2n -te²-g-r'i²-fol'i²-at, -u²s. Lat., integrifolius (from integer, whole, and folium, a leaf). Having entire leaves. [B.]

INTEGRIMAL, adj. I^2n -te²-g'r'i²m'l. From integer, whole. In botany, nearly or quite entire; having no notches. [L, 116 (a, 43).]

INTEGRITY, n. I^2n -te²-g'r'i²ti². Gr., $\alpha\lambda\theta\eta\varsigma$ (from $\delta\lambda\omicron\varsigma$, whole). Lat., integritas (from integer, whole). Fr., intégrité. Ger., Unverletztheit, Vollständigkeit. The state of being intact (1st def.).

INTEGROSTOMOUS, adj. I^2n -te²-g-ro²st'o²m-u²s. From integer, whole, and $\sigma\tau\omicron\mu\alpha$, the mouth. Fr., integrostome. Of bivalves, having the opening entire. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTEGUMENT, n. I^2n -te²-g-u²m'nt. Lat., integumentum (from in, in, and tegere, to cover). Fr., enveloppe, tégument. Ger., Decke, Hülle, Deckhaut. 1. A covering; an envelope. 2. The covering investing the body or any part of it, especially the skin. [G].—Common i. Lat., integumentum commune. The skin. [G].—Floral i's. See FLORAL ENVELOPES.—I's of the ovule. See PRIMINE and SECUNDINE.—I's of the seed. See TESTA and TEGEMEN.

INTEGUMENTAL, INTEGUMENTARY, adj's. I^2n -te²-g-u²-me²nt'l, -tari². From integumentum, a cover. Belonging to or of the nature of an integument.

INTEGUMENTATION, n. I^2n -te²-g-u²-me²nt-a'shu²n. From integumentum, a cover. The state of having integuments, or the integuments themselves considered collectively. [a, 35.]

INTEGUMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. I^2n -te²-g-u²(u²)²-me²nt'u²m(u²m). See INTEGUMENT.—I. commune. See COMMON INTEGUMENT.—Integumenta fetus. See FETAL ENVELOPES (2d def.).—I. gelatinosum. In many Algae, the gelatinous covering of the filaments of the thallus. [B, 123 (a, 24).]—I. ventriculorum. See VELUM INTERPOSITUM.

INTELLECT, n. I^2n -te²l-e²kt. Lat., intellectus (from intellegere, to see into, perceive, understand). Fr., i. Ger., Verstand. The understanding and reasoning power of man. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

INTELLECTION, n. I^2n -te²l-e²kt'shu²n. Lat., intellectio. The action of the intellect.

INTELLECTUAL, adj. I^2n -te²l-e²kt'lu²a²l. Lat., intellectualis. Fr., intellectuel. Ger., intellectuell. 1. Pertaining to the intellect. 2. Possessed of or expressive of intelligence.

INTEMPERANCE, n. I^2n -te²m-pe²r-a²ns. Lat., intemperantia (from in neg., and temperare, to regulate, moderate, restrain). Fr., intempérance. Ger., Unmäßigkeit. Excess; immoderate indulgence of the appetites, especially the immoderate use of alcoholic drinks. [L, 30, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

INTEMPERANTIA (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -te²m-pe²r-a²n(a²n)'shi²(ti²)²-a². See INTEMPERANCE.—I. edendi. See ADEPHAGIA.

INTEMPERIES (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -te²m-pe²(pe²)²-ri²-ez(as). Gen., -perie'i. From in neg., and temperare, to moderate, regulate). Fr., intempérie. 1. Of the weather, inclemency. 2. A dyscrasia. [L, 41, 49, 50 (a, 14).]

INTENCIONES DE LÓPEZ [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. pl. I^2n -te²n-thi²-on-as da lo'path². See Pomatum cum oxido hydrargyrico ex López.

INTENSIFICATION, n. I^2n -te²ns-i²-fi²-ka'shu²n. From intensus, intense, and facere, to make. 1. A rendering intense. 2. The state of being rendered intense.

INTENSITY, n. I^2n -te²ns'i²t-i². From intendere, to stretch out. Fr., intensité. Ger., Angespanntheit, Stärke, Verstärkung. It., intensità. Sp., intensidad. The state of being intense. [a, 45.]

INTENSIVE, adj. I^2n -te²n'si²v. From intendere, to stretch out or extend. Fr., intensif. Ger., intensiv. 1. Causing or accompanied by intensification. 2. In Pasteur's prophylactic treatment of rabies, characterized by frequent inoculations of more and more virulent dilutions of the spinal cords of rabbits to which rabies has been communicated artificially. [A, 523.]

INTENTIO (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -te²n'shi²(ti²)²-o. Gen., -on'is. See INTENTION.—Prima i. See FIRST INTENTION.—Secunda i. See SECOND INTENTION.

INTENTION, n. I^2n -te²n'shu²n. Lat., intentio (from intendere, to stretch forth). Fr., i. Ger., I. The process by which the lips of a wound unite in the healing of the wound.—First i. Lat., prima intentio. Fr., première i. Ger., Heilung per primam intentionem. An immediate union in which the surfaces of the wound become glued together by an albuminous fluid and the wound heals without further redness or swelling. [A, 326 (a, 21)].—Second i. Lat., secunda intentio. Fr., seconde i. Ger., Heilung per secundam intentionem. Union by the adhesion of opposed granulating surfaces.—Third i. Of the older writers, the union of wounds by the growing together of the granulations on their sides. Union of granulations is the more recent term. [Agnew (a, 40).]

INTERACCESSORII (Lat.), n. m. pl. I^2n -tu²r'(te²r)-a²kt(a²)²-se²s(ke²s)-so'ri²-i²(e). From inter, between, and accessorius (q. v.).

Short muscles which pass from the accessory process of one lumbar vertebra to the mammillary process of the next. [L, 142, 332 (a, 29).]

INTERACINOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^2s^2i^2n-u^3s$. From inter, between, and κίνος, a grape. Fr., interacineux. Ger., interacinös. Situated between the acini.

INTERAMBULACRA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-a^2m(a^3m)-bu^2(bu^4)-la^2k(la^2k)/ra^2$. From inter, between, and ambulacrum (q. v.). Ger., Interambulacrafelder. See Interambulacral PLATES.

INTERANEUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-an(a^3n)/e^2-u^3s(u^4s)$. From inter, in the midst. Ger., innerlich, inwendig. Internal (said of spores or other body within a plant or plant-organ); as a n., in the pl., interanea, of Pliny, the intestines; of Lindemus and Rhodius, the viscera of the abdomen. [B, 123 (a, 24); L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTER-ANNEXIEL (Fr.), adj. $A^2n^2-te^2r-a^3n-ne^2x-e-e^2l$. From inter, between, and annectere, to bind to. Situated between the various extra-embryonic structures of the ovum. [A, 38.]

INTERANTENNARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^2n-te^2n-na-ri^2$. Lat., interantennarius (from inter, between, and antenna [q. v.]). Situated between the antennæ (said of the interantennary ridge in Hymenoptera). [L, 11, 180 (a, 39).]

INTERAPOPHYSEAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^2p-o-fi^2s/e^2-a^2l$. From inter, between, and ἀπόφυσις, an apophysis. Situated between apophyses. [a, 29.]

INTERARTICULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^3rt-i^2k/u^2-la^3r$. Lat., interarticularis (from inter, between, and articulus, a joint). Fr., interarticulaire. Ger., zwischen den Gelenken liegend, Zwischen-gelenk. Situated between the joints. [L, 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERARYTENOID, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^2r-i^2-ten/oid$. Lat., interarytenoides (from inter, between, and arytænoïd [q. v.]). Fr., interaryténoidien. Situated between the arytenoid cartilages. [A, 385.]

INTERAURICULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-a^4r-i^2k/u^2-la^3r$. From inter, between, and auricula, the auricle. Fr., interauriculaire. Situated between the external ears or between the auricles of the heart. [A, 385.]

INTERAXILLARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ax^2i/la-ri^2$. From inter, between, and axilla, the armpit. Springing from or situated in the upper angle which a leaf forms with the stem. [a, 35.] Cf. EXTRA-AXILLARY.

INTERBRACHIAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-brak^2i^2-a^2l$. Situated between the brachiae or rays (said of the areas between the rays of a star-fish, especially those of the genus Ophiopsis). [A, 359 (a, 39).]

INTER-BRAIN, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-bran$. From inter, between, and brain (q. v.). Ger., Zwischenhirn. See THALAMENCEPHALON.

INTERCADENCE, n. I^2n-tu^5r-kad/e^2ns . From inter, between, and cadere, to fall. Fr., i. A state of the pulse in which a supernumerary pulsation occurs sometimes between two regular pulsations. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTERCADENT, adj. I^2n-te^2r-kad/e^2nt . Fr., i. Having the character of intercadence (said of the pulse). [A, 523.]

INTERCALAR, INTERCALARY, INTERCALATED, adj's. $I^2n-tu^5r/ka^2l-a^3r, -a-ri^2, -at/e^2d$. Lat., intercalaris, intercalarius (from intercalare, to insert). Fr., intercalaire. Ger., eingeschaltet, zwischenfallend. It., intercalare, intercalario. Sp., intercalado. 1. Inserted among others; in botany, said of the growth of the cell-wall when by the extension of a zone formed by the deposition of new substance a fresh piece of cell-wall is introduced between the old ones. [B, 1, 4, 116 (a, 24).] 2. Intervening between paroxysms of fever; also, as occasionally used, marked by unusually severe fever (said of certain days). [A, 322.] 3. Of a staphyloma, situated between the sclero-corneal margin and the ciliary body. [L, 57 (a, 29).]

INTERCALATION, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-ka^2l-a^3shu^2n$. Lat., intercalatio (from intercalare, to insert). An interposition.

INTERCAPEDO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-ka^2p(ka^3p)-e(a)/do$. Gen., -ed/inis. From inter, between, and capere, to take. Fr., intervalle. Ger., Lücke. An interval, interstice. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERCAPILLARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ka^2p^2i/la-ri^2$. From inter, between, and capillaris (see CAPILLARY). Fr., intercapillaire. Situated between the capillaries. [A, 385.]

INTERCAROTIC, INTERCAROTID, adj's. $I^2n-tu^5r-ka^2r-o^2t/i^2k, -pd$. From inter, between, and καρωτιδες, the carotid arteries. Fr., intercarotidiens. Situated between the two primitive carotid arteries or between the external and internal carotid arteries of one side. [A, 385.]

INTERCARTILAGINOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ka^3rt-i^2l-a^2j/i^2n-u^3s$. Lat., intercartilagineus (from inter, between, and cartilago, cartilage). Fr., intercartilagineux. Ger., zwischenknorpelig. Situated between cartilages, especially the arytenoid cartilages. [A, 385.]

INTERCAVERNOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ka^2v/u^2rn-u^3s$. From inter, between, and caverna, a cavern. Between caverns (said of a sinus extending from one cavernous sinus to the other). [C.]

INTERCEDENT (Fr.), adj. $A^2n^2-te^2r-sa-la^2n^2$. From inter, between, and cedere, to go. Of the pulse, intermittent. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTERCELLULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-se^2i/u^2l-a^3r$. Lat., intercellularis (from inter, between, and cellula, a cell). Fr., intercellulaire. Ger., intercellulär. 1. Situated between cells, as i. cement, i. spaces. [J.] 2. Of Huxley (1853), see INTRACELLULAR.

INTERCEPTED, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-se^2pt/e^2d$. Lat., interceptus (from intercipere, to intercept, hinder, preclude). Fr., intercepté. Constricted, narrowed. [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INTERCEPTIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-se^2p(ke^2p)/sbi^2(t)^2-o$. Gen., -on/is. From intercipere, to intercept. 1. See APOLEPSIS. 2. See INTERCAPEDO. 3. In ancient pharmacy, a medicine supposed to interrupt the course of the blood, etc. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. intestinorum. Ger., Darmverschlingung. Intestinal obstruction. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERCERVICALS, n. pl. $I^2n-tu^5r-sn^5r/vi^2-k'ilz$. Lat., intercervicales (from inter, between, and cervix, the neck). Fr., intercervicaux. See INTERTRANSVERSALES, under INTERTRANSVERSALES.

INTERCHANGE, n. $I^2n/tu^5r-chanj$. Fr., échange. Ger., Austausch. An exchange. See GAS i.

INTERCHONDRAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2nd'r'l$. From inter, between, and χόνδρος, a cartilage. 1. See INTERCARTILAGINOUS. 2. By the interposition of cartilages, as in the i. articulations of the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th ribs. [C.]

INTERCIDENCE, n. I^2n-tu^5r-sid/e^2ns . From inter, between, and cadere, to fall. See INTERCADENCE.

INTERCIDENT, adj. I^2n-tu^5r-sid/e^2nt . Lat., intercidens. Fr., i. Ger., zwischenfallend. 1. See INTERCALARY. 2. See INTERCADENT.

INTERCILIIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-si^2l(ki^2l)/i^2-u^3m(u^4m)$. From inter, between, and cilium, an eyebrow. See GLABELLA.

INTERCISIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-si(ke)/si^2-o$. Gen., -on/is. From inter, between, and cadere, to cut. Gr., διακοπή. Ger., Wegfallen, Ausbleiben. Intermittence (of the pulse). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERCISUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-sis(kes)/u^3s(u^4s)$. Intermittent. [A, 322.]

INTERCLAVICLE, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-klav^2i^2-k'l$. From inter, between, and clavicula, the clavicle. A cross- or T-shaped bony plate or membrane bone connecting and supporting the inner ends of the clavicle in many vertebrates, and intimately connected with the sternum. [L, 12, 153 (a, 39).]

INTERCLAVICULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-klav^2v/i^2k/u^2l-a^3r$. From inter, between, and clavicula, a small key. Fr., interclaviculaire. Ger., zwischen den Schlüsselbeinen liegend. Situated between the clavicles.

INTERCLAVICULARIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-klav^2(klav^2)-vi^2k(wi^2k)-u^2l(u^4l)-a(a^3)/ri^2s$. A muscle not often found, formed by the union of the sternoclavicularis of one side with the corresponding muscle on the other, or with the sternal head of the sternocleidomastoid. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. antiens digastricus. An anomalous muscle described by Dwight as arising from the front of each clavicle by an origin $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. broad, the outer end covered by the clavicular portion of the pectoralis major. Its outer muscular parts were united by a median tendon 2 inches long which crossed the sternoclavicular joints and lay in front of the sternum. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 4, 1888, p. 133 (a, 29).]

INTERCLINOID, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-kl'i^2n/oid$. From inter, between, and κλίση, a bed, and εἶδος, resemblance. Situated between the clinoid processes. [a, 29.]

INTERCLUSIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-klu^2(klu)/si^2-o$. Gen., -on/is. From intercludere, to shut out. Ger., Absperrung, Verhaltung. A suppression, disturbance. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. animæ. A sudden interruption of respiration. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERCOLUMNA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2l-u^3m(u^4m)/na^3$. From inter, between, and columna, a column. See DIAPYGGMA.

INTERCOLUMNAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2l-u^3m/na^3r$. From inter, between, and columna, a column. Fr., intercolumnaire. Ger., intercolumnär. Situated between columns. [L, 49.] See I. FASCIA.

INTERCONDYLAR, INTERCONDYLEAN, INTERCONDYLOID, adj's. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2n(dil^2l)-a^3r, -ko^2n(dil^2l)/e^2-a^2n, -ko^2n(dil^2l)-oid$. From inter, between, and κόνδυλος, a knuckle. Fr., intercondyliens. Ger., intercondylär. Situated between the condyles of a bone. [A, 385.]

INTERCORONOIDEAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2r-on-oid^2e-a^2l$. From inter, between, and κορώνη, a crown, and εἶδος, resemblance. Situated between the coronoid processes. [a, 29.]

INTERCOSTAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ko^2s^2t'l$. Lat., intercostalis (from inter, between, and costa, a rib). Fr., i. Ger., i, zwischen den Rippen liegend, Zwischenrippen-. Situated between the ribs; as a n., a nerve, artery, etc., so situated. [C.]—Aortic i's. See AORTIC i. ARTERIES.

INTERCOSTALIS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-ko^2st-a(a^3)/i^2s$. See INTERCOSTAL.—Intercostales breves. The intercostal muscles and the intertransversales. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. dextra prima. The branch of the superior intercostal space on the right side. [a, 29.]—Intercostales externi. Muscular fibres with tendinous fibres intermixed which pass obliquely downward and forward from one rib to another. They cover the intercostal spaces from the margin of the levatores costarum nearly to the outer end of the cartilages. In the three or four upper spaces they end at some distance laterally from the ends of the bony ribs, in the middle spaces they touch the cartilages at the lower borders, and in the two lowest intervals they reach forward to the ends of the spaces. [L, 31, 142, 172 (a, 29).]—Intercostales interni. Short muscular fibres attached to the inner margins of the ribs and their cartilages from the anterior extremities of the cartilages to a point within the angles of the ribs. The fibres pass downward and backward from one rib to the next below, crossing the fibres of the external intercostals. [L, 31, 142 (a, 29).]—Intercostales longi. A generic term embracing the infracostalis, iliocostalis lumborum, iliocostalis dorsi, and scaleni. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

INTERCOSTARIUM (Lat.), n. m. pl. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-ko^2st-a(a^3)/ri^2(e)$. See INTERTRANSVERSALES.

INTERCOSTAUX (Fr.), n. pl. A²n²-te²r-ko²s-to. From inter, between, and costa, a rib. The intercostal muscles, vessels, or nerves. [B, 45 (a, 39).]

INTERCOSTOBRACHIAL, INTERCOSTO-HUMERAL, adj's. I²n-tu⁵r-ko²st-o-brakⁱ2-a²l, -hu²mⁱk'e²r-a²l. From inter, between, costa, a rib, and βραχίον or humerus, the shoulder. Pertaining to the intercostal spaces and to the arm. [a, 29.]

INTERCOTYLEDONARY, adj. I²n-tu⁵r-ko²t-i²l-e²dⁱo²n-a²r-i². From inter, between, and κοτύληδών, a cotyledon. Intervening between the placental cotyledons.

INTERCOURSE, n. I²n-tu⁵r-kors. From intercurrere, to run between. Fr., entrecours. Association, especially of a sexual character.—Carnal i. See COPULATION.—Impure i. Copulation with a person affected with venereal disease.—Sexual i. See COPULATION.

INTERCRURAL, adj. I²n-tu⁵r-kru²r'l. From inter, between, and crus, the leg. Fr., i. Ger., i. Zwischenchenkel. Situated between the legs or the crura of a structure.

INTEROPERCULUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^6r(te^2r)-op^2(o^2p^2)-u^2r^2(e^2r)ku^2l(ku^4l)-u^2m(u^4m)$. Fr., interopercule. See INTEROPERCULAR BONE.

INTEROPTICUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^6r(te^2r)-o^2pt^2ik-u^2s(u^4s)$. From inter, between, and $\omicron\rho\tau\tau\omicron\varsigma$, for sight. Ger., interoptisch. See INTEROCULAR; as a n., an interocular lobe observed in certain reptiles. [I, 80 (K); "Jour. of Nerv. and Ment. Dis.," July, 1880, p. 480 (K).]

INTERORBITAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^6r-o^2rb^2i^2-t^1$. From inter, between, and orbita, the orbit. Fr., interorbitaire. Situated between the orbits; pertaining to the space between the orbits; as a n., see I. BONE. [L, 343.]

INTERORGANIC, adj. $I^2n-tu^6r-o^2r-ga^2n^2i^2k$. From inter, between, and $\omicron\rho\rho\alpha\nu\omicron\nu$, an organ. Fr., interorganique. Situated between organs or their elements. [A, 385.]

INTEROSCULANT, adj. $I^2n-tu^6r-o^2s^2ku^2l-a^2nt$. From inter, between, and osculare, to kiss. See OSCULANT.

INTEROSSEOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-o^2s'e^2-u^4s$. Lat., interosseus (from inter, between, and os, a bone). Fr., interosseux. Ger., zwischen Knochen liegend. Pertaining to, connected with, or situated between two contiguous bones. [C.]

INTEROSSEUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-o^2s'se^2-u^4s(u^4s)$. Interosseous; as a n., an interosseous muscle, and in the m. pl., interossei, muscles occupying the intervals between the metacarpal bones and between the metatarsal bones. [L, 135 (a, 14).]—Interossei dorsales. See Interossei manus dorsales and Interossei pedis dorsales.—I. internus primus. Of Albinus, the first dorsal I. of the hand. [L, 31 (a, 29).]—Interossei manus. See Interossei palmares.—Interossei manus bicipites. See I. manus dorsales.—Interossei manus dorsales, Interossei manus externi. Four small muscles which occupy the dorsal portions of the spaces between the metacarpal bones. Each arises by two heads from the adjacent sides of the metacarpal bones between which it lies, the larger head being attached to the bone which supports the finger upon which the muscle acts, and is inserted into the base of the first phalanx and the aponeurosis of the common extensor tendon. They are known as the first, second, third, and fourth from the radial to the ulnar side of the hand. The first, or abductor indicis, is the largest, and is inserted into the radial side of the index finger; the second is inserted into the radial side of the middle finger; the third into the ulnar side of the middle finger; and the fourth into the ulnar side of the ring-finger. [L, 31, 142, 172 (a, 29).]—Interossei palmares. Small muscles which occupy the palmar portion of the intervals between the metacarpal bones, and lie partially upon the palmar surfaces of the latter. They are three in number, arise from the entire length of the metacarpal bone of one finger, and are inserted into the base of the first phalanx and into the extensor tendon of the same finger. The first belongs to the ulnar side of the index-finger; the second and third to the radial sides of the ring and little fingers. Some authors consider one of the heads of the flexor pollicis brevis as a palmar interosseous belonging to the thumb, thus making the number of palmar interossei four. They are known as the first, second, third, and fourth from the radial toward the ulnar side of the hand.—Interossei pedis. See Interossei plantares.—Interossei pedis bicipites, Interossei pedis dorsales, Interossei pedis externi. Small muscles which occupy the dorsal portions of the spaces between the metatarsal bones. They are four in number, arise by two heads from the adjacent sides of the metatarsal bones, between which they are placed, and are inserted into the bases of the first phalanges and into the common extensor tendons. The first dorsal interosseous is inserted into the inner side of the second toe, the other three into the outer sides of the second, third, and fourth toes. They are known as the first, second, third, and fourth from the inner side of the foot outward. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332 (a, 29).]—Interossei plantares. Three small muscles in the foot which arise from the inner and under surfaces and bases of the third, fourth, and fifth metatarsal bones, and are inserted into the inner sides of the bases of the first phalanges of the same toes and into the aponeurosis of the common extensor tendon. They are known as the first, second, and third from the inner side of the foot outward. [L, 31, 142, 172, 332 (a, 29).]—Interossei pollicis indici. Of Dursy, one of the heads of the flexor pollicis brevis, together with a portion of the first dorsal interosseous of the hand. [L, 31 (a, 29).]—Interossei pollicis volaris primus. The portion of the deep head of the flexor pollicis brevis which arises from the metacarpal bone of the thumb. [L, 31, 332 (a, 29).]—Interossei simplices. See Interossei palmares.—Interossei volares. See Interossei palmares.

INTERPAPILLARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pa^2r-pi^2l-a-ri^2$. From inter, between, and papilla (q. v.). Fr., interpapillaire. Situated between papillae. [L, 41.]

INTERPARENCHYMATOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pa^2r-e^2n-ki^2m'a^2-tu^5s$. From inter, between, and παρεγχυμα, parenchyma. Situated between the proper or functional tissue elements of a part or organ. [J.]

INTERPARIETAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pa^2r-i^2e^2-t'l$. From inter, between, and paries, a wall. Fr., interpariétal. Ger., i. Zwischenwand. Situated between the parietal bones; as a n., see I. BONE. [C; L, 150.]

INTERPAROXYSMAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pa^2r-o^2x-i^2z-m'l$. From inter, between, and παροξυσμός, a paroxysm. Occurring between paroxysms.

INTERPASSATIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-pa^2s(pa^2s)-sa(sa^3)/shi^2(t)^2-o$. Gen., -on'is. Fr., interpassare, to quilt. Fr., interpassation. Ger., Durchnähen. The process of quilting. [A, 322, 325.]

INTERPEDUNCULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pe^2d-n^2nk'u^2l-a^2r$. From inter, between, and pedunculus, a peduncle. Fr., interpedonculaire. Situated between the peduncles of the brain. [L, 49.]

INTERPELLATUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-pe^2l-lat(la^2t)-u^2s(u^4s)$. From interpellare, to interrupt. Of Paracelsus, characterized by irregular paroxysms (said of diseases). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERPENNÉ (Fr.), adj. $A^2n^2-te^2r-pa^2n-na$. See INTERPINNATE.

INTERPETIOLAR, INTERPETIOLARY, adj's. $I^2n-tu^5r-pe^2t-i^2ol-a^2r$, -a-ri^2. Lat., interpetiolaris (from inter, between, and petiolus, a petiole). Fr., interpetiolière. See INTERFOLLICEOUS.

INTERPHALANGEAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-fa^2l-a^2n'je^2-a^2l$. From inter, between, and φάλαγξ, a phalanx. Situated between the phalanges. [C.]

INTERPINNATE, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pi^2n-at$. From inter, between, and pinnæ, a feather. Fr., interpenné. Of leaves, having small folioles between the larger ones. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

INTERPLACENTAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pla^2s-e^2n-t'l$. From inter, between, and placenta, a cake. Ger., i. Pertaining to the spaces or lacunæ between the villi of the placenta. [J, 14, 55.]

INTERPLEURICOSTAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-plu^2-ri^2-ko^2s't'l$. From inter, between, πλευρόν, the pleura, and costa, a rib. Fr., interpleuricostal. Situated between the pleura and the ribs. The interpleuricostales of Dumas are the internal intercostal muscles. [L, 44, 187 (a, 14).]

INTERPOLATED, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-po^2l-at-e^2d$. Lat., interpolatus (from interpolare, to give a new form). See INTERCALARY.

INTERPOLATION, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-pol-a'shu^2n$. Fr., i. Ger., I. Einschaltung. In plastic surgery, a method of operating by inserting material from adjacent regions, from a limb, or from another person. [Roberts, "Phila. Med. Times," July 1, 1882, p. 657.]

INTERPOSED, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-po^2z'$. Lat., interpositus (from interponere, to place between). Fr., interposé. Ger., zwischen gestellt. Interjected, introduced between other parts or members already formed. [B, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

INTERPOSITION, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-po^2zi'sh'u^2n$. Lat., interpositio. Fr., i. génération interstitielle (ou accrementielle) (2d def.). 1. A placing between. 2. The development of anatomical elements between those which already exist. [J, 33.]

INTERPOSITIVE, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-po^2z'i^2-ti^2v$. Lat., interpositivus. Fr., interpositif. Ger., dazwischenstehend. Situated between other parts or organs. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INTERPROTOMETAMERE, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-pro-to-me^2t'a^2-mer$. From inter, between, πρότος, first, μετά, among, and μέρος, a part. In embryology, the part or parts between the myotomes or primary segments. [J.]

INTERPTERYGOID, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-te^2r-i^2p'goid$. From inter, between, πτερυξ, a wing, and εἶδος, resemblance. Situated between the pterygoid processes. [a, 29.]

INTERPUBIC, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pu^2b'i^2k$. From inter, between, and pubes (q. v.). Situated between the pubic bones. [a, 14.]

INTERPYRAMIDAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-pi^2r-a^2m'i^2-d'l$. From inter, between, and πυραμῖς, a pyramid. Situated between the pyramids. [a, 29.]

INTERRADIAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ra^2di^2-a^2l$. From inter, between, and radius (q. v.). In the Echinoidea, situated between the rays or radii (as the i. plates). [L, 11 (a, 39).]

INTERRAMAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ra^2m'l$. From inter, between, and ramus, a branch. Situated between the rami of the mandible. [L, 343.]

INTERRANEOUS [Mirbel], adj. $I^2n-te^2r-ran'e^2-u^4s$. From in, in, and terra, the earth. See SUTERRANEOUS.

INTERRENAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-re^2n'l$. From inter, between, and ren, the kidney. Situated between the kidneys (said by Bal-four of the median of the two distinct parts into which he considered the suprarenal bodies of some of the lower vertebrates to be divided). [A, 5.] See I. BODY.

INTERRUPTED, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ru^2p'e^2d$. Lat., interruptus (from interrumpere, to break apart). Fr., interrompu. Ger., unterbrochen. Broken, not continuous, broken or discontinued at short intervals. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INTERRUPTIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-ru^2p'ru^2p/shi^2(t)^2-o$. Gen., -on'is. Fr., i. Ger., Unterbrechung. An interruption.—I. menstrualis. Arrest of the menstrual flow. [A, 322.]

INTERRUPTIPINNATE, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ru^2p-i^2-pi^2n-at$. From inter, between, rumpere, to break, and pinnæ, a wing. Lat., interrupte pinnatus. Fr., interrupté-penné, interruptipenné. Ger., unterbrochen-gefiedert. Of a pinnate leaf, having some of the leaflets (pinnæ) smaller than the others, as in the potato; also used improperly for abruptly pinnate (i. e., pinnate with the leaf terminated abruptly by a pair of leaflets). [B, 1, 19, 121, 123, 291 (a, 35).]

INTERSACRAL, adj. $I^2n-tur-sa^2kr'l$. From inter, between, and sacer (see SACRUM). Situated between different portions of the sacrum. [a, 29.]

INTERSEPTUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-se^2p(sa^3'e^2p)-tu^2m(tu^4m)$. From intersæpire, to fence about. See SEPTUM.—I. narium. See SEPTUM narium.—I. virgiale. See HYMEN (2d def.).

INTERSCAPULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ska^2p'u^2-la^2r$. Lat., interscapularis (from inter, between, and scapula [q. v.]). Fr., interscapulaire. Ger., zwischen den Schulterblättern. Situated between the scapulae. [B, 117; L, 44 (a, 14).]

INTERSCAPULIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-ska^2p(sa^3'e^2p)-u^2l(u^4l)i^2-u^2m(tu^4m)$. From interscapula, between, and scapula (q. v.). Ger., Vorderrücken, Schulterblattsgräte (1st def.). 1. Of Bartholin, the spine of the scapula. [A, 325.] 2. The space between the scapulae. 3. A fossa on the dorsum of the scapula. [L, 349 (a, 29).] 4. In birds, the region between the wings. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

INTERSECTIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-se^2k'shi^2(t)^2-o$. Gen., -on'is. From intersecare, to cut asunder. An intersection.—I. nervorum optico. See CHIASM.—I. nes tendineæ. See LINEÆ transversæ.

INTERSEPIMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-se^2p(sap)-l(e)-me^2nt'u^2m(tu^4m)$. From intersæpire, to fence about. Ger., Zwischenraum, Scheidewand. A separation, partition. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. thoracis. See MEDIASTINUM.

INTERSEPTAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-se^2p't'l$. From intersæpire, to fence about or to hedge up, impede. Situated between the partitions or septa. [J.]

INTERSEPTUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-se^2p(sap)-tu^2m(tu^4m)$. 1. See SEPTUM. 2. See INTERSEPIMENTUM. 3. The septum narium. 4. The diaphragm. [L, 30, 50.]

INTERSPACE, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-spas$. From inter, between, and spatium, a space. A space between two or more things. [a, 41.]—Haversian I's. The more or less prismatic masses of bone that fill the gaps between adjacent Haversian systems.

INTERSPINAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-spi^1n^1$. See INTERSPINOUS.

INTERSPINALIS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-spin(spen)-(a^2)u^3$. See INTERSPINOUS; as a n., one of the short vertical bundles of muscular fibres placed in pairs between the spinous processes of the contiguous vertebrae. [L. 31, 142, 172 (a, 29).]—Inter-spinales colli. The interspinales in the cervical region. [a, 29.]—Inter-spinales dorsi et lumborum. The interspinales of the dorsal and lumbar regions. [a, 29.]

INTERSPINOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-spin^1u^3s$. Lat., interspinalis (from inter, between, and spina, a spine). Fr., interépineux. Ger., Zwischendorn. Situated between spinous processes (e. g., those of the vertebrae). [C.]

INTERSTAMINAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-sta^1m^1i^2n^1$. From inter, between, and stámuon, a stamen. Between stamens (said of an organ placed between two stamens). [Balfour (a, 35).]

INTERSTERNAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-stu^5r^1n^1$. From inter, between, and stérnon, the sternum. Situated between different portions of the sternum. [a, 29.]

INTERSTICE, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-sti^5s$, $I^2n-tu^5r-sti^5s$. Lat., interstitium (from intersistere, to stand still in the middle). Fr., i. Ger., Zwischenraum, Zwischenstand. 1. A small gap or interval between two adjacent bodies. 2. In botany, (a) an air-space, especially one smaller than the surrounding cells. Cf. Air-cells (3d def.) and LACUNA; and (b) the vallicula in the Umbelliferae. 3. An old term for an intermission of twelve hours in the course of a fever. [B, 123, 229 (a, 24); L, 50 (a, 14).]—Lacunar i. See ARÉOLA (3d def.).

INTERSTITIAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-sti^5sh^1a^1$. From interstitium, a space between. Fr., interstitiel. Ger., interstitiell. 1. Disseminated through the substance of an organ or part; of an inflammation, affecting the connective tissue of an organ. 2. Pertaining to that form of growth which consists in the interposition of new elements between old ones instead of in addition to the surface. [B, 291 (a, 24).] Cf. INTERCALARY. 3. Of pathological processes, occupying the space between the essential parts of an organ which constitutes its proper tissue; opposed to parenchymatous. [B.]

INTERSTITIUM (Lat.), n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-sti^5sh(sti^2t)^1i^2$, $u^3m(u^4m)$. 1. See INTERSTICE. 2. An interposed part or body. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. ciliare. See Ciliary LIGAMENT.—Interstitia intercostalia. See Intercostal SPACES.—Interstitia interossea metacarpi. The spaces between the metacarpal bones. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Interstitia interossea metatarsi. The spaces between the metatarsal bones. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. interosseum antibrachii. The space between the radius and ulna. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. interosseum cruris. The space between the tibia and fibula. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. jugulare. Fr., interstie jugulaire. Ger., Gurgelzwischenraum. See JUGULUM.—I. thyreo-hyo-epiglotticum. The space between the hyo-epiglottic and the thyreo-epiglottic and middle thyreo-hyoid ligaments. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

INTERSUPERCILIARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-su^2p-u^5r-si^2i^2i^2-a-r$. Situated between the superciliary ridges. [a, 29.]

INTERTARSAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ta^5r^1s^1$. From inter, between, and tarsus (q. v.). Situated between adjacent tarsal bones.

INTERTIBIALIS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n-tu^5r-ti^2b(teb)-i^2-a(a^2)li^5s$. Gen., -alis. From inter, between, and tibialis, pertaining to the tibia. A muscle found in some of the lower animals, attached to both tibiae and passing across the sphincter cloacae; an adductor of the legs. [L, 14.]

INTERTINCTUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-ti^2n^2kt^1u^3s(u^4s)$. From inter, between, and tingere, to wet. See DISCRETE (1st def.).

INTERTRABECULA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-tra^2b(trab^2b)-e^2k(u^1n^1)a^2$. From inter, between, and trabecula, a little beam. A median cartilaginous bar that sometimes connects the trabeculae of the cranium in front. [L, 294.]

INTERTRACHELIAN, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tra^2k-el(i)^2-a^2n$. Lat., intertracheianus (from inter, between, and tráxhlos, the throat). Fr., intertrachéen. Situated between the cervical vertebrae. [L, 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

INTERTRAGICUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-tra^2j(trag^2g)-i^2k(u^1n^1)s(u^4s)$. From inter, between, and tráxhlos, like a goat. Fr., dilatateur de la conque. Of Jung, a muscle on the anterior surface of the anterior wall of the cartilage of the external auditory canal. It passes obliquely over the lateral fissures in the cartilage. [L, 31, 332 (a, 29).]

INTERTRANSVERSAIRE (Fr.), adj. and n. $A^2n^2-te^2r-tra^2ns-ve^2r-sa^2r$. 1. (Adj.) See INTERTRANSVERSE. 2. (N.) See INTERTRANSVERSALIS and INTERTRANSVERSARIUS.—I. du cou. See INTERTRANSVERSALIS (n.).

INTERTRANSVERSALIS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-tra^2ns-(tra^2ns)-vu^5r(we^2r)-sa(sa^2)li^5s$. Gen., -alis. Intertransverse; as a n. (Fr., intertransverse du cou), and in the m. pl. intertransversales (Fr., intercervicaux; Ger., obere und untere Quermuskeln des Halses, Zwischenquermuskeln), the analogues of the intertransversarius muscle of man, found in solipeds. [L, 13.]

INTERTRANSVERSARIUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-tra^2ns-(tra^2ns)-vu^5r(we^2r)-sa(sa^2)li^5s(u^4s)$. See INTERTRANSVERSE; as a n., a muscle which passes nearly vertically from the transverse process of one vertebra to the transverse process of the vertebra immediately below. [L, 31, 142, 332.]—Intertransversarii anteriores. See Intertransversarii laterales.—Intertransversarii breves. A generic term embracing the intertransversarii colli postici, the intertransversarii dorsi, the interaccessorii, and the rectus capitis lateralis. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Intertransversarii colli antici. The anterior fibres of the intertransversarii in the cervical regions. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Intertransversarii colli postici. The posterior fibres of the intertransversarii in the cervical region. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Intertransversarii laterales. The fibres of the intertransversarii in the lumbar region which lie between the transverse processes and are in series with the levatores costarum. [L, 142, 332 (a, 29).]—Intertransversarii longi. A generic term embracing the median fasciculi of the longissimus dorsi, transversalis cervicis, and the trachelo-mastoid. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—Intertransversarii posteriores. See INTERACCESSORII.

INTERTRANSVERSE, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tra^2ns-vu^5rs^1$. Lat., intertransversalis, intertransversarius (from inter, between, and transvertere, to turn across). Fr., intertransverse. Ger., intertransversal. Situated between the transverse processes of the vertebrae. [a, 29.]

INTERTRIGINOUS, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tri^2j^2i^2n-u^3s$. From intertrigo, a chafing. Fr., intertrigineux. Pertaining to or of the nature of intertrigo. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTERTRIGO (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-tri(tre)^1go$. Gen., -triginis. From inter, between, and terere, to rub. Fr., écorchure. Ger., Fratt. It., intertrigine. Sp., i. Syn.: paratrigna. A chafing or galling of the skin from the friction of two apposed surfaces, and the macerating and irritating effect of accumulated sweat. It is attended with erythema and usually with a foul-smelling secretion. [G.]—I. ani, I. podicis. I. of the anus.

INTERTROCHANTERIC, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tro-ka^2n-te^2r-i^2k$. From inter, between, and tróxharrh, a trochanter. Situated between the trochanters. [a, 14.]

INTERTROPICAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tro^2p-i^2k^1$. From inter, between, and trópiós, tropical. Fr., i. Occurring between the tropics. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

INTERTUBULAR, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-tu^2b^1u^1a^3r$. From inter, between, and tubulus, a tubule. Situated between tubules. [a, 14.]

INTERURETERIC, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-u^2-re^2t-e^2r-i^2k$. From inter, between, and óurrh, the ureter. Situated between the ureters. [Rockwell, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," July 17, 1886, p. 82.] See I. BAR.

INTERUTEROPLACENTAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-u^2r-e^2r-o-pla^2s-e^2n^1t^1$. From inter, between, uterus, the womb, and placenta (q. v.). Situated between the uterus and the placenta. [a, 14.]

INTERVAGINAL, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-va^2j^2i^2n^1$. From inter, between, and vagina, a sheath. Situated between sheaths.

INTERVAL, n. $I^2n-tu^5r-v^1$. Lat., intervallum (from inter, between, and vallum, a breastwork). Fr., intervalle. Ger., Intervall. 1. A space between places, an interstice. 2. A remission of a disease. [a, 14.]—Focal i. Fr., intervalle focale. Ger., focales Intervall. That i. within which a homocentric beam of light, after refraction by an asymmetric surface, undergoes its greatest concentration. It is bounded by the anterior and posterior focal lines, which include all the rays. [F.]—Inter-mesoblastic i. The space between the two layers of the mesoblast.—Interorbital i. The distance between the two dacrya. [L, 149, 150 (a, 29).]—Lucid i. The i. between two paroxysms, in periodic or recurrent insanity, in which the patient is sane and responsible. [a, 40.]—Orbital i. See Interorbital i.

INTERVALLARY, adj. $I^2n-tu^5r-va^2i^2a^2r-i^2$. Occurring in the interval between the paroxysms of a disease (see Epileptic INSANIRY). [D, 36.]

INTERVALLUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2n-tu^5r(te^2r)-va^2i(wa^2)li^5m$ (lu^4m). See INTERVAL.—Intervalla cellularia. The spaces between constituents of organs or tissues, particularly the spaces in areolar tissue. [L, 349 (a, 29).]—Intervalla intercostalia. The intercostal spaces. [A, 322.]—I. lucidum. See LUCID INTERVAL.

INTRAVENTRICULAR, adj. I²n-tra³-ve²n²-tri²k²-u²-la³r. From intra, within, and ventriculus, a ventricle. Fr., intra-ventriculaire. Situated or occurring within a ventricle.

INTRAVERTEBRAL, adj. I²n-tra³-vu²rt²-e²b²-r²l. From intra, within, and vertebra (q. v.). See INTRASPINAL.

INTRAVERTEBRATED, adj. I²n-tra³-vu²rt²-e²-brat²-e²d. From intra, within, and vertebratus, articulated. Fr., intravertébré. Of G. St.-Hilaire, furnished with a vertebral column. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

INTRA-VESICAL, adj. I²n-tra³-ve²s²/i²-k²l. From intra, within, and vesica, the bladder. Situated or occurring within or forced into the bladder.

INTRAVILLOUS, adj. I²n-tra³-vi²l²-u³s. From intra, within, and villus (q. v.). Fr., intravilleux. Situated within a villus.

INTRAVITAL, adj. I²n-tra³-vi²-t²l. From intra, during, and vita, life. Ger., i. Occurring during life.

INTRICATE, adj. I²n-tri²-ke²t. Lat., intricatus (from intricare, to entangle). Fr., compliqué. Ger., verwebt. Interlaced, interwoven, entangled. The Intricata of Nylander are a series of the Lichenaceae, consisting of the Koccolletæ, Usneæ, Ramalinæ, and Cetrariæ. [B, 19, 123, 170 (a, 24).]

INTRICATION, n. I²n-tri²-ka²/shu²n. From intricare, to entangle. The process of rendering or becoming or the state of being intricate.

INTRICATURA (Lat.), n. f. I²n-tri²(tre)-ka²t(ka³t)-u²/ra². From intricare, to entangle. Ger., Verwickelung. 1. An interlacing or interweaving. 2. A matting or entanglement of the hair. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]—I. nervorum opticum. See CHIASMA.

INTRINSECI (Lat.), n. m. pl. I²n-tri²n²/se²-si(ke). Of Linnaeus, diseases of the internal organs. [a, 40.]

INTRINSIC, adj. I²n-tri²n²/si²k. Lat., intrinsecus. Fr., intrinsèque. Ger., innerlich. Springing from within, not of external origin; of a muscle, having both its origin and its insertion in or on a single organ.

INTRITUM (Lat.), n. n. I²n-tri²(tre)-tu²m(tu⁴m). From interere, to rub into. A substance rubbed in. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INTROCESSION, n. I²n-tro²-se²sh²/u²n. From introcedere, to enter. A sinking in or depression of a part. [a, 41.]

a, CHAMBERS'S STEM AND INTRODUCER; b, ARNOLD'S TENT INTRODUCER; c, BARNES'S TAMPON INTRODUCER.

INTRODUCER, n. I²n-tro²-du²s²/u²r. From introducere, to lead into. An instrument for inserting anything.

INTRODUCTION, n. I^2n -tro-du²k/shu²n. Lat., introductio (from introducere, to lead into). Fr., i. Ger., Einführung. The act of inserting anything.

INTROFLEXED, adj. I^2n -tro-fle²xt'. Lat., introflexus (from intro, inwardly, and flectere, to bend). Fr., introfléchi. Ger., einwärtsgebogen. Curved inward. [B, 19, 123 (a, 24).] See INFLEXED.

INTROITUS (Lat.), n. m. I^2n -tro(tro²)²u²s(u⁴s). Gen., -troitus. From introire, to go in. The entrance or mouth of a canal or cavity. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. canalis sacralis. The opening at the termination of the spinal canal at the lower end of the sacrum. [L, 115 (a, 29).]—I. laryngis. The upper opening of the larynx. [a, 29].—I. pelvis. See Pelvic INLET.—I. vaginae. Fr., entrée du vagin (ou vaginales). Ger., Scheideneingang. The external orifice of the vagina.

INTROMISSION, n. I^2n -tro-mi²sh'u²n. From intromittere, to send in. Fr., i. Ger., Einschiebung. An act of insertion, especially of the penis into the vagina. [L, 49.]

INTROMITTENT, adj. I^2n -tro-mi²t'e²nt. Serving for intromission.

INTROPELVIMÈTRE (Fr.), n. A^2n^2 -tro-pe²l-ve-me²tr'. From intro, internally, pelvis (q. v.), and mètre, a measure. See INTERNAL PELVIMETER.

INTROSE, adj. I^2n -tro²rs'. Lat., introrsus (from intro, inwardly, and versus, turned). Fr., i. Of an anther, turned toward the axis. [B, 1, 77, 123 (a, 24).] Cf. EXTROSE.

INTROSION (Fr.), n. A^2n^2 -tro²rsi²-o²n². The act of turning inward ; of C. Robin, the embryological process of invagination of the mesoderm and the endoderm by which follicles, etc., are formed. [A, 385.]

INTROSUSCEPTIO (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -tro(tro²)-su²s(su⁴s)-se²p-(ke²p)/shi²(ti²)-o. Gen., -on'is. From intro, inwardly, and suscipere, to catch up. Intussusception ; in Young's classification of diseases, a genus of the Ectopice. [L, 50, 290 (a, 14) ; a, 45.]

INTROVENED, adj. I^2n -tro-vand'. Characterized by introversion. [a, 41.]

INTROVENIUM (Lat.), n. n. I^2n -tro(tro²)-ve(va²)²ni²-u²m(u⁴m). From intro, internally, and vena, a vein. The condition of having the veins hidden (said of plant organs in which the veins are so buried in parenchyma as to be hardly visible externally). [B, 121 (a, 35).]

INTROVERSION, n. I^2n -tro-vu²r'zhu²n. From intro, inwardly, and vertere, to turn. Ger., Einwärtskehrung. The process of rendering or becoming or the state of being sunken in or dimpled (said of the wall of a hollow organ).

INTRUSE, INTRUSIVE, adj's. I^2n -tru²s'-tru²s'i²v'. Lat., intrusus (from intrudere, to thrust in). Pushed inward (said, for instance, when the base of a fruit is so concave that the pericarp is apparently pushed inward by the stem at its point of attachment). [B, 19 (a, 35).]

INTSIA (Lat.), n. f. I^2n 'si²-a². The genus Afzelia. [B, 121 (a, 35).]—I. ambolensis. A species found on the islands of the Indian Archipelago. The bark is used in diarrhœa, dysentery, and leucorrhœa. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

INTUBATION, n. I^2n -tu²-ba²shu²n. From in, into, and tubus, a tube. Fr., tubage. Ger., I. See CATHETERISM.—I. of the larynx. Fr., tubage du larynx. O'Dwyer's method of introducing into the larynx and trachea metallic tubes of suitable shape and size, for the relief of obstruction of respiration in this part of the respiratory tract. [J. O'Dwyer, "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Aug. 8, Nov. 28, 1885, p. 145 (a, 40).]—Nasal I. The introduction of metallic and soft-rubber tubes of proper shape and size into the nares for fracture, hemorrhage, etc., as proposed by Goodwillie in 1887. [a, 40.]

INTUBUM (Lat.), n. n. I^2n 'tu²b(tu⁴b)-u²m(u⁴m). Gr., έντροβον. Of Pliny, see INTRYBUM.

INTUBUS (Lat.), n. m. I^2n 'tu²b(tu⁴b)-u²s(u⁴s). See INTYBUS.

INTUTION, n. I^2n -tu²-i²sh'u²n. From intueri, to look at. The process of rapid and more or less unconscious reasoning by which a person may arrive at the comprehension of an intricate subject.

INTUMESCENCE, n. I^2n -tu²-me²s'e²ns. Lat., intumescencia (from intumescere, to swell). Fr., i. Ger., Intumescenz, Anschwellung. Swelling, tumefaction.—Braehial I. See Cervical ENLARGEMENT.—Lumbo-sacral I. See LUMBAR ENLARGEMENT.

INTUMESCENTIA (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -tu²(tu⁴)-me²s-se²n(ke²n)/shi²(ti²)-a². See INTUMESCENCE and ENLARGEMENT. The Intumescencia, in Cullen's classification of diseases, are an order of the Cachexie. [L, 104.]—I. cervicalis. See Cervical ENLARGEMENT.—I. gangliiformis (seu gangliiformis) nervi facialis (seu vestibuli) (Scarpæ). A small, grayish-red swelling containing numerous ganglion cells situated at the point of connection between the facial nerve and the vestibular branch of the auditory nerve, near where the latter enters the internal auditory meatus. [F ; Schwalbe(a, 29).]—I. gangliosa nervum tympanicum ambiens. An enlargement upon the tympanic branch of the glossopharyngeal nerve, supposed to be the remains of a foetal artery. [a, 40.]—I. lactea mammarum. Distention of the breasts with milk.—I. Henis. Swelling of the spleen.—I. lumbalis. See Lumbar ENLARGEMENT.—I. maligna. See AGRIOPHYMA.—I. medullæ spinalis cervicalis. See Cervical ENLARGEMENT.—I. medullæ spinalis inferior (seu lumbalis). See Lumbar ENLARGEMENT.—I. medullæ spinalis superior. See Cervical ENLARGEMENT.—I. plana nervi trigemini, I. semitunaris. See Gasserian GANGLION.

INTURIS (Lat.), n. m. I^2n -tu²(tu⁴)²ri²s. The genus Capparis. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

INTUSSUSCEPTION, n. I^2n -tu²s-su²s-se²p/shu²n. Lat., intussusceptio (from intus, within, and suscipere, to catch up). Fr., i. Ger., Intussusception. 1. See INCEPTION, IMBIBITION, and ABSORPTION. 2. The growth of cells or of the cell-wall by the deposition of molecules between those already existing. [B, 1, 229 (a, 24) ; J.] 3. The invagination of one portion of an organ, especially the intestine, into a contiguous portion, usually below it. [E.] 4. In chemistry, the taking in of new matter into a compound. [A, 12.]—Agonal I. An i. (3d def.) occurring during the death-struggle. [Eichhorst (A, 319 [a, 21]).]—Ascending I. See Retrograde i.—Descending I. See Progressive i.—Progressive I. An i. in which the upper portion of the intestine is invaginated in the lower part. [A, 319 (a, 40).]—Regressive I., Retrograde I. The form of i. in which the lower portion of the intestine is invaginated in the upper portion. [A, 319 (a, 40).]—Uterine I. Introversion of the uterus.

INTUSSUSCEPTUM (Lat.), n. n. I^2n -tu²s(tu⁴s)-su²s(su⁴s)-se²p-(ke²p)/tu²m(tu⁴m). The segment of intestine which is invaginated in intussusception. [E.]

INTUSSUSCIPENS (Lat.), n. f. I^2n -tu²s(tu⁴s)-su²s(su⁴s)-si²p-(ki²p)/i²-e²nz(ans). Gen., -ent'is. The invaginating portion of the bowel in intussusception. [E.]

INTYBUM (Lat.), n. n. I^2n 'ti²b(tu⁴b)-u²m(u⁴m). Gr., έντροβον. Of the ancients, the Cichorium intybus. [B, 315 (a, 35).]

INTYBUS (Lat.), n. m. I^2n 'ti²b(tu⁴b)-u²s(u⁴s). Gr., έντροβον. The Cichorium i. [B, 78 (a, 14).]—I. angustans. The Lactuca villosa. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. hortensis (seu sativus). The Cichorium endivia. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Semen intybi. The fruit of Cichorium i. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

INUL, n. I^2n 'u²l. See INULA helenium.

INULÁ (Lat.), n. f. I^2n 'u²(u⁴)-la². Gr., ἐλίειον. Fr., inule, aunée, aunée. Ger., Alant (1st def.), Alantwurzel (2d def.). 1. Of Linnæus, a genus of the Inuleæ (Fr., inuléæ), tribe Inuloideæ. The former are : Of Cassini, the 12th tribe of the Synanthereæ (Compositæ). The Inuleæ of Presl are a division of the Compositæ, consisting of Pulicaria, Gnaphalium, and Filago. 2. Of the U. S. Ph., elecampane-root (see also I. helenium). 3. The ancient Latin name for I. helenium. [B, 1, 5, 19, 34, 42, 114, 121, 173, 180 (a, 24, a, 35).]—Common I. See I. helenium.—I. aspera. The I. salicina, var. β , latifolia. [B, 214.]—I. bifrons. A species found in Southern Europe, formerly used in an antodontalgic mixture called Paraguay-roux. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. britannica, I. britannica. Ger., gemeiner Alant, Wiesentalant. The κόντζα τρίπη, of Dioscorides ; a species found throughout continental Europe, Persia, and Siberia, but not, according to De Candolle, in Great Britain, its name being derived from βρίτάνικη [Dalechamp]. Its properties are like those of I. viscosa. The flowers have been substituted for those of Arnica montana. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. canadensis. The Erigeron canadense. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. canariensis. See I. crithmifolia.—I. chinensis. A species found about China, having stimulant, tonic, antispasmodic, sedative, and stomachic properties, and used in hæmoptysis, colic, etc. The juice, or the coarsely powdered herb, is applied to carbuncles, buboes, deaf ears, and sore eyes. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 39).]—I. conyza. See CONYZA squarrosa.—I. conyzæa. The Pulicaria dysenterica. [B, 180 (a, 35).]—I. conyzoides. Of Desfontaines, the Pulicaria odora. [B, 214 (a, 35).]—I. crispa. Fr., aunée (ou aunée, ou inule) crépue. 1. Of Persoon and Desfontaines, the Pulicaria crispa. 2. Of Siebthorpe, the Pulicaria undulata. [B, 214 ; B, 42, 173 (a, 24).]—I. crithmifolia, I. crithmoides. Ger., meerfechelähnlicher Alant. Golden samphire ; a species found on rocky coasts of the Atlantic Ocean in Europe, and along the Mediterranean Sea. It contains much sodium carbonate, and was formerly used as a diuretic. [B, 64, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—I. cylindrica. See PULICARIA vulgaris.—I. dumetorum. The Pulicaria odora. [B, 214.]—I. dysenterica. The Pulicaria dysenterica. [B, 214.]—I. germanica. Ger., deutscher Alant. 1. Of De Candolle, a white-flowered variety of I. squarrosa. 2. Of Linnæus, a species the herb of which has a strong, rather unpleasant odor, and was once official in European medicine as herba inule germanicæ (seu inule palatinæ). [B, 64, 180, 214, 309 (a, 35).]—I. gnaphaloides. See PULICARIA crispa.—I. graveolens. Ger., starkkriechender Alant. A species found in Southern Europe, having properties like those of I. viscosa. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. helenium. Fr., ailluvie, aunée, inule, aromate germanique, enula campana, œil de cheval, panacée de Chiron. Ger., Alant, Brustalant, Helenekraut, Glockenwurz. Elf- (or else-) dock, horse-elder, elecampane ; a species indigenous to Europe and naturalized in the United States. The root, the ἐλίειον of the Greeks, or elecampane-root (q. v.), contains a volatile oil that is powerfully expectorant, also inulin, and helenin. [B, 5, 77, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24) ; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxx (a, 39).]—I. hirta. Ger., steifhaariger Alant. A species found in Europe and Siberia, sometimes mistaken for Arnica montana. [B, 64, 180 (a, 24).]—I. oculifolii Christi. Ger., Christauge. Christ's eye, hoary ilebane ; a species found in Austria. [B, 64, 275 (a, 24).]—I. odora. See PULICARIA odora.—I. oetteliana. See I. britannica.—I. pulicaria. The Pulicaria dysenterica. [B, 42, 180 (a, 35).]—I. salicina. A species found in the mountainous parts of Europe. The flowers were formerly used like arnica flowers, and the root, radix bubonii lutei, was sometimes used medicinally. [B, 180 (a, 24), 214.]—I. saxatilis. Of Lamarck, the Jasonia glutinosa. [B, 214 (a, 35).]—I. spiræifolia. A form of I. squarrosa, with a thick corymb terminating the stem. [B, 64 (a, 35).]—I. squarrosa. See CONYZA squarrosa.—I. uliginosa. The Pulicaria vulgaris. [B, 214.]—I. undulata. The Pulicaria undulata. [B, 214.]—I. viscosa. Ger., klebriger Alant. The koviza meýaly, of Dioscorides, formerly used in colic, dysmenorrhœa, dysuria, and epilepsy, and as an external application to snake-bites and tumors. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—Oleum inule compositum [Sp. Ph., 1798]. Fr., huile d'auinée composée. A preparation made by mixing 3 parts each of elecampane root, valerian root, the root of Lappa major, Hypericum, Artemisia odorata, Artemisia absinthium, Melissa calamintha, Balsamita odorata, sweet marjoram, round-leaved mint, savine, sage, and elder, 2 parts each of chamomile, melilotus, and Lavandula stœchas, 6 each of bay-leaves, the leaves of Sambucus ebulus, rosemary, and rue, 1 part each of cumin, fenugreek, and seeds of Urtica pilulifera, and 192 parts of olive-oil, macerating, and boiling till all moisture is expelled. [B, 119.]—Radix inule [Dan. Ph., Swed. Ph.] (helenii). The root of I. helenium. [B, 95.]—Unguentum inule. Fr., onguent d'auinée. Syn.: unguentum enule (see enulatum). An ointment made by boiling together 16 parts of elecampane rhizome, 8 of lard, and 4 of olive-oil, and adding 1 part each of yellow wax and turpentine [Brunsw. Ph., 1777, Würtemb. Ph., 1798]; or by melting together 512 parts of oleum inule compositum, 128 of yellow wax, 32 of lard, and adding 11 of liquid styrax and 6 of mastic [Sp. Ph., 1798.] Used in scabies. [B, 119.]

INULIC ACID, n. $I^{2n}u^{2l}i^{2k}$. Alantic acid. [B.]

INULIN, n. $I^{2n}u^{2l}i^{2n}$. From inula, elecampane. Fr., inuline. Ger., I. Syn.: alantin. A carbohydrate, $C_6H_{10}O_5$, analogous to starch occurring in the roots of several of the Compositae, Inula helenium, Arnica montana, Taraxacum, etc. It dissolves in hot water, from which, on cooling, it is precipitated unchanged as a white powder. Its solution rotates polarized light to the left, and on fermentation, continued ebullition, or treatment by acids, it yields levulose. It also differs from starch in turning yellow, not blue, with iodine. [B, 4, 5, 93.]

INULOID, n. $I^{2n}u^{2l}oid$. Fr., inuloïde. A substance, $C_6H_{10}O_5 + H_2O$, allied to inulin, but much more readily soluble in water. It is found in the roots of composite plants. [B, 18 (a, 24).]

INULOL, n. $I^{2n}u^{2l}ol$. Alant camphor. [B, 8.]

INUNCANS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2(u^{4n}2)ka^{2n}z(ka^{3n}s)$. From inuncare, to hook. Fr., accrochant. Covered with little hooked hairs (said of the surface of leaves). [B, 1, 19 (a, 24).]

INUNCTION, n. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2k/shu^{2n}$. Lat., inunctio (from inungere, to anoint). Ger., I., Einsalbung, Einschmierung, Einfettung. The act of rubbing in ointment; friction with the hand to facilitate the cutaneous absorption of liniments, salves, etc. [L, 30, 50, 107 (a, 14).]—Mercurial i. See HYDRARGYRENTRIPSIS.

INUNCTUS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2k(u^{4n}2k)/tu^{2n}(tu^{4n}s)$. From inungere, to anoint. Ger., ölgänzend. Shining as if smeared with oil (said of leaves, etc.). [B, 123 (a, 24).]

INUNDATE, INUNDATED, adj's. $I^{2n}u^{2n}dat$, $-dat-e^{2d}$. Lat., inundatus (from inundare, to overflow). Fr., inondé. Ger., überschwemmt. Flooded (said of plants growing on places sometimes covered with water and sometimes dry). The Inundate of Linnaeus are an order comprising the Naiadeæ, Haloragææ, etc. [B, 121 (a, 35); B, 123 (a, 24).]

INUNGIS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2(u^{4n}2)gw^{2n}s$. From in neg., and unguis, a nail. Having no nails, as in the Gecko i. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

INUSTION, n. $I^{2n}u^{2n}st/yn^{2n}$. Lat., inustio (from inurere, to burn in). 1. A burning in; deep cauterization. 2. A caustic. 3. The heat of inflammation. [A, 322; L, 107.]

INUSTORIUM (Lat.), n. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2(u^{4n}2)to^{2n}ri^{2n}u^{2n}m(u^{4n}m)$. See CAUTERY.

INUSTUM (Lat.), n. $I^{2n}u^{2n}2(u^{4n}2)tu^{2n}m(u^{4n}m)$. See BURN.

INVAGINATE, INVAGINATED, adj's. $I^{2n}va^{2j}i^{2n}at$, $-at-e^{2d}$. From in, into, and vagina, a scabbard. 1. Sheathed. 2. Affected with intussusception. [L, 343.]

INVAGINATION, n. $I^{2n}va^{2j}i^{2n}a/shu^{2n}$. Lat., invaginatio. Fr., i. Ger., I., Einscheidung. A folding in of anything upon itself (see INTUSSUSCEPTION), in embryology, that stage of a (mammalian) blastoderm in which it is so folded in upon itself as to form two layers. [A, 23.]—Agonate i. (Ger.). See AGONAL INTUSSUSCEPTION.—Darmi' (Ger.). See INTUSSUSCEPTION.—Embolic i. The process in the segmentation of the ovum which consists in one half of the blastosphere being pushed in toward the other half so as to form a gastrula. [L, 353 (a, 40).]—Entzündliche i. (Ger.). Inflammatory intussusception. [Eichhorst (A, 319 (a, 21)).]—Epibolie i. The growth of the epiblast around the hypoblast in the formation of the gastrula of the embryo. [L, 356 (a, 39).]—I. of a hernial sac. The i. of the dependent end of a hernial sac by a tent or compress, with intent to secure inflammatory adhesion and obliteration of the sac. [a, 40.]—Permanente i. (Ger.). Vital i. I. of the intestine made permanent by inflammatory adhesion of the serous surfaces. [A, 319 (a, 40).]

INVAGINATOR, n. $I^{2n}va^{2j}i^{2n}a-to^{2n}$. A cylinder or instrument of any kind used for invaginating the sac in operations for the radical cure of hernia. [a, 40.]

INVALESCENCE, n. $I^{2n}va^{2l}e^{2n}s/e^{2n}s$. Lat., invalescentia (from invalescere, to become strong). See CONVALESCENCE.

INVALID, n. $I^{2n}va^{2l}i^{2d}$. Lat., invalidus. Fr., invalidé. Ger., I. A person who is out of health.

INVALIDING, n. $I^{2n}va^{2l}i^{2d}i^{2n}2$. The act of putting a person off duty on account of ill-health.

INVALIDISM, n. $I^{2n}va^{2l}i^{2d}i^{2n}2m$. Fr., invalidisme. Ger., Invalidität. The state of being an invalid.

INVASION, n. $I^{2n}va^{2h}2u^{2n}$. Lat., invasio (from invadere, to invade). Fr., i. Ger., I., Einfall, Anfall. 1. The onset of a disease. 2. The process by which a particular organ or part becomes affected with disease or parasites existing elsewhere in the organism.

INVENOSE, adj. $I^{2n}ven/os$. Lat., invenosus (from in neg., and vena, a vein. Fr., inveiné. Ger., venentos, aderlos. Without veins or nerves (said of leaves). [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INVERECUNDUS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}ve^{2r}(we^{2r})e^{2n}(ku^{4n}n)/du^{2n}(du^{4n}s)$. From in neg., and verecundus, feeling shame. Fr., effronté, impudent. Ger., *unverschäm*t, schamlos. See PUDIC.

INVERLEITHEN, n. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}leth-e^{2n}$. A place in Scotland, where there is a spring containing sodium chloride and free carbonic acid. [L, 49 (a, 43).]

INVERMINATION, n. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}mi^{2n}a/shu^{2n}$. From in, into, and vermis, a worm. The acquisition of intestinal worms.

INVERSE, adj. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}s'$. Fr., i. See INVERTED.

INVERSIO (Lat.), n. f. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}(we^{2r})si^{2n}o$. Gen., -o'nis. See INVERSION.—I. palpebrarum. See ENTROPION.—I. testium. See INVERSION of the testicles.—I. uteri. See INVERSION of the uterus.—I. vaginae. Prolapse of the vagina. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—I. viscerum. See TRANSPOSITION of the viscera.—I. vesicæ. See CYSTANASTROPHE.—I. vesicæ urinariæ fissæ. See EXTROPHY of the bladder.

INVERSION, n. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}zhu^{2n}$. Gr., ἀναστροφή. Lat., inversio (from invertere, to turn upside down). Fr., i., renversement. Ger., I., Umstülpung, Umkehrung, Invertierung, Einwärtskehrung. It., inversione. Sp., inversión. 1. A reversal of the natural order of things, especially a turning upside down. 2. In optics, the transformation of a body having a specific rotary action on the plane of polarization into a body or bodies which have a directly opposite rotary action. [B.] 3. Of a hollow organ, its partial or complete turning inside out.—Acute i. of the uterus. Fr., i. utérine récente. The rapid or recent, partial or complete, invagination of the upper portion of the uterus through the lower. [a, 40.]—Chronic i. of the uterus. Ger., veraltete I. der Gebärmutter. I. of the uterus of long standing.—Complete i. of the uterus. Lat., inversio uteri completa. Fr., prolapsus de l'utérus renversé. Ger., vollkommene Umstülpung der Gebärmutter. That degree of i. of the uterus in which the fundus uteri escapes through the os uteri externum.—General i. See TRANSPOSITION of the viscera.—Incomplete i. of the uterus. Lat., inversio uteri incompleta. Ger., unvollkommene Umstülpung der Gebärmutter. Syn.: partial i. Any degree of i. of the uterus short of complete i. (q. v.)—I. of the bladder. See CYSTANASTROPHE.—I. of the canal of the cervix uteri. See ENTROPION of the cervix (or os) uteri.—I. of the eyelashes. A malposition of the eyelashes so that they rub against the cornea. [a, 29.]—I. of the testicles. Lat., inversio testium. That change of the attitude of the testicles in which the free edges turn inward instead of forward. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—I. of the uterus. Lat., inversio uteri. Fr., i. utérine, renversement de l'utérus. Ger., Umstülpung der Gebärmutter. A partial or complete turning of the uterus inside out. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—I. of the viscera. See TRANSPOSITION of the viscera.—I. of the eyelid. See ENTROPION.—Splanchnic i. Fr., i. splanchnique. See TRANSPOSITION of the viscera.—Uterine i. See I. of the uterus.—Veraltete I. der Gebärmutter (Ger.). See Chronic i. of the uterus.—Vesical i. See CYSTANASTROPHE.

INVERSUS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}(we^{2r})su^{2n}(su^{4n}s)$. From invertere, to turn in. See INVERTED.

INVERTEBRAL, INVERTEBRATE, adj's. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}t/e^{2n}br^{2n}$. Lat., invertibratus (from in, neg., and vertebra [q. v.]). Fr., invertébré. Ger., wirbellos. Having no vertebral column. The Invertebrata are animals so characterized. [B, 28 (a, 27); L, 343.]

INVERTED, adj. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}t/e^{2d}$. Lat., inversus (from invertere, to turn upside down). Fr., inverse. Ger., umgekehrt, verkehrt, gestürzt. 1. Turned in the opposite direction to the usual one, as in an ovary with its apex directed downward. [B, 1, 77, 123 (a, 24).] 2. Turned inside out.

INVERTENS (Lat.), adj. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}(we^{2r})te^{2n}z(tans)$. From invertere, to turn upside down. Fr., invertent, rabattu (1st def.). Ger., niederhängend (1st def.), umändernd (2d def.). 1. Of De Candolle, hanging downward (said of leaves, invertentia folia, which during sleep hang downward, but touch by their upper surfaces). [B, 1, 19 (a, 24).] 2. Of remedies, changing the character of disease, also acting as antacids. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

INVERTIN, n. $I^{2n}vu^{2r}t-i^{2n}$. From invertere, to turn upside down. Fr., invertine. Ger., I. A ferment extracted from yeast by means of alcohol. According to C. Bernard, it also occurs in the intestinal juice. It is an amorphous, colorless body, soluble in water and highly pyretogenic. It was supposed by Bernard to convert cane-sugar into levulose, but more recently it has been found not to affect starch or dextrin solutions. [K, 26; "Sem. méd." Nov. 13, 1889 (a, 18); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 39).]

INVERTIRUNG (Ger.), n. $I^{2n}fe^{2r}tr'er/un^{2n}$. See INVERSION.

INVESTING, adj. $I^{2n}ve^{2st}i^{2n}2$. From in, in, and vestire, to clothe. Covering, inclosing.

INVESTITURE, INVESTMENT, n's. $I^{2n}ve^{2st}i^{2n}2u^{2r}$, $-me^{2n}t$. Lat., investitura. Ger., Umkleidung. A covering or sheath. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—Capsular i. A capsule or a structure resembling or having the function of a capsule. [L.]—Fibrous i. of the suprarenal capsule. An i. consisting of an outer loose part and an inner part which is very closely adherent to the capsule. It is made up of connective tissue, the deeper layers of which contain unstriated muscle fibres. It is continuous with the septa which run into and help to form the substance of the organ. [C.]—Myelium i. See Medullary SHEATH.

INVETERATE, adj. $I^2n-v\epsilon^2t^2e^2r$ -at. Gr. $\chi\rho\acute{o}\nu\iota\omicron\varsigma$ (from $\chi\rho\acute{o}\nu\omicron\varsigma$, time). Lat., inveteratus (from vetere, to render old). Fr., invétéré. Ger., eingewurzelt, hartnäckig. Of long duration and difficult to overcome. [a, 45.]

INVIRILITY, n. $I^2n-vi^2r^2i^2l^2i^2t^2$. From in neg., and virilitas, manhood. Absence of virility. [L, 56.]

INVISANS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-vi^2s(wi^2s)/ka^2nz(ka^2ns)$. From inviscare, to smear with birdlime. Fr., inviscant. Ger., eindickend. Thickening. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

INVISATED, adj. $I^2n-vi^2s^2kat$ -e 2d . From inviscare, to smear with birdlime. Thickened.

INVISICATION, n. $I^2n-vi^2s^2ka$ -shu 2n Lat., inviscatio. 1. A rendering thick and sticky. [L, 50 (a, 14).] 2. See INSALIVATION.

INVIVUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-vi^2(wi^2)u^2s(u^2s)$. From in neg., and via, a way. In botany, see IMPERVIOUS.

INVOLUCEL, n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2se^2l$. Lat., involuticellum (dim. of involuticum). Fr., involute. Ger., Hüllchen. In compound inflorescences, a partial, secondary, or inner involucre subtending the partial clusters. [B, 1, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

INVOLUCellate, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2se^2l$ -at. Lat., involuticellatus. Fr., involute. Provided with an involucre. [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INVOLUCELLUM (Lat.), n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2(u)se^2l(ke^2l)^2l^2m^2(lu^2m)$. See INVOLUCEL.

INVOLUCRAL, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2k^2r^2l$. Lat., involuticralis. Pertaining to an involucre or involucre. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INVOLUCRATE, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2k^2rat$. Lat., involuticratus. Fr., involuté. Ger., gehüllt. Provided with an involucre. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]

INVOLUCRE, n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2lu^2k^2r$. Gr., $\epsilon\iota\lambda\upsilon\mu\alpha$. Lat., involutum (from involvere, to roll to anything). Fr., i. Ger., Hülle, Decke. A spiral collection of bracts around a flower or flower cluster; also the annulus of some Fungi and the cup-shaped external indusia of some ferns. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 24).]—Compound i. Fr., i. composé. An i., as in the Compositae, composed of several rows of leaflets. [B, 77, 104 (a, 24).]—Simple i. Fr., i. simple. An i. composed of one row of bracts. [B, 104 (a, 24).]—General i. The i. at the base of an umbel in contradistinction to an involucre. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—Partial i. See INVOLUCEL.

INVOLUCRIFORMIS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2(u)kri^2fo^2rm^2i^2s$. From involutum (q. v.), and forma, form. Fr., involuticriforme. Of Cassini, resembling an involucre (said of the periclinium). [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INVOLUCRUM (Lat.), n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2(u)kru^2m(kru^2m)$. 1. See INVOLUCRE. 2. The sheath of new-formed bone formed about a sequester of necrosed bone.—Crassum et durum i. oculi. See SCLERA.—Involucra cerebri. Ger., Hirnhäute. The cerebral meninges. [L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. cordis. See PERICARDIUM.—I. corporis vitrei. See RETINA.—I. hepatitis. The outer covering of the liver, by Petréquin separated into two portions, the serosa and the tunica propria or fibrosa. [L, 31 (a, 29).]—I. lingue. The mucous membrane of the tongue. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. membranaceum. Fr., involucres membranaceus. Of Albinus, the decidua reflexa. [A, 45].]—I. nativum. The skin. [G.].—I. nervorum corporis vitrei. See RETINA.—I. nervorum. See PERINEURAIUM.—I. renis succenturiati. See Fibrous INVESTMENT of the suprarenal capsule.—I. retli comparatum. An obsolete term for the retina. [F.]

INVOLUMENTUM (Lat.), n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2(u)me^2nt^2u^2m(u^2m)$. See INVOLUCRE.

INVOLUNTARY, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2n$ -ta 2r $^2i^2$. Lat., involutarius (from in neg., and voluntas, the will). Fr., involontaire. Ger., unwillkürlich. Occurring independently of or against the will.

INVOLUTANS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2t(ut)^2a^2nz(a^2ns)$. From involvere, to roll to anything. Fr., enveloppant. Ger., einwickelnd, einhüllend. Surrounding (said of leaves which apply themselves to the stem during sleep). [B, 1 (a, 24).]

INVOLUTE, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2lu^2t$. Lat., involutus, involutus (from involvere, to roll to anything). Fr., entortillé, involuté, involutif. Ger., eingerollt, eingewickelt. Rolled inward, like the leaf of the apple-tree. [B, 1, 19, 77, 123 (a, 24).]

INVOLUTIFOLIUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)u^2t(ut)^2fol^2io^2l^2i^2u^2s(u^2s)$. Having the leaves folded inward from summit to base. [L, 107 (a, 43).]

INVOLUTION, n. $I^2n-v\omicron^2lu^2shu^2n$. Lat., involutio. Fr., i. Ger., I. Rückbildung. It., involuzione. Sp., involución. 1. A condition or process in which nutrition is incomplete, and in which the original form and function are more or less lost. 2. In embryology, a folding in of a membranous structure, as of the epiblast, as a step in the process of the development of the embryo. 3. The process of retrograde development, especially of the uterus in the puerperium or of the organs in general in old age. [A, 326 (a, 21); D, 3.]—Buccal i. In the embryo, the folding in of the epiblast at the angle formed by the cranial flexure which forms the cavity of the mouth. [Balfour (a, 39).]—I. of the uterus. Fr., retrait de l'utérus, i. utérine. The gradual return of the uterus to its normal size after delivery.—Pituitary i. In the embryo, the ingrowth from the epiblast of the mouth cavity which forms the pituitary body. [Balfour (a, 39).]—Senile i. Senile atrophy.

INVOLUTIVE, adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2u^2t^2i^2v$. Lat., involutivus. Fr., involutif. See INVOLUCRE.

INVOLVENS (Lat.), adj. $I^2n-v\omicron^2l^2(wo^2l)ve^2nz(wans)$. From involvere, to roll to anything. Fr., involvant. Ger., einwickelnd, einhüllend. 1. Involving, enveloping (said, for example, of the close-fitting scales or bracts at the base of the calyx tube in most of the pinks). [B, 123 (a, 24).] 2. Demulcent. [A, 322.]

INWENDIG (Ger.), adj. $I^2n-v\epsilon^2ndi^2g$. See INTERANEUS.

INYLOMA (Lat.), n. $I^2n(en)l^2i^2(u^2l)u^2ma^2$. A more correct form of inohyoma (q. v.).

INYMNENTIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2n(en)im(u^2m)e^2n(an)i(e)^2ti^2s$. A more correct form of inohymenitis (q. v.).

INZUCHT (Ger.), n. $I^2n^2tsucht$. In-breeding. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

IOD (Ger.), n. E-od'. See IODINE and JOD.

IODACETATE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2s^2e^2t$ -at. Fr., iodacétate. A salt of iodicacetic acid. [B, 98 (a, 14).]

IODACETIC ACID, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2s^2e^2t^2i^2k$. Lat., acidum iodoaceticum. Fr., acide iodoacétique (ou iodoacétique). Ger., Jodessigsäure. 1. An acid derived from acetic acid by the substitution of iodine for hydrogen. Three of these substitution compounds are possible: (1) Moniodoacetic acid, $C_2H_3I_1O_2$; (2) Diiodoacetic acid, $C_2H_2I_2O_2$; (3) Triiodoacetic acid, $C_2HI_3O_2$. 2. A pharmaceutical term for a saturated solution of iodine in glacial acetic acid; used for the same purposes as chloroacetic acid. [Bernatzik (A, 319); B.]

IODACETYL, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2s^2e^2t^2i^2l$. Acetyl iodide. [a, 88.]

IODAL, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2l$. Hydride of triiodoacetyl, $C_3I_3O.H$, a body having the same constitution as chloral with iodine substituted for chlorine, and produced by the action of iodine on a mixture of 95-per-cent alcohol and nitric acid. It boils at 25° C., and, when heated with potassium, forms iodoform and formic acid. [B; B, 46, 93 (a, 39, a, 14).]

IODALDEHYDE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2l^2de$ -hid. A substitution compound of acetic aldehyde and iodine. The moniodo-compound, C_2H_3IO , and the triiodo-compound (iodal) C_2HI_3O are known. [B, 2.]

IODALLYL ALCOHOL, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2l^2i^2l$. An alcohol, $C_3H_4I.OH$, crystallizing in needles melting at 160° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODALLYLENE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2l^2i^2l$ -en. A substance, C_3H_3I , obtained by the action of an aqueous solution of iodine and potassium iodide on allylene, and occurring as a liquid of penetrating odor, strongly attacking the eyes and mucous membranes. It boils at 98° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]—I. diiodide. A substance, $C_3H_2I_2$, obtained by shaking up silver allylide with ethereal solution of iodine until decolorization stops, then doubling the iodine and allowing to stand till the iodine color disappears. It forms long acicular crystals. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODAMMONIUM (Ger.), n. E'od-a 2m -mo-ne-um. Ammonium iodide. [a, 38.]

IODANILINE (Fr.), n. E-o-da 2n -ne-len. A crystallizable substance, C_6H_5NI , of vinous odor and burning taste, easily soluble in alcohol, ether, and oil, nearly insoluble in water, obtained by dissolving iodine in aniline. There are two isomeric forms, fusible at 25° to 60° C. respectively. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

IODANTIFEBRINE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2nt\text{-}i^2e^2b^2ren$. From $\iota\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$ (see IODINE), $\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\acute{\iota}$, against, and febris, fever. A compound of iodine and acetanilide. It is slightly soluble in cold alcohol, ether, or water, and readily soluble in hot alcohol or glacial acetic acid. Experiments prove that it is not absorbed in the slightest degree by the alimentary canal. ["Therap. Gaz.," May 15, 1891, p. 324 (a, 40).]

IODANTIPYRINE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d\text{-}a^2nt\text{-}i^2p^2y^2r$ -en. From $\iota\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$ (see IODINE), $\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\acute{\iota}$, against, and $\pi\acute{\upsilon}\rho$, feverish heat. Iodophenyldimethylpyrazolone: a compound of iodine and antipyrine. It crystallizes in colorless, shining prismatic needles, is tasteless and odorless, and is only slightly soluble in alcohol or water unless hot. [E. Mauzer, "Prag. med. Woch.," "Therap. Gaz.," May 15, 1891, p. 324 (a, 40).]

IODATE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d$ -at. Lat., iodas. Fr., i. Ger., jodsaures Salz. It., iodato. A salt of iodic acid. [B.]

IODATUM (Lat.), n. I^2i^2d -od-at(a 2t)u $^2m(u^2m)$. See IODIDE.

IODATUS (Lat.), adj. I^2i^2d -od-at(a 2t)u $^2s(u^2s)$. Fr., iodé. 1. Iodized; combined with iodine. In the Ger. Ph., when qualifying the name of an element or radicle, it designates the iodide of that element or radicle. Thus, kaliun iodatum is potassium iodide. [B.] 2. Due to the action of iodine (e. g., acne iodata).

IODAURATE, n. $I\text{-}o^2d$ -a 2r -at. From $\iota\acute{o}\delta\eta\varsigma$, violet-like, and aurum, gold. A compound of gold triiodide and the iodide of another element or radicle. [B.]

IODE (Fr.), n. E-od. See IODINE.—Alcoolé d'i. See Tinctura IODI.—Chlorure d'i. See IODINE chloride.—Ethéroïlé d'i. See Tinctura IODI aetherea.—I-méthyle. See METHYL iodide.—I. sublimé [Fr. IODÉ (Fr.), adj. E-o-da. See IODATUS and IODIZED.

IODELAYL, n. I-o²d-e²l'a-i²l. Fr., iodélayle. See ETHYLENE diiodide.

IODETHANE, n. I-o²d-e²th'an. Ethyl iodide (q. v.).

IODÉTHÉRIDE (Fr.), IODÉTHÉROÏDE (Fr.), n's. E-o-da-ta-red,-ta-ro-ed. Moniodoethylene. [B.] See IODÉTHYLENE.

IODETHYL, n. I-o²d-e²th'²l. Fr., iodéthyle. See ETHYL iodide.

IODETHYLENE, n. I-o²d-e²th'²l-en. Ger., Jodäthylen. A substitution product of ethylene in which iodine replaces an equivalent amount of hydrogen. Moni', a colorless, oily liquid, CH₂:CHI, is known. [B, 4.]

IODETUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²-od-et(at)'u³m(u⁴m)). An iodide.—Glycerinum cum iodeto kalico [Netherl. Ph.]. See Glycerinum iodureti POTASSII.—I. ammonicum. See Unguentum POTASSII iodidi.

IODEUX (Fr.), adj. E-o-du⁶. Iodous. [a, 14.]

IODHYDRATE, n. I-o²d-hid'ri'at. Fr., i. Ger., Jodhydrat. See HYDRIODATE and HYDRIODIDE.

IODHYDRIC, adj. I-o²d-hid'ri'k. Fr., iodhydrique. See HYDRIODIC.—I. acid. See HYDRIODIC acid.—I. ether. See IODÉTHYL.

IODHYDRIN, n. I-o²d-hid'ri²n. A substitution-product of glyceryl alcohol (glycerin), in which one or more molecules of hydroxyl are replaced by iodine; obtained by the action of hydrochloric acid on glycerin; a syrupy liquid, soluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 4 (a, 38).] See MONIODHYDRIN, CHLORIODHYDRIN, and DIODHYDRIN.

IODIC, adj. I-o²d'i²k. Lat., iodicus. Fr., iodique. Ger., jod haltig, Jod-. It., iodico. Sp., iodico. 1. Due to the use of iodine. 2. Derived from or containing iodine, more particularly, containing iodine in combination with oxygen, in greater relative amount than is the case with the iodous compounds. The iodica were the old pharmaceutical preparations of iodine, considered as a class. [B; L, 107.]—I. acid. Fr., acide iodique. Ger., Jodsäure. A colorless, crystalline, monobasic acid, HI₂O₃, readily soluble in water; prepared by the action of nitric acid on tincture of iodine, forming a series of salts called iodates. [B, 3; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," x (a, 39).]—I. oxide. I₂O₃, the only known oxide of iodine. [B, 5 (a, 38).] See IODINE peroxide.

IODID (Ger.), n. I²-od-ed'. See IODINE.

IODIDE, n. I'od-i²d'id. Lat., iodidum, iodetum, ioduretum. Fr., i, iodure. Ger., Jodür, Jodid, Jod- (in compos. with the name of the base), Jodür (in compos.). It., ioduro. Sp., ioduro. A compound of iodine with an element or radicle. [B.]—Basic i. Fr., iodure basique. Ger., basisches Jodür. Sp., ioduro básico. A compound of the iodide of an element or radicle with the oxide or hydroxide of the same element or radicle. [B.]—I. arsenieux (Fr.). See ARSENIC triiodide.—Saccharated ferrous i. See FERRI iodidum saccharatum.

IODIDUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²-od-i²d-u³m(u⁴m)). See IODIDE.—I. cadmicum. See CADMIUM iodide.—I. hydrargyricum, I. hydrargyrosium. See MERCURY iodide.

IODIFÈRE (Fr.), adj. E-o-de-fe²r. From iodôfēs, violet-like, and ferre, to bear. Containing or yielding iodine. [L, 41.]

IODINA (Lat.), n. f. I(i²-od-i'e)'na³. 1. See IODINE. 2. A genus of the Santalaceæ. [B, 42.]—I. rhombifolia. A species growing in the Argentine Republic, where it is called quebracho flojo. The wood and bark are astringent. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxviii (a, 39).]

IODINE, n. I'od-en. From iodôfēs, violet-like. Ar., iod. Lat., iodum [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Ger. Ph., Fr. Cod.], iodinium, iodina [U. S. Ph., 1870], iodium [Netherl. Ph.], jodium [Ger. Ph., Aust. Ph., Swiss Ph., Russ. Ph., Finn. Ph., Dan. Ph., Hung. Ph.], jodium, jodina [Gr. Ph.]. Fr., iode. Ger., Jod. It., iodio, iodo. Sp., yodo. A non-metallic element, discovered by Courtois in 1812. It occurs usually in grayish-black, prismatic or pyramidal crystals of metallic lustre, and peculiar, not very penetrating odor. It volatilizes at ordinary temperatures, giving off a violet-colored vapor. It melts between 113° and 115° C., and boils above 200° C. It dissolves in 5,500 parts of water, but is readily soluble in alcohol, ether, chloroform, or an aqueous solution of potassium iodide. It combines with hydrogen, forming hydriodic acid, and with the other non-metallic and the metallic elements, forming the iodides. In compounds it acts usually as a univalent radicle; rarely it is trivalent. Sp. gr., 4.948. Atomic weight, 126.53; symbol, I. It is used medicinally in the form of an ointment and counter-irritant in local inflammations, the enlargement of glands, certain skin diseases, and for injecting into cystic and suppurating cavities. It is used also as an inhalant in chronic bronchitis, laryngitis, naso-pharyngeal catarrh, phthisis, and diphtheria. [B, 3; a, 40.]—Churchill's i. caustic. See LIQUOR IODI causticus.—Colorless solution of i. A solution of i in an aqueous solution of resorcin, orcin, or phloroglucin. [Hlasiwetz, "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvi (a, 39).]—Churchill's tincture of i. See Tinctura IODI fortior.—Colorless tincture of i. Lat., tinctura iodinii decolorata. A preparation made by dissolving 1½ oz. of i in 13 fl. oz. of alcohol, adding 3 fl. oz. of strong aqua ammonia and allowing the mixture to stand for four weeks with occasional agitation. It may be diluted with water or glycerin. A quicker preparation may be made by using ammonia in excess, and then cautiously adding hydrochloric acid until the reaction is but slightly alkaline. [B, 5 (a, 38).] Cf. Tinctura IODI decolorata.—

A solution of 1 part each of i and potassium iodide in 2 parts of glycerin. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Inhalation of i. [Br. Ph.]. See Vapor IODI.—I. bromide. Lat., iodi bromidum. Fr., bromure d'iodé. Ger., Jodbromür, Jodbromid. A compound of bromine and i. I. monobromide, IBr, is a solid crystalline mass melting at 36° C., very soluble in alcohol, ether, or chloroform, less soluble in water. I. pentabromide, IBr₅, occurs as a dark-brown liquid. [B, 270 (a, 38).]—I. chloride. Fr., chlorure d'iodé. Ger., Chlorjod. A compound of i and chlorine. I. monochloride, ICl, and i. trichloride, ICl₃, are known. The existence of i. pentachloride is generally doubted. [B; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxiv (a, 39).]—I. cigar. Fr., cigare d'iodé. Ger., Jodcigarre. A cigar made of tobacco soaked in an iodide of an alkaline metal (e. g., potassium). [B, 270 (a, 38).]—I. clyster. Ger., Jodklystier. An enema consisting of 10 parts of tincture of i, 1 part of potassium iodide, and 250 parts of distilled water. [Bernatzki, A, 319 (a, 21).]—I. cones. Pastilles containing i, powdered marshmallow, and potassium nitrate, made up with alcohol and water used as a fumigatory. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," x (a, 39).]—I. disulphide. See SULPHUR iodide.—I. green. Ger., Jodgrün. A dye, C₂₀H₁₆(CH₃)₃2Cl₃I, obtained by heating rosoline with an excess of methyl iodide, occurring as green crystalline prisms soluble in alcohol. [B, 4, 270 (a, 38).]—I. inhalation. See Vapor IODI.—I. liniment. See Linimentum IODI.—I. monobromide. See under I. bromide.—I. monochloride. Fr., monochlorure d'iodé. Ger., Monochlorjod. A crystalline substance, ICl, melting at 25° C. to a reddish-brown liquid of oily consistence. It gives off irritating vapors. [B, 3.]—I. ointment [U. S. Ph.]. See Unguentum IODI.—I. oxide. Fr., oxyde d'iodé. Ger., Jodoxyd. See I. pentoxide.—I. paint. A preparation made by dissolving 1 drachm of i in a fl. oz. of alcohol, and evaporating to a syrupy consistence. [B, 5.]—I. pentabromide. See under I. bromide.—I. pentoxide. A white powder, I₂O₅, very soluble in water, forming by its solution in water iodous acid. [B, 3.]—I. plant. A name for various species of Algae. [B, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—I. terbromide. A preparation of i and bromine, consisting of 37½ parts of the latter for each 20 parts of i. [B, 81 (a, 38).]—I. triacetate. Ger., essigsäures Jod, Jodtriacetat. See ACETOBODIUS ANHYDRIDE.—I. trichloride. Fr., trichlorure d'iodé. A body, ICl₃, forming hygroscopic yellow crystals, emitting irritating vapors, and very readily decomposed. [B, 3; "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Feb. 4, 1888, p. 124.]—I. violet. Ger., Jodviolett. Hofmann's violet. [B.]—Liniment of i. [Br. Ph.]. See Linimentum IODI.—Lugol's caustic i. solution. Lat., solutio iodii caustica Lugoli. A preparation consisting of 1 part each of i and potassium iodide dissolved in 2 parts of water. [B, 5.]—Lugol's i. lotion. A preparation consisting of from 2 to 4 grains of i with double the quantity of potassium iodide, dissolved in a pint of water. [B, 5.]—Lugol's rubefacient i. solution. A preparation made by dissolving 1 part of i and 2 parts of potassium iodide in 6 parts of water. [B, 5.]—Natural i. wine. Of Boinet, a wine prepared by fermenting grapes with intermediate layers of seaweed. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," x (a, 39).]—Solution of i. [Br. Ph.]. See Liquor IODI compositus.—Test solution of i. [U. S. Ph.]. A clear solution of dark color, made by dissolving 1 part of i in a mixture of 3 parts of potassium iodide and 50 parts of distilled water. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—Tincture of i. [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.]. See Tinctura IODI.—Volumetric solution of i. [U. S. Ph.]. A solution made by dissolving 18 grammes of potassium iodide in 700 cubic centimetres of distilled water, adding 12.66 grammes of i, and water enough to make 1,000 cubic centimetres of solution. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

IODINED, adj. I'od-end. See IODIZED.

IODINITE, n. I'od-en-it. From iodôfēs, violet-like. An ore containing i in conjunction with silver. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvii (a, 39).]

IODINIUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²-od-i²n'i²-u³m(u⁴m)). See IODINE.—Balneum iodinii. A bath made (1) by triturating 3 to 5 drachms of iodine with 2 oz. of dry sand, and adding to the water used; or (2) by dissolving 4 drachms of iodine and 4 fl. oz. of liquor potassæ in 2 pints of water, and adding water enough for a bath. A preparation made by dissolving ¼ oz. of iodine and 1 oz. of potassium iodide in a pint of alcohol. It corresponds to the tinctura IODI of the Br. Ph. [B.]—Tinctura iodinii decolorata. See Colorless tincture of IODINE.—Unguentum iodinii (compositum) [U. S. Ph., 1870]. See Unguentum IODI.

IODISED, adj. I'od-izd. See IODIZED.

IODISM, n. I'od-i²z'm. Lat., iodismus. Fr., iodisme, cachexie iodée. The train of symptoms, such as malaise, frontal headache, coryza, lachrymation, pharyngitis, acne, hydroa, etc., which follow the prolonged excessive use of iodine alone or in the form of iodides. [Bartholow (a, 40).]—Constitutional i. The third form of i, according to Riiliet, produced by the absorption of iodine or iodides in very minute quantities, whether taken as medicine or combined with table salt or inhaled in the form of sea air. It is characterized by nervous palpitations, excessive emaciations (sometimes preceded by increase of flesh), and progressive wasting of the mammae and testes. [Bull (a, 40).]

IODITE, n. I'od-it. A salt of iodous acid. [a, 38.]

IODIUM [Netherl. Ph.] (Lat.), n. n. I(i²-od-i² u³m(u⁴m)). See IODINE.—Solutio iodii spirituosâ [Netherl. Ph.], Tinctura iodii [Belg. Ph.]. See Tinctura IODI.—Tinctura iodii aetherea. Fr., éthérolé d'iodé, ether ioduré, teinture éthérée d'iodé. A solution of 1 part of i in 12 parts of sulphure ether. [B, 119 (a, 21).]

IODIZED, adj. I'od-izd. Lat., iodatus. Fr., ioduré, iodé. Ger., jodirt. Combined with or containing iodine. [B.]

IODMETHYL, n. I-o²d-me²th'i²l. See METHYL iodide.

IODOACETAMIDE, n. I-o-d-o-a²s-e²t'a²m-i²d(id). A one-atom iodine substitution-product, C₂H₃IO.NH₂, of acetamide, obtained by treating monochloroacetamide with potassium iodide. [B, 2.]

IODOACETIC ACID, n. I'o²d-o-a²s-et'i²k. Fr., acide iodocétique. See IODOACETIC ACID.

IODOACETYLENE, n. I-o-d-o-a²s-e²t'i²l-en. A one-atom iodine substitution-product, C₂H₃IO, of acetylene. It has a polymeric modification, dii', C₄H₂I₂. [B, 2.]

IODOARGENTATE, n. I-o-d-o-a²r'je²nt-at. Lat., iodoargentata. A salt produced by the combination of silver iodide with another metallic iodide. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODOAUATE, n. I-o-d-o-a²r'at. See IODAUATE.

IODOBENZOIC ACID, n. I-o-d-o-be²nz-o'i²k. Fr., acide iodobenzoïque. Ger., Jodbenzoesäure, Jodobenzoesäure. A monobasic crystalline acid, C₆H₄ICO.OH, existing in three isomeric forms: 1. Ortho-i. a., forming needles which melt at 157° C. 2. Met'i a., occurring in needles melting at 187° C. 3. Para a., forming scales melting at about 267° C. It is obtained by treating amino-benzoic acid with hydriodic acid. [B, 93 (a, 14), 158 (a, 38).]

IODOBORIC ACID, n. I-o-d-o-bor'i²k. Lat., acidum iodoboricum. Fr., acide iodoborique. Ger., Jodsäure, Borsäure. A combination of iodic and boric acids. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODOCALCIC, adj. I-o-d-o-ka²si²k. From iodēs, violet-like, and calx, lime. Fr., iodocalcaire. Containing salts of iodine and of calcium. [a, 14.] See I. SYRUP.

IODOCAMPHOR, n. I-o-d-o-ka²m'fo²r. A crystalline substance, C₁₀H₁₆IO, obtained by treating sodium camphor with cyanogen iodide, melting at about 44° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).] Cf. Iodized CAMPHOR.

IODOCAOUTCHINE (Fr.), n. E-o-do-ka²ut-shen. From iodēs, violet-like, and caoutchouc (q. v.). A substance obtained by treating caoutchouc with iodine, soluble in alcohol and in ether. [L, 41, 49 (a, 14).]

IODOCHLORIDE, n. I-o-d-o-klar'i²d(id). Lat., iodochloruretum. Fr., iodochlorure. A compound of iodine and chlorine directly united to the same radicle. [B.]

IODOCINCHONINE, n. I-o-d-o-si²n²'kon-en. Fr., i. An amorphous yellow substance, C₂₀H₂₄N₂O₂I₂, according to Pelletier, obtained by treating cinchonine with iodine. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]—I. sulphate. A crystalline salt occurring in long, four-sided acicular prisms, of deep ruby or garnet color; or in thin plates or long, flat, acicular prisms, transmitting a yellow light when thin, a reddish-brown light when thicker. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

IODOCINNAMIC ACID, n. I-o-d-o-si²n²-a²m'i²k. A monobasic acid, C₉H₇I.C₂H₃.CO.OH, occurring in the three isomeric forms: 1. Ortho-i. a., crystals melting at about 214° C. 2. Met'i a., melting and decomposing at about 182° C. 3. Para a., indistinct crystals decomposing without melting. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODOCODÉINE, n. I-o-d-o-ko-de'en. Fr., iodocodéine. A crystallizable opium alkaloid, C₁₈H₁₉NO₃I₃, obtained by treating an alcoholic solution of codeine with a solution of iodine. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

ODO-CONJUGUÉ (Fr.), adj. E-o-do-ko²n²-zhu⁶-ga. From iodēs, violet-like, and conjugare, to bind together. Containing iodine as an associated element. [B, 38.] Cf. AZOTURES i-c's.

IODOCYANE (Fr.), n. E-o-do-se-a²n. Ger., Jodyan. See CYANOGEN iodide.

IODOCYANIDE, n. I-o-d-o-si²a²n-i²d(id). Lat., iodocyanuretum. A double salt consisting of an iodide and a cyanide of the same base. [B.]

IODODICHLORHYDRIIN, n. I-o-d-o-di-klar-hid'ri²n. A colorless, oily liquid, C₂H₂I₂Cl₂, or glycerin in which an atom of iodine and 2 atoms of chlorine replace all the hydroxyl; insoluble in water, and having a sweet, biting taste; obtained by the action of iodine chloride on allyl iodide. [B, 2.]

IODODIMETHYLDIALLYLIDE, n. I-o-d-o-di-me²th-i²l-di-a²l'i²d(id). A compound containing iodine with two molecules of methyl and two of allyl. [B, 2.]

IODOFORM, n. I-o²d'o²fo²rm. Lat., iodoformum, iodoformium (Ger. Ph.), jodoformium (from iodēs, violet-like, and formyl [q. v.]). Fr., iodoforme. Ger., I. Formyljodid, Jodoform. It., giodoformio, iodoformio, jodoformio. Sp., iodoformo, yodoformo. A body, CHI₃, discovered by Séverinus in 1822. It occurs in minute and shining yellow crystals, of a peculiar, pronounced odor, and an unpleasant sweetish taste, melting at 115° C., volatile at all temperatures, and moderately soluble in boiling alcohol, and in ether, chloroform, and carbon disulphide. It is used as an antiseptic, disinfectant, healing, and sedative application to wounds, as an application in catarrhs of mucous membranes; in the form of inunctions in meningitis; and internally in cirrhosis of the liver, chronic dysentery, phthisis, diabetes, obesity, etc. [B; A. Pöchl, "St. Petersb. med. Woch.," May 3, 1886, p. 167.]—I. collodion. See under COLLODION.—I. gauze. See under GAUZE.—I. ointment. Ger., Formyljodische Salbe. See Unguentum IODOFORMI.—I. pencils. See Crayons d'iodoforme.—I. suppositories. See Suppositoria IODOFORMI.—Ointment of i. See Unguentum IODOFORMI.

IODOFORME (Fr.), n. E-o-do-form. See IODOFORM.—Crayons d'I. [Fr. Cod.] Lat., bacilli iodoformi. A preparation made by mixing iodoform with 1-20th of its weight of powdered gum arabic, adding water and glycerin, and rolling into cylindrical sticks. [B.]

IODOFORMIUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²)-o²d(od)-o(o²)-fo²rm'i²-u²m-(u²m). See IODOFORM.

IODOFORMIZE, v. tr. I-o²d'o²fo²rm-iz. 1. To impregnate (gauze, etc.) with iodoform. 2. To treat a part with applications of iodoform. [W. T. Bull., "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Jan. 6, 1883, p. 11.]

IODOFORMUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²)-o²d(od)-o(o²)-fo²rm'u²m(u²m). See IONOFORM.—Bacilli IODOFORMI [Br. Ph.]. Suppositories each containing 3 grains of iodoform, made by triturating 36 parts of powdered iodoform with 44 of oil of theobroma, then adding 100 parts of melted oil of theobroma, and shaping into the required form. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Unguentum IODOFORMI [U. S. Ph.]. An ointment containing 1 part of iodoform to 9 parts of benzoinated lard. [B.]

IODOHYDRARGYRATE, n. I-o-d-o-hi-dra²r'ji²r-at. Fr., i. Ger., Jodhydrargyrat. A compound of mercuric iodide with the iodide of another radicle. [B.]

IODOHYDRATE, n. I-o-d-o-hid'rat. Fr., iodhydrate. Ger., Jodhydrat. See HYDRIODATE.

IODOHYDRIN, n. I-o-d-o-hid'ri²n. See IODHYDRIN.

IODOL, n. I'od-o²l. Lat., iodolum, jodolum. Ger., Jodol. It., iodolo. Tetralodopyrrol; an odorless, nearly tasteless substance, C₄H₄NH, obtained by treating pyrrol with iodine in a solution of neutral reaction, occurring as a yellowish-white powder, soluble in alcohol, in ether, and in chloroform, less soluble in water. As an antiseptic and deodorant, it is said to have all the value of iodoform without its occasionally toxic effects, and is also feebly escharotic, and occasionally anaesthetic. [B, 46 (a, 39); "Gaz. hebdom. de méd. et de chir.," July 23, 1886, p. 487; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv (a, 39); "St. Petersb. med. Wchnschr.," "N. Y. Med. Jour.," Dec. 19, 1885, p. 704; A. Poehl, "St. Petersb. med. Woch.," May 3, 1886, p. 167.]—I. gauze. A preparation made by saturating gauze with a solution of 1 part each of i., resin, and glycerin in 10 parts of alcohol. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv (a, 39).]

IODOLACTIC ACID, n. I'o²d-o-la²k'ti²k. Fr., acide iodolactique. Moniodolactic acid, an acid, C₃H₅IO₂, or lactic acid in which one atom of iodine replaces hydrogen, melting at about 85° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODOLUM (Lat.), n. n. I(i²)-o²d(od)'o²l-u²m(u²m). See IODOL.

IODOMECONE, n. I'o²d-o-me²kon-en. Ger., Jodomecon. A substance, C₈H₈I₂O₆, obtained by heating meconic, pyromeconic, or comenic acid with an excess of iodine bromide. It crystallizes in yellow tablets, insoluble in water, soluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 48 (a, 14).]

IODOMECONIN, n. I'o²d-o-me²kon-on'i²n. A substance, C₁₀H₁₀IO₄, occurring in long crystals or needles melting at 112° C. and decomposing if heated more highly. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODOMETHANE, n. I-o-d-o-me²th'an. See METHYL iodide.

IODOMETHE (Lat.), n. f. I(i²)-o²d-o²m'e²th-e(a). Gen., om'ethes. From iodēs, violet (see IODINE), and μέθη, drunkenness. Fr., ivresse iodique. Ger., Jodinrausch, Jodrausch. Of Lugol, the feeling of drunkenness caused by the ingestion of large doses of iodine. [A, 322, 385.]

IODOMETRY, n. I-o-d-o²m'e²t-ri². From iodēs, violet-like, and μετρέω, to measure. Fr., iodométrie. The volumetric determination of the quantity of iodine in a compound, by estimating the amount of arsenious acid oxidized by iodine in the presence of water. [B, 38, 93 (a, 14).]

IODONAPHTHALENE, n. I-o-d-o-na²f'tha²l-en. A colorless liquid, C₁₀H₇I, boiling above 300° C. [B, 4, 158 (a, 38).]

IODONITRIC ACID, n. I-o-d-o-nit'ri²k. Fr., acide iodo-nitrique. An acid formed by the combination of iodic acid and nitric acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODONITROBENZENE, n. I-o-d-o-nit-ro-be²nz'en. Fr., iodo-nitro-benzine. Ger., Jodnitrobenzol. A compound, C₆(NO₂)₂HI₂, or benzene in which iodine and nitryl replace hydrogen. Three isomers are known: 1. Ortho', C₆(H₂NO₂)₂I.H.I.H., occurring in yellow needles melting at about 49° C. 2. Met'i, C₆(H₂NO₂)₂I.H.H. H., forming small monoclinic plates that melt at 36° C. 3. Para', C₆(H₂NO₂)₂I.H.I.H., forming needles melting at 171.5° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODONITROPHENOLSULPHONIC ACID, n. I-o-d-o-nit-ro-fe-no²l-su²l'fo²n'i²k. Fr., acide iodo-nitro-phénol-sulfonique. A body, C₆H₂(NO₂)(OH)SO₃OH, or phenol-sulphonic acid in which an atom of iodine and a molecule of nitryl replace two atoms of hydrogen. [B, 2.]

IODOROCEIN, IODOROCEINOL, n's. I-o-d-o-o²r'si²n, -o²l. Ger., Jodorocin. A substitution compound of orcin in which iodine replaces hydrogen. [B.]

IODOPHENOL, n. I-o-d-o-fe²n'o²l. Fr., iodophénol. Ger., Jodphenol. A substitution compound of phenol in which iodine replaces hydrogen. [B.] See MONIODOPHENOL, DIIODOPHENOL, and TRIIODOPHENOL.

IODOPHOSPHIDE, n. I-o-d-o-fo²s'f'i²d(id). Lat., iodophosphuretum. Fr., iodophosphure. A compound of an iodide with a phosphide. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODOPHOSPHORIC ACID, n. I-od-o-fo²s-fo²r¹i²k. Fr., acide iodo-phosphorique. An acid produced by the combination of iodic and phosphoric acids. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODOPHTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. I(i²)-od-o²t(o²f)¹i²s(thi²s)-i²s. Gen., iphthisis/eos (oph>thisis). From iodōns, violet-like, and φθίσις, consumption. Fr., iodophthisie. Ger., Jodschwindsucht. The emaciation, etc., of severe iodism. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

IODOPLATINATE, n. I-od-o-pla²t¹i²n-at. A salt of iodo-platinic acid. [B.]

IODOPLATINIC ACID, n. I-od-o-pla²t¹i²n¹i²k. Ger., Jodplatinssäure. A substance, H₂PtI₆+2H₂O, forming dark-red or brown crystals. [B.]

IODOPLUMBATE, n. I-od-o-plu³m¹bat. Lat., iodoplumbas (from iodōns, violet-like, and plumbum, lead). Fr., iodoplombate. A compound of lead iodide with another metallic iodide. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODOPROPIONIC ACID, n. I-od-o-pro-pi²-o²n¹i²k. Fr., acide iodopropionique. Ger., Jodpropionsäure. A monobasic acid, C₃H₅IO₂, known in two isomeric forms: 1. α-i. a., CH₃.CHI.CO.OH, a brown, oily liquid slightly soluble in water. 2. β-i. a., CH₃.I.CH₂.CO.OH, forming shining crystalline laminae, readily soluble in alcohol, ether, or hot water, slightly soluble in cold water, and melting at about 101° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODQUININE, n. I-od-o-kiw¹n¹en. Fr., i. A brown amorphous substance, (C₂₀H₂₄N₂O₂)₂.I₂, obtained by the action of iodine on quinine. [B, 93 (a, 14).]—I. sulphate. Ger., basischschwefelsäures Chinin. A crystalline salt, 4C₂₀H₂₄N₂O₂.3H₂SO₄.HI.I₂+3H₂O, occurring in more or less varied rhombic prisms of emerald color in reflected light, and nearly colorless in transmitted light. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

IODOSALICYLIC ACID, n. I-od-o-sa¹i²-i²s¹i²i²k. Fr., acide iodo-salicylique. Ger., Jodsalicylsäure. An acid formed by treating salicylic acid with iodine in the presence of iodic acid or an alkali. [B, 4 (a, 38).] See MONOIODOSALICYLIC ACID, DIIODOSALICYLIC ACID, and TRIIODOSALICYLIC ACID.

IODOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I(i²)-od-o²i²s. Gen., -os/eos (-is). From iodōns, violet-like. See IODISM.

IODOSTEARIC ACID, IODOSTEARIDIC ACID, n's. I-od-o-ste-a²r¹i²k, -ste-a²r¹i²d¹i²k. Fr., acide iodo-stéarique. Ger., Jodstearinsäure. An acid, C₁₈H₃₃IO₂, formed by the action of iodine, phosphorus, and water on ricinoleic acid, and occurring as a yellow oil. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODOSUCCIMIDE, n. I-od-o-su²k-si²n¹i²m¹i²d(id). A substance, C₈H₄(CO)₂NI, obtained by adding silver succinimide to a solution of iodine in absolute alcohol, and occurring in hard, quadrate, crystalline prisms, readily soluble in water, less soluble in alcohol. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

IODOSULPHATE, n. I-od-o-su¹l¹f¹at. Fr., i. Ger., jod-schwefelsaures Salz. A salt of iodosulphuric acid. [B, 2 (a, 45).]

IODOSULPHURIC ACID, n. I-od-o-su¹l¹-f¹a¹r¹i²k. Fr., acide iodo-sulfurique. Ger., Jodschwefelsäure. A dibasic acid, H₂SO₃I₂, or sulphuric acid in which two atoms of iodine replace a single atom of oxygen. [B, 2.]

IODOTANNIN, n. I-od-o-ta²n¹i²n. A solution of iodine and tannic acid. [B, 5 (a, 38).]

IODOTHERAPY, n. I-od-o-the²r¹a³-pi². From iodōns, violet-like, and θεραπεία, medical treatment. Fr., iodothérapie. The treatment of disease with iodine. [a, 14.]

IODOTOLUENE, n. I-od-o-to¹l¹-u²-en. Ger., Jodtoluol. A substitution compound, C₆H₄I—CH₃, of toluene, in which iodine replaces the hydrogen of the benzene residue, C₆H₅. It is known in three isomeric forms: 1. *Ortho*¹, a colorless liquid melting at 205° C. 2. *Meth*¹, a colorless liquid melting at 207° C. 3. *Para*¹, forming shining crystalline laminae melting at 35° C. [B, 158 (a, 38).]

IODOUS ACID, n. I-od-u²s. Fr., acide iodeux. Ger., Jod-sauerstoffsaure. An acid formed by the combination of iodine with oxygen. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

IODUM [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Fr. Cod.] (Lat.), n. n. I(i²)-od¹u²m¹-(u⁴m). See IODINE.—Causticum Iodi [Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.]. A solution of 1 part each of iodine and potassium iodide in 2 parts of water. [B, 81 (a, 21).]—Glycerinum Iodi causticum [Rachter]. See Hebra's IODINE CAUSTIC.—Inhalatio Iodi. See Vapor Iodi.—Injectio Iodi Iodurata. Sp., inyección de iodo iodurada [Sp. Ph.]. A solution of 10 grammes each of iodine and potassium iodide in 200 grammes of distilled water to which 100 grammes of 90-per-cent. alcohol are added. [B, 95.]—I. purissimum [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., iode sublimé [Fr. Cod.]. Iodine purified by sublimation for medicinal use. [B.]—Linimentum Iodi [Br. Ph.]. Fr., liniment d'iodé. Ger., Jodliniment. A preparation made by dissolving 1½ oz. (1¼ per cent.) of iodine, ¼ oz. (2¼ per cent.) of potassium iodide, and ½ oz. (3¼ per cent.) of camphor in 10 fl. oz. (82 per cent.) of rectified spirit. [B, 95.]—Liquor causticus Iodi [Fr. Cod.]. Liquor Iodi [Br. Ph.] (causticus, sen compositus [U. S. Ph.]). Fr., soluté d'iodé ioduré [Fr. Cod.]. Syn.: liquor iodini compositus [U. S. Ph., 1870] (liquor Iodi cum katio iodato [Russ. Ph.]), solutio superiodetici kalici [Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.], solutio Lugol. Lugol's solution, an aqueous solution containing 1 [Russ. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.], 3 [Fr. Cod.], 4 [Br. Ph.], or 5 [U. S. Ph.] per cent. of iodine, and 2 [Roum. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.], 3 [Fr. Cod.], 6 [Br. Ph.], or 10 [U. S. Ph.] per cent. of potassium iodide. The Fr. preparation also contains 60 per cent. of alcohol. [B, 95.]—Solutio Iodi aquosa. See Liquor Iodi compositus.—Solutio Iodi caustica Lugoli. See Lugol's caustic iodine solution.—Tinctura Iodi [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph., Fr. Cod.]. Fr., tincture d'iodé [Fr. Cod.]. Ger., Jodtinctur. Sp., tintura alcohólica de iodo [Sp. Ph.]. Syn.: tinctura iodini [U. S. Ph., 1870] (sen jodi [Ger. Ph., etc.], sen iodii [Belg. Ph.], sen jodii [Gr. Ph.]), solutio Iodi [Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.] (sen iodii

IODURE (Fr.), n. E-o-du²r. See IODIDE.—I. mercureux. Ger., Jodinmerkur. See MERCURY proto-iodide.—I. mercurique [Fr. Cod.]. See MERCURY binoiodide.—Pilules d'I. ferreux [Fr. Cod.]. See Pilule FERRI iodide.—Pilules d'I. mercureux opiacées [Fr. Cod.]. Lat., pilule cum iodureto hydrargyroso. Sp., píldoras de yoduro mercurioso [Sp. Ph.]. Pills each of which contains 5 centigrammes (about ¼ grain) of mercurous iodide (green iodide of mercury), 2 centigrammes (½ grain) of extract of opium, and 5 centigrammes of licorice powder made up with a little honey. [B.]

IODURET, n. I-o²d¹u²-re²t. Lat., ioduretum. See IODIDE.

IODURETED, adj. I-o²d¹u²-re²t-e²d. See IODIZED.

A species supposed by some to be indigenous to India, by others to America; now cultivated throughout all tropical and subtropical regions for its tuberous root, the sweet potato. [B, 19, 77, 173, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—I. batatoides. A South American species, by some identified with I. orizabensis. The root contains a purgative resin. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—I. bicolor. See I. nil.—I. bifida. See I. cymosa.—I. bona nox. Moon-flowers (or creepers), good-night plant; an East and West Indian species. The root contains resin, volatile oil, fatty matter, albumin, starch, malic acid, and various salts. The natives use the root-bark as a purgative. [B, 172, 185, 275 (a, 24).]—I. brachypoda. Sp., batatilla. A forage-plant growing in Mexico. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvii (a, 39).]—I. brasiliensis.—The I. pes capræ. [B, 172, 214, 215, 496 (a, 35).]—I. carulea. A species indigenous to India, having purgative seeds. [L., 107.]—I. caliginosa. See I. cymosa.—I. calobra. A species growing in Central Australia having esculent roots. [B, 314 (a, 35).]—I. campanulata. An East Indian species. The leaves and fruit are used in snake-bites. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. carnosa. See I. acetosa-folia.—I. Catesbaei. A South American species identified by some with I. batatas, and cultivated like the latter for its edible roots. [B, 180 (a, 24), 212.]—I. cathartica. A species the juice of which is used in Hayti as a drastic purgative. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. cymosa. A species found in the East Indies and the Islands of the Indian Ocean. The leaves are used in the Moluccas as an emollient application in abscesses and ulcers. Its seeds, with those of I. sepiaria, are believed to be the laldana (red seed) sold in the Bengal bazaars under the name of shappundo, which yield a mucilage when soaked in water, and are used as a gentle aperient and as an alternative in cutaneous diseases. [B, 212; B, 172, 185 (a, 24).]—I. denticulata. An East Indian species used in the preparation of a salve to prevent baldness. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. digitata. A species found in New Holland, India, Java, the Mauritius, West Africa, and South America, and cultivated in western tropical Africa for its long roots, which are not unpleasant to the taste. In the East Indies they are used as a purgative, in menstrual disorders, and in some fevers. [B, 19, 180 (a, 24), 212.]—I. dissecta. 1. Of Pursh, the I. sinuata. 2. Of Willdenow, a species found in Trinidad. The juice has a strong prussic-acid odor; probably identical with Convolvulus dissectus. [B, 18, 34 (a, 24).]—I. edulis. A species found in Japan. The tuberous roots are used like those of I. batatas. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. erioperma. See I. digitata.—I. gemella. A species found in the East Indies, where its mucilaginous leaves, boiled with clarified butter, are used in aphthæ. [B, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. Gerardii. The wild Natal cotton-plant. The seeds yield a textile material resembling true cotton. [B, 19, 275 (a, 24).]—I. gossypifolia. See I. digitata.—I. grandiflora. 1. Of Roxburgh, the I. bona nox. 2. Of Römer and Schultes, a species found in the East Indies, used in snake-bites (probably identical with I. bona nox). [B, 172, 180, 185 (a, 24).]—I. heteracea. An American species resembling I. nil. [B, 215.]—I. Heynei. See I. cymosa.—I. insignis. See I. digitata.—I. jalapa. I. jalapa. Fr., jalap, méchoacan noir. Ger., Jalappwurzel, Trichterwinde, Xalapa-Winde. 1. Of Pursh and Desfontaines, a species found in Mexico and the southern United States, yielding Mechoacan root, which was once used in Europe as a purgative, and for a long time erroneously identified with true jalap. 2. Of Nuttall, the I. purga. [B, 5, 18, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. latiflora. See I. grandiflora (2d def.).—I. littoralis. See I. acetosa-folia.—I. macrorrhiza. 1. Of Michaux, the I. jalapa (1st def.), or a variety of it. 2. Of Römer and Schultes, a West Indian species, the root of which is used as a drastic purgative. [B, 5, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. magapotamica. A species growing in southern Brazil and the Argentina. The root serves as jalap. [B, 314 (a, 35).]—I. malabarica. See ARYVREIA malabarica.—I. maritima. See I. pes capræ.—I. mauritiana. See I. digitata.—I. mechocanica. See I. jalapa (1st def.).—I. mexitaliana. A plant imperfectly known, and doubtfully referred to this genus. Its root is said to be used as a purgative by the Mexicans. [B, 214 (a, 35).]—I. muricoides. Sp., palo del muerto [Mex. Ph.]. A species growing in warm regions. A decoction of the branches is used for baths in paralysis. It contains a white, crystalline principle soluble in ether and in chloroform. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Feb., 1886, p. 72.]—I. nil. Fr., ipoméa nil. The blue morning-glory, a widely distributed species, well known as a garden annual. Its specific name nil (indigo) is derived from the clear-blue color of the border of its large white flowers. In India its seeds (known as kuttana), roasted and pulverized, are used like jalap, being superior in flavor. [B, 34, 172, 173 (a, 24).]—I. olandi. See I. cymosa.—I. operculata. Fr., liseron à opercules. A species found in Brazil, where the large tuberous roots (called batata de purga) are used as a purgative. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. orizabensis. Sp., yerba de las ánimas. See CONVOLVULUS orizabensis.—I. paucurata. Fr., rhubarbe sauvage, liseron sinué. Ger., geigenförmige Trichterwinde. The mechemack of the North American Indians, wild jalap, wild potato, man-of-the-earth; a species found in sandy fields from New York to Georgia, and westward to Illinois. Its root is said to be as effectual a purgative as jalap, and is sometimes met with in commerce. [B, 5, 34, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24); "Lancet," June 6, 1885, p. 1051; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix, xxx (a, 39).]—I. paniculata. 1. Of R.

Brown, see I. digitata. 2. Of Burmann, a species of the genus Convolvulus (Convolvulus parviflorus). [B, 212, 214, 309 (a, 35).]—I. papiru. Of Ruiz and Pavón, a laxative species found in Peru. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. pes capræ. Goat's-foot creeper, sea-side potato; a species found on the coast of Georgia and common on sandy beaches in India, where it is called murja devt. Its boiled leaves are used as an external anodyne, internally in colic, and in decoction in rheumatism. [B, 34, 172 (a, 24); "Proc. of the An. Pharm. Assoc.," xxv (a, 39); "Ind. Med. Gaz.," Nov., 1886, p. 325.]—I. pes tigridis. Cing., siwipahuru. The arti of Malabar; a species indigenous to the East Indies, where the leaves are used as an emollient application to tumors and the bites of rabid dogs. [B, 88, 121; B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. plantensis. See I. digitata.—I. plantifolia. A South American species, cultivated like I. batatas for its sweet, edible roots. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. purga. Fr., ipoméa purgatif. Ger., purgierende Trichterwinde. A species growing in the Mexican Andes. Its roots are the jalap of the pharmacopoeias. [B, 5, 18, 173, 180 (a, 24).] See JALAPA.—I. purpurea. The common or purple morning-glory, a well-known climber found in fields in the middle and western United States. [B, 19, 34, 275 (a, 24).]—I. quamoclit. Fr., ipoméa quamoclit, fleur cardinale. Sp., Aor de Guillermo. The sweet-William of Barbados, cyress-vine; an East Indian species. The juice of the leaves (folia quamoclit) is used as a sternutatory. [B, 34, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. reniformis. Bom., underakani. Hind., musakani. Sanscr., mushaka Kavani. A species found in India, where it is used as an alternative, deobstruent, and diuretic, and in rheumatism, headache, etc. [A, 479 (a, 21).]—I. repens. Fr., ipoméa rampant. A species found in the East and West Indies and in Arabia; used as a purgative, especially in dropsy, and as a cataplasm in abscesses. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. Rothii. See I. cynosa.—I. schiediana. See I. purga.—I. sepiaria. A species found in the East Indies (see under I. cynosa). [B, 172 (a, 24).]—I. Sessocui. Sp., espanta vaquero. A Mexican species, recommended in rabies. [B, 121 (a, 24).]—I. simulans. Fr., faux jalap, jalap digité. Of Hanbury, a species closely related to I. purga, growing in Mexico. It is the source of Tampico jalap (q. v.). [B, 5, 18, 104 (a, 24).]—I. sinuata. A twining species growing in Georgia and Florida, and found in the West Indies, where it is called "noyau plant." The bruised leaves have a decided bitter-almond odor, and were originally used in making the liqueur known as noyau. [B, 34 (a, 24).] "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiii (a, 39).]—I. speciosa. See ARGYREIA SPECIOSA.—I. stans. Sp., tanibata [Mex. Ph.]. A species found in Mexico having a purgative root. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," March, 1886, p. 122.]—I. subtrioba. A Peruvian species. The root is a drastic purgative. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. tridentata. An East Indian species, used in decoction in gastric fevers, hepatic diseases, and acute gout. [B, 180 (a, 24).]—I. triflora. Sp., jalapa de Querétaro [Mex. Ph.]. A species used in Mexico as a drastic purgative. [J. M. Maisch, "Am. Jour. of Pharm.," Dec., 1885, p. 601.]—I. triloba. A species growing in Japan, Florida, and tropical America, used as a purgative; by some identified with I. nil. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. triquetra. See I. turpethum.—I. tuberosa. Fr., ipoméa tubéreuse, liane à tonnelles (1st def.). 1. The arbor-vine of Jamaica; of Linnaeus, a West Indian species cultivated for its edible tuberous roots. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24), 212.] 2. Of Meyer, see I. digitata.—I. turpethum. Fr., turbith végétal. Ger., Turpith-Trichterwinde. Tamil, shevadi. Tel., tel-lategada. Hind., duhkulni, pitohrinaka patara, turabada, nisota. Beng., doohkulnee, teori. Bom., nishotara, phutakari. Guiz., nasotard. Sanscr., trivrita, tripata. Indian jalap; a species found in the East Indies. The root, radix turbith (seu turpethi veri), turpethum vegetabile, furnishes turpethum. The root and stems are in general use in India as a cathartic. [B, 5, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24), 212; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiii (a, 39).]—I. umbellata. See I. cynosa.

IPEMERIC ACID, n. I-po-me'ri'k. Fr., acide ipoméique (ou ipoméique). Ger., Ipomäure. See CONVULVULVIC ACID.

IPREAU (Fr.), n. E-pra-o. The Populus alba. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

IPS (Lat.), n. m. I'ps(eps). Gen., ip'os, ip'is. Gr., ἴψ. A species of Cynips. [L, 30, 50 (a, 14).]

IREONCION (Lat.), n. n. I(e)-re-2-o-2n(o'2n)-si'(ki'2)-o-2n. See IRIDONCUS.

IREOPERISPHXIXIS (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-re-2-o(o's)-pe-2r-i-2-sfi'2n'2x'-i's. Gen., -sphinxæos (-is). From ips, the iris, πέρι, around, and σφίγγις, a constriction. Ger., Regenbogenhautumschnürung. The operation of drawing the iris from all sides in toward a central point, and there fixing it, so as to form an artificial pupil. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IREOS (Lat.), n. I(e)-re-2-o's. The root of Iris florentina. [B, 5 (a, 24).]—Wild I. The Iris foetidissima. [A, 505 (a, 21).]

IRIAN, adj. I'ri-2-a-2n. Fr., irien. See IRIDAL.

IRIANCISTRON (L. t.), IRIANKISTRUM (Lat.), IRIAN-KISTRON (Lat.), n's n. I(e)-ri-2-a-2n(a'2n)-si's(ki's)tro'2n, -ki's'tro'2n-a-2n(a'2n)-ki's'tro'2n. From ips, the iris of the eye, and ἄκιστρον, a fish-hook. Ger., Irishaken. A hook-shaped instrument used in the operation for artificial pupil by separation. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIBLE (Fr.), n. E-re-bl'. The Atriplex hortensis. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

IRIDACEÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. I(e)-ri-2-d-a(a')se-2(ke-2)-e(a-3-e-2). From Iris, one of the genera. Fr., iridacées. An order of Lindley's narcissal alliance, corresponding essentially with the Iridacæ. [B, 19, 34, 170 (a, 24).] The Iridæ (Fr., iridées; Ger., Irideen, Schwertlilien) are: Of De Candolle, an order of the Monocotyledoneæ phanerogamæ, subsequently of the Endogeneæ phanerogamæ; and of Bentham and Hooker, an order of the Epigynæ, comprising the Moracæ, Sisyrinchicæ, and Ixiacæ. [B, 1, 42, 170 (a, 24).]

IRIDADENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-ri-2-d-a-2d(a'2d)-e-2n-o'si's. Gen., -o's'eos (-is). From ips, the iris, and ἀδέν, a gland. Ger., Irishrüsenkrankheit. A glandular disease of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDÆA (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-ri-2-d-e'(a'3'e-2)-a-3. From ips, a bright-colored circle surrounding another body. Fr., iridée. A genus of rose-spired cryptonemiacious Algæ. [B, 19, 121 (a, 24).]—I. edulis. A species having a tough, dark-red rind, sometimes eaten in Ireland and elsewhere, and in England said to be used as a sudorific and febrifuge. It also furnishes a dye (probably fugitive). [B, 19, 173 (a, 24).]—I. palmata. The Halimena palmata. [B, 173 (a, 24).]

IRIDÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. I(e)-ri-2-d-e'(a'3'e-2)-mi-2-a-3. From ips, the iris, and αἷμα, blood. Ger., Regenbogenhautblutung. Hæmorrhage from the iris. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIDAL, adj. I'ri-2-d'l. From ips, the iris. Fr., irien, iridien. Pertaining to the iris.

IRIDALGIA (Lat.), n. f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a-2(a'2)ji'2gi'a-3. From ips, the iris, and άλγος, pain. Fr., iridalgie. Ger., Iridalgie, Regenbogenhautschmerz. The pain and annoyance caused by the presence of isolated synechiæ in the iris. [F.]

IRIDALLOCHROSIS (Lat.), n. f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a-2(a'2)lo'lo's)-kro-(ch'2ro')si's. Gen., -chros'eos (-is). From ips, the iris, ἄλλος, different, and χρῶσις, a coloring. Ger., Irisherfärbung. A change in the color of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDANCISTRON (Lat.), IRIDANKISTRON (Lat.), n's n. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a-2n(a'2n)-si's(ki's)tro'2n, -ki's'tro'2n. See IRIDANKISTRUM.

IRIDARÆOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a-2(a'2r)-e(a-3-e-2)-o'si's. Gen., -o's'eos (-is). From ips, the iris, and ἀραιός, a becoming thin or porous. See IRIDOLEPTYNIS.

IRIDARIÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a(a'3)-ri-ri'2(e)-e(a-3-e-2). From ips, an order of plants. Of Dumortier, an order of the Gynochlamydeæ, consisting of the Iridacæ, Alstromeriaceæ, Hypocidææ, and Campynemaceæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

IRIDATION, n. I'ri-2-d-a'shu'n. See IRIDESCENCE.

IRIDAUXE (Lat.), IRIDAUXESIS (Lat.), n's f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-a-2x'(a'3'ux)-e(a), -a'2x'(a'2'ux)-e(a)si's. Gen., -aux'es (-æ), es'eos (-is). From ips, the iris, and αὐξήσις or αὐξησις, growth. Fr., irid-auxésis. Ger., Regenbogenhautver dickung. An old term for a tumefaction or hypertrophy of the iris, usually from exudation of fibrous matter into its tissue. [F.]

IRIDAVULSION, n. I'ri-2-d-a-2-vu'3(1)shu'3n. From ips, the iris, and avulsio, a plucking off. The total removal of the iris by tearing it from its peripheral attachment. [L, 107.]

IRIDEA (Lat.), n. f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-e(a)3. See IRIDEA.

IRIDECTOMEDIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-e-2kt-o-(o-2)-me(ma)-di-2-a-2(a'2)ji'2(u's)-si's. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ys). From ips, the iris, ἐκτρομή, a cutting out, and διάλυσις, a separating. Of I. A. Schmidt, an old method of making an artificial pupil, which consisted in detaching a portion of the iris at its periphery, and excising the portion so detached. [F.]

IRIDECTOME, n. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-e-2k'tom. From ips, the iris, and ἐκτρομή, a cutting out. Ger., Regenbogenhautausschneider. A knife used in iridectomy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDECTOMIRT (Ger.), n. E-re-de-2k-to-mert'. A person on whom iridectomy has been performed.

IRIDECTOMY, n. I'2(e)-ri-2-d-e-2k'to-mi-2. Lat., iridectomia (from ips, the iris, and ἐκτρομή, a cutting out). Fr., iridectomie. Ger., Iridectomie, Iridektomie, Regenbogenhautexcision, Regenbogenhautausschneider. It, iridectomia. Sp., iridectomia. The excision of a piece of the iris involving its entire breadth, from sphincter margin to peripheral attachment, thus forming an artificial pupil; done to improve vision, to influence the course of an active disease (e. g., glaucoma, iritis, or corneal ulcer), to prevent the occlusion and exclusion of the pupil, and as a stage in the extraction of cataract. The operation consists in opening the anterior chamber and excising a piece of iris. The lids are held open by a spring speculum, and the eyeball fixed in position by fixation forceps. The incision is usually made with a bent lance-knife in the limbus or scleral margin, but exceptionally nearer the corneal centre. It may be made upward or downward, inward or outward, according to circumstances. As soon as the point of the knife is seen in the anterior chamber, the knife is to be pushed forward in front of and parallel to the iris, a varying distance according to the size of the desired artificial pupil. In withdrawing the knife, the handle should be depressed so that the point is brought near or against the posterior surface of the cornea, so as to avoid wounding the capsule of the lens. A fine iris-forceps is then introduced (closed) through the wound as far as the peripheral margin of the sphincter, and then opened, and the iris seized and drawn out. If there are no pupillary adhesions, this is done with the greatest ease, but if there are either posterior or anterior adhesions, this may require some force. As soon as the iris is drawn out of the wound and put on the stretch, it is to be cut off close to the eyeball with a pair of scissors curved on the flat. A piece of iris is thus excised up to the extreme periphery, giving the resulting pupil the shape of a keyhole. [F.]—Antiphlogistic I. An i. performed for the purpose of subduing or preventing inflammation. [a, 29].—Diametric I. I. performed on opposite sides of the same eye, so that the pupil extends diametrically from one edge of the cornea to the other. [a, 29].—Optical I. An i. performed for the improvement of vision. [a, 29].

IRIDECTROPIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2k-tro(tro^2)pi^2-u^2m(u^4m)$. From iris, the iris, and εκτροπιον, an eversion. Ger., Auswärtswendung der Regenbogenhaut. An eversion of a portion of the iris. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIDELCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2k-ko'si^2s$. Gen., -os'cos (-is). From iris, the iris, and ελκος, ulceration. Ger., Iridelkosis. It., iridelcosi. An old term for ulceration of the iris. [F.]

IRIDENCELEISIS (Lat.), IRIDENCELEISMUS (Lat.), n. f. and m. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2n^2-kli^2s(kle^2-es)^2s$, $-kli^2z(kle^2i^2s)-mi^2s(mi^4s)$. Gen., -cleis'cos (-is), -cleis'mi. From iris, the iris, and εγκλειν, to shut in. Fr., iridencleise, iridencleisis. Ger., Iridencleisis, Regenbogenhaut einschliessung. It., iridencleisi, iridencleisi. An operation for artificial pupil, devised by Adams in 1812, and by Himly in 1816, which consists practically in displacement of the pupil. An incision is made through the cornea near its periphery, a portion of the latter is detached, and the iris caused to prolapse through the wound; either by pressure or by introducing a Tyrrell's hook into the anterior chamber, and pulling it out. The pupil is thus displaced toward the wound, and away from the opaque spot in the cornea which interfered with vision. The prolapsed portion of the iris is strangulated in the corneal wound, and drops off. [F.]

IRIDECTROPIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2n-tro(tro^2)pi^2-u^2m(u^4m)$. From iris, the iris, and εντροπιον, a turning inward. Ger., Einwärtswendung der Regenbogenhaut. Inversion of a portion of the iris. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIDEOUS, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-e^2-a^2s$. Fr., irideux. Belonging to or having the characters of the Irideæ. [a, 35.]

IRIDEREMIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2r-e(a)^2mi^2-a^2$. From iris, the iris, and ερρημία, a want of, Fr., iridémie. Ger., Iris-mangel, Irideremie. It., mancazza dell'iride. Sin, falta del iris. Absence or loss of the iris, either partial or entire, acquired or congenital; sometimes intentionally produced by an operation. [F.]—I. partialis. An interruption in the iridal ring, half or even less of the normal iris being present; a congenital defect. [F.]

IRIDES (Lat.), n. p. $I(e)ri^2d-ez(e^2s)$. Pl. of iris (q. v.); of Jussieu, an order of plants corresponding essentially to the Irideæ. [B, 170 (a, 24).]

IRIDESCENCE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-e^2s'e^2ns$. From iridescere, to shine with the colors of the rainbow. 1. The property of decomposing light into the colors of the spectrum. 2. The condition or state of being iridescent. [L, 107; a, 17.]

IRIDESCENT, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-e^2s'e^2nt$. Lat., iridescens. Fr., iridescente. Ger., i., irisirend. It., iridescente. Glittering with many colors which change in different lights; possessing iridescence. [L, 343.]

IRIDESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-e^2s-i^2s$. Gen., -es'cos (-id'esis). From iris, the iris, and δεσις, a binding together. An operation for artificial pupil which consists in tying off a portion of the iris. [L, 107.]

IRIDEUX (Fr.), adj. E-re-du^s. See IRIDIOUS.

IRIDIAN, adj. $I-ri^2d-i^2-a^2n$. Fr., iridien. See IRIDAL.

IRIDIBROMIDE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i-brom-i^2d(id)$. A salt of bromidic acid; a compound of iridium tetrabromide with the bromide of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

IRIDIC, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2k$. Lat., iridicus. Fr., iridique. Ger., iridisch, Iridiann. Pertaining to iridium; containing iridium as a quadrivalent radicle. [B.]—I. acid. Fr., acide iridique. An acid, existing only in combination with bases, formed by treating iridium with potassium nitrate. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

IRIDICHLORIDE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-klor-i^2d(id)$. A salt of chloridic acid; a compound of iridium tetrachloride with the chloride of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

IRIDICYANIC ACID, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-si-a^2n-i^2k$. Fr., acide iridicyanique. Ger., Iridicyanwasser. A crystalline substance, $H_2-IR_2(C_2N_2)_4$, acting as a hexabasic acid. [B, 3.]

IRIDICYANIDE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-si-a^2n-i^2d(id)$. A salt of iridicyanic acid. [B, 3.]

IRIDIEN (Fr.), adj. E-re-de-a²ⁿ. See IRIDAL.

IRIDIN, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2n$. From iris, a genus of plants. Ger., I. An oleoresin obtained from the root of iris versicolor; used as a chologogue. [A, 319 (a, 21); B, 5 (a, 24).]

IRIDOBROMIDE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-o-brom-i^2d(id)$. A compound of iridous bromide with the bromide of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

IRIDIOCHLORIDE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-o-klor-i^2d(id)$. A compound of iridous chloride with the chloride of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

IRIDIONITRATE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-o-ni^2trit$. A compound of iridous nitrate with the nitrate of another element or radicle. [B, 3.]

IRIDIOUS, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-i^2-u^2s$. Fr., irideux. Containing iridium as a bivalent radicle. According to some, the term is used synonymously with irido-iridic, the term hypoiridous being used for i. [B.]

IRIDIPENNÉ (Fr.), adj. E-re-de-pe^{2nna}. From iris, the rainbow, and penna, a feather. Having iridescent wings. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

IRIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-i(e)^2ti^2s$. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). Fr., iridite. Ger., I. A more correct form of iritis (q. v.).

IRIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-i^2-u^2m(u^4m)$. From iris, the rainbow. Fr., i. Ger., I. It., Sp., iridio. A metallic element discovered by Tennant in 1804. It is found in nature associated with osmium and platinum. It is a white, lustrous, brittle metal, almost infusible, and heavier than platinum, having the sp. gr. of 22.38. It may also be obtained as a porous mass called spongy i., and as a very fine black powder called i. black. In composition it acts as a trivalent radicle, forming iridous salts, and as a quadrivalent radicle forming iridic salts. The soluble salts of i. are actively purgative and emetic. Symbol, Ir; atomic weight, 192.7. [B, 3; B, 88 (a, 30).]—Azotite d'i. (Fr.). See I. nitrite.—Bioxyde d'i. (Fr.). See I. dioxide.—Bisulfure d'i. (Fr.). See I. disulphide.—Chlorure d'i. (Fr.). See I. chloride.—I. arsenate. Fr., arséniate d'i. Ger., arsensaures I. A salt of i. and arsenic acid, a brown precipitate formed on adding sodium arsenate to i. chloride, and heating. [B, 2.]—I. bromide. Fr., bromure d'i. Ger., Irbromid (1st def.), Irbromid (2d def.). 1. See I. tribromide. 2. See I. tetrabromide.—I. chloride. Fr., chlorure d'i. Ger., Ichlorid (1st def.), Ichlorid (2d def.). 1. See I. trichloride. 2. See I. tetrachloride.—I. dioxide. Fr., dioxyde d'i., bioxyde d'i. Ger., Ioxyd. A black powder, IR_2O_3 , insoluble in acids. [B, 3; B, 158, 270 (a, 38).]—I. disulphide. Fr., bisulfure d'i. Ger., Iulfid. A black powder, IR_2S_2 . [B, 3.]—I. hydrate, I. hydroxide. Fr., hydrate d'i. Ger., Ihydrat. 1. I. sesquihydroxide, or irido-iridic hydroxide. 2. I. tetrahydroxide.—I. iodide. Fr., iodure d'i. Ger., Ijodid. See I. triiodide.—I. monosulphide. Fr., monosulfure d'i. Ger., Iulfür. A compound of i. and sulphur, IR_2S . [B, 3.]—I. nitrite. Fr., azotite d'i., nitrite d'i. Ger., Initrit, salpétrisaures I. A body, IR_2NO_2 , entering into the formation of the irido-nitrites. [B.]—I. oxide. Fr., oxyde d'i. Ger., Ioxydul (1st def.), Ioxyd (2d def.). 1. See I. sesquioxide. 2. See I. dioxide.—I. oxydhydrate (Ger.). See I. tetrahydroxide.—I. oxydulhydrate (Ger.). See I. sesquihydroxide.—I. sesquibromide. Fr., sesquibromure d'i. See I. tribromide.—I. sesquichloride. Fr., sesquichlorure d'i. See I. trichloride.—I. sesquihydroxide. Fr., I. sesquihydroxyd, I. oxydulhydrate. More properly, i. trihydroxide, a yellowish-green substance, $IR_2(OH)_3$; according to others, a black powder insoluble in acids, but having a violet modified form soluble in certain acids. [B, 3; B, 270 (a, 38).]—I. sesquioxide. Fr., sesquioxyde d'i. Ger., I. sesquioxyd. Irido-iridic oxide, IR_2O_3 , a bluish-black powder formed by heating i. in the air, and decomposed again by raising the temperature to 800° C. [B, 3.]—I. sesquisulphide. Fr., sesquisulfure d'i. Irido-iridic sulphide; a brown powder, IR_2S_2 . [B, 3.]—I. sulphide. Fr., sulfure d'i. See I. monosulphide, I. sesquisulphide, and I. disulphide.—I. sulphite. Fr., sulfite d'i. Ger., schwefligsaures Ioxydul. Irido-iridic sulphite, $IR_2(SO_3)_2 + 6H_2O$. It forms yellow crystals. [B, 3.]—I. tetrabromide. Fr., tétabromure d'i. Ger., Irbromid. Iridic bromide, a blue, crystalline substance, IR_2Br_4 . With hydrobromic acid it forms bromidic acid, and with the bromides of other metals double salts, called iridibromides. [B.]—I. tetrachloride. Fr., tétrachlorure d'i. Ger., Ichlorid. Iridic chloride, a substance, IR_2Cl_4 . With hydrochloric acid it forms chloridic acid, and with the chlorides of other metals double salts called iridichlorides. [B, 3.]—I. tetrahydroxide. Ger., Ioxydulhydrate. A substance, $IR_2(OH)_4$, having the color of indigo. [B, 3.]—I. triiodide. Fr., triiodure d'i. Ger., Ijodid. Iridic iodide, a black powder, IR_2I_3 . [B, 3.]—I. tribromide. Fr., tribromure d'i. Ger., Irbromür. Iridous bromide, a substance, $IR_2Br_3 + 8H_2O$, occurring in olive-green crystals. With the bromides of other elements and radicles it forms compound salts called iridibromides. [B, 3.]—I. trichloride. Fr., trichlorure d'i. Ger., Ichlorür. Iridous chloride, an olive-green substance, IR_2Cl_3 , forming, with the chlorides of other elements or radicles, double salts called iridochlorides. [B, 3.]—I. trihydroxide. See I. sesquihydroxide.—Monosulfure d'i. (Fr.). See I. monosulphide.—Oxyde d'i. (Fr.). See I. oxide.—Schwefligsaures Ioxydul (Ger.). IRIDALLOCHROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^2)-a^2(a^2)-lo(lo^2)-kro(ch^2ro)^2s'i^2s$. Gen., -chros'cos (-is). See IRIDALLOCHROSIS.

IRIDAVULSION, n. $I^2r-i^2d-o-a^2v-u^2i^2shu^2n$. See IRIDAVULSION.

IRIDOCELE (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^2)-se(ka)^2le(da)$. In Eng., $i^2r-i^2d-o-sel$. Gen., -cel'les (-ce). From iris, the iris, and κεληρ, a tumor. Fr., iridocèle. Ger., Irsvorfall. It., i. prolusso dell'iride. Prolapse of the iris through a perforating wound or ulcer in the cornea. [F.]

IRIDIOCHOROIDAL, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-o-kor-i^2oid-a^2l$. From iris, the iris, and χοριοειδής, chorioid. Pertaining to the iris and to the chorioid.

IRIDIOCHOROIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^2)-kor(ch^2o)^2r-i^2-oid-i(e)^2ti^2s$. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From iris, the iris, and χοριο-

εὐδής, chorioid (see also -itis). Fr., irido-chorioidite. Ger., Irido-chorioiditis, Entzündung der Regenbogenhaut der Aderhaut. Inflammation of the uveal tract (i. e., of the iris and chorioid). [F.]—Consecutive i. Lat., i. consecutiva. I. secondary to iritis. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Gummatous i. Lat., i. gummatosa. A very rare disease, running a course similar to iritis gummatosa, but very often involving the ciliary body, chorioid, and sclera, and leading to perforation of the latter before resolution. [F.]—I. sympathetic. See Sympathetic i.—I. traumatica. See Traumatic i.—Metastatic i. Lat., i. metastatica. Fr., irido-chorioidite metastatique. Ger., metastatische Irido-chorioiditis. A secondary, purulent i. occurring in the puerperal state, pyæmia, cerebro-spinal meningitis, or erysipelas. [F.]—Parenchymatous i. Lat., i. parenchymatosa. See Purulent i.—Plastic i. Lat., i. plastica. The usual form of i., characterized by circumcorneal injection, sensitiveness to pressure, discoloration and sluggishness of the iris, cloudiness of the aqueous humor, opacities in the vitreous, either fixed or floating, and marked failure of vision. [F.]—Purulent i. Lat., i. purulenta. An i. chiefly characterized by the rapid appearance and disappearance of a hypopyon which comes from the ciliary body. There is but little irritation or injection, and the aqueous humor is only slightly cloudy. This variety does not differ in its symptoms or course from the other forms of i. except in the character of the exudation. [F.]—Rheumatic i. Lat., i. rheumatica. A plastic form of i. with a marked tendency to relapses, due to a rheumatic diathesis. It is always chronic and obstinate in resisting treatment, and tends to the destruction of the ocular functions. [F.]—Secondary i. Any form of i. due to a pre-existent disease. [F.]—Serous i. Lat., i. serosa. See Cyclitis.—Simple i. See Plastic i.—Spontaneous i. Lat., i. spontanea. A primary i.; in its inception merely a cyclitis. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Suppurative i. Lat., i. suppurativa. See Purulent i.—Sympathetic i. Lat., i. sympathica. Fr., irido-chorioidite sympathique. Ger., sympathische I. A plastic i. in one eye, secondary to an i. usually traumatic in its fellow. It was until recently regarded as identical with sympathetic ophthalmia. It is always preceded by signs of irritation and is a very insidious, chronic, and destructive inflammation, having a most unfavorable prognosis. The main seat of the disease is in the iris and ciliary body, and there is more or less serous exudation in addition to the plastic. Treatment is of little avail, but the disease is sometimes self-limited. [F.]—Syphilitic i. Lat., i. syphilitica. See Gummatous i.—Traumatic i. Lat., i. traumatica. I., usually purulent in character, due to perforating wounds of the eyeball. [F.]

IRIDOCINESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-si^2n(ken)-e(a)/si^2s$. Gen., -es'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and κίνησις, movement. Ger., Irisbewegung, Regenbogenhautbewegung. The movement of the iris (contraction and expansion). [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIDOCOLOBOMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ko^2l-o(o^2)-bom/a^3$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). From ίρις, the iris, and κολόβωμα, a part taken away in mutilation. Fr., iridocolobome. Ger., Iriscolobom, Regenbogenhautspaltung (2d def.). 1. The part of the iris removed in an iridectomy. [F.] 2. See COLOBOMA iridis.

IRIDOCYCLITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-si^2k(ku^k)-li(e)l'e^2$. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ίρις, the iris, and κύκλος, a circle (see also -itis). Fr., iridocyclite. Ger., I. Inflammation of the iris and ciliary body. [F.]—Fibrinous i. Plastic i. I. accompanied by marked effusion of plastic lymph which results in firm adhesion between the iris and ciliary body and the capsule of the lens. [F, 26 (a, 29).]—Sympathetic i. Lat., i. sympathica. I. of sympathetic origin. [a, 29.]

IRIDO-CYCLO-CHORIOIDITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-si^2k(ku^k)-lo(lo^2)-kor(ch^2o^2r)-i^2-oid(i'e)/ti^2s$. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ίρις, the iris, κύκλος, a circle, and χοριοειδής, the chorioid (see also -itis). Inflammation of the iris, ciliary body, and chorioid, or of the entire uveal tract. [F.]

IRIDOCYTE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-o-sit$. From ίρις, the iris, and κύτος, a cell. Fr., i. cellule chatoyante. Ger., Interferenzzelle, Glanzzelle. A cell which produces color by reflection or interference of rays of light; due either to its physical structure or to the presence of granules. [Pouchet, "Jour. de l'anat.," 1876, p. 45 (J).]

IRIDODESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-e^2s'i^2s$. Gen., -des'eos (-odesis). From ίρις, the iris, and δέσμις, a binding together. Fr., iridodésis, iridodésis. Ger., I. 1. An operation for making an artificial pupil for optical purposes only, as in opacity of the cornea or lamellar cataract, the pupil being dislocated toward the periphery of the cornea and iris; devised by Critchett, of London. [F.] 2. An operation for lengthening the pupil or changing it into a narrow vertical slit by two small iridectomies at diametrically opposite points on the margin of the cornea; proposed by Bowman. [F.] 3. See IRIDESIS.

IRIDODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-di(di^2)-a^2l(a^3)l'i^2(u^9)-si^2s$. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ysis). From ίρις, the iris, and διάλυσις, a loosening. Fr., iridodialyse. Ger., Iridodialyse, Regenbogenhautablösung. 1. Properly, a detachment of the iris from its peripheral attachments, throughout a greater or less extent, for the purpose of forming an artificial pupil; of De Wecker, a modification of iridotomy after cataract extractions, when the pupil is occluded. An incision is made with a stop knife near the margin of the cornea, and a puncture is made through the iris. Two diverging incisions are then made from the puncture in the iris toward the opposite side of the cornea with De Wecker's scissors, and the portion of the iris included between these incisions is torn from its ciliary attachment. [F.; L, 87 (a, 29).] 2. Any separation of the iris from adhesions either to the cornea or the lens capsule. [F.]

IRIDODONESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-do^2n-e(a)/si^2s$. Gen., -es'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and δωνήσις, to shake. Fr., iridodonesis. Ger., Iridodonesis, Iriszittern. Tremulousness of the iris, the iris shaking like a thin veil on the slightest movement of the eyeball; due to relaxation of the zonule, dislocation of the lens, fluid vitreous, etc. [F.] Cf. HIPPUS.

IRIDO-ECTOMY, n. $I^2r-i^2d-o-e^2k'to-mi^2$. See IRIDECTOMY.

IRIDOCLEISIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-e^2n^2-kl'i'(kl'e^2)l'i^2$ -si^2s. Gen., -cleis'eos (-is). See IRIDOCLEISIS.

IRIDO-IRIDIC, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-o-i^2r-i^2d'i^2k$. Containing iridium as an apparently trivalent (but really as a quadrivalent) radical. [B.]

IRIDOKINESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ki^2n(ken)-e(a)/si^2s$. Gen., -es'eos (-is). See IRIDOCINESIS.

IRIDOKOLOBOMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ko^2l-o(o^2)-bom/a^3$. Gen., -om'atos (-atis). See IRIDOCOLOBOMA.

IRIDOL, n. I^2r-i^2d-ol . A hydrocarbon obtained from wood-tar, boiling at 47° C., and of the sp. gr. of 0.660. It has an aromatic ethereal odor, strongly refracts light, and is decomposed by chlorine into a camphor-like body, crystallizing in white needles, and an aromatic oil. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxvi (a, 39).]

IRIDOLEPTYNISIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-le^2p-ti^2n(tu^6n)^2$ -si^2s. Gen., -lyns'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and λέπτυνσις, attenuation. Ger., Dünnerwerden der Regenbogenhaut. Atrophy or attenuation of the iris. [A, 322.]

IRIDOLINE, n. $I^2r-i^2d-o-len$. A base, $C_{10}H_{16}N$, found in the thick oils of coal tar, boiling at 252° to 257° C., and difficult to crystallize; not to be confounded with its isomer lepidine. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

IRIDOMALACIA (Lat.), n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ma^2l(ma^2l)-a(a^3)l'i^2(ki^2)-a^2$. From ίρις, the iris, and μαλακία, softness. Fr., iridomalacie. Ger., Iridomalacie, Iriserweichung. Softening and degeneration of the iris, an atrophic condition, produced after long-continued inflammation, especially after rheumatic iritis. [F.]

IRIDOMEDIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-med(m'e^2d)-i^2-a^2l(a^2l)l'i^2(u^6)-si^2s$. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ysis). See IRIDOMEDIALYSIS.

IRIDOMELANOMA (Lat.), IRIDOMELANOSIS (Lat.), n's n. and f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-me^2l-a^2n(a^3n)-o^2ma^2$, -o^2si^2s. Gen., -om'atos (-atis), -os'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and μελάνωμα, blackness, or μελάνωσις, a becoming black. Fr., iridomélanome. Ger., Iridomelanom. The deposition of black pigment-masses in the tissue of the iris, either generally throughout the iris, or in circumscribed patches, like nodules or small tumors (which are not malignant). [F.]

IRIDOMESODIALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-mes(m'e^2s)-o(o^3)-di(di^2)-a^2l(a^2l)l'i^2(u^6)-si^2s$. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ysis). From ίρις, the iris, μέσος, middle, and διάλυσις, a separating. Ger., Lösung der Verwachsung der inneren Irisränder. The loosening of adhesions of the central margin of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDO-MOTOR, adj. $I^2r-i^2d-o-mot'o^2r$. From ίρις, the iris, and moveo, to move. Subservient motion in the iris. [a, 17.]

IRIDONCOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ko^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and ὄγκωσις, a puffing out. Fr., iridoncosose. Ger., Iridonkosis. Thickening of the iris, as from plastic exudation. [F.]

IRIDONCUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-n^2k(u^2s)(u^4s)$. From ίρις, the iris, and ὄγκος, a tumor. Ger., Irisgeschwulst. Any tumefaction or swelling of the iris. [F.]

IRIDOODEA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-od'e^2-a^3$. From ίρις, the iris, ὄβη, an egg, and εἶδος, resemblance. An oval conformation of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOPARALYSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pa^2r(pa^2r)-a^2l(a^2l)l'i^2(u^6)-si^2s$. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ysis). From ίρις, the iris, and παράλυσις, a loosening by the side. Paralysis of the iris.

IRIDOPARESIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pa^2r(pa^2r)-e^2-s'i^2s$. Gen., -es'eos (-par'esis). From ίρις, the iris, and πάρεσις, a letting go, paralysis. Fr., iridoparèse. Ger., theilweise Lähmung der Iris. Partial paralysis of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOPERIPHACITIS (Lat.), IRIDOPERIPHAKTIS (Lat.), n's f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pe^2r-i^2-fa(fa^2)-si^2ke(k'e^2)l'i^2s$, -ki^2ke(k'e^2)l'i^2s. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ίρις, the iris, περί, around, and φακός, anything shaped like lentils (see also -itis). An old and incorrect term for an inflammation of the capsule of the crystalline lens. [F.]

IRIDOPERIPHRACTIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pe^2r-i^2-fra^2k(fra^2k)l'i^2s$. Gen., -phract'is. From ίρις, the iris, περί, around, and φρακτός, fenced. Ger., Irisumwulstung. Of Ammon, iritis postica. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOPERISPHINXIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pe^2r-i^2-si^2n^2x'i^2s$. Gen., -sphinx'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, περί, around, and σφίγγις, a binding tight. A series of circular folds in the iris, near the sphincter margin, observed and described by Ammon. [F.]

IRIDOPHLEBOCLOSUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-fle(fle^2)-bo^2(bo^2)-ko^2l'p'o^2s$. From ίρις, the iris, φλέψ, a vein, and κλῆσις, the bosom. The venous sinus of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOPLANIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pla(pla^2)ni^2-a^3$. From ίρις, the iris, and πλάνη, a wandering. 1. See HIPPUS. 2. See IRIDANENOSIS.

IRIDOPLASMA (Lat.), n. n. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-pla^2z(pla^2s)/ma^2$. Gen., -plas'matos (-atis). From ίρις, the iris, and πλάσμα, anything molded. Of Gluge, a peculiar degeneration of the eye beginning in the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOPLEGIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-ple(pla^2)l'i^2(gi^2)-a^3$. From ίρις, the iris, and πληγή, a blow. Fr., iridoplégie. Ger., Irislähmung. See IRIDOPARALYSIS.—Associative i. Failure of the iris to respond to the stimulus of light, or the effort of accommodation. [Lewiss (a, 29).]—Photie i. Reflex i. Fr., iridoplégie réflexe. Failure of the iris to respond to the stimulus of light, without implication of its accommodative movements. [Lewiss (a, 29).]

IRIDOPTOSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2(e)-ri^2d-o(o^3)-p'to^2si^2s$. Gen., -ptos'eos (-is). From ίρις, the iris, and πτῶσις, a falling. Fr., iridoptose. Ger., Irisvorfall. An old term for prolapse of the iris through a perforating wound or ulcer of the cornea. [F.]

IRIDO-PUPILLAIRE (Fr.), adj. E-re-do-pu²-pel-la²r. From iridis, the iris, and pupilla, the pupil of the eye. Pertaining to or connected with the pupillary border of the iris. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

IRIDORRHAGAS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²r-ra²g(r²a²g)-u²s(a²s). Gen., -rhog'ados (-adis). From iridis, the iris, and ρῥῆγας, a rent. An old term for coloboma iridis. [F.]

IRIDORRHEXIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²r-re²x(rax)'i²s. Gen., -rhex'eos (-is). From iridis, the iris, and ρῥῆξις, a breaking. Fr., i. Ger., I. Iridectomy combined with iridivulsion; used in cases in which the iris has become brittle and adheres to the capsule of the crystalline lens. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

IRIDORRHOGÉ (Lat.), IRIDORRHŌX (Lat.), n's f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²r-ro²-je(ga), -ro²x(rox). Gen., -or'rhog'es, -rhog'os (-rhog'is). From iridis, the iris, and ρῥῆγ, a cleft. See IRIDORRHAGAS.

IRIDORRHYTIDOMA (Lat.), IRIDORRHYTIDOSIS (Lat.), n's n. and m. I²(e)-ri²d-o²r-ri(ru²)-ti²-do²'ma², -do²'si²s. Gen., -om'atos (-atis), -os'eos (-is). From iridis, the iris, and ρῥυτις, a wrinkle. Corrugation of the iris. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOSCHISIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²s'ki²(ch²i²)-si²s. Gen., -schis'os (-oschi'sis). From iridis, the iris, and σχισις, a cleaving. The formation of an iridoschisma. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

IRIDOSCHISMA (Lat.), n. n. I²(e)-ri²d-o(o²)-ski²z(sch²i²s)'ma². Gen., -schis'matos (-atis). From iridis, the iris, and σχισμα, a cleft. See COLOBOMA IRIDIS.

IRIDOSMINE (Fr.), n. E-re-dos-men. Ger., Iridosmium. A native alloy of iridium and osmium, occurring in small grains and scales of a steel-gray color and metallic lustre, also in hexagonal prisms. [L, 30, 41, 107 (a, 14).]

IRIDOSTERESIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o(o²)-ste²r-e(a)'si²s. Gen., -es'teos (-is). From iridis, the iris, and στέρεσις, a deprivation. See IRIDEREMIA.

IRIDOTENCELEISIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²t-e²n²-klei'(kle²'i²)-si²s. Gen., -cleis'eos (-is). See IRIDENCELEISIS.

IRIDOTOME, n. I²r-i²d-o²-tom. From iridis, the iris, and τομή, a cutting. A cutting instrument for use in iridotomy. [a, 29.]

IRIDOTOMÉDIALYSE (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o(o²)-to(to²)-me(ma)-di(di²)-a²l'i²(a²ly)'i²(u²)-si²s. Gen., -ys'eos (-al'ysis). From iridis, the iris, τομή, a cutting, and διάλυσις, a loosening. Fr., iridotomédiolyse. See IRIDOMÉDIALYSE.

IRIDOTOMENCELEISIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o(o²)-to(to²)-me²n²-klei'(kle²'i²)-si²s. Gen., -cleis'eos (-is). From iridis, the iris, τομή, a cutting, and ἐγκλείν, to shut in. See IRIDENCELEISIS.

IRIDOTOMIA (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o(o²)-to(to²)'mi²-a². From iridis, the iris, and τομή, a cutting. Fr., iridotomie. Ger., Iridotomie. Fritomie, Irissschnitt, Regenbogenhautenschnittung. It, Sp., iridotomia. 1. Iridotomy. 2. A term now specially applied to the method of forming an artificial pupil by the natural gaping of a simple incision in the iris, or by making a V-shaped incision, and allowing the tongue-shaped piece to retract. It is only applicable when the lens is absent. It may be done with knife or scissors. [F.]

IRIDOTOMY, n. I²r-i²d-o²'o-mi². Lat., iridotomia (from iridis, the iris, and τομή, a cutting). Fr., iridotomie. Ger., Iridotomie. 1. Originally, a division of the sphincter iridis through a corneal incision. 2. As now used, any incision into the iris. [F.]—Extra-ocular i. I. in which the iris is allowed to prolapse or is drawn out through a wound in the cornea before the incision is made and is then replaced. [“Ctbl. f. d. ges. Therap.,” Jan., 1888 (a, 29).]

IRIDOTROMOS (Lat.), IRIDOTROMŌS (Lat.), n's m. I²(e)-ri²d-o²t(ro²)-mo²s, -mu²s(mu²s). From iridis, the iris, and τρόμος, a trembling. See IRIDONONESIS and HIPPUS.

IRIDOVALOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri²d-o²-val(wa²l)-o²'si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From iridis, the iris, and ovum, an egg. See IRIDOODEA.

IRIEN (Fr.), adj. Ere-a²n². See IAIDAL.

IRIGENIUM (Lat.), n. n. I²(e)-ri²-jen(ge²n)'i²-u²s(m'u²m). From iridis, a rainbow, and γένος, a race. The Verbena officinalis. [B, 121 (a, 35).]

IRINE, n. I'ren. Lat., irinum (from irinos, belonging to the plant Iris). Fr., i. A substance, C₁₁H₁₆O₂, similar to camphor, and having a strong odor of orris-root, distilled from the root of Iris florentina, and forming pearly-white scales. [B, 38, 93, 125 (a, 14).]

IRIO (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)'ri²-o. Gen., -o'nis. The Sisymbrium i. officinale. [B, 19 (a, 24).]—I. altera. The Sisymbrium polyceratum. [B, 121.]

IRION (Fr.), n. E-re-o²n². 1. The Sinapis arvensis. 2. The Polygonum fagopyrum. [B, 38 (a, 11).]

IRIPA, n. A tree growing in Malabar and producing a purgative resin. [B, 88 (a, 39).]

IRIS (Lat.), n. f. I'e)'ri²s. Gen., ir'idos (-idis), ir'eos (-is). Gr., ir'is. Fr., i. rhizome d'i. varié (4th def.), glacé bleu (4th def.). Ger., I. Regenbogenhaut (1st def.), Schwertel (3d def.), Schwertelie (3d def.), verschiedenfarbige Schwertelie (4th def.). 1. A thin, circular, contractile membrane, hanging vertically like a curtain in the anterior chamber. It is attached at its periphery to the sclero-corneal margin by means of the ligamentum pectinatum, and perforated near its centre by a circular hole called the pupil. It forms the anterior segment of the uveal coat of the eye. Its posterior surface is covered with pigment. It contains a set of circular muscular fibres, the sphincter, which contracts the pupil; and radiating fibres of elastic tissue which dilate the pupil. The i. is of all colors in birds. [F; L, 343.] See cut under EYE. 2. A term for any morbid condition of the skin appearing in the form of a circle or of intersecting circles the centres of which are marked by an intolenceous. [A, 326 (a, 21).] 3. The flower-de-luce, a genus of iridaceous herbs. 4. Of the U. S. Ph., blue flag, the rhizome and rootlets of I. versicolor. [a, 24.]—American dwarf-i. The I. verna. [B, 275 (a, 24).]

a, the iris; b, the crystalline lens; c, the cornea; d, the pupil; e, the anterior chamber; f, the posterior chamber.

1. A species closely allied to I. pallida, indigenous to the coast region of Macedonia and the southwestern shores of the Black Sea, Hersek, in the Gulf of Ismid, and around Adalia in Asia Minor, and growing also, probably as a naturalized plant, in the vicinity of Florence and Lucca. It is one of the sources of orris-root (see 3d def.). 2. Of Savi, see I. germanica. 3. In the U. S. Secondary List, 1870, orris-root, obtained from I. germanica, I. pallida, and I. florentina, cathartic, and in large doses emetic; once used as a diuretic in dropsy, but now chiefly employed, on account of its delicate violet odor, as an ingredient in tooth-powders and perfumes. It is also used by the French for making issue-peas. [B, 5, 18, 19, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. foetida, I. foetidissima. Fr., i. fétide, espatule, glaieul (ou i.) puant, i. gigot. Ger., stinkender Schwertel. Stinking gladwyn, roast-beef-plant, blue seggin. Its root, radix iridis (seu spathulae foetidae, seu iridis foetidissimae), was once employed in European medicine as a cathartic, emetic, and anodyne, but is now little used. [B, 5, 173, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—I. foetidissima flavescens. Fr., i. jaunâtre. A variety of I. foetida. [B, 173 (a, 24).]—I. fugax. See I. sisyrrinchium.—I. germanica. Pers., bekh-i-banaphashdā. Ar., Irsa. Guz., Kevarā-nu-mūla. Bom., bātvaekhandā. Fr., flamme, glaieul bleu, glé, i. des jardins, i. commun, i. d'Allemagne. Ger., deutscher Schwertel, Himmelsschwertel, Gilgen, Himmelslilie, blane Lilie. One of the chief sources of orris-root (see I. florentina [3d def.]). It is common about Florence and Lucca. It is employed in the form of a paste and powder. The root is used as a deobstruent, aperient, and diuretic, and also externally as an application to sores and pimples. [A, 479 (a, 21); B, 18, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. gigot (Fr.). See I. foetida.—I. green. Fr., verdelt, vert d'i. A pigment, formerly used by miniature painters, prepared from the juice of the flowers of I. florentina, with a little chalk or alum added. [B, 77 (a, 24).]—I. hexagona. Of Walter, a species frequent in swamps and pools in the southern United States. [B, 34 (a, 24).]—I. illyrica. Of the ancients, probably the I. germanica. [B, 18 (a, 35).]—I. jambon (Fr.). Ger., Wasser-Schwertel, Bastardkalmus, Teichlilie, Schluttenkraut, Blut- (oder Drachen-, oder Acker-) wurz. Dragon-root, Jacob's sword, water (or yellow) flag, yellow flower-deuce; formerly official in the London Ph. under the name of Gladiolus luteus. Its root, radix acori vulgaris (seu adulterini, seu palustris), seu radix pseud-acori (seu ireos palustris), has an acrid styptic taste, and has been used in European medicine as an emetic and sialagogue, and in dropsy, dysentery, and various other diseases. It is sometimes mixed with calamus-root, from which it may be distinguished by its astringent taste, dark color, and lack of aroma. The seed has been used as a substitute for coffee. A new carbohydrate, irisin, has been isolated from this plant. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxv (a, 39); B, 18, 77, 180, 275 (a, 24).]—I. puant (Fr.). See I. foetida.—I. pumila. Fr., i. uain. Dwarf i.; a small species found in Hungary. [B, 19, 34, 275 (a, 24).]—I. root. See I. (2d def.) and I. florentina (3d def.).—I. sambucina. Elder-scented i.; a thick-rooted species found in southern Europe. [Reese, B, 34 (a, 24).]—I. sibirica. Fr., i. des prés. Ger., sibirischer Schwertel, Wiesenschwertel. A species found in Europe and North Asia. Its resin is vulnerary and astringent. Its root is emetic and purgative and is used in Siberia in syphilis. [B, 18, 19 (a, 24); B, 88 (a, 39).]—I. silvestris. See I. germanica.—I. sisyrrinchium. Fr., i. double-bulbe. The Moraea sisyrrinchium. [B, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—I. squalens. IRISIN, n. I-ri's-i'n. Fr., irisine. Ger., I. 1. A shining white carbohydrate obtained by Wallach from the rhizome of the Irish pseudacorus. It forms with water a pasty magma and, with very gentle heat, a perfectly clear solution, which is officially dextrorotatory, and does not give any color reaction with iodine. It is apparently very closely related to, though not identical with, inulin. 2. An oleoresin obtained by precipitating with water the tincture of the rhizome of Irish versicolor; it is employed in the form of pills, in doses of 0.15 to 0.20 grammes, as an emetic and drastic purgative, and in smaller doses as a diuretic. IRITIS (Lat.), n. f. I²(e)-ri(re)ti's. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ἵρις, the rainbow. Fr., i. irite. Ger., I. Regenbogenhautentzündung. It., irite, iridite. Sp., i. Inflammation of the tissue of the iris from whatever cause. It may be primary or secondary; acute or chronic; idiopathic or traumatic. It is a purely local affection or dependent on a constitutional taint. The symptoms are swelling and discoloration of the iris, a more or less immovable pupil, adhesions of the posterior surface of the iris to the anterior capsule, irregularity of the pupil, ciliary infection of the eyeball, diminution of vision, and pain. [F.]—Arthritic i. See Gouty i.—Gelatinous i. Fr., i. gélatineuse. Ger., gelatinöse Regenbogenhautentzündung. An inflammation of the iris characterized by a spongy or gelatinous exudation in the pupillary space or at the bottom of the anterior chamber and appearing like flocculi. It is fibrous, and consists of a network of fibrillae, inclosing red and white blood-corpuscles and a finely granular substance. It is usually of a gouty or rheumatic nature. [F.]—Gonorrhoeal i. Fr., i. gonorrhéique. Ger., gonorrhöische Regenbogenhautentzündung. A mixed form of i., partly plastic, partly serous, occurring in patients suffering from gonorrhoea, and usually immediately preceded by an arthritic inflammation. [F.]—Gouty i. Fr., i. gouteuse. Ger., gichtische Regenbogenhautentzündung. An inflammation of the iris occurring during an attack of gout, or in persons of gouty diathesis, and resembling very closely the rheumatic form of i., especially in the severity of the pain, the frequent relapses, and the spongy or gelatinous exudation. [F.]—Gummatus i. Lat., i. gummata. Fr., i. gommeuse. Ger., gummöse i. (oder Regenbogenhautentzündung). A variety of syphilitic i. occurring in the latter stages of constitutional syphilis, characterized by the formation of one or more nodules or gummata in the tissue of the iris, with relative integrity of the neighboring tissue. These gummata vary in size, usually grow from the posterior surface of the iris close to the sphincter margin, but may grow from any part of the iris, and sometimes attain an enormous size. There is always a plastic i. present. The term is improperly applied to I. papulosa. [F.] See Syphilitic i.—I. bleonorragica. Fr., i. bleonorragique. Ger., eiterige Regenbogenhautentzündung. See Parenchymatous i.—I. rheumatica. Fr., i. rhumatismale (arthritique). Ger., rheumatische Regenbogenhautentzündung. I. occurring in the course of an attack of articular rheumatism or in rheumatic persons. It is of the plastic character, but both objective and subjective symptoms are very severe, the duration is very chronic, the obstinacy in resisting treatment very marked, and the prognosis is by no means favorable. There is marked tendency to relapses, and usually the episcleral tissue, and even the superficial layer of the sclera, seems to be involved in the process. There may also occur a gelatinous or spongy exudation into the anterior chamber. [F.]—I. scrophulosa. Fr., i. scrophuleuse. Ger., scrophulöse Regenbogenhautentzündung. A plastic form of i., said by Arlt to occur in scrofulous children and to be due to scrofula. [F.]—I. secondaire (Fr.). I. accompanying inflammation of other parts of the eye. [F.]—Parenchymatous i. Lat., i. parenchymatosa, i. suppurativa. Fr., i. parenchymateuse. Ger., parenchymatöse Regenbogenhautentzündung. I. characterized by the exudation, usually, of lymphoid or pus cells into the tissue of the iris. This may be general or localized in spots; if the latter, it gives rise to the various names of nodules, tubercles, condylomata, etc. In addition, there is marked proliferation of the connective-tissue framework. [F.]—Plastic i. Lat., i. plastica. Fr., i. plastique, i. simple. Ger., plastische Regenbogenhautentzündung. A simple exudative i. in which the exudation occurs usually on the posterior surface of the iris and along the sphincter margin of the pupil, though it may occur on the anterior surface and even in the tissue of the iris. The exudation consists usually of cells and a highly coagulable material. This form of i. is the most frequent of all. [F.]—Primary i. I. which is not the result of an injury or of pre-existing disease of another part of the eye. [a, 29].—Quiet i. I. not accompanied by the typical features of inflammation. [N. Y. Med. Jour., July 14, 1888, p. 51 (a, 29).—Recurrent i., Relapsing i. Fr., i. récurrente. Ger., recidivirende (oder recurrirende) Regenbogenhautentzündung. I. occurring, either in an acute or chronic form, idiopathically or after diseases of the conjunctiva and cornea, characterized by a decoloration and opaque appearance of the iris, the slight thickening or non-thickening of the vitreous humor, and the absence of plastic exudation. [A. 326 (a, 21).—Specific i. See I. gummata.—Spongy i. Fr., i. spongieuse. Ger., schwammige Regenbogenhautentzündung. See Gelatinous i.—Suppurative i. See Parenchymatous i.—Syphilitic i. Lat., i. syphilitica. Fr., i. syphilitique. Ger., syphilitische i. A form of i. due to syphilis; the most frequent variety of i. Syphilitic i. occurs usually in the secondary stage of syphilis and is characterized by the development of nodules in the substance of the iris, which from the period at which they occur must be regarded as analogous to the papular growths; hence the name i. papulosa applied to this form of syphilitic i. The nodules are yellowish-red, usually rather small, and are situated along the pupillary and ciliary margins of the iris but not in the intermediate zone. At other times syphilitic i. presents no characteristic signs, particularly when, as is rarely the case, it occurs in the later stages of syphilis. In exceptional cases, in these late forms of syphilitic i., gummata occur. [B.]—Traumatic i. See I. traumatica.—Tubercular i. Lat., i. tuberculosa. Fr., i. tuberculeuse. I. following tuberculosis of other organs and appearing in the form of grayish-yellow spots, first in the periphery of the iris and afterward in the iris itself. [A. 326 (a, 21).—Variolous i. See I. variolosa.

IRITOMY, n. I²-i²'o-mi't. From ἵρις, the iris, and τομή, a cutting. Fr., iritomie. Ger., Iritomie. See IRIDOTOMY.

IRON, n. I²-rn. Gr., σίδηρος. Lat., ferrum. Fr., fer. Ger., Eisen. It., ferro. Sp., hierro. A metallic element known to the ancients. It occurs in nature both in the uncombined state (chiefly in the form of meteoric masses) and combined with oxygen and other elements, constituting a variety of minerals. Among these minerals are magnetite (magnetic i., ore, loadstone, the ferric oxidum magneticum of the Br. Ph.), franklinite, red and brown hematite, siderite, and i.-stone. I. is also present to a small extent in certain vegetable tissues, and forms an essential constituent of the haemoglobin of the blood. It is employed in medicine as a reconstituent tonic in anemic conditions however originating, the essential feature in all of them being a deficiency of i. in the blood. The compounds of i. with the mineral acids are used locally as astringents and styptics. Some of the preparations of i. (e. g., the iodide and chloride) appear to have special virtues. When pure, i. is a hard, tenacious, lustrous, grayish-white substance, highly ductile and malleable, having a slight astringent taste, and emitting an odor when rubbed. In this form it is official in the U. S. Ph. and Br. Ph. as ferrum, and in the Fr. Cod. as fer métallique. It may also be obtained in the form of a light, soft, dull-gray powder, by reduction of an i. oxide or chloride with hydrogen. This constitutes the reduced i. or i. by hydrogen (ferrum reductum) [U. S. Ph., 1875, Ger. Ph., ferrum reductum [Br. Ph., U. S. Ph.], fer réduit par l'hydrogène [Fr. Cod.]]. Under the form of i. filings (limatura ferri) it is official as the ferrum pulveratum of the Ger. Ph. These form a lustrous powder completely soluble in dilute hydrochloric and in sulphuric acids. The sp. gr. of pure i. is 7.84. At a red heat i. becomes soft, and two fragments of the metal at a white heat can be welded together. Exposed to a higher temperature, i. becomes brittle. It is said to melt at a temperature of about 1,500° C.; but this limit is too low, and should be placed at from 1,900° to 2,100° C. I. combines with carbon in different proportions, and in this way the different commercial varieties of the metal are formed. Wrought i. contains the least carbon (from 0.15 to 0.3 per cent.), has a fibrous structure, and is soft and very tenacious. Cast i. contains 5 per cent. of carbon, either in combination as an i. carbide, or under the form of free graphite, is harder and more brittle, and has a crystalline or granular structure. Steel is i. containing 0.6 per cent. or more of carbon. I. also varies in physical properties according as it contains sulphur, phosphorus, silicon, manganese, copper, or arsenic. I. combines directly with a great number of elements. In composition it acts sometimes apparently as a dyad, forming ferrous salts, sometimes apparently as a triad, forming ferric salts, and sometimes forming compounds, called ferrous-ferric salts, in which it appears to act both as a dyad and as a triad. In reality, however, i. is probably in all of its compounds ordinarily a tetrad element, replacing 4 atoms of hydrogen, and occasionally a hexad, replacing 6 atoms of hydrogen (see FERRIC and FERROUS); Symbol, Fe.; atomic weight, 55.9. Sp., citrate ferrico-amónico [Sp. Ph.], Roum., feru citricu ammoniacatu [Roum. Ph.]. Syn.: i. and am- monia citrate, i. ammonio-citrate, soluble i. citrate. Ammonio-ferric citrate, occurring in transparent, garnet-colored, deliquescent scales readily soluble in water. Its exact chemical constitution is not known. It is prepared either by evaporating together 3 parts of solution of i. citrate and 1 part of water of ammonia [U. S. Ph.], or by temporarily forming i. citrate as in the process of the Br. Ph., which directs that 14 fl. oz. of solution of ammonia diluted with 2 imperial pints of distilled water be added to 8 fl. oz. of solution of i. persulphate, thus forming an i. oxide, the latter to be dissolved in a solution of 4 oz. (av.) of citric acid in distilled water, and heated, thus forming an i. citrate; and to the whole 5 fl. oz. of solution of ammonia added, and the resulting compound obtained by evaporation. The French preparation is made by mixing 100 parts of citric acid with an amount of the hydrated oxide of i. corresponding (to 59 parts of the dry oxide), and then adding 18 parts of the official solution of ammonia. The preparations of the other pharmacopœias are similar. [B.]—I. and ammonium citri-phosphate. Sp., fosfato de sesquióxido de hierro citrato ammoniacal. A preparation corresponding nearly to the ferrum phosphas of the U. S. Ph., made by dissolving 100 parts of powdered citric acid in 100 of water, adding ammonia enough to make its odor very perceptible, and 100 parts of powdered ferric phosphate, evaporating, and drying. It consists of greenish-red, amorphous scales or laminae, readily soluble in water, less soluble in dilute alcohol, insoluble in strong alcohol. [A. 447 (a, 38).]—I. and ammonium cyanide. See AMMONIUM ferrocyanide.—I. and ammonium sulphate. Lat., ferrum et ammonii sulphas. Fr., sulfate de fer ammoniacal (ou d'ammoniaque). A double sulphate of i. and ammonium. There are: 1. Ammonio-ferrous sulphate (Lat., ferrum sulfuricum oxydulatum ammoniatum [Russ. Ph.]; Fr., sulfate ammonio-ferrux; Ger., schwefelsaures Eisenoxydul-Ammonium), $FeSO_4(NH_4)_2 \cdot 6H_2O$, forming hard, greenish crystals, moderately soluble in water, and showing no tendency to efflorescence. 2. Ammonio-ferric sulphate (or alum), ammonium iron-alum (Lat., ferrum et ammonii sulphas [U. S. Ph.]), ferrum sulfuricum oxydatum ammoniatum [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.)], Russ. Ph.; Fr., sulfate ammonio-ferrique (ou ferrique ammoniacal), alum de fer ammoniacal; Ger., schwefelsaures Eisenoxydammonium ammoniakalischer Eisenalum), $Fe_2(SO_4)_3(NH_4)_2SO_4 + 24H_2O$, forming pale-violet-colored, octahedral crystals of acid astringent taste, and slightly acid reaction. It effloresces on exposure to the air, and is more soluble in water than the ammonio-ferrous salt. [B. 3, 5.]—I. and ammonium tartrate. Lat., ferrum et ammonii tartaras [U. S. Ph.], ferrum ammonio-tartras, tartaras ferrico-ammonicus [Fr. Cod.], tartrate ferrico-ammonique [Fr. Cod.], tartrate de fer ammoniacal (ou d'ammoniaque). Ger., weinsäures Eisenoxyd-Ammonium. Ammonio-ferric tartrate, a double salt of uncertain and probably variable composition, consisting of bright-red or yellowish-brown scales, soluble in water, and produced by forming a hydrated i. oxide in the usual way, using 90 parts of the solution of iron persulphate, then making a solution of ammonium tartrate by neutralizing tartaric acid dissolved in water with ammonia, adding an excess of 30 parts of tartaric acid, and mixing in the hydrated oxide, or by forming the hydrated i. oxide with 625 parts of the solution of i. perchloride [Fr. Cod.] and ammonia solution, and then mixing this oxide with 150 parts of tartaric acid, and adding an excess of the ammonia solution [Fr. Cod.]. [B. 8.]—I. and bismuth citrate. Lat., ferrum et bismuthi citras. A compound of i. and bismuth with citric acid. A solution called the solution of i. and bismuth citrate has been prepared by dissolving bismuth citrate in aqua ammonia, and mixing with i. and ammonium citrate. It is not, however, a compound but only a mechanical mixture of the ingredients which it contains. [B. 5.]—I. and hydrogen cyanide. See HYDRO-FERROCYANIC ACID.—I. and magnesium citrate. Lat., ferrum magnesi citras. A salt occurring in greenish or yellowish scales of acidulous taste, and readily soluble in water; prepared by dissolving 2 parts of freshly precipitated i. hydrate in an aqueous solution of 3 parts of citric acid, and adding magnesium carbonate until all the free acid is neutralized. [B. 5.]—I. and magnesium oxide. A crystalline substance, or a red powder, $Fe_2O_3 \cdot MgO$, compounded of ferric oxide and magnesia. [B. 3.]—I. and manganese carbonate. A mixture of ferrous and manganese carbonates, extemporaneously prepared, used, combined with sugar or syrup, in various unoffical preparations. [B. 5.]—I. and manganese iodide. A mixture of the iodides of these two metals, usually extemporaneously prepared, used in various syrups. [B. 5.]—I. and potassium ferrocyanide. See POTASSIUM ferrocyanide.—I. and potassium sulphate. Lat., ferrum et potassii sulphas. Fr., sulfate de fer et de potasse. Ger., schwefelsaures Eisenoxydkali. Potassio-ferric alum (or sulphate), ordinary i. alum, a substance, $Fe_2(SO_4)_3 \cdot K_2SO_4 + 2H_2O$, forming violet-colored octahedral crystals of astringent taste, and moderately soluble in water; sometimes used to replace the official ammonio-ferric sulphate. [B. 3.]—I. and potassium sulphide. Fr., sulfure de f. et de potassium. A substance, formerly official, occurring in purple acicular crystals; formed by melting together iron filings, potassium carbonate, and sulphur. [B. 3, 119.]—I. and potassium tartrate. Lat., ferrum et potassii tartaras [U. S. Ph.], ferrum tartaratum [Br. Ph.], tartaras ferrico-potassicus [Fr. Cod., Belg. Ph.], tartarus ferratus [Swiss Ph.] (seu ferruginosus [Gr. Ph.]), tartaras ferrico-kalicus [Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph., Swed. Ph.], kaliun ferro-tartaricum [Aust. Ph.], tartrate ferrico-potassique [Fr. Cod.] (ou de fer et de potassium). Ger., weinsäures Eisenoxydkali, Eisenweinstein. It., tartrate di ferro e di potassio, tartaro marziale-solubile. Sp., tartrato ferrico potásico [Sp. Ph.]. Roum., feru potasso-tartricu [Roum. Ph.]. A double salt, $C_4H_4O_6(FeOK)$, produced by the action of potassium bitartrate on freshly made hydrated i. oxide, and occurring as transparent scales of brownish-red or garnet-red color, and of sweetish taste. It is readily soluble in water, almost insoluble in alcohol. [B. 95 (a, 38).]—I. and quinine citrate. Lat., ferrum et quiniæ (seu quiniæ [Br. Ph., U. S. Ph., 1870]) citras [U. S. Ph.], chininum ferro-citricum [Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph., Russ. Ph.], citras quininae et ferri [Belg. Ph.], citras ferricus et citras chinini [Netherl. Ph.], citras ferro-chinicus [Swed. Ph.]. Fr. citrate de fer et de quinine. Ger. Eisenchinin-citrat, citronensaures Eisenchinin. A salt forming dark-golden scales of a greenish or reddish tinge, having a bitter taste, and completely soluble in water, almost insoluble in alcohol; prepared by adding to an aqueous solution of 88 parts of i. citras, 12 parts of dried quinine, and evaporating [U. S. Ph.]; by adding i. oxide (prepared by mixing together 8 fl. oz. of solution of ammonia and 4 fl. oz. of solution of i. persulphate in 4 pints of water) to a solution of 3 oz. (av.) of citric acid, heated over the water bath, thus forming a solution of an i. citrate, to which is then added freshly prepared quinine, precipitated by ammonia water from an acid solution of 1 oz. (av.) of quinine sulphate, 12 fluid drachms of solution of ammonia being finally added, and the whole evaporated [Br. Ph.]; or by adding 1 part of quinine precipitated by caustic soda from a solution of the sulphate to 3 parts of powdered i. (ferrous puteratum), and 6 parts of citric acid in 500 parts of water [Ger. Ph.]. The solution of i. and quinine citrate is the liquor ferri et quinae citratis of the U. S. Ph. [B. 81.]—I. and quinine cyanide. See QUININE FERRIC CYANIDE.—I. and sodium pyrophosphate. See FERRI PYROPHOSPHAS.—I. and sodium pyrophosphate. A solution of i. pyrophosphate in an aqueous solution of sodium pyrophosphate. The contained compound corresponds to the pyrophosphate de fer et de soude [Fr. Cod.] [B.] See FERRI ET SODII PYROPHOSPHAS.—I. and strychnine citrate. Lat. ferri et strychninae (seu strychnia) citras [U. S. Ph.]. Fr. citrate de fer et de strychnine. Ger. citronensaures Eisenstrychnin, Eisenstrychnin-citrat. A substance prepared by the mutual reaction of 1 part each of citric acid and strychnine, 98 parts of water, and 120 parts of ammonium citrate. It forms red scales, readily soluble in water, and of a very bitter taste. Its exact chemical constitution is not known. [B. 5, 95.]—I. and zinc oxide. A crystalline substance, Fe₂O₃ZnO. [B. 3.]—I. arsenate. Fr. arséniate de fer. 1. Ferrous arsenate (Lat. ferri arsenias [Br. Ph.], arsenias ferrosus [Fr. Cod.]; Fr. arséniate ferreux [Fr. Cod.]; Ger. arsensaures Eisenoxidul), Fe₂(AsO₄)₂, is prepared by the action of a solution of sodium arsenate, either alone [Fr. Cod.] or combined with sodium acetate [Br. Ph.] on a solution of ferrous sulphate. It is a white amorphous powder, devoid of taste and odor, and insoluble in water. Exposed to the air, it turns green, and is converted into a basic ferroso-ferric arsenate, 2Fe₂(AsO₄)₂·2Fe₂(AsO₄)₂·Fe₂O₃. 2. Normal ferric arsenate (Fr. arséniate ferrique; Ger. arsensaures Eisenoxydul), Fe₂(AsO₄)₂ + 4H₂O, occurs in nature as a mineral. [B. 5.] See also Moschidrit, arsenite.—I. arsenite. A compound of arsenic and i. One is known forming a white, brittle substance, FeAs, and another, FeAs₂, occurring in nature as a mineral. [B. 3.]—I. arsenite. Fr. arsénite de fer. A ferrous arsenite, Fe₂As₂O₆, formed by the action of a solution of arsenic trioxide upon ferrous sulphate. It is a greenish-white precipitate, becoming yellow on drying. Several basic ferric arsenites are known, one of which, Fe₂O₃(OH)₂As, is formed as bulky brown precipitate when ferric hydroxide (hydrated i. oxide) is added to a solution of arsenic trioxide. [B. 3.]—I. bark. See I. BARK.—I. benzoate. A substance, Fe₂(C₆H₅O₂)₂ + 6H₂O, obtained by treating a solution of i. tersulphate with a concentrated solution of sodium benzoate or ammonium benzoate, and drying the resultant precipitate. It occurs as a brownish-orange powder, almost tasteless, and slightly soluble in water and in alcohol. [B. 81 (α, 38).]—I. bloom. Syn. i. stab. A ball of malleable i. which has been puddled and shingled (e. g., hammered and squeezed) to the proper state of consolidation, in which process most of the cinders are forced out. [α, 38.]—I. bromide. Fr. bromure de fer. Ger. Bromisen. A compound of i. and bromine including: 1. Ferrous bromide (Lat. ferri bromidum; Fr. bromure ferreux [Fr. Cod.]; Ger. Eisenbromür), FeBr₂, is formed by the action of bromine on i. It may be obtained in the form of yellowish crystals, but usually occurs as a brick-red, deliquescent, and unstable substance that can be preserved by the addition of sugar, as in the syrupus ferri bromidi [U. S. Ph.]. The bromure ferreux of the Fr. Cod. is an aqueous solution of ferrous bromide containing about one third its weight of the salt. Hydrated ferrous bromide, FeBr₂ + 4H₂O, forms bluish-green tubular crystals. It is obtained by dissolving i. in aqueous hydrobromic acid. 2. Ferric bromide (Fr. bromure ferrique; Ger. Eisenbromid), Fe₂Br₆, is prepared by heating i. with an excess of bromine. It forms dark-red, deliquescent crystals. [B. 3.]—I. carbide. Lat. ferri carburetum. Fr. carbure de fer, fer carburé. A compound of i. and carbon. Ordinary metallic i. contains carbon in varying proportions; cast-i. contains most, wrought-i. least, and steel a medium amount. [B.]—I. carbonate. Lat. ferri carbonas. Fr. carbonate de fer. The only i. carbonate known is ferrous carbonate (Lat. carbonas ferrosus; Fr. carbonate ferreux; Ger. kohlensaures Eisenoxidul), a substance, FeCO₃, occurring in the crystalline state in nature, and obtained artificially by precipitation of a soluble ferrous salt with an alkaline carbonate. When so prepared it is a white, flocculent substance, which rapidly undergoes decomposition when exposed to the air, and becomes converted into ferric oxide, its color at the same time changing to a greenish and finally a brownish hue (see i. subcarbonate). This decomposition is hindered by mixing the precipitate with sugar, as in the official massa ferri carbonatis and mistura ferri composita. [B.]—I. carbonate with sugar. See FERRI CARBONAS SACCHARATUS.—I. by hydrogen. See REDUCED I.—I. chloride. Fr. chlorure de fer. Ger. Chlorisen, Eisenchlorür. Three i. chlorides are known: 1. Ferrous chloride (Lat. chloruretum ferrosium [Fr. Cod.]; Fr. chlorure ferreux; Ger. Eisenchlorür), FeCl₂, a substance forming colorless glistening scales, deliquescent in the air, and readily soluble in water and in alcohol. It occurs also combined with four molecules of water, FeCl₂ + 4H₂O, and then forms bluish, transparent crystals, which become green on exposure to the air. It is official in the latter form in the Fr. Cod. as chlorure ferreux cristallisé. 2. Ferric chloride (Lat. ferri chloridum, chloruretum ferricum [Fr. Cod.]; Fr. chlorure ferrique; Ger. Eisenchlorid), i. sesquichloride, or i. perchloride, Fe₂Cl₆, often called simply i. chloride, forms black iridescent laminae, which appear red by transmitted light, and exhibit a greenish metallic lustre by reflected light. It is readily soluble in water, alcohol, and ether, and deliquesces on exposure to the air. In the anhydrous state it constitutes the chlorure ferrique of the Fr. Cod. [Lat. chloruretum ferricum anhydricum [Belg. Ph.], chloro ferrico anhidro [Sp. Ph.]]. Combined with 12 molecules of water, Fe₂Cl₆ + 12H₂O, it is an orange-colored substance of crystalline structure, constituting the ferri chloridum of the U. S. Ph. and the ferrum sesquichloratum of the Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph., and Russ. Ph. It also occurs combined with five molecules of water, Fe₂Cl₆ + 5H₂O, forming reddish crystals, or six molecules of water, Fe₂Cl₆ + 6H₂O, forming yellowish crystals. This compound is a powerful astringent and styptic. 3. Ferroso-ferric chloride, Fe₂Cl₄ + 18H₂O, is a yellow, deliquescent, crystalline substance. There are also basic i. chlorides (see i. oxychloride), and various compounds of ferrous and ferric chloride with alkaline chlorides, ammonia, nitrosyl chloride, etc. (see i. and ammonium chloride). [B. 3, 8.]—I. chromite. Ferrous chromite, Fe₂Cr₂O₄, a body occurring native in the form of chrome-iron ore, or chromite. [B. 3.]—I. citrate. Fr. citrate de fer. Ger. Eisen-citrat, citronensaures Eisenoxyd. A salt of i. and citric acid. Ferric citrate (Lat. ferri citras [U. S. Ph.], ferrum citricum oxydatum [Ger. Ph., 1st ed., Swiss Ph., Russ. Ph.], citras ferricus [Netherl. Ph.]; Fr. citrate ferrique [ou de sesquioxide de fer]; Ger. citronensaures Eisenoxyd; Sp. citrate ferrico [Sp. Ph.]; Roum. feru citricu [Roum. Ph.]), (C₆H₅O₇)₂Fe₂ + 6H₂O, is obtained by dissolving ferric hydrate in warm citric acid, and evaporating (a little ammonia first being added in making the pharmaceutical preparation). It occurs in transparent, garnet scales, readily soluble in water. [B.; B. 244 (α, 27).]—I. cremate. Fr. crémate de fer. A soluble compound of i. and erenic acid found in mineral waters. [B. 15.]—I. cyanide. Lat. ferri cyanidum. Fr. cyanure de fer. Ger. Cyanisen, Eisencyanür. The simple i. cyanides are not definitely known, although it is thought that the ferrous cyanide, Fe(CN)₂, is formed as a rust-colored precipitate when a ferrous salt is acted on by potassic cyanide. [B.] For the compound cyanides see FERRICYANIDE and FERROCYANIDE.—I. disulphide. See I. PYROSULPHATE.—I. disulphide. 1. Pyrites, FeS₂, a substance occurring in nature in a white and also a yellow form; the latter a hard, heavy brass-yellow substance, which occurs in several crystalline forms, and also in dendritic masses formed about roots of trees, etc. [B. 3.]—I. ferricyanide. A salt of i. and ferricyanic acid. There occur: 1. Ferrous ferricyanide (Ger. Ferrosferricyanür), Fe₃Fe(C₂N₃)₆ = Fe₄(C₂N₃)₆ (see under FERRICYANIDE). 2. Ferric ferricyanide, Fe₂Fe(C₂N₃)₆ = Fe₃C₂N₃ (see under FERRICYANIDE). 3. Ferric ferricyanide, Fe₂Fe₂(C₂N₃)₆ = Fe₄C₂N₃, soluble in water. Other i. ferricyanides are known, whose composition is different from either of these given. [B.]—I. ferrocyanide. A compound of i. and ferrocyanic acid. Of these compounds there are known: 1. Ferrous ferrocyanide, or ferroso-ferrous cyanide, Fe₂Fe(C₂N₃)₆, a white powder, insoluble in water. 2. Potassic ferrous ferrocyanide, or Potassium and i. ferrocyanide, 3. Ferric ferrocyanide, or Prussian blue, Fe₃Fe(C₂N₃)₆ = Fe₄C₂N₃, a deep-blue powder, insoluble in water and in alcohol, soluble in a solution of oxalic acid or ammonium acetate. Formerly official in the U. S. Ph., and still official in the French (ferrocyanure ferrique), Belgian (caruleum berolinense), Spanish (azul de Prusia, cianuro ferroso-ferrico), and Greek (ferrum hydrocyanicum) pharmacopoeias. [B.] See also PRUSSIAN BLUE.—I. fluoride. See FERRUM PRÆPARATUM and FERRUM METALLICUM.—I. fluoride. Ger. Fluoreisen. A salt of i. and fluorine: 1. Ferrous fluoride, FeF₂ + 8H₂O, forms colorless or greenish-colored prismatic crystals. 2. Ferric fluoride, FeF₃ + 9H₂O, forms colorless crystals. Both lose their water of crystallization on heating. [B. 3.]—I. heads. The Centaurea nigra. [B. 19, 275 (α, 24).]—I. hemisulphide. A substance, Fe₂S, possessing magnetic properties. [B. 16.]—I. hydride. A compound (probably FeH₂) forming a powder of a metallic aspect. [B. 3.]—I. hydroxide. Ger. Eisenoxyhydrat. 1. Hydrate, hydrated oxide of i., a compound of i. with hydroxyl. A variety of such compounds are known: 1. Ferrous hydroxide (Ger. Eisenoxydhydrat), Fe(OH)₂, a body which when pure is white, but which rapidly decomposes on exposure to the air, becoming first green, and then brown. 2. Ferric hydroxide (Ger. Eisenoxydhydrat), Fe₂(OH)₆ (or Fe₂O₃H₄ = Fe₂O₃·2H₂O [Fr. Cod.]), a body soluble in hydrochloric acid, constituting the ferri oxidum hydratum (q. v.) of the U. S. Ph., the ferri oxidum humidum of the Br. Ph., and the sesquioxide de fer bihydraté of the Fr. Cod. By drying ferric hydroxide, another compound is produced (see Hydrated peroxide of i. [2d def.]) which enters into the composition of i. subcarbonate (ferri subcarbonas, U. S. Ph., 1870, safran de Mars apéritif [Fr. Cod.]). 1. Rust (Lat. rubigo ferri, ferri rubigo [Dub. Ph.]) is chiefly ferric hydroxide with a small admixture of ferrous compounds. 3. Ferroso-ferric-hydroxide, Fe₂(OH)₆, the compound formed, according to some authorities, when the so-called magnetic oxide of i. is prepared according to the process of the Br. Ph. According to others, however, this substance is an i. hydroxide of the constitution Fe₂H₂O₆ = Fe(OH)₂·Fe₂O₃. [B. 3, 5, 8.]—I. hypophosphite. Fr. hypophosphite de fer. A salt of i. and hypophosphorous acid. There are known to exist: 1. Dihydric ferrous hypophosphite (Ger. unterphosphorigsaures Eisenoxidul), Fe(H₂PO₂)₂, a salt readily converted into the ferric compound. 2. Dihydric ferric hypophosphite (Ger. unterphosphorigsaures Eisenoxyd), Fe₂(H₂PO₂)₃, usually called simply hypophosphite of i., the ferri hypophosphitis of the U. S. Ph. It is a white or grayish substance, almost insoluble in water, readily soluble in hydrochloric and acetic acids. [B.]—I. hyposulphite. Lat. ferri hyposulphitis. Fr. hyposulfite de fer. Ferrous hyposulphite (Ger. unterschwefeligaures Eisenoxydul), FeS₂O₂, a substance produced along with i. sulphite by the action of sulphurous acid on metallic i. [B. 3.]—I. iodate. Ger. Jodsaures Eisenoxyd. Ferric iodate, a salt, 2Fe₂(IO₃)₂·Fe₂O₃ + 24H₂O, prepared by precipitating a dilute solution of ferric chloride with potassium or (sodium) iodate. [B. 5.]—I. iodide. Lat. ferri iodidum [Br. Ph.] ferrum iodatum (Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph., Russ. Ph.), seu ioduretum [Gr. Ph.], iodetum ferrosium [Dan. Ph., Finn. Ph.], ioduretum ferri [Belg. Ph.]. Fr., iodure de fer. Ger., Jodeisen, Eisenjodür. Sp., ioduro ferroso [Sp. Ph.]. A salt of i. and iodine, the only one certainly known to exist, being the ferrous iodide, FeI_2 , obtained by the action of iodine on i. in the presence of water. It forms transparent, greenish, tabular crystals, having a metallic, styptic taste. It is very deliquescent, and is readily soluble in water and in alcohol. It fuses with the formation of an i.-gray mass. It decomposes very readily, with the liberation of iodine, and the formation of i. sesquioxide. This can be prevented by the addition of sugar. It is an astringent compound and a very valuable tonic, particularly in scrofulous conditions, where the iodine which it contains appears to give it special virtue. [B. 95.]—I. lactate. Lat., ferri lactas [U. S. Ph.], ferrum lacticum [Ger. Ph., Austr. Ph.], oxydulatum [Gr. Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Fr., lactate ferreux [Fr. Cod.], lactate de fer. Ger., milchsäures Eisenoxydul. It., lactato di ferro. Sp., lactato ferroso [Sp. Ph.], lactato de hierro. Roum., feru lacticu [Roum. Ph.]. Ferrous lactate, $Fe(C_2H_3O_2)_2 + 5H_2O$, a body occurring in minute, greenish-white crystals. A ferric lactate, $Fe_2(C_2H_3O_2)_6$, is also known, and occasionally used in medicine. [B. 5.]—I. malate. A compound of i. with malic acid (see Extractum ferri pomati). The malates of i., both neutral and acid, are brown, gummy substances, unchanged in air, and very soluble in water and in alcohol. [B. 244 (a, 27).]—I. monosulphide. Fr., monosulfure de fer, sulfure ferreux. Ferrous (or simply i.) sulphide, FeS , a substance occurring native in meteorites, and obtained artificially either by the direct action of sulphur on metallic i. (the sulfure ferreux par voie sèche of the Fr. Cod.), or by precipitating a solution of ferrous sulphate with sodium monosulphide (the sulfure ferreux par voie humide of the Fr. Cod.). It imparts a black color to the mud of drains and cesspools, and to faeces during the administration of ferric salts. It is obtained ordinarily as a black, porous mass, insoluble in water, soluble in dilute hydrochloric acid with decomposition and the evolution of sulphuretted hydrogen. It may also be obtained in the crystalline form, and is then yellow and exhibits a metallic lustre. [B. 3, 16.]—I. monoxide. Fr., monoxyde de fer. Ger., Eisenoxydul. Ferrous oxide, a black powder, FeO , obtained by the action of hydrogen on i. sesquioxide, or by the decomposition of ferrous oxalate. [B. 3.]—I. muriate. Lat., ferri murias, ferrum muriatum oxydatum. Fr., muriate de fer oxyde. Ger., salzsaures Eisenoxyd. See i. chloride (2d def.).—I. nitrate. Fr., azotate de fer. A salt of i. and nitric acid. 1. Ferrous nitrate (Fr., azotate ferreux; Ger., salpetersaures Eisenoxydul), $Fe(NO_2)_2$, a salt very soluble in water, and readily decomposed, forming the ferric salt. 2. Ferric nitrate (Fr., azotate ferrique; Ger., salpetersaures Eisenoxyd), the nitrate of i. of the U. S. Ph., prepared by the action of nitric acid on the metal, or on ferric hydrate. It forms colorless, deliquescent crystals, $Fe_2(NO_3)_6 + 12H_2O$ or $Fe_2(NO_3)_6 + 18H_2O$. It is very soluble in water, its aqueous solution being the liquor ferri nitratis of the U. S. Ph. In addition, several basic and amorphous nitrates of i. are known. [B. 3.]—I. nitride. A compound of i. with nitrogen. One such, Fe_3N , is formed by the action of ammonia on ferrous or ferric chloride. It is a soft, brittle, silvery-white substance, possessed of magnetic properties. Another i. nitride, Fe_2N_2 , occurs in the lava of Etna; a substance of metallic appearance and lustre. [B. 3.]—I. orthophosphate. See i. phosphate.—I. oxalate. Lat., ferrum oxalicum. Fr., oxalate de fer. Ger., Eisenoxalat. A salt of i. and oxalic acid. The ferrous oxalate (Lat., oxalas ferrosus, ferri oxalas [U. S. Ph.]; Fr., oxalate ferreux; Ger., oxalsäures Eisenoxydul) is an odorless, yellowish, crystalline powder of feeble taste, soluble in acids, almost insoluble in water. [B.]—I. oxide. Lat., ferri oxidum, ferrum oxydatum. Fr., oxyde de fer. See i. monoxide, i. sesquioxide, and Magnetic i. oxide.—I. oxychloride. Lat., ferrum oxychloratum. Fr., oxychlorure de fer. A compound of ferric chloride with i. oxide or hydroxide. A number of such compounds probably exist. One, containing a very large proportion of i. oxide, constitutes the so-called dialyzed i., distinguished by its solubility in water. [B.]—I. oxyhydrate. A compound of an i. oxide and hydroxide. Some of the so-called i. hydroxides appear to have this composition. [B. 8.]—I. peptonate. Lat., ferrum peptonatum. Ger., Eisenpeptonat. A compound of i. with a peptone, used for administering i. subcutaneously. [B.]—I. perchlorate. Fr., perchlorate de fer. Ger., perchlorsäures Eisenoxydul. Ferrous perchlorate, $Fe(ClO_2)_2 + H_2O$, is known, forming light-green crystals, readily deliquescent, and at 100° C. losing their water of crystallization. [B. 3.]—I. perchloride. Lat., ferri perchloridum [Br. Ph.]. Fr., perchlorure de fer. Ger., Eisenchlorid. See i. chloride (3d def.).—I. perhydrate. See i. hydroxide (2d var.).—I. pernitrate. See i. nitrate (2d var.).—I. peroxide. Lat., ferri peroxidum. Fr., peroxyde de fer. Ger., Eisenoxyd. I. sesquioxide. [B.]—I. persulphate. Lat., ferri persulphas. Fr., persulfate de fer. See i. sulphate (2d var.). [B.]—I. phosphate. Fr., phosphate de fer. I. orthophosphate. 1. Ferrous phosphate (Lat., ferri phosphas [Br. Ph.]; Fr., phosphate ferreux; Ger., phosphorsaures Eisenoxydul), $Fe_2(PO_4)_2 + 8H_2O$, a substance which when pure is colorless, but generally has a bluish tint, owing to partial oxidation. It is insoluble in water, soluble in acids. 2. Ferric phosphate (Fr., phosphate ferrique; Ger., phosphorsaures Eisenoxyd), $Fe_2(PO_4)_3$, a yellowish-white substance, soluble in dilute acids. The phosphate of i. of the U. S. Ph. is a mixture of several salts (see FERRI PHOSPHAS). See also Monohydric i. phosphate and Basic i. phosphate. [B.]—I. picrate. Fr., picrate de fer. Ger., pikrinsäures Eisenoxyd. A mixture of the two i. acetates, prepared by treating i. with wood vinegar, in contact with the air. [B. 2.]—I. pyrophosphate. Lat., ferri pyrophosphas. Fr., pyrophosphate de fer. Ferric pyrophosphate, $Fe_2(P_2O_7)_3$, is prepared as a gelatinous precipitate by adding sodium pyrophosphate to a solution of ferric chloride or ferric sulphate. The so-called i. pyrophosphate of the U. S. Ph. of 1870 was prepared by dissolving this precipitate in a solution of ammonium citrate, and again evaporating. It consisted probably of a mixture of a compound pyrophosphate of i. and ammonium, citrate of i. and ammonium, and ferric citrate. This preparation is still official in the Fr. Cod. as pyrophosphate de fer citro-ammoniacal. The i. pyrophosphate of the present Ph. is made by adding 10 parts of sodium pyrophosphate to a solution of 9 parts of ferric citrate in 18 parts of water, and evaporating. The resultant product occurs in light-green, transparent scales, having an acidulous taste, and dissolving in water. It consists of a mixture of pyrophosphate of i. and sodium, citrate of i. and sodium, and ferric citrate. [B. 5.]—I. pyrosulphate with soda. See FERRI SODII PYROPHOSPHAS.—I. pyrosulphate. It., pyrosolfato di ferro. A white, micro-crystalline powder, Fe_2SO_7 . [B. 3.]—I. pyrothioarsenate. 1. Ferrous pyrothioarsenate, $Fe_2As_2S_7$, a dark-brown substance. 2. Ferric pyrothioarsenate, $Fe_2(As_2S_7)_3$, a grayish-green precipitate. [B. 2.]—I. pyruvate. A compound of i. and pyruvic acid. There are two such: 1. Ferrous pyruvate, obtained from the action of sodium pyruvate on green vitriol, and separating out, when the air is excluded, as dark-red crystals, soluble with difficulty in water. The salt may also be obtained, as an almost black mass, soluble in water, by dissolving i. in warm dilute pyruvic acid, and evaporating. 2. Ferric pyruvate, obtained as a red soluble mass by treating ferric hydroxide with pyruvic acid. [B. 3 (a, 38).]—I. rust. Lat., rubigo ferri. The reddish substance formed on the surface of i. as the result of exposure to air and moisture. It consists chiefly of ferric hydroxide. [B. 3.] See i. hydroxide (2d var.).—I. saccharate. A compound said to be present in the ferum oxydatum saccharatum solubile of the Ger. Ph. [B.]—I. sesquichloride. Lat., ferrum sesquichloratum [Ger. Ph., Swiss Ph., Russ. Ph.]. Fr., sesquichlorure de fer. See i. chloride (2d var.).—I. sesquiferrocyanide. Ferric ferrocyanate. [B.] See i. ferrocyanide.—I. sesquioxide. Lat., ferrum oxydatum, oxydum ferricum igne paratum [Fr. Cod.]. Fr., sesquioxide de fer anhydre [Fr. Cod.], oxyde rouge de fer. Ger., Eisenoxyd. Ferric oxide, red i. oxide, Fe_2O_3 , a substance occurring in nature as hematite and red hematite, and obtainable artificially in the form of a crystalline, steel-colored powder, or of red translucent scales (micaceous i.). When finely powdered, i. sesquioxide is of a brownish-red color. It is devoid of taste and odor, and is practically insoluble in water, soluble in hydrochloric acid. When obtained by the action of heat on ferrous sulphate, it forms colcothar. [B. 3.]—I. sesquisulphate. Fr., sesquisulfate de fer. See i. sulphate (2d var.).—I. sesquisulphide. Ferric sulphide, a yellow substance, Fe_2S_3 . [B. 3.]—I. silicate. Fr., silicate de fer. Ger., kieselsaures Eisenoxydul (oder Eisenoxyd). A number of single and double silicates of i., both ferrous and ferric, are known, constituting various minerals. They are generally amorphous mixtures in which ferric oxide is replaced by alumina, etc. [B. 3; B. 244 (a, 27).]—I. slial. See i. bloom.—I. subcarbonate. See FERRI SUBCARBONAS.—I. subsulphate. Lat., ferri subsulphas. Fr., sousulfate de fer. Monssel's salt, $Fe_4O_3SO_4$, formed by the action on ferrous sulphate of nitric and sulphuric acids, the latter being in quantity insufficient completely to convert the ferrous salt into the normal ferric salt. It forms light, reddish-brown, transparent scales, which readily deliquesce and are soluble in water. It is much used as a styptic. [B. 5.] See Liquor ferri subsulphatis.—I. subtriticarbonate. See FERRI SUBCARBONAS.—I. succinate. Ferrous succinate; a grayish-green precipitate, oxidizing on contact with the air; used in cholelithiasis. Ferric succinates are also known. [B.]—I. succrate. A substance, perhaps $C_{12}H_{20}FeO_{11}$, produced by allowing i. to remain a long time in contact with sugar solution in a warm place. Its exact composition is uncertain. [B. 3 (a, 38).]—I. sugar. See FERRUM OXYDUM SACCHARATUM SOLUBILE.—I. sulpharsenate. See i. pyrothioarsenate.—I. sulpharsenite. See i. thioarsenite.—I. sulphate. Fr., sulfate de fer. Ger., schwefelsaures Eisen. A salt of i. and sulphuric acid: 1. Ferrous sulphate (Lat., ferri sulphas [U. S. Ph., Br. Ph.], ferrum sulfuricum [Ger. Ph., Finn. Ph., Swiss Ph., Austr. Ph., Hung. Ph.], sulfas ferrosus [Fr. Cod.], sulphas ferri [Belg. Ph.], seu ferrosus [Dan. Ph., Netherl. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.]); Fr., sulfate ferreux; Ger., schwefelsaures Eisenoxydul, or green vitriol, often called simply i. sulphate, $FeSO_4 + 7H_2O$, occurs in light-green, monoclinic, prismatic crystals, efflorescing on exposure to the air, and having an astringent saline taste. It is readily soluble in water, insoluble in alcohol; when a solution is evaporated in a vacuum, crystals of the composition $FeSO_4 + 4H_2O$ are deposited. When heated to over 140° C. it forms a white powder, $FeSO_4 \cdot H_2O$. This constitutes dried i. sulphate, the ferri sulphas exsiccatus of the U. S. Ph. and the ferrum sulfuricum sicum of the Ger. Ph. If the dried sulphate be still further heated in vacuo, the last molecule of water of crystallization may be driven off, and the anhydrous sulphate, $FeSO_4$, left behind. 2. Ferric sulphate (Fr., sulfate ferrique; Ger., schwefelsaures Eisenoxyd), also called i. tersulphate or persulphate, $Fe_2(SO_4)_3$, is formed by the action of sulphuric and nitric acids upon ferrous sulphate. It occurs in colorless crystals soluble in water. Its solution is the liquor ferri tersulphatis [U. S. Ph.] (q. v.). The anhydrous salt is a white powder. In addition to these sulphates, various basio i. sulphates are known (see Basic i. sulphate and i. subsulphate), also several ferrous-ferric sulphates, some of which occur in nature as minerals; and finally several compound sulphates. [B.] See i. and ammonium sulphate, i. and potassium sulphate, and FERRI SULPHAS.—I.

sulphide. Fr., sulfure de fer. Ger., Schwefeleisen. A compound of i. and sulphur. Among the i. sulphides are (1) i. hemisulphide, (2) i. monosulphide, (3) i. sesquisulphide, (4) ferroso-ferric i. sulphide, and (5) a magnetic octoferric sulphide, Fe_8S , mentioned by some authors. [B. 3.]—I. sulphite. Fr., sulfite de fer. Ger., schwefeligsures Eisenoxyd. Ferrous sulphite, $FeSO_3$, a colorless or greenish crystalline substance. [B. 3.]—I. sulphocyanate. See I. thiocyanate.—I. tannate. Lat., ferrus tannus. Fr., tannate de fer. Ger., Eisentannat. A preparation made by dissolving 44 parts of precipitated i. subcarbonate in a boiling solution of 9 parts of pure tannic acid, evaporating, and drying. It is thus obtained in flat pieces of crimson color, devoid of taste, and insoluble in water. It has an astringent and tonic action, and may be given in pill form in chlorosis. [B. 5 (a, 38).]—I. tartrate. A compound of i. and tartaric acid: 1. Ferrous tartrate, $C_4H_4O_6Fe$, obtained by boiling together tartaric acid, i. filings, and water, and occurring as a white crystalline powder almost insoluble in water. 2. Ferric tartrate, obtained as a brownish-green solution by treating freshly precipitated ferric hydroxide with tartaric acid. In the air it is partly reduced to ferrous tartrate, and if warmed decomposes with formation of a basic salt. [B. 3 (a, 38).] See also I. and potassium tartrate.—I. tartro-aloetate sesquioxide. Ferric tartro-aloetate, a mixture containing aloes, together with a tartrate of hydrated i. sesquioxide and i. filings. Ph.]. Black i. oxide, ferroso-ferric oxide, triferric tetroxide, Fe_3O_4 , a substance occurring in nature as magnetite or loadstone. Natural magnets are formed from this mineral. It may be prepared artificially in various ways. The magnetic i. oxide of the Br. Ph. is obtained by precipitating a mixture of ferrous and ferric sulphates with caustic soda. It is a brownish-black powder, devoid of taste, soluble in hydrochloric acid, and exhibiting marked magnetic properties. It consists chiefly of i. hydroxide, $Fe(OH)_2Fe_2O_3 = Fe_3O_4 \cdot H_2O$, with a small quantity of i. sesquioxide. According to others, it has the composition of ferroso-ferric hydrate, $Fe_3(OH)_6$. [B. 3, 8.] See also Æthiops martialis.—Mass of carbonate of i. [U. S. Ph.]. IRRESPIRABLE, adj. I'r-re'sp'i'r-a'2-b'l. Lat., irrespirabilis (from in neg., and respirare, to breathe). Fr., irrespirable, non respirable. Ger., irrespirable, uneinathmenbar. Of a gas, incapable of supporting life when inspired.

IRRHYTHMIA (Lat.), n. f. I'r-r'i'2th(ru'2th)'mi'2-a'2. From in neg., and ῥυθμός, rhythm. See ARRHYTHMIA.

IRRIGATION, n. I'r-r'i'2-ga'shu'2n. Lat., irrigatio (from irrigare, to conduct water or other liquids, to wet, moisten, supply with fluid). Fr., i. Ger., I. Tropfbad. 1. The act of watering or moistening. 2. The act of letting water or other fluids fall drop by drop on anything; also of cleansing by means of a stream. [B, 48 (a, 45).]

IRRIGATOR (Lat.), n. m. I'r-r'i'2-ga(ga'2)'to'2r; in Eng., i'r-r'i'2-gat-o'r. Gen., -or'is. From irrigare, to conduct water, to wet, moisten, etc. Fr., irrigateur. Ger., I. An apparatus for irrigating wounds and the cavities of the body with gentle streams of water. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—Bodenhamer's rectal i. A plug of hard rubber with perforated sides and open end, arranged for a double stream. [E.]—Équistier's i. An instrument for irrigating the rectum or vagina, consisting of a metallic tube with a tight-fitting piston manipulated with a key; at the base is a stop-cock connecting it with a flexible tube to which is fixed at a right angle a nozzle so that the patient can use it himself. [a, 40.]—Esmarch's i. A metallic reservoir arranged for hanging against the wall and connected by a long rubber tube with a vulcanite nozzle, having a stop-cock in it which is easily opened, and shut by a double lever which is manipulated by the thumb. [a, 40.]—Keyes's bladder i.

A fountain syringe with a rubber tube, stopcocks, and urethral catheter, so arranged in combination as to comprise an apparatus for irrigation of the bladder. [a, 25.]—Mundé's rectal i. A number of parallel wires slightly bowed to form a frame for dilating the rectum and allowing an injected fluid to reach all parts of it. [E.]

IRRITABILITAS (Lat.), n. f. I'r-r'i'2-ta'2-b'i'2-ta'2s(ta'2s). Gen., -tat'is. See IRRITABILITY.—I. halleriana. See HALLERIAN IRRITABILITY.—I. morbosa. The condition of being easily irritated which is produced by certain forms of disease. [a, 40.]—I. vesicae. Irritability of the urinary bladder.

IRRITABILITY, n. I'r-r'i'2-ta'2-b'i'2-ti'2. Lat., irritabilitas (from irritabilis, easily excited). Fr., irritabilité. Ger., Reizbarkeit, Muskelasernthätigkeit (4th def.), Irritabilität, Erregbarkeit. It., irritabilità. Sp., irritabilidad. Syn.: excitability. 1. Susceptibility to stimulation, a property inherent in animal bodies, and in some vegetables. 2. A condition of mind which manifests itself by fretfulness, fault-finding, complaining about trifles, or of things which are purely imaginary; impatience. 3. Susceptibility of the whole or a part of the body to irritating influences. 4. Of Brown, the activity or excitability of the muscular system. 5. In pathology, a morbid state of a part characterized by irritation; also the capability which tissue elements possess of undergoing nutritive and formative changes on the application of a physical or chemical stimulus. 6. In botany, the susceptibility of some plant organs to react against an irritation of external agents; according to M. Foster an attribute of all protoplasm by virtue of which a slight stimulus is capable of releasing a disproportionately large amount of energy. [B, 1, 229, 291 (a, 35); L, 25, 41, 50 (a, 14).]—Faradaic i. The property of a tissue (e. g., muscle) by which it responds by a characteristic action to the stimulus of a faradaic current. [J.]—Formative i. Of Virchow, the capacity of a cell to produce new protoplasm when excited by a nutritive irritant. [a, 40.]—Galvanic i. The property of a tissue or part by which it responds by a characteristic action to the stimulus of a galvanic current. [J.]—Hallerian i. Lat., irritabilitas halleriana. Fr., irritabilité Hallérienne. The property of muscular substance by which it responds by a contraction to some stimulus applied directly to itself, and quite independent of the nervous system. This is most strikingly seen in parts where nerves have not been found or where the nerve-endings have been paralyzed by curare. [J, 55.]—Muscular i. Fr., irritabilité musculaire. Ger., Muskelasernreizbarkeit. The property of muscular tissue by which it responds to some stimulus by a contraction. The stimulus may be the result of nervous action or a mechanical, thermal, or electrical action directly on the muscular substance itself. Sometimes, but incorrectly, this term is made synonymous with contractility. [J, 55.]—Nervous i. The property of the nervous system by which it wholly or in part responds by some nervous action to a stimulus. [J.]—Nutritive i. Plastic i. Fr., irritabilité nutritive. 1. The property of the tissues by which, under the influence of various stimuli, more or less nutritive material is taken up and transformed. There may result from this simple hypertrophy or inflammation. 2. A stimulation or irritation leading to a special assimilation of nutritive material. [Virchow (J.)]

IRRITABLE, adj. I'r-r'i'2-ta'2-b'l. Lat., irritabilis (from irritare, to excite). Fr., i. Ger., reizbar, erregbar. It., irritabile. Sp., i. Manifesting or capable of irritation; of an organ or part, in a morbid state characterized by pain, spasm, etc., without inflammation.

IRRITAMEN (Lat.), n. n. I'r-r'i'2(re)-ta(ta'2)'me'2n. Gen., -am'nis. From irritare, to excite. See STIMULUS.

IRRITAMENTUM (Lat.), n. n. I'r-r'i'2(re)-ta(ta'2)'me'2nt'u'2m-(u'2m). From irritare, to excite. See STIMULUS.

IRRITANT, adj. I'r-r'i'2-t'2nt. Lat., irritans (from irritare, to excite). Ger., irritierend, reizend. Causing irritation; as a n. (Ger., Reizmittel), an agent having that effect.—Adequate i. Of the old writers, an i. supposed to be capable of exciting every sensory nerve. [K, 35].—Chemical i. A substance which irritates by virtue of its chemical reaction with the elements of the tissue to which it is applied. [a, 40.]—Emeto-cathartic i. Those remedies which produce emeto-catharsis by local irritation of the intestinal tract. [a, 40.]—Mechanical i. An i. which produces irritation through its mechanical action (e. g., the seton, scarifier, or artificial leech). [a, 40.]—Nervous i. That which irritates through the medium of the nervous system. [a, 40.]—Organized i. An i. consisting of a living organism (e. g., a parasite). [a, 40.]—Sufficient i. Ger., genügende Reizmittel. A stimulus strong enough to cause a strong reflex action in a sensory nerve. [K, 35.]

IRRITATED, adj. I'r-r'i'2-tat'e'2d. Lat., irritatus (from irritare, to excite). In a state of irritation. [A, 312 (a, 21).]

IRRITATIO (Lat.), n. f. I'r-r'i'2(re)-ta(ta'2)'shi'2(t'i'2)-o. Gen., -on'is. See IRRITATION.—I. cerebri. See Cerebral Irritation.

KEYES'S BLADDER IRRIGATOR.

IRRITATION, n. *I*²r-ri²-ta'shu³n. Lat., irritatio (from irritare, to excite). Fr., i. Ger., Reiz, I. It., irritazione. Sp., irritación. 1. The act or process of irritating. 2. The state of being irritated.—Atropine I. of the conjunctiva. See Atropine CONJUNCTIVITIS.—Cerebral I. Lat., irritatio cerebri. Ger., Gehirnreiz. 1. Of Vogel, the assemblage of brain symptoms which occur in consequence of interrupted nutrition and atrophy. They are similar to those seen in hydrocephaloid. [D, 29.] 2. Neurasthenia. [B, 108.]—Constitutional I. See IRRITATIVE FEVER (3d def.).—Functional I. Ger., funktionelle Reizbarkeit. 1. of an organ due to excessive functional activity. [a, 40.]—I. formatrix (Fr.). I. nutritive (Fr.). I. plastique (Fr.). The power by which cells tend to reproduce themselves. [K.]—Local I. Fr., i. locale. Ger., lokale Reizung. 1. of a particular part (often used to denote a local cause of general symptoms).—Morbid I. See IRRITATIVE FEVER (2d def.).—Peripheral I. 1. of a peripheral part (especially as a cause of symptoms that might be referred to central disease).—Spinal I. Syn.: rhachialgia. Of Brown, an affection in which pain in the back and breast are the chief symptoms. It occurs principally among women, especially those of an hysterical temperament, between fifteen and thirty years of age. The pain, according to Brown, is immediately caused by spasm of one or more of the spinal muscles, by which means the position of the vertebrae is changed and the spinal nerves are compressed. The origin of the trouble may be local, i. e., consisting of some fault in the muscles, or it may proceed from a disordered state of the vessels of the brain or spinal cord. Other views on this disease are maintained, Valleix holding that hysteria is at the bottom of it, Teale referring it to inflammation, etc. [D, 34.]—Sympathetic I. of the uterus. Ger., consensuelle Reizung des Uterus. Indirect i. of the uterus by manipulation of or applications to the breasts.

IRRITATIVE, adj. *I*²r-ri²-tat-i²v. From irritare, to excite. Fr., irritatif. Ger., irritativ. Pertaining to or of the nature of irritation.

IRRITIREND (Ger.), adj. *I*²r-re-ter-e²nd. See IRRITANT.

IRRORATION, n. *I*²r-ro-ra'shu³n. Lat., irroratio (from irrorare, to besprinkle). Fr., i. Ger., Beträufeln, Besprengen. The act of moistening by drops or fine spray of a liquid. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

IRRSINN (Ger.), n. Er'zi²n. Insanity.—I. der Querulanten und Prozess-Krämer. A monomania for litigation. [a, 45.]

IRRSINIG (Ger.), adj. Er'zi²n-ni²g. Insane. [A, 521.]

IRRTUM (Ger.), n. Er'tum. See ERROR.

IRRUNG (Ger.), n. Er'run². See ABERRATION.—I²s-bildung. See MALFORMATION.

IRUNGUS (Lat.), n. m. *I*²r-u²n²(u²n²)²gu²s(gu²s). An old term for the Eryngium canpestre. [B, 121.]

IRVINGIA (Lat.), n. f. *U*²r-vi²n²²a². From Irving, a proper name. A genus of trees found in western tropical Africa, belonging to the Simarubaceæ, tribe Picramnieæ. [B, 42 (a, 35).]—I. Barteri, I. gabonensis. A species of I. the edible fruits of which are known as wild mango. In the Gaboon country the natives prepare from the kernels a greasy food, called dika or udika bread, which keeps for a long time without becoming rancid. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxix (a, 39); B, 19, 185 (a, 24).]—I. harmadiana. See Diospyros sebata.—I. Oliveri. A species growing in the forests of Saryninh, Cochinchina, the seeds of which yield cay-cay wax, used by the natives in the manufacture of candles. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv (a, 39).]

IS (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s(es). Gen., *in*²s (*in*²s). Gr., is. See FIBRE.

ISABEL, adj. *I*²z-a²-be²l. Lat., isabellinus. Fr., isabelle. Ger., isabellgelb. Of a faint yellow mixed with gray and red. [B, 116, 123 (a, 35).]

ISABELLA-WOOD, n. *I*²z-a²-be²l-a²-wu²d. The Persea carolinensis. [B, 275 (a, 35).]

ISACIS (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s-a²-si²s(ki²s). From ισάκεις, the same number of times. A genus of the Anguillulidæ. [L, 16.]

ISADELPHIA (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s-a²d(a²d)-e²l²fi²a². From isos, equal, and ἀδελφός, a brother. Fr., isadelphie. The state of a double monster consisting of two bodies perfectly developed in all essential organic parts, and only united by soft, unimportant tissues. [L, 41, 44, 49 (a, 14).]

ISADELPHOUS, adj. *I*²s-a²d-e²l²fu²s. Lat., isadelphus (from isos, equal, and ἀδελφός, a brother). Of equal brotherhood (said of flowers when the number of stamens in two phalanges is equal). [B, 36 (a, 35).]

ISÆTHIONIC ACID, n. *I*²s-e²thi²-o²n²²ik. Fr., acide iséthionique. Ger., Iséthionsäure. See ISETHIONIC ACID.

ISAGURIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²g-u²r²ik. Ger., Isagursäure. An old name for igasuric acid. [B, 270.]

ISALIZARIN, n. *I*²s-a²i²z-a²r²in. Fr., isalzarine. Ger., I. A body, *C*₁₄H₁₆O₆, having the same composition as alizarin, but differing from it in color and properties. It is found in madder, predominating more in that part of the substance which is insoluble in acetic acid. Its color is intermediate between alizarin and purpurine. [B, 2; B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

ISALLOXANIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²i²-lo²x-a²n²²ik. Fr., acide isalloxanique. An acid, *C*₁₄H₁₄N₂O₆, not yet isolated, formed by the union of a molecule of water with the isomer of alloxan, obtained by heating the latter to 260° C., the salts being colorless. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39).]

ISALLYLENE, n. *I*²s-a²l²i²l-en. Ger., Isallylen. A gas, *C*₃H₄ = CH₂ : C : CH₂, isomeric in constitution with allylene. [B, 4.]—I²t-tetracarboxylic acid. A tetrabasic acid, *CH*₂(CO.OH) — C(CO.OH)₂ — CH(CO.OH). [B.]

ISAMATE, n. *I*²s-a²m-at. A salt of isamic acid. [L, 41.]

ISAMIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²m-i²k. Fr., acide isamique. Ger., Isamsäure. See ISAMATIC ACID.

ISAMIDE, n. *I*²s-a²m-i²d(i²d). A yellow, tasteless, odorless substance, *C*₁₃H₁₄N₂O₃, obtained by heating ammonium isamate. It is insoluble in water and in ether, slightly soluble in alcohol. [B, 2; B, 93 (a, 14).]

ISAMYL, n. *I*²s-a²m-i²l. See ISOAMYL.

ISANTHEROUS, adj. *I*²s-a²n²-the²r-u²s. From isos, equal, and ἀνθος, a flower. Having anthers equal or alike. [L, 107.]

ISAPGHOL, n. See ISPAGHUL.

ISAPIOL, n. *I*²s-a²p-i²o²l. A substance, *C*₁₂H₁₄O₄, isomeric with apiol, obtained by boiling apiol with an alcoholic solution of potassa. I. melts at 55° to 56° C., and boils at 303° to 304° C. It possesses physiological properties which differ very little from those of apiol. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxvi (a, 39).]

ISATAMIDE (Fr.), n. E-sa³-ta³-med. See ISAMIDE.

ISATATE, n. *I*²s-a²t-at. Fr., i. A salt of isatic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISÆTHIONSÄURE (Ger.), n. E-s-a²-te-on²zoi²r-e². Isethionic acid. [B.]

ISATIC ACID, n. I-sa²t-i²k. Fr., acide isatique. Ger., Isatinsäure. A monobasic acid, *C*₆H₄(NH) — CO.CO.OH, or trioindol, a substance which readily decomposes into isatine and water. [B, 4.]

ISATINE, n. *I*²s-a²t-en. Fr., i. Ger., Isatin. A substance, *C*₁₂H₁₀N₂O₃, a product of oxidation of indigo heated with nitric acid of i 35 density till the blue color disappears. It forms yellowish-red, brilliant prisms, soluble in water and in alcohol with a reddish-brown tint, and in potassium solution with violet tint. It is fusible and sublimable with partial alteration. [B, 38, 48, 93 (a, 14).]

ISATINIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²t-i²n²²ik. See ISATIC ACID.

ISATIS (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s-a²-ti²s. Gen., -*at*²idos (-idis). Gr., ισάρις. Fr., pastel. Ger., Waid. It., quado. Sp., pastel glasto. A genus of the Isatidæ (Fr., isatidées; Ger., Isatideen), which are a tribe of cruciferous plants. [B, 1, 34, 42, 64, 78, 115, 170, 173 (a, 35).]—I. campestris. A variety of I. tinctoria. [B, 64 (a, 35).]—I. hirsuta. Fr., pastel bâtarð (ou velu). A variety of I. tinctoria.—I. indigotica. Ger., chinesischer Indig. The teinching of the Chinese, who employ a dark-blue coloring matter obtained from it for drying cotton cloth. [B, 19, 48 (a, 35).]—I. præcox. A variety of I. tinctoria. [B, 64 (a, 35).]—I. sativa. Fr., pastel cultivé. A cultivated variety of I. tinctoria. [B, 173 (a, 35).]—I. silvestris. Fr., pastel des bois. The wild variety of I. tinctoria. [B, 173 (a, 35).]—I. tinctoria. Fr., pastel (des teinturiers), guède, guesde, herbe de Saint-Philippe, voucye. Ger., (Färber)-Waid, deutscher Indigo. Ash-of-Jerusalem, dyer's wood; once famous in Europe for the blue dye obtained from the leaves. The herb, herba (seu folia) glasti (seu isatidis, seu i.), was formerly employed in diseases of the spleen and as an external application to tumors, etc.; also in scurvy and in intermittent fevers. The seeds yield an oil similar to linseed-oil. [B, 19, 173, 180 (a, 35); B, 88 (a, 39).]—I. vulgaris. A variety of I. tinctoria. [B, 64 (a, 35).]

ISATODES (Lat.), adj. *I*²s-a²t(a²t)-od²ez(as). Gr., ισατώδης (from ισάρις, wood, and είδος, resemblance). Bluish. [A, 311 (a, 21).]

ISATOSULPHURIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²t-o²-sul²fu²ri²k. Fr., acide isatosulfurique. Ger., Isatinschwefelsäure. An acid containing the elements of isatine and sulphuric anhydride, occurring in two varieties, monobasic and dibasic, of which the latter has not yet been isolated; the monobasic acid, *C*₆H₄(SO₂.OH)₂ + H₂O, forms yellow, silky crystals, not variable when exposed to the air of ordinary temperature, but losing their crystallization water at 100° C. They are soluble in water, less soluble in alcohol, insoluble in ether and in benzene. [B, 38, 48 (a, 14).]

ISATROPIC ACID, n. *I*²s-a²t-ro²p-i²k. Fr., acide iso-atropique. Ger., Isatropasäure. See ATROPIC ACID.

ISATROPYLOCAINE, n. *I*²s-a²t-ro²p-i²l-ko²ka²-en. Of Liebermann, an alkaloid associated with cocaine; so called because it has the structure of cocaine in which benzoyl acid is replaced by the radicle of isatropic acid. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxviii (a, 39).]

ISCA (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s²ka³. Gr., ισκα. Of the ancients, the Polypporus igniarius. [B, 88 (a, 39).]

ISCHÆMIA (Lat.), n. f. *I*²s-ke²(ch²a²e²)-mi²a². From ἴσχειν, to check, and αἷμα, blood. Fr., ischémie. Ger., Ischämie. See HÆMOSTASIS and LOCAL ANÆMIA.—Artificial I. The condition produced by the application of Esmarch's bandage. [E.]—Arterial I. Ger., arterielle Ischämie. 1. arising from contraction or occlusion of arteries. [D, 3.]—Circumscribed I. 1. limited to a small area, like i. in the spinal cord caused by thrombosis or embolism of one or more of the spinal arteries. [D, 35.]—Hysterical I. 1. occurring in hysteria. [D, 35.]—Retinal I. Fr., ischémie de la rétine. Ger., Netzhautischämie. A condition of stasis of the arteries of the retina, usually accompanied by hyperemia of the veins, which may be caused by pressure on the vessels in the trunk of the optic nerve or in the orbit, or by embolism or thrombosis. [F.]—Vaso-motor I. 1. caused by reflex irritation. [D.]

ISCHEMIC, adj. *I*²s-ke²mi²k. From ἴσχειν, to check, and αἷμα, blood. Ger., ischämisch. Pertaining to or affected with ischæmia.

ISCHEMON (Lat.), ISCHEMUM (Lat.), n's n. *I*²s-ke²(ch²a²e²)-mi²o²n², -mu²m(mu²m). Gr., ισχαιμον (from ἴσχειν, to check, and αἷμα, blood). Fr., ischème, ischémon. 1. Of the ancients, a hæmorrhagic, especially the Panicum sanguinale. 2. A genus of grasses of the Audropogoneæ. [B, 19, 42 (a, 35).]

ISCHAR, n. In the East, the tuberous root of the Leontice leptontepalum. [B, 121 (a, 38).]

ISCHAS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s/ka^2s(ch^2a^2s)$. Gen., isch'ados (-adis). Gr., ισχάς. A fig., especially when dried. [B, 78 (a, 14).]

ISCHEL (Ger.), n. I^2s/ch^2e^2l . See ISCHL.

ISCHIOCELE (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ke^2(ch^2e^2)-o(o^3)-se(ka)^2le(la)$; in Eng., $I^2s/ke^2-o-sel$. Gen., -cel'es. See ISCHIOCELE.

ISCHESIS (Lat.), n. f. I^2s/ke^2s-i^2s . Gen., -ches'eos (-is'chesis). A checking of a flow. [A, 322.]

ISCHIA (It.), n. $I^2s/ke-a^3$. An island near Naples, where there are several hot, gaseous, saline, alkaline springs. [L, 30, 49 (a, 14).]

ISCHIAC, adj. I^2s/ki^2-a^2k . Gr., ισχιακός. Lat., ischiacus. See SCIATIC.

ISCHIADELPHIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2d(a^3d)-e^2l'i^2-a^2$. The state of being ischiadelphous.

ISCHIADELPHOUS, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-a^2d-e^2l'fu^2s$. Lat., ischiadelpheus (from ισχίον, the hip joint, and δέλεφος, a brother). Fr., ischiadelphe. Of a double monster, having the bodies united by the pelvis. [L, 41, 44, 49 (a, 14).]

ISCHIADIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-a^2d'i^2k$. Gr., ισχιαδικός. Lat., ischiadicus. See SCIATIC.

ISCHIAOCELE (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2d(a^3d)-o(o^3)-se(ka)^2le(la)$; in Eng., $I^2s-ki^2-a^2d'o-sel$. Gen., -cel'es. See ISCHIOCELE.

ISCHIAGRA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2sk(I^2sch^2)-i^2(i^2)a^2g(a^3g)-ra^3$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and ἀγρα, a seizure. Fr., ischiaigre. Ger., Hüftgicht. Gout in the hip. [A, 322; D, 72.]

ISCHIAL, adj. I^2s/ki^2-a^2l . Lat., ischialis (from ισχίον, the hip joint). Pertaining to the ischium. [L, 41.]

ISCHIALGIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2l(a^3l)/ji^2(gi^2)-a^2$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and ἄλγος, pain. See SCIATICA.

ISCHIALGIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-a^2l'ji^2k$. Lat., ischialgicus. Pertaining to, affected with, or of the nature of, sciatica. [D.]

ISCHIAS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s/ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2s(a^3s)$. Gen., -i'ados (-adis). Gr., ισχιάς. 1. Sciatica. 2. Gout of the hip. [A, 322.]—I. antica. Anterior crural neuralgia. [A, 326 (a, 21).]—I. a sparganosi. Phlegmatia dolens. [a, 40.]—I. infernicum. See COXALGIA.—I. intermittens. See FEBRIS quotidiania ischiadica.—I. nervosa antica. See I. antica.—I. (nervosa) postica. See SCIATICA.—I. scoliotica. See SCOLIOIC SCIATICA.—I. nervosa Cotunnii. Sciatica. [a, 40.]—I. nervosa digitalis. Neuralgia cubito-digitalis. [a, 40.]—I. rheumatica. Sciatica. [a, 40.]

ISCHIASIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a(a^3)/si^2s$. Gen., -as'eos (-ias'is). See SCIATICA.

ISCHIATIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-a^2t'i^2k$. Gr., ισχιαδικός (from ισχίον, the hip joint). Lat., ischiatricus. See SCIATIC.

ISCHIATITIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2t(a^3t)-i(e)^2ti^2s$. Gen., -it'idos (-itidis). From ισχίον, the hip joint (see also *-itis). Ger., Lendenerventzündung. Inflammation of the sciatic nerve. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHIOCELE (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-a^2t(a^3t)-o(o^3)-se(ka)^2le(la)$; in Eng., $I^2s-ki^2-a^2t'o-sel$. Gen., -cel'es. See ISCHIOCELE.

ISCHIDROSIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2e)-dro^2si^2s$. Gen., -os'eos (-o'sis). From ισχίον, to check, and ἰδρῶς, perspiration. Fr., ischidrose. Ger., Schweissunterdrückung. Suppression of perspiration. [L, 41, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

ISCHIDROTICUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2e)-dro^2t(drot)^2i^2k-u^3s(u^4s)$. Pertaining to or causing ischidrosis. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

ISCHIEN, adj. I^2s/ki^2-e^2n . See ISCHIAL.

ISCHIGALACTIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-ga^2l-a^2k'ti^2k$. From ισχίον, to check, and γάλα, milk. See ANTIGALACTIC.

ISCHIO-ANAL, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-a^2n'l$. Lat., ischio-analis (from ισχίον, the hip joint, and anus, the fundament). Fr., i.-a. Pertaining to the ischium and to the anus.

ISCHIO-APONEUROTIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-a^2p-o-nu^2-ro^2t'i^2k$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, ἀπό, from, and νεῦρον, a nerve (see APONEUROSIS). Pertaining to the ischium and to the fascia lata of the thigh.

ISCHIOBLENNIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-ble^2n'n'i^2-a^3$. See ISCHOBLENNIA.

ISCHIO-BULBOSUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-bu^2l(bu^4l)-bos(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and bulbus, a bulb. Fr., ischio-bulbaire. Pertaining to the ischium and to the bulb of the urethra; as a n., a small muscular bundle, forming part of the superficial transverse muscle of the perineum. [L, 55 (a, 29); L, 49 (a, 14).]

ISCHIO-CALCANEUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-ka^2l-(ka^3l)-kan(ka^3n)^2-c^2-u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and calcaneum (q. v.). Pertaining to the ischium and to the calcaneum. [a, 29.]

ISCHIO-CAPSULAR, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-ka^2p'su^2l-a^2r$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and capsula, a capsule. Pertaining to the ischium and to the capsule of the hip-joint. [a, 29.]

ISCHIO-CAUDALIS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-ka^4(ka^3-u^4)-da(da^3)/li^2s$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and cauda, the tail. Pertaining to the ischium and to the tail. [a, 29.]

ISCHIO-CAVEENOSUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-ka^2(ka^3)-vu^4rn(we^2rn)-os(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and caverna, a cavity. Fr., ischio-caverneux. Ger., Sitzbeinschwellkörpermuskel, Ruthensteifer. A muscle arising from the inner portion of the tuber ischii and the adjacent parts of the crus penis, passing forward and inserted into the outer and lower surface of the crus. It compresses the crus and assists in the erection of the penis. [L.]—I. clitoridis. See ISCHIO-CLITORIANUS.—I.-c. urethrae. See BULBO-CAVERNOSUS.

ISCHIOCELE (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-se(ka)^2le(la)$; in Eng., $I^2s/ki^2-o-sel$. Gen., -cel'es. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and κελή, a tumor. Fr., ischiocele. Ger., Gesässbruch. Hernia through the great sciatic notch. [E.]

ISCHIO-CLITORIANUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-kli^2t-(klet)-o^2r-i^2-an(a^2n)^2u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and κλειτορίς, the clitoris. Pertaining to the ischium and to the clitoris; as a n., the analogue in the female of the ischio-cavernosus muscle of the male, assisting in the erection of the clitoris. [A, 528.]

ISCHIOCLITORIDIAN, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-kli^2t-o^2r-i^2d'i^2-a^2n$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and κλειτορίς, the clitoris. Fr., ischio-clitoridien. Pertaining to the ischium and to the clitoris.

ISCHIO-COCYGEUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-ko^2k-si^2(ku^3g)^2e^2-u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and κόκκυξ, the coccyx. Fr., ischio-coccygien. Ger., Gesässbeinmuskel. 1. A muscle arising from the sacro-ischial ligament and the ischiadic crest and inserted into the side of the last sacral vertebra and the first two coccygeal vertebrae. 2. Of Henle, that portion of the levator ani which arises from the obturator fascia. [L, 13.]

ISCHIO-CRÉTI-TIBIAL (Fr.), n. Es-ke-o-kra-te-te-be-al. From ισχίον, the hip joint, crista, a crest, and tibia (q. v.). See SEMITENDINOSUS.

ISCHIODIDYMUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-di^2d'i^2m-(u^4m)-u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and δίδυμος, double. Fr., ischio-didyme. A double monster with the individuals joined at the hips. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHIO-FEMORAL, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-fe^2m'o-r'l$. Lat., ischio-femorialis (from ισχίον, the hip joint, and femur [q. v.]). Fr., ischio-fémoral. Pertaining to the ischium and to the femur; as a n., of Chaussier, the adductor magnus of the thigh. [A, 385.]

ISCHIO-FEMORALIS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-fe^2m-o^2r-a^2(a^3)/li^2s$. Fr., ischio-fémoral. See ADDUCTOR FEMORIS magnus.—I.-f. magnus [Leyh]. See ISCHIO-TIBIALIS internus.—I.-f. parvus [Leyh]. See GRACILIS internus.

ISCHIOFEMOROPÉRONÉUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-fe^2m-o^2r-o(o^3)-pe^2r-o(o^2)-ne(na)^2u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, femur (q. v.), and πέρον, the fibula. Fr., ischio-fémoro-péronien. See BICEPS FLEXOR cruris.

ISCHION (Lat.), n. $I^2sk(I^2sch^2)/i^2-o^2n$. See ISCHURM.

ISCHIONEURALGIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-nu^2-ra^2l-(ra^3l)/ji^2(gi^2)-a^3$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, νεῦρον, a nerve, and ἄλγος, pain. See SCIATICA.

ISCHIO-PAGUS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o^2p'a^2g(a^3g)-u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and πάγος, that which has become solid. Fr., ischiopage. A double monster in which the bodies are almost completely developed, the pelvis merge together in front, and there is but one navel. [A, 326 (a, 21); A, 385.]—I. parasiticus. A double monster having two heads, a common trunk, and two, three, or four legs. [L, 57 (a, 40).]—I. tetrapus. An i. with four lower extremities. [a, 14.]—I. tripus. An i. with three lower extremities. [a, 40.]

ISCHIO-PAGY, n. $I^2sk-i^2-o^2p'a^2j-i^2$. Fr., ischiopagie. The monstrosity defined under ISCHIO-PAGUS. [A, 385.]

ISCHIO-PARASITICUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-pa^2r-(pa^3r)-a^2s(a^3s)-i^2t(et)^2i^2k-u^3s(u^4s)$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and παράσιτος, a parasite. Pertaining to a parasitic tumor of the ischial region. [a, 40.]

ISCHIO-PÉNIEN (Fr.), n. Es-ke-o-pa-ne-a^3n^2. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and penis (q. v.). Pertaining to the ischium and to the penis; as a n., see ISCHIO-CAVERNOSUS.

ISCHIO-PÉNIEN, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-pe^2n'i^2l$. See ISCHIO-PÉNIEN.

ISCHIO-PERINEAL, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-pe^2r-i^2n-e^2a^2l$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and περίνεον, the perineum. Fr., ischio-périnéal. Pertaining to the ischium and to the perineum; as a n., see TRANSVERSUS perineæ. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

ISCHIOPTHISIS (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o^2t(o^2t)^2i^2s(thi^2s)-i^2s$. Gen., -ophthis'eos (-ophthisis). From ισχίον, the hip joint, and φθίσις, consumption. Ger., Hüftschwindsucht. Emaciation due to hip disease. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).]

ISCHIOPODITE (Fr.), n. Es-ke-o-po-det. From ισχίον, the hip joint, and πῶς, the foot. The third joint or second trochanter of the appendages of crustaceans. [L, 158 (a, 39).]

ISCHIOPOPITITIBIALIS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-pop(po^2p)-lit(li^2t)-i(i^2)-ti^2b(teb)-i^2-a(a^3)/li^2s$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, poples, the ham, and tibia (q. v.). Fr., ischio-poptiti-tibial. See SEMIMEMBRANOSUS.

ISCHIOPRÆTIBIALIS (Lat.), n. m. $I^2s-ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-pre(pra^2e^2)-ti^2b(teb)-i^2-a(a^3)/li^2s$. From ισχίον, the hip joint, præ, before, and tibia (q. v.). Fr., ischio-pré-tibial. See SEMITENDINOSUS.

ISCHIO-PROSTATIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-pro^2s-ta^2t'i^2k$. Lat., ischio-prostaticus (from ισχίον, the hip joint, and prostate, the prostate. Fr., ischio-prostatique. Pertaining to the ischium and to the prostate; as a n., see TRANSVERSUS perineæ. [A, 385.]

ISCHIO-PUBIC, adj. $I^2s-ki^2-o-pu^2bi^2k$. Lat., ischiopubicus (from ισχίον, the hip joint, and pubes [q. v.]). Fr., ischio-pubien. Pertaining to the ischium and to the pubic bone.

ISCHIO-PUBLICUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s/ki^2(ch^2i^2)-o(o^3)-pu^2(pu)^2bi^2k-u^3s(u^4s)$. See ISCHIO-PUBIC; as a n., see I. inferior.—I. inferior. A muscle, not infrequently found, which arises from that portion of the great sacrosacral ligament sometimes known as the falcform ligament and is inserted into the lower margin of the symphyse pubis. It is tendinous at each extremity and bridges over a vein connecting the pudendal plexus and the obturator veins. [L, 332 (a, 29).]—I. superior. A bundle of muscular fibres, about 1 mm. broad, sometimes found in the arcus tendineus of the pelvic fascia. [L, 332 (a, 29).]

ISCHIO-PUBI-FÉMORAL (Fr.), n. Es-ke-o-pu⁶-be-fa-mo-ra. From ischion, the hip joint, pubes (q. v.), and femur (q. v.). See ADDUCTOR femoris magnus.

ISCHIO-PUBIPROSTATICUS (Lat.), n. m. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o-(o²)-pu²(pu)-bi²-pro²s-ta²t(i²a²t)²i²k-u²s(u²s). From ischion, the hip joint, pubes, the genitals, and prostate, to stand out. Fr., ischio-pubi-prostatique. See TRANSVERSUS perinaei.

ISCHIO-RECTAL, adj. I²s-ki²-o-re²k²l. Fr., i.-r. Pertaining to the ischium and to the rectum. [L, 49 (a, 14).]

ISCHIO-ROTULEUS (Lat.), n. m. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-rot(ro²t)-n²(i²u²l)²e²-u²s(u²s). From ischion, the hip joint, and rotula, the patella.—I.-r. externus. See LIO-APONEUROTICUS.

ISCHIO-SACRAL, adj. I²s-ki²-o-sak²r²l. Pertaining to or constituted by the ischium or ischia and the sacrum (see I.-s. ARCHI).

ISCHIOSCAMBOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-ska²m-(ska²m)-bo²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ischion, the hip joint, and σκάμβωσις, a bending. Ger., Hüftkrümmung. Distortion of the hip. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHIO-SOUS-CLITORIDIEN (Fr.), ISCHIO-SOUS-CLITORIEN (Fr.), n's. Es-ke-o-su-kle-to-re-de-a²u², -kle-to-re-a²n². See ISCHIOCLITORIANUS.

ISCHIO-SOUS-PÉNIEN (Fr.), n. I²s-ke-o-su-pa-ne-a²n². See ISCHIOCAVERNOSUS.

ISCHIO-SOUS-TROCHANTÉRIEN (Fr.), n. Es-ke-o-su-tro-ka²n²-ta-re-a²n². See QUADRATUS femoris.

ISCHIOSPINITROCHANTERICUS (Lat.), n. m. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-spi(spe)-ni²-tro(tro²)-ka²n²(ch²a²n)-te²r(tar)²i²k-u²s(u²s). From ischion, the hip joint, spina, a thorn, and τροχάντηρ, a trochanter. Fr., ischio-spini-trochantérien. See GEMELLUS (2d def.).

ISCHIOSUBCLITORIDIAN, n. I²s-ki²-o-su²b-kl²i²t-o²r-i²d²i²-a²n. See ISCHIOCLITORIANUS.

ISCHIOSUBTROCHANTERICUS (Lat.), adj. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-su²b(su²b)-tro(tro²)-ka²n²(ch²a²n)-te²r(tar)²i²k-u²s(u²s). From ischion, the hip joint, sub, under, and τροχάντηρ, a trochanter. See QUADRATUS femoris.

ISCHIOTHLASTES (Lat.), n. m. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-thla²s-(thla²s)²(tez)(tas). Gen., -thlast'u (-æ). From ischion, the hip joint, and θλάστης, a crusher. Ger., Hüftpresser. An old term for an embryothlastes intended for crushing the hips. [A, 88.]

ISCHIO-TIBIAL, adj. I²s-ki²-o-ti²b²i²-a²l. Lat., ischio-tibialis. Pertaining to the ischium and to the tibia.

ISCHIOTIBIALIS (Lat.), adj. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-ti²b²(teb)-i²-a²(a²)²i²s. See ISCHIO-TIBIAL; as a n., a muscle connected with the ischium and the tibia.—I. externus. In the lower animals, the analogue of the biceps flexor cruris and of a portion of the glutæus maximus in man. [L.]—I. internus. In the lower animals, the analogue of the semimembranosus muscle in man. [L.]—I. medius, I. posticus. In the lower animals, the analogue of the semitendinosus muscle in man. [L.]

ISCHIO-URETHRALIS (Lat.), n. m. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-o(o²)-u²-r²(u²)-r²eth(rath)-ra²t²a²)²i²s. From ischion, the hip, and ουρήθρα, the urethra. Fr., ischio-urétral. See TRANSVERSUS perinaei.

ISCHIUM (Lat.), n. n. I²s-ki²(ch²i²)-u²m(u²m). Gr., ischion. Fr., ischion. Ger., Sitzbein. It., ischio. Sp., isquion. The posterior and inferior part of the os innominatum. Superiorly it forms about two fifths of the acetabulum; inferiorly it presents a large, rough eminence, the tuberosity, upon which the body rests in sitting; and extending forward from the tuberosity is the ramus. It bounds the outer portion of the obturator foramen. Between the acetabulum and the tuberosity the external surface presents a groove for the tendon of the obturator externus. The internal surface is smooth and concave, and forms the lateral boundary of the true pelvic cavity. The posterior surface is quadrilateral and rough for the attachment of muscles. On the posterior border, behind the acetabulum, is a sharp process, the spine of the i., which forms the lower limit of the great sacro-sciatic notch, and is separated from the tuberosity by the lesser sacro-sciatic notch. [L, 132, 142 (a, 29).]

ISCHL (Ger.), n. I²shl. A town in Upper Austria, where there are alkaline and saline springs, a whey-cure establishment, and iron, sulphur, mud, and pine-needle baths. [L, 30, 37, 41, 49, 57 (a, 14).]

ISCHNOGYRIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sk(i²sch)-no(no²)-j²i²r(gu²r)²i²-a². From ισχνός, feeble, and γύρος, a circle. Ger., Ischnogyrie. A feeble development of the cerebral convolutions. [A, 319 (a, 21).]

ISCHNOPHONIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sk(i²sch)-no(no²)-fo²'ni²-a². From ισχνός, feeble, and φωνή, the voice. Fr., ischnophonie. Ger., Ischnophonie. 1. Weakness or shrillness of the voice. 2. Stammering. [L, 41, 50, 85 (a, 14).]

ISCHNOTES (Lat.), ISCHNOTIA (Lat.), ISCHNOTIS (Lat.), n's m., f., and f. I²sk(i²sch²/no²no²-tez)(tas), I²sk(i²sch²)-no(no²)/sh²i²(ti²)-a², I²sk(i²sch²/no²no²-ti²s). Gen., -nel'os (-is), -not'is, isch-notis. Gr., ισχνότης (from ισχνός, lean). Ger., Hagerkeit (1st def.), Schwindsucht (2d def.). 1. Extreme thinness. 2. Consumption. [L, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHNOUS, adj. I²sk'nu²s. Gr., ισχνος. Lat., ischnos, ischnus. Very thin (said especially of hectic persons). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOBLENNIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-ble²n²ni²-a². From ischion, to check, and βλέννως, mucus. Fr., ischoblennie. Ger., Schleimverhaltung, Ischoblennie. A suppression of a mucous discharge. [L, 30, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOCENOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-se²n²(ke²n²)-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ischion, to check, and κένωσις, an emptying. A suppression of any normal evacuation. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOCOLIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-kol(ch²o²l)²i²-a². From ischion, to check, and χολή, bile. A checking of the flow of bile.

ISCHOCELIA (Lat.), ISCHOCOLIA (Lat.), ISCHOCOPRIA (Lat.), n's f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-sel'(ko²e²l)²i²-a², -*koil*²i²-a², -ko²p²ri²-a². From ischion, to check, and κοιλία, the hollow of the belly, or κόπρος, excrement. Fr., ischocolie. Ger., Unterleiberverstopfung. Constipation. [L, 30, 50, 135 (a, 14, 39).]

ISCHOGALACTIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-ga²l(ga²l)-a²kt-(a²kt)²i²-a². From ischion, to check, and γάλα, milk. Fr., ischogalactie. Ger., Milchverhaltung. Suppression of the milk. [L, 30, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOLOCHIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-lok(lo²ch²)-i²-a². From ischion, to check, and λόχος, pertaining to childbirth. Fr., i. Ger. Kindbettreimungsverhaltung. Suppression of the lochia. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOMENIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-men(men)²i²-a². From ischion, to check, and μήν, a month. Fr., ischoménié. Ger., Menstruationsverhaltung. Suppression of the menses. [L, 30, 41, 44, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOPHONIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-fon²i²-a². From ischion, to check, and φωνή, the voice. Fr., ischnophonie. Ger., Stottern. An impediment in the voice, stammering. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOPYOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-pi(pu²)-o²si²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From ischion, to check, and πύον, pus. Fr., ischnopyosie. Ger., Eiterverhaltung. A suppression of a purulent flow. [L, 41, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHOSPERMIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ko(ch²o²)-spu²rm(spe²rm)²-i²-a². From ischion, to check, and σπέρμα, seed. Suppression or retention of the seminal fluid. [A, 40.]

ISCHURETIC, adj. I²sk-u²-re²t'i²k. Lat., ischureticus (from ischion, to check, and ουρον, urine). Fr., ischurétique. Ger., ischuretisch. Pertaining to ischuria; as a n., an agent that causes ischuria, also one that relieves it. [A, 301, 322, 385.]

ISCHURIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ku²(ch²u²)²ri²-a². Gr., ισχυρία (from ischion, to check, and ουρον, urine). Fr., ischurie. Ger., Ischurie, Harnverhaltung. Retention of urine.—False i. I. due to disease or obstruction in the kidneys or ureters, so that the secretion does not reach the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—Hysterical i. I. due to hysteria. [a, 40.]—I. acuta. Retention of urine due to a spasmodic stricture being affected by cold. [a, 40.]—I. aspidialis. I. due to atresia of the meatus urinarius. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. atonica. See I. paralytica.—I. atretarum. I. due to atresia of the vulva. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. carunculosa. I. due to the presence of a urethral caruncle. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cryptopeica. I. due to a distended follicle pressing upon the urethra. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystolithica. I. due to stone in the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystitica. I. due to inflammation of the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystoplegma. I. due to paralysis of the bladder. [a, 40.]—I. cystoplegmatica. I. due to catarrh and consequent accumulation of mucus in the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystoproctica. I. due to inflammation and consequent swelling between the bladder and rectum. [a, 40.]—I. cystopyrica. I. due to accumulation of pus in the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystospastica. I. due to spasm of the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. cystothromboides. I. due to clots in the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. dysuria. See DYSURIA.—I. ectopocystica. I. due to displacement, hernia, or prolapsus of the bladder. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. gravidarum, I. hysterocystica. I. of the state of pregnancy. There are several forms (e. g., i. gravidarum [Nordman], i. of labor [Boneti], and i. of retroversion [Hippocrates]). [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. incompleta. I. due to a partial obstruction of the urethral canal by stricture. [A, 319 (a, 40).]—I. inflammatoria. Fr., ischurie inflammatoire. Ger., entzündliche Harnverhaltung. I. due to inflammation. [D.]—I. lunatica. I. sometimes observed in the insane wherein they may go several days without urinating. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. nephrolythica, I. nephritica, I. nephrolithica, I. nephroplegmatica, I. nephroplegia, I. nephroplethorica, I. nephropylea, I. nephrospastica, I. nephrothromboides. See I. renalis.—I. nothia. See False i.—I. organica. I. caused by some organic trouble, such as stricture of the urethra. [D.]—I. paradoxa, I. paradoxica. Drilling of urine from overdistention of the bladder.—I. paralytica. Ger., Lähmung des Detrusor urinae, paralytische Ischurie. I. from paralysis of the bladder. [D.]—I. perilemica. I. due to compression or stricture of the urethra. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. perinaealis. I. due to obstruction of the urethra in the perineal region. [a, 40.]—I. phimosis, I. phimotica. I. due to phimosis.—I. polyurica. I. due to excessive accumulation of urine in the bladder. [Savages (a, 40).]—I. renalis. Suppression of urine. [D.]—I. spasmodica. See CYSTOSPASMUS.—I. spattea. I. which is a symptom or result of spastic dysuria. [A, 326 (a, 40).]—I. spuria. See False i.—I. suppleta. See I.

renalis.—I. ureterica, I. ureteritica, I. ureterolithica, I. ureterophlegmatica, I. ureteropyica, I. ureterostomatica, I. ureterothromboides. I. due to obstruction in the ureters. [L, 290.]—I. urethralis a phimosi. I. due to phimosis.—I. urethrolithica. I. due to obstruction of the urethra by a worm or worms. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. urethritica. I. due to inflammation of the urethra. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. urethrohyemodes. I. due to obstruction of the urethra by a membrane resembling or continuous with the hymen or by coagulable lymph. [a, 40.]—I. urethrolithica. I. due to urethral calculus. [a, 40.]—I. urethroplegmatia. I. due to accumulation of mucus in the urethra. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. urethrothromboides. I. due to blood-clot in the urethra. [L, 290 (a, 40).]—I. vera, I. vesicalis. Ger., Harnsperre, Harnverstopfung, Harnblasenharnverhaltung. Retention of urine in which the obstructing cause is to be found in the bladder. [D.]—Mechanical i. Lat., i. mechanica. Ger., mechanische Harnverhaltung. I. caused by mechanical obstruction, as by the presence of a stone in the bladder. [D.]—Neurotic i. Of Charcot, a form of i. dependent upon neurotic conditions, such as hysteria, epilepsy, and chorea, unassociated with local disease or deformity. [a, 40.]—Renal i. See I. renalis.—True i. See I. vera.

ISCHURIC, adj. I²s-ku²ri²k. See ISCHURETIC.

ISCHURIOPHTHALMIA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ku²(ch²u)²ri²-o²f-tha²(tha²)²mi²-a². From ισχου, to check, ουρον, urine, and ὀφθαλμία, ophthalmia. Ophthalmia supposed to result from renal ischuria. [L, 135 (a, 39).]

ISCHURY, n. I²sk²u²ri². See ISCHURIA.

ISCHYOMYELITIS (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ki²(ch²u²)²-o²(o²)-mi²(mu²)²-e²i²(e)²ti²s. Gen., -it'idis (-idis). From ισχύς, strength, and μυελίς, marrow (see also -itis). Ger., Kreuzrückenmarksentzündung. See OPHYOMYELITIS.

ISCHYROS (Lat.). ISCHYRUS (Lat.), adj's. I²s-ki²(ch²u²)²ro²s, -ru²s(ru²s). Gr., ισχυρός. Ger., stark, kräftig. Strong, powerful. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISCHYS (Lat.), n. f. I²s-ki²(ch²u²)²s. Gen., isch'yos (isch'yis). Gr., ισχύς. Strength. [A, 322.]

ISENKRAUT (Ger.), n. Ez'e²n-kra²-u²t. The Verbena officinalis. [B, 180 (a, 24).]

ISERTA (Lat.), n. f. E-se²rt'i²-a². From Isert, a Danish botanist. Fr., i., isertie. A genus of South American rubiaceous shrubs or trees, by Bentham and Hooker referred to the tribe Muscendee. The Isertie of A. Richard, or the Isertie of Lindley, or the Isertie of De Candolle, are: Of Richard and De Candolle, a tribe of the Rubiaceae; of Lindley, a tribe of the Cinchoneae. [B, 38, 42, 48, 170, 173 (a, 35).]—I. coccinea. Fr., i. écarlate. A species found in Guiana, having sweet, edible berries and a bitter wood. The leaves are used in decoction as an application to tumors; the bark is employed in the treatment of fevers and in liver affections. [B, 93, 173, 180 (a, 35).]

ISETHIONIC ACID, n. I²s-e²th-i²-o²n-i²k. Fr., acide éthylènehydroxyulfonique. Ger., Isithionsäure. A dibasic acid, C₂H₄-SO₂(OH)₂, derived from ethionic acid by evaporation of the aqueous solution of the latter. It occurs under the form of deliquescent, acicular crystals. [B, 4.]

ISETHIONIC ACID, n. I²s-e²th-i²-o²n-u²-ri²k. See TAUCROCARBAMIC ACID.

ISETHIONYL, n. I²s-e²th-i²-o²n-i²l. The bivalent radicle, C₂H₄'SO₂', of isethionic acid. [B.]

ISHARAMULA (Hind., Beng.), n. See ARISTOLOCHIA indica.

ISICIUM (Lat.), ISICOS (Lat.), ISICUS (Lat.), n's n., m., and m. I²i²-si²k²-u²m(u²m), i²i²-si²k²-o²s, -u²s(u²s). Gr., ισίκιον, ισικος. A kind of ancient dish made of minced meat with or without spices, etc. [A, 325.]

ISIDIDÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. I²s(es)-i²d'i²-e-a²-e². From isis, a plant, and eidōs, resemblance. Fr., isididés. A family of the Aleyonaria. [B, 93.]

ISIDOID, ISIDIOMORPHOUS, ISIDIOPHOROUS, adj's. I²s-i²d'i²-oid, -i²d'i²-o-mo²r²fu²s, -i²d'i²-o²pho²r-u²s. Lat., isidoides, isidiomorphus, isidiophorus (from isis, a plant, and eidōs, resemblance, μορφή, form, or φορέω, to bear). Having isidia (said of the thallus of a lichen). [B, 77, 123 (a, 35).]

ISIDIUM (Lat.), n. n. I²s(es) i²d'i²-u²m(u²m). From isis, a plant. Fr., isidion. 1. An elevated, coralloid, stipitate excrescence, sometimes branched, found in the thalli of some foliaceous and crustaceous lichens and serving as propagula. 2. A pseudo-genus of lichens made for some species of Perisporia. The Isidieae are: Of Reichenbach, a family of the Cephalosporae; of Rabenhorst, a division of imperfect lichens (Lichenes imperfecti). [B, 19, 77, 170, 173 (a, 35).]

ISIKA (Lat.), n. f. I²s(es) i²k-a²s. The genus Lonicera. [a, 35.]

ISINGLASS, n. I²zi²n²-gla²s. Bomb., dinglāsa. See ICHTHYOCOLLA.—American i. Ger., amerikanische Hausenblase. See New York i., New England i., and Transparent i.—Artificial i. Ger., künstliche Hausenblase. Commercial gelatin, especially the transparent preparations used as substitutes for i. in making jellies. [B, 5, 77 (a, 35).]—Bengal i. See AGAR-AGAR.—Book i. Ger., Bücherhausenblase. A commercial name for i. consisting of fishes' bladders folded and dried. [B, 5, 77 (a, 35).]—Brazilian i. Ger., brasilianische Hausenblase. The product of a large fish, Silurus parkerii, and perhaps of other species. It is prepared by drying the air-bladders of the fish in their distended state; inferior to the Russian i. [B, 5, 77, 180 (a, 35).] See also False i.—Cake i. The gelatin prepared from fragments of the other forms of i. with various other parts of the fish. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—China i., Chinese i., East Indian i. India i., a variety of i. consisting of the dried bladders of two species of Polygnemus and other fish in the Indian waters. In London it is used chiefly in clarifying beer. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—False i. Ger., falsche Hausenblase. A non-gelatinous article from Brazil, consisting of the dried ovary of a large fish. It is a poor substitute for i. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Indian i. See China i.—I. fish. The Acipenser huso and other species. [A, 511 (a, 35).]—I. jelly. See Gelatina ICHTHYOCOLLE.—I. plaster. See Emplastrum ICHTHYOCOLLE.—Japanese i. See Japanese AGAR-AGAR.—Leaf i. Ger., blättrige Hausenblase. I. consisting of fishes' bladders dried in the flat state. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Long staple i. See Staple i.—Manilla i. I. from Manilla, yielded by a species of fish not yet determined. [B, 77 (a, 35).]—New England i. Ribbon i., an inferior i., unfit for internal use, prepared from the air bladder of the common hake (Gadus merluccius). The bladders are macerated in water and then pressed into thin ribbons by passing them between rollers. [B, 5, 14, 77 (a, 35).]—New York i. Ger., New Yorker Hausenblase. An i. of good quality, prepared from the sounds (dried whole or merely split open) of Otolithus regalis. [B, 5, 180 (a, 35).]—Refined i. Transparent i., an excellent fish occurring in commerce in thin translucent plates. It is prepared from New England i. by dissolving the latter in hot water and spreading on oiled muslin. It has a strong fishy smell. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Russian i. The ichthyocolla of the U. S. Ph. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Samovey i. In English commerce, an inferior i. from Russia; procured, according to Pereira, from the Silurus glanis. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Staple i. Russian i. consisting of the membranes folded into compact and twisted forms, called staples, according to the size of which it is known as long or short staple. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—Transparent i. See Refined i.

ISIR (Lat.), n. n. Is(i²s)'u²ir(i²r). See ELIXIR.

ISIS (Lat.), n. f. I(e)'si²s. Gen., i'sidos (-idis), is'eos. Gr., ἰσις (1st def.), ἰσις (= Isis, the goddess of drugs [2d def.]). 1. A genus of corticose polyps of the tribe Lithophyta, of which the coral is a member. 2. An old term for a plaster, especially for wounds in the head. [L, 105 (a, 39); L, 50 (a, 14).]—I. nobilis. See Red CORAL.

ISKIMID, n. A town on the Gulf of Nicodemia, in Turkey in Asia, near which are the springs called Yalora. [L, 30, 37, 41 (a, 14).]

ISLAND, n. I'tnd. Lat., insula. Fr., île. Ger., Insel. In anatomy, a structure more or less detached from a main mass and surrounded by structures of a different sort.—Blood-i's. See under Blood.—Epithelial i's. Ger., Epithelinseln, Keimepithelinseln. Patches of germinal cells between the endothelial cells of the ovary in the Amphibia. [“Quart. Jour. of Micro. Sci.,” 1882, p. 260; “Arch. f. Mikr. Anat.,” 1873, p. 397 (J).]—I. of Reil. See INSULA (1st def.).

ISLANDICUS (Lat.), adj. I²s-la²nd(la²nd)'i²k-u²s(u²s). Fr., d'Islande. Ger., isländisch. Indigenous to or procured from Iceland.

ISLET, n. I'let. A small island.—Hepatic i's. See INSULA (2d def.).

ISLINGTON, n. I²z'li²n²-tu²n. Formerly a town of Middlesex, England, now a part of London, where there was a ferruginous spring. [L, 30, 41 (a, 14).]

ISMENE (Lat.), n. f. I²s-me(ma)'ne(na). Gen., -men'es. From Ἰσμήνη, a daughter of Oedipus. Of Salisbury, a genus of the Amaryllidaceae; by Bentham and Hooker, referred to the genus Hymenocallis. [B, 42 (a, 35).]—I. ancaea. Fr., narcisse de Pérou. The Peruvian daffodil. The bulbs are used in Peru for promoting suppuration. [B, 19, 180 (a, 35).]—I. calathina. See NARCISsus calathinus.

ISMID, ISMIND, n's. See ISKIMID.

ISNARDIA (Lat.), n. f. Es-na²rd'i²-a². From Isnard, a French botanist. Fr., isnardie. Ger., Isnardie. The genus Ludwigia. The Isnardieae of Reichenbach are a division of the Onagraceae. [B, 34, 42, 170 (a, 35).]—I. alternifolia. See LUDWIGIA alternifolia.—I. palustris. See LUDWIGIA palustris.

ISOACRYLIC ACID, n. I²s-o-a²k-ri²i²k. See ACRYLIC ACID (2d def.).

ISOALLOXAN, n. I²s-o-a²l-lo²x'a²n. An isomeric modification of alloxan, formed by heating the latter to 260°. With bases it forms salts. [B, 2.]

ISOALLOXANIC ACID, n. I²s-o-a²l-lo²x-an'i²k. See ISALLOXANIC ACID.

ISOALLYLENE, n. I²s-o-a²l'i²l-en. Ger., Isoallylen. See ISALLYLENE.

ISOAMYL, n. I²s-o-a²m'i²l. Fr., isoamyle. Ger., Isamyl. See AMYL.—I. angelate. Ger., Angelicasäure-ester. A body, C₈H₇O₂ - (CH₂CH₂CH₂)₂ = C₁₀H₁₈O₂, forming one of the constituents of chamomile-oil, and distilling at 200° C. It is isomeric with i. tiginate, and also contained in the same oil. [B, 5.]—I. carbonic acid. Isocaproic acid. [B.]—I. hydride. See PENTANE (2d def.).—I. tiginate. Ger., Tiglinensäure-ester. A body, C₁₀H₁₈O₂ = C₈H₇O₂(CH₂CH₂CH₂)₂, forming one of the constituents of chamomile-oil. It is isomeric with i. angelate, and distills at about 205° C. [B, 5.]

ISOAMYLENE, n. I²s-o-a²m'i²l-en. Amylene into the constitution of which an isocarbon radical enters, or one in which the carbon atoms are not disposed in a single chain. [B.] See AMYLENE (2d and 5th var's).

ISOAMYLIDENE, n. I²s-o-a²m-i²l'i²d-en. Ger., Isoamyliden. See AMYLIDENE.

ISOBAPHIA (Lat.), n. f. Is(²s-o(o³)-ba²f(ba²f)^{1/2}-a³. From isos, equal, and βαφή, dyeing. Fr., isobaphie. In physics, the condition of a body which reflects only a single color. [L., 41 (a, 14).]

ISOBUIRET, n. I²s-o-bi-u²-re²t. A crystalline substance, $C_7H_8N_2O_2 = N_2 \left\{ \begin{array}{l} CO \\ CO(NH_2) \\ H_2 \end{array} \right\}$, formed by the action of ammonium on tribromacetylene. It occurs in long needles, taking up molecules of water of crystallization, dissolves easily in hot water, melts at 185° C., and has other properties of biuret. [B., 46, 93 (a, 39).]

ISOBRIATE, ISOBRIOUS, adj's. I²s-o'bri²-at, -u²s. Lat., isobrius (from isos, equal, and βριών, to be strong). Fr., isobrié. Isodynamous, growing with equal force (said of the cotyledons of a dicotyledonous embryo). [B., 19 (a, 35).]

ISOBUTANE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'an. See BUTANE.

ISOBUTYL, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²l. See BUTYL.—I. aceto-acetate. A colorless liquid, $C_8H_{14}O_3 = CH_2 - CO - CH_2 - CO_2(CH_2 - CH - (CH_2)_2) = C_8H_{14}O_3$, having a faint odor of fennel, and boiling at 303° C. [B., 2.]—I. acetone. A substitution compound of isobutyl and acetone, $C_7H_{12}O = CH_2 - CO - CH_2(C_2H_5)$. [B., 2.]

—I. alcohol. Ger., Falkohol. See BUTYL alcohol.—I. aldehyde. See BUTYRIC aldehyde.—I. amine. Ger., I'amin. See BUTYLAMINE.—I. angelate, I. angelicate. Ger., Angelicasäure-Isobutylester. A body, $C_9H_{16}O_2$ [(CH₂)₂ < CH.C₂H₅] = C₉H₁₆O₂, forming one of the constituents of chamomile-oil, and distilling at 177°. [B., 5.]—I. benzene. Ger., I'benzol. A colorless oily liquid having the composition of benzene in which it replaces hydrogen: C(C₆H₅)H₂ - CH - $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} CH_3 \\ CH_2 \end{array} \right\} = C_{10}H_{14}$. It is isomeric with diethyl benzene, with cymene, and ethyldimethylbenzene. [B.]—I. benzoic acid. A monobasic acid, (CH₂)₂C₂H₅.C₆H₄.CO.OH. Two isomeric forms are known: (1) Meta-i., crystallizing in long broad needles, which melt at 127° C. (2) Pura-i., needles or monosymmetric crystals like those of calc spar, and melting at 164° C. [B., 3 (a, 38).]—I. carbinol. See AMYL alcohol.—I. carbonic acid. Ger., I'carbon-säure. See VALERIC acid.—I. dimethylcarbinol. See HEPTYL alcohol.—I. dimethylcarbinyl. See HEPTYL—I. hydride. See BUTANE.—I. isobutyrate. A liquid salt, $C_8H_{12}O_2(C_2H_5)$, contained in angelic acid, and boiling at about 148° C. [B., 3 (a, 38).]—I. isophosphoanate, I. isothiocyanate. See BUTYL isothiocyanate.—I. nitrate. A liquid obtained by heating a mixture of amyl nitrate and isobutyl alcohol. It boils at 66° to 70° C. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxxiii (a, 39).]—I. oxalate. Fr., oxalate d'isobutyle. Ger., Di'isobutyl-oxalate. Diisobutyl oxalate, a liquid, [(CH₂)₂ < CH.C₂H₅]C₂O₄ = C₁₀H₁₈O₆. [B., 4.]—I. phenol. A crystalline substance, $C_9H_{11}(OH)C_6H_4(CH_2)_2$, occurring as needles of a faint odor, boiling at 99° C. [B., 3 (a, 38).]

ISOBUTYLENE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²l-en. Ger., Isobutylene. See BUTYLENE.

ISOBUTYLIC, adj. I²s-o-bu²t'i²l'i²k. Of or pertaining to isobutyl. [B., 2.]

ISOBUTYLIDENE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²l'i²d-en. Ger., Isobutyliden. An isomeric form of butylidene (tetrene), $C_4H_8 = (CH_2)_2 = CH.CH'$; a bivalent radicle. [B.]—I. oxide. Ger., Isobutyliden-oxid. See BUTYRIC aldehyde (2d def.).

ISOBUTYRAMIDE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²r-a²m-i²d(id). Ger., Isobutyramid. See under BUTYRAMIDE.

ISOBUTYRATE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²r-at. A salt of isobutyric acid. [B.]

ISOBUTYRIC, adj. I²s-o-bu²t'i²r'i²k. Isomeric with a butyric compound. [B.]—I. acid. Fr., acide isopropylcarbonique. Ger., Isobuttersäure. See BUTYRIC acid.—I. aldehyde. Fr., aldéhyde isobutyrique. Ger., Isobutyraldehyd. See BUTYRIC aldehyde (2d def.).—I. chloride. See under BUTYRIC chloride.—I. ether. See ETHYL butyrate.

ISOBUTYRONE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²r-on. Ger., Isobutyron. A liquid, [(CH₂)₂.CH]₂CO, obtained by the dry distillation of calcic isobutyrate or by careful oxidation of diisopropyl oxalic acid, boiling at about 125° C., and having a strong ethereal smell somewhat like that of camphor. [B., 3, 4 (a, 38).]

ISOBUTYRONITRILE, n. I²s-o-bu²t'i²r-o-nit'ri²l. Ger., Isobutyronitril. See PROPYL cyanide.

ISOCAJUPUTENE, n. I²s-o-ka²j'u²-pu²t-en. An oily liquid boiling at 177° C., obtained from oil of cajuput, isomeric with cajuputene. [B., 18.]

ISOCAPRIC, adj. I²s-o-ka²p'ri²k. Fr., isocaprique. Isomeric with a capric compound. [B.]—I. acid. An acid, $C_{10}H_{18}.CO.OH$, occurring as an oily liquid of slight odor and unpleasant, burning taste, and boiling at about 242° C. [B., 3 (a, 38).]—I. alcohol. Fr., alcool isocaprique. See DECATYL alcohol.—I. aldehyde. Fr., aldéhyde isocaprique. See under CAPRIC aldehyde.

ISOCAPROATE, n. I²s-o-ka²p'ro-at. Ger., Isocapronat. A salt of isocaproic acid. [B., 4.]

ISOCAPROIC ACID, n. I²s-o-ka²p'ro'i²k. Fr., acide isocaproïque (ou iso-hexoïque). Ger., Isocapronsäure. See CAPROIC acid (2d def.).

ISOCAPRYL ALCOHOL, n. I²s-o-ka²p'ri²l a²l'ko-ho²l. See DECATYL alcohol.

ISOCAPRYLIC ACID, n. I²s-o-ka²p'ri²l'i²k. Fr., acide isocaproïque. Ger., Isocaprylsäure. A monobasic acid, $(CH_2)_2 \equiv C - CH_2 - CH(CH_2) - CO.OH = C_{10}H_{18}O_2$, isomeric with caprylic or octylic acid; an oily liquid boiling above 205° C. [B., 4.]

ISOCARPOUS, adj. I²s-o-ka²rp'u²s. Lat., isocarpus, isocarpeus (from isos, equal, and καρπός, a fruit). Ger., gleichfrüchtig. 1. Having as many carpels as sepals and petals. The Isocarpe (Fr., isocarpees); syn.: Isocarpeae) of Eichler, Sachs, and others are a division of the Gamopetalae, thus characterized. 2. Like-fruited; said of Algae in which the fruits of the same species have the same form. The Isocarpeae (Ger., Gleichfrüchtige, Isocarpeen) are, in the older systems of classification of the Algae, a division of the latter, including the Diatomeae and Matocophyceae of Kützing. [B., 41, 104, 170, 291 (a, 35).]

ISOCERYL ALCOHOL, n. I²s-o-se²r'i²l a²l'ko-ho²l. See under CERYL alcohol.

ISOCETIC ACID, n. I²s-o-se²t'i²k. See under CETIC acid.

ISOCHEIROUS, adj. I²s-o-ki²r'u²s. Lat., isochirus (from isos, equal, and χείρ, the hand). Having hands, or appendages in the form of arms, all resembling each other. [L., 180 (a, 39).]

ISOCHINOLINE, n. I²s-o-ki²n'ol-en. See QUINOLINE.

ISOCHOLANIC ACID, n. I²s-o-kol-a²n'i²k. An acid, $C_{20}H_{32}O_6$, produced along with its isomer, cholic acid, by the oxidation of cholic acid. [Latschinoff, B.]

ISOCOLESTERIN, n. I²s-o-kol-e²s'te²r-i²n. Fr., isocholesterine. Ger., I. See under CHOLESTERIN.

ISOCOMOUS, adj. I²s-o-kom'u²s. From isos, equal, and χώμα, a promontory. Forming equal angles of divergence; said of branches springing from the stem of a plant at the same angle. [a, 35.]

ISOCROMATIC, adj. I²s-o-krom-a²t'i²k. From isos, equal, and χρῶμα, color. Fr., isochre, isochromatique. Having the same color; of uniform tint. [L., 30, 41 (a, 14).]

ISOCHRON (Ger.), ISOCHRONAL, adj's. E-so-ch'ron'v, i²s-o²k'ro-n'l. See ISOCHRONOUS.

ISOCHRONISM, n. I²s-o²k'ro-ni²z'm. Lat., isochronismus (from isos, equal, and χρόνος, time). The property of being isochronous. [a, 17.]

ISOCHRONOUS, adj. I²s-o²k'ro-nu²s. From isos, equal, and χρόνος, time. Fr., isochrone. Ger., isochron. 1. Occupying equal periods of time. 2. Recurring at regular intervals. [L., 30, 41, 49, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOCHROUS (Lat.), adj. I²s-o²k(o²ch²)'ro(ro²)-u²s(u²s). From isos, equal, and χρῶμα, color. See ISOCHROMATIC.

ISOCHRYSON (Lat.), ISOCHRYSUM (Lat.), n's n. I²s-o(o²)-kri²z(ch²ru²s'o²n, -u²m(u²m)). 1. Of Galen, a certain collyrium. 2. Of Libavius, a compound of iron, antimony, and mercury. [A., 325.]

ISOCITRIC ACID, n. I²s-o-si²t'ri²k. A crystalline acid formed by treating an aqueous solution of citric acid with sodium amalgam, the acid reaction being kept up by dilute sulphuric acid. [Rocheleder, "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvii (a, 39).]

ISOCRATES (Lat.), n. m. I²s-o²k'ra²t(ra²)-e²z(as). Gr., ισοκράτης (from isos, equal, and κρατῆρ, to mix). Wine mixed with its own volume of water. [L., 50 (a, 14).]

ISOCREATINE, n. I²s-o-kre²a²t-en. Fr., isocréatine. Ger., Isokreatin. See ALACREATINE.

ISOCROTIC ACID, n. I²s-o-krot-o²n'i²k. Fr., acide isocrotonique. Ger., Isocrotonsäure. See CROTONIC acid (b).

ISOCROTYL, n. I²s-o-krot'i²l. A univalent radicle, $(C_4H_7) : C : CH -$, isomeric with butenyl. [B., 4.]

ISOCTOIC ACID, n. I²s-o²k-to²i²k. Fr., acide isoctoïque. Ger., Isocytlysäure. See ISOCAPRYLIC acid.

ISOCTYLALCOHOL, n. I²s-o²k'ti²l a²l'ko-ho²l. See under OCTYL alcohol.

ISOCTYLAMINE, n. I²s-o²k-ti²l'a²m-en. See under OCTYL amine.

ISOCTYLIC ACID, n. I²s-o²k-ti²l'i²k. Ger., Isocytlysäure. See ISOCAPRYLIC acid.

ISOCUMOL, n. I²s-o-ku²m'o²l. See PSEUDOCUMENE.

ISOCYAN (Ger.), n. E-so-tsu²a²n'. See ISOCYANOGEN.—I. s²äure-Allylester. Allyl pseudocyanate. [B.]

ISOCYANATE, n. I²s-o-si²a²n-at. Fr., i. Ger., -isocyanat (in compos.). A salt of isocyanic acid. [B.]

ISOCYANIC ACID, n. I²s-o-si²a²n-i²k. Pseudocyanic acid. [B.] See under CYANIC acid.

ISOCYANIDE, n. I²s-o-si²a²n-i²d(id). Ger., -isocyanür (in compos.). See under CYANIDE.

ISOCYANOGEN, n. I²s-o-si²a²n'o²-je²n. Ger., Isocyan. See CARBAMMONIUM and under CYANOGEN.

ISOCYANÜR (Ger.), n. E-so-tsu²a²n-u²r'. See ISOCYANIDE.

ISOCYANURATE, n. I²s-o-si²a²n-u²rat. Fr., i. A salt of isocyanuric acid. [a, 38.]

ISOCYANURIC ACID, n. I²s-o-si²a²n-u²ri²k. Fr., acide isocyanurique. See FULMINIC acid.

ISODACTYLOUS, adj. I²s-o-da²k'ti²l-u²s. From isos, equal, and δάκτυλος, digit. Fr., isodactyle. Having toes of the same size. [L., 41 (a, 14).]

ISODIC, adj. I²s-o²d'i²k. See EISODIC.

ISODIMORPHISM, n. I²s-o-di²mo²r'i²z'm. From isos, equal, and μορφή, two-formed. A peculiar form of dimorphism, in which a substance crystallizes in two forms that are incompatible, but still sufficiently similar to come within the limits of isomorphism. [L., 41 (a, 14).]

ISODIMORPHOUS, adj. I²s-o-di²mo²r'u²s. Fr., isodimorphe. Having the property of isodimorphism. [L., 41 (a, 14).]

ISODONTOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-do^2n/tu^2s$. From ἴσος, equal, and δούς, a tooth. Fr., isodonte. Having teeth either alike or very similar. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

ISODROMOUS, adj. $I^2s-o^2d/ro-mu^2s$. Lat., isodromos, isodromus (from ἴσος, equal, and δρόμος, a course). See ISOCRONOUS.

ISODULCITAN, n. $I^2s-o-du^2l/si^2t-a^2n$. Ger., I. An amorphous substance, $C_6H_{12}O_6$, isomeric with dulcitan. [B, 3.]

ISODULCITE, n. $I^2s-o-du^2l/sit$. Ger., Isodulcit. A body, $C_6H_{12}O_6 + H_2O = C_6H_{14}O_6$, isomeric with mannitan (dulcitan), forming large, monoclinic crystals, melting at 105° to 110° C., and easily soluble in water. [B, 4, 270 (a, 38).]

ISODULCITIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-du^2l-si^2t/i^2k$. Fr., acide isodulcitique. A substance, $C_6H_{10}O_6$, prepared by oxidizing isodulcitan with nitric acid, and occurring in granular, colorless, transparent crystals, freely soluble in water, sparingly soluble in alcohol. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xvi (a, 39).]

ISODURYLIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-du^2r/i^2k$. Fr., acide isodurylique. An acid, $C_{10}H_{16}O_{21}$, having two isomeric forms: α-isodurylic acid, melting at 215° C., subliming at higher temperatures, and slightly soluble in hot water, more soluble in alcohol, very soluble in ether; β-isodurylic acid, occurring in long needles, fusible at 120° to 125° C., slightly soluble in cold water, freely soluble in hot water, alcohol, ether, and chloroform. [B, 46 (a, 39).]

ISODYNAMIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s(es)-o(o)^3-di^2n(du^2n)-a^2m(a^2m)^2-i^2a^3$. From ἴσος, equal, and δύναμις, power. Fr., isodynamie. Ger., Gleichkräftigkeit. The property of being isodynamic. [a, 14.]

ISODYNAMIC, adj. $I^2s-o-di^2n-a^2m/i^2k$. From ἴσος, equal, and δύναμις, powerful. Exerting (of foods, giving rise to) an equal amount of force. [a, 17.]

ISODYNAMOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-di^2n-a^2m-u^2s$. Lat., isodynamus (from ἴσος, equal, and δύναμις, force). Fr., isodynamie. See ISOBRIOUS.

ISĒNANTHYLIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-na^2n-thi^2l-i^2k$. See ĒNANTHYLIC ACID.

ISOETES (Lat.), n. m. $Is-o(o)^2/e^2t-ez(e^2s)$. Gen., -o^2etis. From ἴσος, an evergreen plant. 1. Of Pliny, the Sempervivum tectorum. 2. Quillwort, a genus of aquatic club-mosses of the Isoetes (Fr., isoétées), which are a division of club-mosses of the Liliatae; of Reichenbach, a family of the Limnobiae; of Endlicher, an order of the Selaginiae; of Meissner, a suborder of the Rhizocarpeae; and of Brongniart, a division of the Lycopodiaceae. [B, 19, 34, 104, 115, 170, 291 (a, 35).]—I. lacustris, Merlin's grass; a species found in water, at or near the margins of ponds and rivers, in New England and the Middle States, often entirely submerged. [B, 34 (a, 35).]

ISOGAMOUS, adj. I^2s-o^2g/a^2m-u^2s . From ἴσος, equal, and γάμος, marriage. Produced by the coalescence of gametes of equal size (said of reproduction in plants). [B, 291 (a, 35).]

ISOGAMY, n. I^2s-o^2g/a^2m-i^2 . Lat., isogamia. The quality of being isogamous. [a, 35.]

ISOGNATHISM, n. $I^2s-o^2g/na^2th-i^2z^2m$. From ἴσος, equal, and γνάθος, the jaw. A condition of the molar teeth in some animals in which the opposite teeth are alike and interlock when the jaws are closed. ["Nature," March 20, 1890, p. 467 (a, 39).]

ISOGYNOUS, adj. I^2s-o^2j/i^2n-u^2s . From ἴσος, equal, and γυνή, a woman. Fr., isogyne. In botany, having an equal number of carpels and petals. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISOGYRUS (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-o(o)^2-jir(gu^2r)/u^2s(u^2s)$. From ἴσος, equal, and γῶρος, a circle. In botany, forming a complete spire. [B, 19 (a, 35).]

ISOHEMATOPORPHYRIN, n. $I^2s-o-he^2m-a^2t-o-po^2r/i^2f-i^2n$. Of C. A. Nobel, a reduction product of hæmatin, formed from hæmatoporphyrin, and identical with the urohæmatin of MacMunn. ["Contrib. f. d. med. Wssnschr.," April 23, 1887, p. 305 (B).]

ISOHARSÄURE (Ger.), n. $E-so-ha^2r/n-zoir-e^2$. Isouric acid. [B.]

ISOHEMPINIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-he^2m-i^2-pin/i^2k$. A dibasic acid, $C_6H_2(OCH_3)_2(CO.OH)_2$, crystallizing in white needles, almost insoluble in cold water, somewhat soluble in hot water, and melting at about 246° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

ISOHEPTANE, n. $I^2s-o-hep^2tan$. See HEPTANE.

ISOHEPTYL, n. $I^2s-o-hep^2t/i^2l$. See HEPTYL (2d def.).—I. alcohol. See under HEPTYL ALCOHOL.

ISOHEPTYLENE, n. $I^2s-o-hep^2t/i^2l-en$. See under HEPTYLENE.

ISOHEPTYLIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-hep^2t-i^2l/i^2k$. Fr., acide isoheptylique. Isocyanthyllic acid. [B.] See ĒNANTHYLIC ACID.

ISOHESPERIDIN, n. $I^2s-o-he^2s-pe^2r/i^2d-i^2n$. A crystalline glucoside, isomeric with hesperidin, obtained from the alcoholic extract of bitter orange-peel. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiv (a, 39).]

ISOHEXANE, n. $I^2s-o-he^2x^2an$. Syn.: dimethylpropylmethane, ethylbutyl. A mobile liquid, $(CH_3)_2CH.CH_2.CH_2.CH_3$, boiling at 62° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

ISOHEXOIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-he^2x-o^2/i^2k$. Isocaproic acid. [a, 38.]

ISOHEXYL ALCOHOL, n. $I^2s-o-he^2x^2/i^2l a^2l/ko-ho^2l$. See HEXYL ALCOHOL.

ISO-INDOL, n. I^2s-o-i^2nd/o^2l . A substance, $C_{14}H_{14}N_2$, crystallizing from hot alcohol or glacial acetic acid in small plates, needles, or prisms, which are pleochroic, showing all possible colors from deep red through green and yellow to indigo-blue, and melt at about 135° C. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

ISOLA, n. E^2zo-la^2 . A sea-bathing resort in Istria, Austria, where there are sulphurous springs. [L, 30 (a, 14).]

ISOLABLE, adj. $I^2s^2o-la^2-b^2l$. Capable of being isolated. [L, 41, 56.]

ISOLACTIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-la^2-k^2ti^2k$. See ETHYLIDENELACTIC ACID.

ISOLATE, v. tr. I^2s^2o-lat . Fr., isoler. Ger., isoliren, absondern, ausscheiden. It., isolare. Sp., aislar. To separate from other substances, structures, or individuals; to place apart.

ISOLATION, n. $I^2s-o-la^2-shu^2n$. Fr., i., isolement. Ger., I., Isolierung, Absonderung. It., isolamento. Sp., aislamiento. The act or process of isolating.

ISOLATOR (Ger.), n. $E-so-la^2-tor^2$. See INSULATOR.

ISOLEUCINE, n. $I^2s-o-lu^2sen$. See under LEUCINE.

ISOLICHENIN, n. $I^2s-o-li^2ke^2n-e^2n$. A substance found in Iceland moss along with lichenin; distinguished from the latter by being colored blue by iodine. [B, 3.]

ISOLINE, n. I^2s^2o-len . Fr., i., Ger., Isolin. A base, $C_{14}H_{17}N$, occurring in raw quinoline; one of the homologous series of bases obtained by dry distillation of quinine and its isomers. [B, 270 (a, 38).]

ISOLOGOUS, adj. $I^2s-o^2l^2o-gu^2s$. From ἴσος, equal, and λόγος, understanding. Fr., isologue. Having an identical chemical constitution. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISOLUSIN, n. $I^2s-o-l^2i^2u^2-si^2n$. Fr., isolusine. Of Peschier, a bitter, acrid substance, found in the root of Polygala virginiana, so called because it is equally soluble in water and in alcohol. [B, 38, 78 (a, 14).]

ISOMALIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-ma^2l/i^2k$. Fr., acide isomalique. See MALIC ACID.

ISOMANNIDE, n. $I^2s-o-ma^2n/i^2d(id)$. An isomeric derivative, $C_6H_{10}O_4$, of mannite. ["Bull. de la soc. chim. de Paris," Dec. 28, 1883; in "Jour. of the Am. Chem. Soc.," Jan., Feb., 1884, p. 38. (B).]

ISOMER, n. $I^2s^2o-mu^2r$. See ISOMERIDE.

ISOMÈRE (Fr.), adj. and n. $E-so-me^2r$. 1. (Adj.) see ISOMEROUS. 2. (N.) see ISOMERIDE.

ISOMERIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o(o)^3-me(me^2)/ri^2-a^3$. From ἴσος, equal, and μέρος, a part. 1. Of Fresl. a section of the genus Cyphia. 2. Of Don, a section of the genus Vernonia; of Schreber the Tephrosia of De Candolle. [B, 48, 121 (a, 14).]—I. chinensis. The Vernonia cinerea, var. undulata. [B, 180 (a, 35).]—I. cinerea. The Vernonia cinerea. [B, 180 (a, 35).]

ISOMERIC, adj. $I^2s-o-me^2r/i^2k$. From ἴσος, equal, and μέρος, a part. Fr., isomère, isomérique. Ger., isomerisch, gleichgetheilt. It., isomero, isomerico. Sp., isomero, isomérico. Of chemical bodies, possessing the same percentage composition, but differing either as regards the number of atoms contained in the molecule, the manner in which the atoms are grouped in the molecule, or the chemical and physical properties which the substances themselves present. [B.] See also ISOMERISM.

ISOMERIDE, n. $I^2s-o^2m/e^2r-i^2d(id)$. Fr., isoméride. Syn.: isomer, allotrope. A substance which bears to another the relation of isomerism. The expression includes the terms polymeride and metameride, and, like these related terms, is applied to the cognate substances which are of less typical or less simple construction than the substance assumed as the primitive type. [B.]

ISOMERISM, n. $I^2s-o^2m/e^2r-i^2z^2m$. Fr., isomérisme, isomérie. Ger., Isomerie. Syn.: allotropy. The property of being isomeric. It includes (1) polymerism, when isomeric bodies, though possessing the same percentage composition, have molecular formulæ which are not identical, but are different simple multiples of one common formula. Polymerism itself may be of different kinds, thus when one polymeric body is formed directly from another by the union of two or more molecules of the latter into one multiple molecule, the polymerism is said to be genetic. (2) Metamerism when, the percentage composition and molecular formula of isomeric bodies being the same, they yield different products on decomposition, and hence have different rational formulæ, and contain very different radicles. The reciprocal metamerism of Tilden exists when the metameric bodies contain each a pair of radicles, united by the same bivalent group, so that the excess of any given element in one radicle of a pair must be made up for by a corresponding deficiency in the second radicle of the same pair. (3) Allotropism, when the different varieties of the same elementary body are isomeric (see also DIMORPHISM [1st def.]). Allotropism may be polymeric (oxygen and ozone), physical, and possibly structural. [B, 3, 4, 6.] See also the various subheads.—Geometric i. Ger., geometrische Isomerie. See Physical i.—Nucleus i. Ger., Kernisomerie. See under Structural i.—Physical i. Ger., physikalische Isomerie. 1. In which the chemical formulæ of two bodies are in all respects identical, but the substances themselves differ in physical properties. It is imagined to be due to differences in the spatial arrangements of atoms, their relations to each other in the molecule being unaltered. It has hence been designated geometric i. [B, 4.]—Place-i., Structural i. Ger., Ortsisomerie, Strukturisomerie. 1. In which the structural formulæ of two bodies differ only in the arrangement of the atoms attached to their nuclei (place i., or in the mode of connection of the nuclei themselves (nucleus i.). [B, 4.]

ISOMEROMORPHISM, n. $I^2s-o-me^2r-o-mo^2r/i^2z^2m$. From ἴσος, equal, μέρος, a part, and μορφή, form. Isomorphism between substances that are alike in atomic proportions. [L, 56.]

ISOMEROUS, adj. $I^2s-o-m^2e^2r-u^2s$. Fr., isomère. Ger., isomerisch, gleichgetheilt. 1. Equal in number. Isomeric. 2. Of a flower, having the same number of parts in each whorl. [B, 1, 19, 77 (a, 35).]

ISOMETRIC, adj. $I^2s-o-me^2t/ri^2k$. From isos , equal, and $\mu\epsilon\rho\epsilon\iota\nu$, to measure. Fr., isométrique. Ger., isometrisch, gleichmessend. Having the same dimensions (said of crystals). [L, 30, 41 (a, 14).]

ISOMETROPIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o(o^2)-me^2t-rop(ro^2p)/i^2-a^2$. From isos , equal, $\mu\epsilon\rho\rho\omega$, a measure, and $\omega\psi$, the eye. Fr., isométrique. Ger., isotropie. That condition in which the refraction of both eyes is the same in kind and degree. [F.]

ISOMERIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o(o^2)-me^2(mo^2'e^2)-ri^2-a^2$. Gr., ισομερία. See ISOMERISM.

ISOMEROUS, adj. $I^2s-o-mer-u^2s$. Gr., ισόμοιος. See ISOMERISM.

ISOMORPHIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o(o^2)-mo^2rf/i^2-a^2$. See ISOMORPHISM.

ISOMORPHIC, adj. $I^2s-o-mo^2rf/i^2k$. See ISOMORPHOUS.

ISOMORPHISM, n. $I^2s-o-mo^2rf/i^2z/m$. Lat., isomorphia (from isos , equal, and $\mu\omega\rho\phi\acute{\iota}$, form). Fr., isomorphisme. Ger., isomorphie. It. Sp., isomorfia, isomorfismo. The state of being isomorphous. [B.]—Polymeric I. Polymerism (see under ISOMERISM). [a, 35.]

ISOMORPHOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-mo^2rf/u^2s$. Fr., isomorphe. Ger., isomorph. Of the same form (said of bodies which resemble one another in chemical composition and crystallize in forms either identical or similar). [B.]

ISONANDRA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o^2n-a^2n(na^2n)/dra^2$. From isos , equal, and $\alpha\nu\eta\rho$, a man. Fr., isonandre. A genus of the Sapotaceae. [B, 19, 38, 42 (a, 35).]—I. acuminata. See Dichorsis elliptica.—I. gutta. See Dichorsis gutta.

ISONAPHTHALIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-na^2f-tha^2l/i^2k$. Fr., acide isonaphtalique. An acid obtained by the action of chromic acid on isoxylene. [B, 93 (a, 38).]

ISONAPHTHOL, n. $I^2s-o-na^2f/tho^2l$. A naphthalene hydrate, $C_{10}H_7.OH$, isomeric with naphthol, occurring in colorless rhombic tables which melt at $122^{\circ}C$, boil at about $290^{\circ}C$, and are readily soluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 4, 93 (a, 38).]

ISONICOTINIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-ni^2k-o-ti^2n/i^2k$. Fr., acide isonicotinique. Ger., isonicotinsäure. Pyridine carbonic acid. [B.]

ISONITRAMIDINE, n. $I^2s-o-ni-tra^2m/i^2d-en$. Isoxyloidin. [B, 2.] See XYLOIDIN.

ISONITRILE, n. $I^2s-o-ni^2t/ri^2l$. See NITRILE.

ISONONYLIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-no^2n-i^2l/i^2k$. Fr., acide isononylique. See PELARGONIC ACID.

ISO-ORCIN, ISO-ORCINOL, n's. I^2s-o-o^2r/si^2n-o^2l . A substance, $C_7H_5O_2$, isomeric with orcin, melting at $87^{\circ}C$, and boiling at $270^{\circ}C$. [B, 4.]

ISOP, n. I^2s-u^2p . The Hyssopus officinalis. [B, 88 (a, 39).]

ISOPALMITIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-pa^2l-mi^2t/i^2k$. Fr., acide isopalmitique. Ger., isopalmitinsäure. See DIHEPTYLACETIC ACID.

ISOPARAFFIN, n. $I^2s-o-pa^2r/a^2f/i^2n$. See PARAFFIN.

ISOPATHES (Lat.), adj. $I^2s-op/a^2th(a^2th)-ez(as)$. From isos , equal, and $\pi\acute{\alpha}\theta\omega\varsigma$, disease. Suffering in the same manner, from the same cause. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOPATHIA (Lat.), ISOPATHICA (Lat.), n's f. $I^2s-o(o^2)-pa^2th(pa^2th)-i(e)^2a^2$, $-pa^2th(pa^2th)/i^2k-a^2$. From isos , equal, and $\pi\acute{\alpha}\theta\omega\varsigma$, a condition. Of Lux, isopathotherapy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOPATHIC, adj. I^2s-o^2p/a^2th-i^2k . Lat., isopathicus. Pertaining to isopathotherapy. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOPATHOTHERAPY, n. $I^2s-o-pa^2th-o-the^2r/a^2-pi^2$. Lat., isopathotherapia (from isos , equal, $\pi\acute{\alpha}\theta\omega\varsigma$, a disease, and $\theta\epsilon\rho\alpha\pi\epsilon\iota\alpha$, medical treatment). The treatment of a disease by administering (1) some portion of the body of another individual either affected with the same disease or associated with its causation; or (2) a portion of the products of the same disease in another individual (e. g., powdered worms as a vermifuge, the hair of a rabid dog in rabies, or the matter from a small-pox pustule in variola). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOPATHY, n. I^2s-o^2p/a^2th-i^2 . Lat., isopathia (from isos , equal, and $\pi\acute{\alpha}\theta\omega\varsigma$, a disease). Ger., isopathie. See ISOPATHOTHERAPY.

ISOPELLETERINE, n. $I^2s-o-pe^2l-e^2t/i^2e^2r-en$. Fr., isopelletérine. See PELLETERINE.

ISOPENTANE, n. $I^2s-o-pe^2nt/a^2n$. See PENTANE.

ISOPENTIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-pe^2nt-o^2/i^2k$. See PENTIC ACID.

ISOPEPSIN, n. $I^2s-o-pe^2p/si^2n$. From isos , equal, and $\pi\epsilon\psi\iota\varsigma$, digestion. Fr., isopepsine. Ger., I. Of Finkler, parapeptone. [K.]

ISOPE TALOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-pe^2t/a^2l-u^2s$. Fr., isopétale (from isos , equal, and $\pi\epsilon\tau\alpha\lambda\omega\upsilon$, a leaf). Fr., isopétale. Having equal-sized petals. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISOPHENYLETHYLAMINE, n. $I^2s-o-fe^2n-i^2l-e^2th-i^2l/a^2m-en$. Ger., Isophenyläthylamin. A substance, $C_8H_8-CH(CH_2)_2NH_2$, probably expressive of the formula of the collidine found in putrefying gelatin. [Brieger, "Arch. f. path. Anat. u. Physiol. u. f. klin. Med.," cxv, p. 483 (B).]

ISOPHLORETIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-flor-e^2t/i^2k$. See PHLORETIC ACID.

ISOPHLORRHETIN, n. $I^2s-o-flor-r-et/i^2n$. See PHLORETIN.

ISOPHLORRHETINIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-flor-r-et-i^2n/i^2k$. See PHLORRHETINIC ACID.

ISOPHLORRHIZIN, ISOPHLORRHIZIN, n's. $I^2s-o-flor-ri^2d/zi^2n$, $-ri^2zi^2n$. See PHLORRHIZIN.

ISOPHLOGUCIN, n. $I^2s-o-flor-glu^2/si^2n$. Fr., isophlogucine. A saccharine principle, $C_6H_6O_3$, obtained as a side product in the manufacture of acetic acid from Prunus cerasus, or by melting the tannin of that fruit with potassium. [B, 46, 93 (a, 14, 39).]

ISOPHORIA (Lat.), n. f. $I^2s-o(o^2)-fo^2fo^2/ri^2-a^2$. A condition in which the tension of the vertical muscles of each eye is equal, so that the visual lines lie in the same horizontal plane. ["N. Y. Med. Jour.," Mar. 3, 1888, p. 229 (a, 29).]

ISOPHOROUS, adj. I^2s-o^2f/o^2r-u^2s . Lat., isophorus (from isos , equal, and $\phi\omega\rho\acute{\omega}\varsigma$, bearing). Fr., isophore. Changeable into another form (said of a plant transformable into another plant [e. g., of Pactonia, which is an i. form of Spathoglottis]). [B, 19 (a, 35).]

ISOPHTHALATE, n. I^2s-o^2f/tha^2l-at . A salt of isophthalic acid. [B.]

ISOPHTHALIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o^2f-tha^2l/i^2k$. Fr., acide isophthalique. Ger., Isophthalsäure. See PHTHALIC ACID.

ISOPHTHALYL, n. $I^2s-o^2f-tha^2l/i^2l$. Ger., I. A radicle (C_6H_4), isomeric with phthalyl, found in isophthalic acid. [B, 4 (a, 38).]

ISOPHYLOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-fl^2l/u^2s$. From isos , equal, and $\phi\upsilon\lambda\lambda\omega\nu$, a leaf. Fr., isophylle. Having leaves of the same or of a very similar sort. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISOPIANIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-pi^2-a^2n/i^2k$. See OPIANIC ACID.

ISOPIC ACID, n. I^2s-op/i^2k . Fr., acide isopique. See OPINIC ACID.

ISOPIMELIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-pi^2m-e^2l/i^2k$. See PIMELIC ACID.

ISOPINIC ACID, n. $I^2s-o-pin/i^2k$. Fr., acide isopinique. See OPINIC ACID.

ISOPLLEURA (Lat.), n. n. pl. $I^2s-o(o^2)-plu^2/ra^2$. From isos , equal, and $\pi\lambda\epsilon\rho\omega\rho$, a rib. One of the divisions of gastropod molluscs, including those which are bilaterally symmetrical. [L, 121 (a, 39).]

ISOPODIFORM, adj. $I^2s-o-po^2d/i^2fo^2rm$. From isos , equal, $\pi\omega\upsilon\varsigma$, the foot, and forma, form. Resembling the Iso-poda.

ISOPODOUS, adj. I^2s-o^2p/o^2d-u^2s . From isos , equal, and $\pi\omega\upsilon\varsigma$, the foot. Equal-footed; the Iso-poda (Ger., Gleichfüssler) of Cuvier, Lamarck, Eichwald, and others are an order of Crustacea including those having feet all alike, adapted only for locomotion or prehension. [L, 180 (a, 39).]

ISOPOGONOUS, adj. $I^2s-o-pog-on/u^2s$. From isos , equal, and $\pi\omega\gamma\omega\nu$, the beard. Equally bearded (applied to a feather, having the two sides equal). [L, 180 (a, 39).]

ISOPRENE, n. $I^2s-o-pren$. Of Williams, a hydrocarbon, C_5H_8 , polymeric with caoutchouin, found in caoutchouin, boiling at 37° to $38^{\circ}C$. [B, 2, 46, 93.]

ISOPROPYL, n. $I^2s-o-pro^2/pi^2l$. Ger., I. See PROPYL.—I acetic acid. Ger., I essigsäure. Syn.: valerianic acid. An acid derived from acetic acid by the substitution of i. for hydrogen. [B.] See under VALERIC ACID.—I acetylene. A liquid, C_3H_2 : $(CH_2)_2$: $CH=C\equiv CH$, of penetrating odor, and boiling at $28^{\circ}C$. It is isomeric with valerylene and isovalerylene. [B, 3.]—I acrylic acid. Fr., acide iacrylique. Ger., I acrylsäure. A 1-molecule substitution compound of acrylic acid; α : iacrylic acid, $C_6H_{10}.O=CH_2-CH_2-CH=C.OH$. It is pyroterebic acid. [B, 4.]—I alcohol. Ger., I alkohol. See PROPYL ALCOHOL.—I amine. See PROPYLAMINE.—I benzene. Fr., i benzine. Ger., I benzol. Cumene. [B.]—I benzoic acid. Ortho-i. a. or orthocumnic acid. It separates from alcohol or ether as an indistinctly crystalline mass insoluble in cold water. [B, 3 (a, 38).]—I benzol. See CUMENE.—I carballylic acid. See CAMPHORONIC ACID.—I carbonic acid. Isobutyric acid. [B.]—I essigsäure (Ger.). See I acetic acid.—I ethene. See AMYLENE.—I ethyl. See PENTANE.—I ethylene. See AMYLENE.—I ethylene glycol. Fr., alcool isopropyl-éthylénique. See AMYLENE GLYCOL.—I ethylmethylecarbonyl. See HEPTYL.—I eugenol. See PROPYLEUGENOL.—I guanamine. See PROPYLguanamine.—I malonic acid. Fr., acide isopropyl-malonique. See PROPYLMALONIC ACID.—I methylcarbonyl. Ger., I. See AMYL ALCOHOL (6th var.).—I phenyl. Fr., i phényl. Ger., I phenyl. A univalent radicle, $C_6H_5.CH(CH_3)$ a 1-molecule substitution compound of phenyl. Its compounds are isomeric with those of propyl-phenyl and phenyl-propyl. [B.]—I phenylacrylic acid. Cumenylacrylic acid. [B.]—I phenylcarboxylic acid. A monobasic acid, $[C(CH_3)_2:CH]C_6H_4(OH)(CO.OH)$, one of the varieties of propylhydroxybenzoic acid. Two isomeric varieties are known, ortho-i phenylcarboxylic acid, and para-i phenylcarboxylic acid, both crystalline solids. [B, 3.]—I phosphine. Ger., I Phosphin. See PROPYLPHOSPHINE.—I phosphonic acid. Fr., acide isopropyl-phosphinique. A solid, $C_3H_7.P(O)(OH)_2$, resembling paraffin and melting at between 60° and $70^{\circ}C$. [B.]—I pyridine. Fr., i pyridin. Ger., I pyridin. A 1-molecule i. substitution compound, $C_5H_5N=C_6H_4(CH_2)_2N$, of pyridine. Two isomeric varieties are known: a-i pyridine and y-i pyridine, colorless, oily liquids, boiling respectively at 167° and $158^{\circ}C$. [B, 79.] See also PROPYL pyridine.—I psocelic acid. A dibasic, crystalline acid, $(CH_3)_2:CH-CH(CO.OH)CH_2.CO.OH$, probably identical with pimelic acid. [B, 3.]—I sulphocyanide. A mustard-oil, $C_3H_7.CNS$, obtained by Gerlich from an allyl iodide made from glycerin and phosphorus iodide, and having a density of 0.974. [B, 81 (a, 38).]

ISOPUM (Lat.), n. n. $I^2s-op-u^2m(u^2m)$. Of the old pharmacopœias, the fat contained in lamb's wool. [L, 105.] Cf. LANOLIN.

ISOPURPATE, n. $I^2s-o-pu^2r-pu^2r-at$. A salt of isopurpate acid. [a, 38.]

ISOPURPURIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-pu}^2\text{r-pu}^2\text{r}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isopurpurique. Ger., Isopurpursäure. Picrocyanic acid, an acid, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_5\text{N}_3\text{O}_8$, isomeric with purpuric acid, and whose potas lum salt is formed by the action of potassium cyanide on pieric or on carbolic acid. It is not known in the free state, but forms salts called isopurpurates. [B, 4; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," ix (a, 39).]

ISOPURPURIN, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-pu}^2\text{r-pu}^2\text{r}^2\text{i}^2\text{n}$. See ANTHRAPURPURIN.

ISOPUS (Lat.), n. f. $\text{I}^2\text{s-op}^2\text{u}^2\text{s}^2\text{u}^2\text{s}$. See HYSOPOS.—HERBA ISOPUS. The leaves and flowering tops of Hyssopus officinalis. [B, 180 (a, 35).]

ISOPYRINE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-p}^2\text{i}^2\text{r-en}$. Fr., i. Ger., Isopyrin. A bitter alkaloid, extracted with water from the root of Isopyrum thalictroides. [B, 2.]

ISOPYROMUCIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-pi-ro-mu}^2\text{si}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isopyromucique. Ger., Isobrenzschleimsäure. An acid isomeric with pyromucic acid (q. v.). [B.]

ISOPYRON (Lat.), n. n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-pi}^2\text{r}^2\text{(u}^2\text{r}^2\text{)-o}^2\text{n}$. Gr., ισόπυρον. According to some, the Corydalis claviculata; according to others, the Isopyrum aequilegoides. 2. The Aquilegia vulgaris. [B, 88 (a, 39), 114, 115, 180 (a, 35).]

ISOPYRUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-p}^2\text{i}^2\text{r}^2\text{(u}^2\text{r}^2\text{)-u}^2\text{m}^2\text{(u}^2\text{m}^2)$. Gr., ισόπυρον. Ger., Muschelblümchen. 1. False rue anemone; a genus of the Ranunculaceae, tribe Isopyree. 2. A name for several species of Helleborus, so called on account of their sharp and pungent taste. The Isopyree, or Isopyrinee [Spach], of Reichenbach are a subdivision of the Ranunculaceae, tribe Helleboree. [B, 34, 38, 42, 64, 170 (a, 35).]—I. thalictroides. A white-flowered species found in central and southern Europe, and especially in the forests of the Pyrenees. The root yields isopyrine and pseudo-isopyrine. [B, 19, 64 (a, 35); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]

ISORA (Lat.), n. f. $\text{I}^2\text{(e-ro}^2\text{ra}^2)$. Of Schott, a genus of the Sterculiaceae; of Benth and Hooker, the genus Helicteres. [B, 42 (a, 35).]—I. corylifolia. See HELICTERES I.

ISORCIN, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{r}^2\text{si}^2\text{n}$. See ISO-RCIN.

ISORCINOL, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{r}^2\text{si}^2\text{n-o}^2\text{l}$. See RESORCINOL.

ISORRHOPIA (Lat.), n. f. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{r}^2\text{rop(ro}^2\text{p}^2\text{i}^2\text{a}^2)$. From isos, equal, and ῥοπή, an inclination downward. Ger., Gleichgewicht. Equilibrium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISORRHPOUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{r}^2\text{rop-u}^2\text{s}$. Lat., isorrhopus, isorrhopus. Ger., von gleichem Gewichte. Of the same weight. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOSCOPE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-skop}$. From isos, equal, and σκοπεῖν, to examine. An instrument devised by Helmholtz for determining the position of the vertical and horizontal lines of division in various movements of the eye. It consists of a firmly fixed frame provided with a vertical wire for one eye, and a movable frame provided with one or several wires, which are at first vertical, for the other eye. In using the instrument, the movable frame is to be so adjusted that the binocular projected wires seem parallel to one another. [F, 21.]

ISOSPONDYLOUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-spo}^2\text{n}^2\text{di}^2\text{l}^2\text{u}^2\text{s}$. From isos, equal, and σπόνδυλος, a vertebra. Having the anterior vertebra separate and unmodified, and a precoracoid arch developed (said of a sub-order of fishes, the physostomous Teleacephali). ["Nature," May, 1890, p. 419 (a, 39).]

ISOSPORE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-spor}$. From isos, equal, and σπόρος, seed. Fr., i. Of Rostafinski, a zygospore (of Algae). [B, 121 (a, 35).]

ISOSPOROUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{s-po}^2\text{ru}^2\text{s}$. Lat., isosporus (from isos, equal, and σπόρος, seed). Fr., isospore. Producing but one kind of asexual spores. The Isosporae (Fr., isosporees) are a division of cryptogams so characterized. [B, 64, 291 (a, 35).]

ISOSTATHION (Lat.), n. n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{(a}^2\text{)-sta}^2\text{th}^2\text{(sta}^2\text{th}^2\text{)mo}^2\text{n}$. Gr., ισοσταθιον (from isos, equal, and σταθός, a certain weight). Of ancient writers, a medicine for pectoral complaints; probably so called on account of the equal weight of its different ingredients. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOSTATHIOS (Lat.). ISOSTATHIMUS (Lat.), adj's. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{(a}^2\text{)-sta}^2\text{th}^2\text{(sta}^2\text{th}^2\text{)mo}^2\text{s, mu}^2\text{s(mu}^2\text{s)}$. Gr., ισοσταθιος. See ISORHOPOUS.

ISOSTEARIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-ste-a}^2\text{r}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. See STEARIC ACID.

ISOSTEMONOPETALUS (Lat.), adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{(o}^2\text{)-ste(sta}^2\text{)-mo}^2\text{n-o}^2\text{(o}^2\text{)-pe}^2\text{t}^2\text{(a}^2\text{l}^2\text{)-u}^2\text{s(u}^2\text{s)}$. From isos, equal, στῆμων, a thread, and πέταλον, a leaf. Fr., isostémonopétale. See ISOSTEMONOUS.

ISOSTEMONOUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-ste-mo}^2\text{o}^2\text{n}^2\text{u}^2\text{s}$. Lat., isostemonous (from isos, equal, and στῆμων, a thread). Fr., isostémoné. Having the stamens equal in number to the petals and to the sepals, or in apetalous flowers, to the sepals only. The Isostenones are a class of plants so characterized. [B, 1, 19, 279, 291 (a, 35).]

ISOSTEMONY, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-ste}^2\text{m}^2\text{o}^2\text{n}^2\text{-I}^2$. Fr., isostémonie. The condition of being isostemonous. [a, 35.]

ISOSUBERIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-su}^2\text{-be}^2\text{r}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. See SUBERIC ACID.

ISOSUCCINIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-su}^2\text{k-si}^2\text{n}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isosuccinique. Ger., Isobrensteinsäure. Syn.: methyl malonic acid, ethylidenedicarboxylic acid. A body, isomeric with succinic acid, forming colorless crystals of the structure $\text{C}_4\text{H}_5\text{O}_4 = \text{CH}_2\text{CH}(\text{CO.OH})(\text{CO.OH})$, which sublime at 100° C., fuse at 130° C., and are more soluble in water than succinic acid. [B, 4; B, 93 (a, 14).]

ISOSULPHOCYANATE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-su}^2\text{lF-o-si}^2\text{a}^2\text{n-at}$. See ISOTHIOCYANATE.

ISOSULPHOCYANIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-su}^2\text{lF-o-si}^2\text{a}^2\text{n}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Ger., Isoschwefelcyanwasserstoff, Isoschwefelcyansäure. See ISOTHIOCYANIC ACID.

ISOTARTARIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-ta}^2\text{r-ta}^2\text{r}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isotartrique. Ger., Isotartirsäure. See TARTRALIC ACID.

ISOTARTRATE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-ta}^2\text{r}^2\text{t}^2\text{rat}$. A salt of isotartaric acid. [B, 38 (a, 36).]

ISOTEREBENTHENE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-te}^2\text{r-e}^2\text{-be}^2\text{n}^2\text{(then)}$. Fr., isotérébenthène. Syn.: dipentene, cajeputene, cymene, cinene. A hydrocarbon, $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_{16}$, found always with terebenthene and terebentilene in French oil of turpentine from the Pinus maritima, and also obtained in other ways. It is identical with the caoutchou obtained by dry distillation from caoutchouc and gutta-percha. It boils at 175° C. [B, 3, 93, 270 (a, 38).] See also CAJEPUTENE and CINENE.

ISOTHERMAL, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-thu}^2\text{r}^2\text{m}^2\text{l}$. From isos, equal, and θερμη, heat. Fr., isotherme. Ger., gleichwarm. Of an equal degree of heat (said of lines on the earth's surface). [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISOTHERMOUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-thu}^2\text{r}^2\text{m}^2\text{u}^2\text{s}$. See ISOTHERMAL.

ISOTHIOCYANATE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-thi-o-si}^2\text{a}^2\text{n-at}$. Ger., isothiocyanat (in compos.), Isoschwefelcyanat. Syn.: isosulphocyanate. A salt of isothiocyanic acid. [B.]

ISOTHIOCYANIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-thi-o-si}^2\text{a}^2\text{n}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isothiocyannique. Ger., Isothiocyansäure. Syn.: isosulphocyanic acid. A monobasic acid, S:C:N—H, known only through its salts, the isothiocyanates. The i's of the alcohol radicles constitute the so-called mustard-oils. [B, 4.]

ISOTOMA (Lat.), n. f. sing. and n. pl. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{t}^2\text{(o}^2\text{)-ma}^2$. From isos, equal, and τομή, a cutting. 1. (Sing.) of Don and Lindley, a genus of lobeliaceous herbs, considered by some authors a section of the Laurentia of Necker. [B, 19, 48, 71 (a, 35).] 2. (Pl.) of C. G. Thomson, a division of the Rhynchochloa, characterized by the second and third abdominal segments being nearly equal. ["Am. Nat.," viii, p. 389 (a, 32).]—I. longiflora. A poisonous species of I. (1st def.) found in the West Indies, producing dangerous catharsis. [B, 19 (a, 35).]

ISOTONIC, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-to}^2\text{n}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. From isos, equal, and τόνος, a tone. Having the same tone or tension; of a muscle, in a condition where there is no change of initial tensions, and stimulation leads merely to the shortening of the muscle, as opposed to the isometric condition, where there can be no change in the length of the muscle, and stimulation produces only a change in tension. ["Nature," July, 1889, p. 288 (a, 39).]

ISOTROPIC, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-tro}^2\text{p}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. From isos, equal, and τροπή, a turning. Fr., isotrope. Ger., isotrop. 1. Equally endowed with a certain quality (e. g., elasticity, radiating power, conductivity of light and heat) in all parts or directions, especially of muscular tissue refracting equally in all directions, and hence singly refractive. See also ANISOTROPIC. 2. Of Pflüger, such that any organ might develop from any part of it (said of an ovum). [B; J, 8, 55.]

ISOTROPINE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{t-ro-pen}$. A base produced by the decomposition of ecgonine. It resembles tropine. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiii (a, 39).]

ISOTROPOUS, adj. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{t-ro-p-u}^2\text{s}$. See ISOTROPIC.

ISOTROPY, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o}^2\text{t-ro-pi}^2$. The state or quality of being isotropic. [J, 55].—I. of the ovum. Fr., isotropie de l'œuf. A supposed fusion of the nuclei of the two sexual elements in the process of fecundation. [O. Hertwig, "Jena. Ztschr. f. Naturwiss.," xviii, 1884; "Gaz. hebdom. de méd. et de chir.," Sept. 25, 1885, p. 639.]

ISOUREA, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-u}^2\text{-re}^2\text{a}^2$. Fr., isurée. A substance, $\text{CH}_4\text{N}_2\text{O}$, obtained by adding prussic acid to an alcoholic solution of hydroxylamine and heating for 48 hours to 40° C. It forms large rhombic crystals or small prisms similar to those of urea. They melt at 105° C. with partial decomposition, and are soluble in hot water and in boiling alcohol. [B, 93 (a, 14).]

ISOURIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-u}^2\text{-ri}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide iso-urique. Ger., Isourinsäure. An acid, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_7\text{N}_3\text{O}_8$, isomeric with uric acid, and consisting of a heavy powder insoluble in water. [B, 3.]

ISOVITIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-u}^2\text{-vi}^2\text{t}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isovitique (ou isovitannique, ou isovitique). Ger., Isuvitinsäure. Syn.: phenyl acetorthocarboxylic acid, homo-orthophthalic acid. An acid, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_5\text{O}_4$, isomeric with xylidic acid and crystallizing from water in short rhombic prisms, melting at about 175° C. [B, 3, 4, 93 (a, 38).]

ISOVALERONITRILE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-va}^2\text{l}^2\text{-e-r-o-nit}^2\text{ri}^2\text{l}$. Ger., Isovaleronitril. See BUTYL CYANIDE.

ISOVANILLIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-va}^2\text{n}^2\text{-il}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Fr., acide isovanillique. A substance, $\text{C}_8\text{H}_8\text{O}_4 = \text{C}_6(\text{H.H.O.CH}_3.\text{OH.H.CO.OH})$, one of the isomeric varieties of methylprotocatechic acid. [B, 4.]

ISOXYLAMIDE, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-zil}^2\text{a}^2\text{m}^2\text{-id}^2\text{(id)}$. See XYLAMIDE.

ISOXYLIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-zil}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. See XYLIC ACID.

ISOXYLIDIC ACID, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-zil}^2\text{-id}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. Ger., Isoxylylidinsäure. See XYLIDIC ACID.

ISOXYLOL, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-zil}^2\text{ol}$. A liquid neutral hydrocarbon, C_8H_{10} , isomeric with xylol and methyltoluol. [B, 5 (a, 38).] See XYLENE.

ISOXYLOIDIN, n. $\text{I}^2\text{s-o-zil}^2\text{-oid}^2\text{i}^2\text{n}$. See XYLIDIN.

ISPAGHUL (Pers.), n. Written also ispagool and isapghol. Sponge-seeds, the seed of Plantago decumbens (ispaghula). An infusion of the seeds is employed in Turkestan and China in diarrhoea and chronic dysentery. [C. Shah, "Indian Med. Gaz.," Nov., 1885, p. 314; B, 18, 172 (a, 35); "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxi (a, 39).]

ISPAGHULA (Lat.), n. f. I²s-pa²-gu¹la². From Isapghul, sponge-seeds. The Plantago i. [a, 35.]

ISPRUK, n. In the East Indies, a powder made from a species of Delphinium. [B, 19 (a, 35).]

ISICALON (Fr.), n. Es-ra²-lo²n². The Boletus edulis. [B, 173 (a, 35).]

ISSUE, n. I²sh'shu². Fr., i. 1. A coming forth. 2. The mode of termination, the result of a process. 3. A chronic discharging ulcer, especially one purposely kept open to act as a counter-irritant.—I. pea. See I. PEA.

ISTHME (Fr.), n. Est-m'. See ISTHMUS.—I. du bassin. The superior strait of the pelvis.—I. du gosier. See FACIES.

ISTHMIAC, adj. I²sth'mi²-a²k. Lat., isthmiacus (from isthmós, a narrow passage). Referring or pertaining to an isthmus. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMIC, adj. I²sth'mi²k. Lat., isthmicus (from isthmós, a narrow passage). See ISTHMIAC.

ISTHMION (Lat.), n. n. I²sth'mi²-o²n. Gr., isthmion (from isthmós, a neck or any narrow passage or connection). In the pl., isthmia (Gr., isthmia), the parts about the neck. [Hippocrates (A, 314 [a, 21]).]

ISTHMITIS (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mi(me)²ti²s. Gen., -itidos (-idis). From isthmós, a neck (see also -itis). Ger., Entzündung des Rachens, Rachenbräune. Inflammation of the fauces. [L, 50, 135 (a, 39).]

ISTHMUS (Lat.), n. n. I²sth'mi²-u²m(u²m). See ISTHMION.

ISTHMOCARPUS (Lat.), adj. I²sth-mo(mo²)-ka²rp'u²s(u²s). From isthmós, a narrow passage, and καρπός, a fruit. Fr., isthmo-carpe. In botany, having the fruit constricted at the centre. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOCATARRHUS (Lat.), n. m. I²sth-mo(mo²)-ka²t(ka²t)-a²r'ru²s(ru²s). From isthmós, a neck, and κατάρρῳς, a flowing down. Ger., Rachenkatarrh. Catarrh of the fauces. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOCHOLOSIS (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo(mo²)-kol(ch²o²)l-os'i²s. Gen., -os'eos (-is). From isthmós, a neck, and χολός, bile. Of Eisenmann, see ANGINA biliosa.

ISTHMODES (Lat.), adj. I²sth-mod'ez(as). See ISTHMION.

ISTHMODYNIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo(mo²)-di²n(du²n)/i²-a². From isthmós, a neck, and δύσιν, pain. Ger., Rachenschmerz. Pain in the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOID, adj. I²sth'moid. Lat., isthmoideus (from isthmós, a neck, and εἶδος, resemblance). Ger., rachenähnlich, zum Rachen gehörig. Resembling or pertaining to the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOPTHIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo(mo²)-pa²th(pa²th)-i(e)²a². From isthmós, a neck, and πάθος, a disease. Ger., Rachenleiden. Any disease of the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOPLÉGIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo(mo²)-ple(pla²)/ji²(gi²)-a². From isthmós, a neck, and πλῆγη, a blow. Ger., Rachenlähmung. Paralysis of the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOPLYPUS (Lat.), n. m. I²sth-mo(mo²)-po²l'i²(u²)-pi²s(pus). From isthmós, a neck, and πολύπους, a polyp. Ger., Rachenpolyp. A polypus growing from the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOPIRYA (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo²p'i²r(u²r)-a². From isthmós, a neck, and πύρ, fire. Of Eisenmann, inflammation of the mucous membrane of the fauces. [L, 50, 107 (a, 14).] Cf. PYRAN-GONE.

ISTHMORRHAGIA (Lat.), n. f. I²sth-mo²r-ra(ra²)/ji²(gi²)-a². From isthmós, a neck, and ῥήγνυμαι, to burst forth. Fr., isthmorrhagie. Ger., Blutfluss im Rachen. Hæmorrhage from the fauces. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOSPASM, n. I²sth'mo-spa²z'm. Lat., isthmospasmus (from isthmós, a neck, and σπασμός, spasm). Fr., isthmospasme. Ger., Krampf in der Rachenhöhle. Spasm of the isthmus faucium. [L, 50 (a, 14).]

ISTHMOPTYPHUS (Lat.), n. m. I²sth-mo(mo²)-th(tu²)²/fu²s(fu²s). From isthmós, a neck, and τύφος, typhus. See GANGRENOUS ANGINA.

ISTHMUS (Lat.), n. m. I²sth'mu²s(mu²s). Gr., isthmós. Fr., isthme. Ger., Hirnstamm (2d def.), Rachenhöhle (1st def.). I. Verengerung (1st def.). 1. Any narrow passage, like that of the fauces. 2. The narrow portion of the brain between the cerebrum and the cerebellum and medulla oblongata. [L, 4 (K).] 3. In botany, one of the depressed or narrowed places separating the joints in articulated fruits. [B, 1, 123 (a, 35).]—Anterior i. of the fauces. Of Tourtual, the anterior part of the i. of the fauces, situated between the velum, the anterior pillars of the fauces, and the back of the tongue. [L, 31, 332 (a, 20).]—Encephalic i. See I. (2d def.).—Gyral i. Lat., i. gyralis. The union between the precentral and postcentral gyri occasioned in some brains by the complete interruption of the central fissure on each side. [Wilder (a, 39).]—I. cerebri. Ger., Hirnstamm. See I. (2d def.).—I. cervicis uteri. See I. of the uterus.—I. encephali. Fr., isthme de l'encéphale. See I. (2d def.).—I. faucium. Fr., isthme du gosier. Ger., Rachengege, Racheneingang. The constriction separating the cavity of the mouth from that of the pharynx; formed by the velum palati, the pillars of the palate, the tonsils, and the base of the tongue. [A, 385.]—I. glandule thyreoideæ. The i. of the thyreoïd gland. [L, 35 (a, 39).]—I. gyralis. See Gyral i.—I. gyri fornicati. A small constriction at the posterior extremity of the gyrus fornicatus, continuous posteriorly with both the gyrus cuneus and the lingual lobule. [L, 17 (K).]—I. hepatis. See POSS hepatis.—I. naso-oralis. See Posterior i. of the fauces.—I. of Guyon. See I. of the uterus.—I. of the brain. See I. (2d def.).—I. of the encephalon. See I. faucium.—I. of the fossa ovalis. See ANNULUS ovalis.—I. of the meatus auditorius. The narrowest portion of the meatus auditorius, at the margin of the inner third of the osseous portion. [F, 51 (a, 29).]—I. of the oviduct. Ger., Verengerung der falloppischen Röhre. The comparatively narrow and straight mesal half of the oviduct.—I. of the thyreoïd body (or gland). Fr., isthme de la thyroïde. Ger., Verengerung des schildförmigen Körpers. A transverse portion of the gland which connects the two lateral lobes near the bottom. [C.]—I. of the uterus. Lat., i. cervicis uteri. Fr., isthme utérin (ou de l'utérus). That moderately constricted part which marks the junction of the body with the neck of the organ.—I. ossis coxæ. The constriction about the junction of the ilium and pubo-ischiatic bone. [L, 31, 115 (a, 29).]—I. pharyngo-nasalis. Of Luschka, see I. faucium posterior.—I. pharyngo-oralis. See I. faucium anterior.—I. prostatae. Of Huschke, the median lobe of the prostate. [L, 31 (a, 29).]—I. tubæ Eustachii. Fr., isthme du tube d'Eustache. Ger., I. der eustachischen Röhre. The narrowest part of the tube, situated in the cartilaginous portion in front of its point of union with the osseous portion. [F.]—I. tubæ Falloppii (seu uterinæ). See I. of the oviduct.—I. urethræ. 1. The membranous portion of the male urethra. 2. In the female, the least dilatate portion of the urethra, situated somewhat above the middle of its course. [L, 7, 115, 332 (a, 29).]—I. uteri. See I. of the uterus.—I. Viuesseii. See ANNULUS ovalis.—Müller's i. Fr., isthme de Müller. Of Müller, the os uteri internum. Cf. Müller's RING.—Posterior i. of the fauces. Of Tourtual, the posterior part of the i. faucium, elliptical in shape, its long diameter vertical, bounded by the velum, the posterior pillars of the fauces, and the epiglottis. [L, 31, 332 (a, 29).]

ISURÉE (Fr.), n. E-su²-ra. See ISOTREA.

ISURET, n. I²s-u²r'e²t. Formylimide hydroxylamide. CH₃NH(OH).H = CON₂H₄, formylamide or formylamide amide in which a molecule of hydroxyl (OH) replaces an atom of hydrogen. It is thus isomeric with urea, hence its name. It occurs as prismatic crystals melting at about 105° C., and is a strongly alkaline base. [B, 2, 4.]

ISURETINE, n. I²s-u²r'e²t-i²n. Fr., isurétine. Ger., I. See ISURET.

ISUVITIC ACID, ISUVITINIC ACID, n's. I²s-u²-vi²t'i²k, -vi²t-i²n'i²k. See ISOUVITIC ACID.

ITACONATE, n. I²t-a²k-o²n-at. Fr., i. Ger., Itaconat. A salt of itaconic acid. [a, 38.]

ITACONIC ACID, n. I²t-a²k-o²n'i²k. Fr., acide citrique, acide itaconique. Ger., Itaconsäure. A crystalline body, C₅H₆O₄ = CH₂:C<CO₂H, CO₂H> acting as a dibasic acid, and derived, along with acetic acid, from the dry distillation of citric acid. [B, 3, 4.]

ITAMO REAL [Mex. Ph.] (Sp.), n. E'ta²-mo-ra-a²l'. The Pasiflora dictamnus. [A, 447 (a, 21).]

ITCH, n. I²ch. A.-S., gictha (1st def.), gicenes (2d def.). Gr., κνησμός (2d def.). Fr., gale (1st def.), démangeaison (2d def.). Ger., Krätze (1st def.), Jucken (2d def.). 1. Scabies. 2. Pruritus. [G.]—Animal i. The mange. [a, 40.]—Army i. A form of scabies thought at one time to be peculiar to camp and army life, but now conceded to differ in no respect from ordinary scabies save in extent. [Dühring (a, 40).]—Bakers' i. Fr., gale des boulangers. Ger., Bäckerkrätze. An eczema of the hands in bakers, due to their occupation. [G.]—Barbers' i. Syccosis, especially syccosis parasitaria. [G.]—Bedouin i. A form of lichen tropicus in which the papules proceed to vesiculation. [a, 40.]—Bricklayers' i. Fr., gale des maçons. Ger., Mauerkrätze. An eczema of the hands, especially of the impetiginous form, in bricklayers, due to exposure of the hands to lime. [G.]—Cat-i., Cattle-i. Fr., gale du chat (ou du bœuf). See SCABIES felina.—Cow-pox i. Of Gölis, a cutaneous eruption consisting of isolated vesicles filled with sero-purulent fluid and appearing after the fourteenth day from vaccination. [a, 40.]—Drunkards' i. An intense itching, attended with a slight papular eruption, seen in old people addicted to the excessive use of alcohol. [a, 40.]—Frost i. See PRURITIS hiemalis.—Grocers' i. Fr., gale des épiciers. Ger., Gewürzkrämerkrätze. An eczema of the hands to which grocers are exposed from handling flour, sugar, and the like. [G.]—I. bulb. The Drimia ciliaris. [B, 18 (a, 35).]—I. tree. See the major list.—I. weed. The Veratrum viride. [B, 175 (a, 35).]—Mangy i. A desquamative, contagious disease supposed to be produced by contact with animal mange. [a, 40.]—Lumbermen's i. See Prairie i.—Mud i. A disease, the pathology of which is unknown, said to occur only in female cattle, and consisting at first of severe itching of the nates and hind feet, which precedes choreic twitching, opisthotonus, paralysis, and death. Elevated temperature, rapid respiration, and feeble pulse accompany the disease. ["Jour. of Comp. Med. and Vet. Arch.," July, 1890, p. 386 (a, 40).]—Norwegian i. See RADZYGE.—Prairie i. Fr., gale des prairies. Syn.: lumbermen's i., Texus mange, Ohio scratches, swamp i. Pruritis hiemalis occurring in the autumn and spring, and due to coarse, cheaply died woolen garments such as are worn by farmers, miners, and lumbermen. [Hyde, Payne (a, 40).]—Rabbit i. Fr., gale du lapin. See SCABIES felina.—Rank i. Scabies papuliformis. [Copeland (a, 40).]—Rocky i. Scabies purulenta. A preparation made by macerating and straining 120 grammes of jalap, 15 of scammony, 7 of gamboge, and either 720 of brandy or 60 of safflower seeds with 720 of alcohol or with 900 of spirit of lemon distilled down $\frac{1}{2}$; or 270 grammes of jalap, 7 each of scammony and gamboge, 180 of safflower, and 1,440 of spirit of lemon. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Tubera jalapæ [Swiss Ph.], Tubera jalapæ [Ger. Ph., Russ. Ph., Norw. Ph., Swed. Ph.]. Fr., podure de jalap (cagine) [Fr. Cod.]. A preparation made by crushing, drying at 120° C., and powdering j. in a covered mortar, and sifting through a 400 silk sieve [Fr. Cod.]; or by cleaning, crushing, drying in the oven, powdering fine on an iron mortar with $\frac{1}{3}$ residue [Sp. Ph.]. The Russ. Ph. uses a 1,000-mesh sieve. The Fr. powder contains 16 to 18 per cent. of resin. [B, 95 (a, 38).]

JALAPIC ACID, n. $Ja^2 \cdot a^2 p^i 2k$. Fr., acide jalapique. Ger., Jalappinsäure. It., acido gialappinico. A dibasic acid, $C_{22}H_{36}O_{16}$, produced by the action of baryta on jalapin. It melts at $120^\circ C.$, decomposes above $130^\circ C.$, and is very soluble in water, less soluble in ether. Its salts are amorphous. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39); "Ann. di chim. medico-farm. e di farmacol.," Apr., May, 1885, p. 311 (B).]

JALAPIN, n. $Ja^2 \cdot a^2 p^i 2n$. Lat., jalapina, jalapinum. Fr., jalapine. Ger., Jalappin. It., gialappina. A resinous glucoside, $C_{24}H_{40}O_{16}$ (or $2C_{12}H_{20}O_8 - 2H_2O = C_{24}H_{40}O_{16}$, being by some regarded as the anhydride of jalapic acid), derived from male jalap (root of Ipomoea orizabensis); a homologue of convolvulin, from which it is distinguished by its great solubility in ether; a colorless, amorphous, tasteless, and translucent substance, melting at $150^\circ C.$, decomposing if the temperature is elevated, and burning with a sooty flame. It is soluble in alcohol and in ether, and is decomposed by dilute acids into glucose and jalapinol. It acts as a drastic purgative. [Meyer, "Ann. d. Chem. u. Ph.," xcv (B); Samuelson, "Chem. Ztg.," 1884, in "Ann. di chim. medico-farm. e di farmacol.," Apr., May, 1885, p. 311 (B).]

JALAPINÆ (Lat.), n. f. pl. $Ja^2 (ya^3) \cdot a^2 p^i (a^3 p) \cdot in(en)^e (a^2 \cdot e^2)$. Of Batsch, a family of the Marcideæ, including Mirabilis, Pisonia, Plumbago, etc. [B, 170 (a, 35).]

JALAPINOL, n. $Ja^2 \cdot a^2 p^i 2n \cdot o^2$. Fr., J. Ger., Jalappinol. A crystalline substance, $C_{13}H_{24}O_8$, produced by the decomposition of jalapin. It melts at $62^\circ C.$, is without odor, has an irritating taste, and a faint acid reaction. It is slightly soluble in boiling water, easily soluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 46, 93 (a, 39); "Ann. di chim. medico-farm. e di farmacol.," Apr., May, 1885, p. 311; "Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxiii (a, 39).]

JALAPINOLATE, n. $Ja^2 \cdot a^2 p^i 2n \cdot o \cdot lat$. A salt of jalapinic acid. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

JALAPINOLIC ACID, n. $Ja^2 \cdot a^2 p^i 2n \cdot o^2 i^2 k$. Fr., acide jalapinolinique. Ger., Jalappinolsäure. It., acido gialappinolinico. An acid, $C_{16}H_{30}O_8$, said to be obtained along with isobutyl alcohol and other substances by the decomposition of jalapinol with alcoholic potash. It occurs in small white needles, odorless, of irritating taste, melting at $64^\circ C.$, and very soluble in alcohol and in ether. [B, 6, 93 (a, 39); Samuelson, "Chem. Ztg.," 1884, in "Ann. di chim. medico-farm. e di farmacol.," Apr., May, 1885, p. 311 (B).]

JAPANESE, adj. Ja²p-a²n-es'. Fr., japonais. Pertaining to or obtained from Japan.

JAPONIC ACID, n. Ja²p-o²n'i²k. Fr., acide japonique. Ger., Japonsäure. A body, C₁₂H₁₄O₄HO, formed with rubinic acid by exposing to the air an alkaline or ammoniacal solution of catechin. It is a black substance, soluble in boiling water, insoluble in alcohol. [B, 38, 46, 48, 93 (a, 14; a, 39).]

JAR, n. Ja³r. Fr., jarre. Ger., Krug. A vessel with a wide mouth.—Decanting j. A glass j. fitted with a movable siphon tube entering near the bottom; used for decanting the liquid over precipitates that are very easily disturbed. [Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc., xxiii (a, 39).]—Leyden j. Ger., Leydener Flasche. A glass j. coated on the inside and outside with tin-foil, the inner coating having in contact with it a metallic rod which projects from the mouth of the j. and terminates in a knob. The j. is charged by placing the knob in contact with a static machine and putting the outside coating in communication with the ground by a metallic knob brought near the j. Sparks are thus drawn from the machine to the inner coating and are lodged upon the surface of the glass. The j. is discharged by placing one knob of the discharging-rod in contact with the outer coat and turning the other knob close to the inner coating, from which a spark is immediately elicited. [B.]

JASMINUM (Lat.), n. n. Ja³s(ya³s)-min(men)'u³m(u'm). Pers., yâsmin. Fr., jasmin. Ger., Jasmin. It., gelsomino. Sp., jâzmin. Jasmine or jessamine: an extensive group of plants constituting the principal genus of the jasminoworts. The Jasmina of B. Jussieu, or the Jasminaceæ of Lindley, are the jasminoworts, an order of dicotyledons belonging to Lindley's Echiales, and by many authors made a tribe (Jasminææ) of the Oleaceæ. The Jasminariææ of Dumortier are an order of the Torocoroneæ, comprising the Jasminidææ, Strychnidææ, Ebenaceæ, Supatææ, etc. The Jasminaceæ of G. Don are the Jasminææ of R. Brown. The Jasminææ (Fr., jasminées; Ger., Jasmineen) are: 1. Of Necker and others, an order of plants including, according to De Candolle, Lilac, Fraxinus, Olea, Phillyrea, and Ligustrum. 2. Of R. Brown, an order restricted to the genera J and Nyctanthes, to which others add Menodora and make the group a tribe of the Oleaceæ (see Jasminaceæ). The Jasminidææ of Dumortier are a family of the Jasminariææ, consisting of the tribes Lilacinææ, Oleineææ, and Jasmineææ. JUGLANDICOLOUS, adj. Ju²-gla²nd-i²2k'o²l-u³s. From juglans, a walnut, and colere, to inhabit. Fr., juglandicole. Parasitic on walnut-trees. [L, 41, 180.]

JUGLANS (Lat.), n. f. Ju²(yu)'gla²nz(gla³ns). A contraction of Jovis glans, i. e., nut of Jupiter. Gen., -glan'dis. Gr., Διὸς βάλανος. Fr., noyer (1st def.), écorce de noyer gris (2d def.). Ger., Wallnussbaum (1st def.), Nussbaum (1st def.), graue Wallnussrinde (2d def.). 1. The walnut; of Linnaeus, a genus of the Juglandaceæ. 2. The butter-nut root-bark; of the U. S. Ph., the inner bark of the root of J. cinerea. The Juglandaceæ (Fr., juglandacées) are an order of the Quernales, characterized as trees with pinnate, axillate leaves, and monœcious flowers, the sterile flowers ampullaceous, with the perianth irregular, and the fertile flowers solitary or clustered, ovary one-celled at the apex, two to four-celled at the base, with the ovule solitary. The fruit is a tryma with a shuck (a fibrous epicarp), and a shell (a bony endocarp) containing a large, exalbuminous seed with lobed oily cotyledons. The Juglandariæ of Dumortier are an order of the Julo-sepales, consisting of the Juglandineæ. The Juglandæ (Fr., juglandées; Ger., Juglandeen) of De Candolle and others, and the Juglandineæ of Dumortier, agree essentially with the Juglandaceæ. The common European walnut-tree, bannut-tree, French (or Welsh) nut, a species indigenous to the regions about the Caspian and eastward through the Himalayas to China and westward through Persia. The unripe fruits (fructus juglandis viridis [seu immaturi], nucis juglandis immaturæ, juglandis immature, nucis regie [seu ponice]), and the external layers of the nut (Lat., cortex fructus juglandis [Ger. Ph. (1st ed.)], cortex juglandis fructus [Russ. Ph.], juglandis fructuum cortex [Gr. Ph.], juglans (cortex fructuum) [Netherl. Ph.], putamina nucum juglandis [Finn. Ph.]; Fr., noyer commun (péricarpe) [Fr. Cod.]; Sp., nogal (pericarpio verde) [Sp. Ph.]), have been used as a vermifuge, and in syphilis, gout, chronic skin diseases, and old ulcers. The leaves, folia juglandis, which act as an aromatic bitter and astringent, are recommended in scrofula, and as an application in malignant pustule. The thin, yellowish membrane (episperm) embracing the cotyledons (Lat., epidermis nucui [seu nucum] juglandis) has been used in colic, and contains, according to Phipson, a new variety of tannic acid named nucitanic acid. The seeds contain a yellow pungent oil (oleum juglandis; Ger., Wallnussöl) equal to olive-oil, used internally as a tannicide and as a laxative injection, and externally in caligation. All parts of the plant contain juglone (q. v.) [B, 5, 19, 173, 180, 185, 275 (a, 35)].—J. regia fructu angulato. Fr., noyer à coque dure et anguleuse, noix bocage. A variety of J. regia. JUGLONE, n. Ju^2glon . Hydroxynaphthoquinone, $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_6\text{O}_3 = \text{C}_{10}\text{H}_5\text{O}_2\text{OH}$, the active principle of Juglans regia; a crystalline body having the odor of walnut-hulls, and, like them, an active stercoratory. ["Proc. of the Am. Pharm. Assoc.," xxxv (a, 39).]

JUGLONIC ACID, n. $\text{Ju}^2\text{glon-i}^2\text{k}$. Syn.: dinitroorthoxydroxyphthalic acid. A dibasic acid, $\text{C}_8\text{H}(\text{NO}_2)_2(\text{OH})(\text{CO}_2\text{OH})_2$, very soluble in water, ether, and alcohol, and separating from petroleum ether in small crystals. It was first obtained by the action of nitric acid on juglone. [B, 3 (a, 38).]

JUGO-CONCHIEN (Fr.), adj. $\text{Zhu}^6\text{-go-ko}^2\text{n}^2\text{she-a}^2\text{n}^2$. Pertaining to or connected with the jugular vein and the concha auris. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

JUGOLINE (Fr.), n. $\text{Zhu}^6\text{-go-len}$. The Sesamum orientale. [B, 38 (a, 14).]

JUGO-MAXILLARY, adj. $\text{Ju}^2\text{go-ma}^2\text{x}^2\text{i}^2\text{l-a-ri}^2$. From jugum, a yoke, and maxilla, the jaw bone. Fr., jugo-maxillaire. Adjacent to the jugular vein and connected with the maxilla (said of the masseter muscle); pertaining to the jugular vein and the maxilla. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

JUGULAR, adj. $\text{Ju}^2\text{gu}^2\text{-la}^2\text{r}$. Lat., jugularis (from jugulum, the throat). Fr., jugulaire. Ger., j. Pertaining to, connected with, or situated in or on the neck or throat. [B, 28 (a, 27).]

JUGULARIS (Lat.), adj. $\text{Ju}^2(\text{yu}^2)\text{-gu}^2(\text{gu}^4)\text{-a}^2(\text{a}^3)\text{ri}^2\text{s}$. Jugular; as a n., the jugular vein. [a, 41.]

JUGULATE, v. tr. $\text{Ju}^2\text{gu}^2\text{-lat}$. Lat., jugulare. Lit., to cut the throat; to put a sudden stop to a process.

JUGULIBRANCHIUS (Lat.), adj. $\text{Ju}^2(\text{yu}^4)\text{-gu}^2(\text{gu}^4)\text{-i}^2\text{-bra}^2\text{n}^2$. ($\text{bra}^2\text{n}^2/\text{ki}^2(\text{chi}^2)\text{-u}^2\text{s}(\text{u}^2\text{s})$). From jugulum, the throat, and $\beta\rho\acute{\alpha}\chi\chi\iota\omicron\upsilon\sigma$, a fin. Fr., jugulibranche. Having branchia opening below the throat. [L, 41 (a, 14).]

JUGULO-CAROTIDIEN (Fr.), adj. $\text{Zhu}^6\text{-gu}^6\text{-lo-ka}^3\text{-ro-te-de-a}^2\text{n}^2$. From jugulum, the throat, and καρωτιδες, the carotids. Involving the jugular vein and the carotid artery.

JUGULO-CEPHALIC, adj. $\text{Ju}^2\text{gu}^2\text{-lo-se}^2\text{f-a}^2\text{i}^2\text{k}$. From jugulum, the throat, and κεφαλή, the head. Pertaining to the throat and the head (said of veins). [a, 29.]

JUGULUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Ju}^2(\text{yu}^4)\text{-gu}^2(\text{gu}^4)\text{-u}^2\text{m}(\text{u}^4\text{m})$. From jugere, to join. 1. The collar bone. 2. The throat; of a bird, the anterior aspect of the neck. [L, 107.]

JUGUM (Lat.), n. n. $\text{Ju}^2(\text{yu}^4)\text{-gu}^2\text{m}(\text{gu}^4\text{m})$. From jugere, to join. Fr., paire (1st def.). Ger., Joch (1st def.), Fiederpaar (2d def.), Blättchenpaar (2d def.), Riefe (3d def.). 1. A connecting structure like a yoke. 2. A pair of leaflets or stipules. 3. A ridge on the fruit of an umbelliferous plant. [B, 1, 19, 123 (a, 35).]—Juga alveolaria (mandibulæ). Ger., Zahnfächer. The alveolar eminences. The two prominent ridges lying next to the j. carinale. [B, 123 (a, 35).]—Juga lateralia. Ger., Seitenriefen. The ridges lying at the edges of the mericarp. [B, 123 (a, 35).]—Juga penis. A padded forceps, controlled by a spring or screw, for holding the walls of the urethra together to prevent the dribbling in incontinence of urine. [a, 40.]—J. petrosium. See EMINENTIA arcuata.—Juga primaria. Ger., Hauptriefen. The five prominent ridges on a mericarp, including the j. carinale, juga intermedia, and juga lateralia. [B, 123 (a, 35).]—Juga secundaria. Ger., Nebenriefen. The secondary or less prominent ridges lying between the juga primaria. [B, 123 (a, 35).]

JUICE, n. Ju^2s . Gr., ζυμῶς. Lat., jus, succus. Fr., suc, jus. Ger., Saft. The liquid that exudes or may be expressed from any portion of an organism.—Alimentary j's. See Digestive j's.—Artificial gastric j. Fr., suc gastrique artificiel. Ger., künstlicher Magensaft. A digestive fluid prepared by adding pepsin or an extract of the gastric mucous membrane to water containing a small amount of hydrochloric acid. To approximate natural gastric j., about 3 parts of pepsin and 2 to 3 parts of hydrochloric acid are added to 1,000 parts of water. The action is most energetic at about 40° C. [J, 17, 28, 55, 203 (J).]—Digestive j's. Fr., fluides digestifs. Ger., Verdauungssäfte. Fluids secreted by specialized glands and poured into the digestive apparatus of animals or onto the surfaces of the leaves of insectivorous plants. These j's contain digestive ferments, and have weak alkaline or acid reactions. They change the chemical composition of foods, and render them soluble. [J, 11.] See SALIVA, BILE, Gastric j., Intestinal j., Pancreatic j., and DIGESTION by insectivorous plants.—Enteric j. See Intestinal j.—Gastric j. Lat., jus gastricum. Fr., suc gastrique. Ger., Magensaft. A fluid poured into the stomach by the gastric glands during the process of digestion. It consists of water, pepsin, and a little free hydrochloric acid. Its principal action is the dissolution of proteins, which it changes into the diffusible peptones. [K.]—Intestinal J. Lat., succus entericus. Fr., suc intestinal. Ger., Darmsaft. A clear, yellowish, viscid fluid, having a sp. gr. of 1.010 and a strongly alkaline reaction. It is the mixed secretion of Brunner's and Lieberkühn's crypts, and the total amount obtained from the intestine after one meal was estimated by Bidder and Schmidt at 10½ fl. oz. It converts starch into sugar, exerts a weak digestive action on proteins, and has a slight emulsifying power. [K.]—Italian J. Licorice extract made in Calabria. The blood plasma, from its conveying nourishment to the tissues. [K.]—Pancreatic J. Lat., lymph pancreutis. Fr., suc pancréatique. Ger., Pancreassaft, Bauchspeichel. The clear, viscid, alkaline digestive j. produced by the pancreas. It contains albumin, a peculiar proteid, like myosin, which gives rise to clotting, a small amount of fats and soaps, and a large amount of sodium carbonate, apparently closely associated with the proteids. Pancreatic j. is a universal digester for all forms of food, starch, proteid, and fat. [J, 19, 55, 203.]—Prepared pectoral J. A tea made of an infusion of red poppy petals boiled with sugar to a syrup. [L, 120.]—Preserved vegetable j's. A name sometimes applied in England to tinctures made by adding alcohol to the expressed j's of plants. [B, 5 (a, 38).]—Solazzi J. Licorice extract made in Calabria on the estates of Solazzi; regarded as a superior variety. [B, 7.]—Spanish J. Licorice extract made in Catalonia. [B, 7.]

JUJUBE, n. Ju²(ju)²b. Lat., jujuba, zizyphum. Fr., j. [Fr. Cod.] Ger., J. Brustbeere. It., giuggiola. 1. The fruit of several species of Zizyphus, especially Zizyphus vulgaris. J's (Lat., jujuba rubre), bacce (seu fructus jujubæ) have been used in the form of decoction in pectoral complaints, and a paste—J. paste—made with gum arabic and sugar dissolved in a decoction of the fruit, is used as a demulcent. Two varieties have been sold. The French or Spanish j's (Lat., jujuba gallicæ; Ger., grosse Jujuben), derived from Zizyphus vulgaris, are of about the size of a plum, somewhat flattened at the ends, have a sweet, date-like taste, and are very juicy. The Italian j's (Lat., jujuba italicæ; Ger., kleine Jujuben) are said to be the fruit of Zizyphus lotus, and are smaller and less sweet and juicy than the French j's, and rather oblong in shape. 2. A name for various species of Zizyphus. [B, 5, 19, 121, 173, 180, 185 (a, 35).]—J. paste, Pâte de j's [Fr. Cod.]. Lat., massa de jujubis. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Eleosaccharum juniperi. Fr., oléosure de genièvre. A preparation made by triturating together 2 or 3 drops of essential oil of juniper and 4 grammes of sugar. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Electuarium de junipero [Sard. Ph., 1773]. A preparation made by melting together with gentle heat 24 parts each of despumated honey and juniper-berry rob, and adding 8 parts of juniper herb and 1 part each of cinnamon and dried orange-peel, all well powdered. [B, 97 (a, 14).]—Extractum juniperi. Fr., extrait de genièvre. A preparation made by macerating 1 part of juniper in 4 parts of cold water for 12 hours, straining, clarifying with white of egg, and evaporating; or by infusing 1 part of juniper 24 hours in 4 parts of warm water, renewing the water, and evaporating; or by lightly boiling juniper in water and evaporating. Sometimes sugar is added or the extract brought to the consistency of honey, and it is then known as succus juniperi inspissatus, or rob juniperi. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—Fructus juniperi [Ger. Ph.]. See J. (2d def.).—Fructus juniperi pulveratus [Russ. Ph.]. J. (2d def.) powdered and passed through a 300-mesh sieve. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Galbula juniperi. See J. (2d def.).—Herba juniperi. The herb of Juniperus communis. [A, 319 (a, 21).]—Infusum juniperi. Fr., infusion de genièvre. A preparation made by infusing 15 grammes of juniper in 1,000 of boiling water, and straining when cold. [B, 119 (a, 38).]—J. arborescens. See J. virginiana.—J. capensis. See CALLITRIS juniperoides.—J. caroliniana. See J. virginiana.—J. communis. Fr., genévrier commun, cad, cade, cadé, genèvre, genièvre, pétron, pétrot. Ger., gemeiner Wachholder. The common juniper, a very widely distributed species of the section Oxycedrus. The wood is aromatic and was formerly used for fumigation. The fruits (see J. [2d def.]) are used for flavoring gin, and in France a sort of beer is prepared from them called genévrette. A powerful diuretic oil is distilled from the unripe fruits. The tops of the young branches, summitates (see uriones) juniperi, have a bitter, resinous taste and a balsamic odor, and possess virtues like those of the berries. A terbinthinate juice exudes from the tree, and has been erroneously identified with sandarac. [B, 5, 18, 19, 77, 173, 180 (a, 35).] See also Oil of CADE.—J. depressa. An American plant common in New England. The berries form part of the juniper of the shops, but are said to be inferior in strength to the European sort. By some authors it is regarded as a distinct species. [B, 5 (a, 35).]—J. drupacea. Fr., genévrier à gros fruit. A large-fruited species, of the section Caryocedrus, found in Syria, where the berries, called habhel, are eaten. [B, 77, 173 (a, 35).]—J. echiniformis, J. hemisphaerica. The hedge-hog juniper, growing in Sicily. According to De Candolle, a variety of J. communis. [B, 214, 275, 311 (a, 35).]—J. hispanica. Fr., cedre d'Espagne. See J. thurifera.—J. japonica. The Japan juniper. [B, 275 (a, 35).]—J. lycia. Fr., genévrier lycia. A species by some identified with the J. phoenicea (2d def.). It is probably a variety of the latter. The bark yields a resin burned as an incense. [B, 5, 77, 173, 180 (a, 35).]—J. macrocarpa. Large purple-fruited juniper, a species like J. oxycedrus, growing in southern and central Europe; probably the ἀρκευθος μεγάλη of Dioscorides, which was used like J. oxycedrus. [B, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—J. major. See J. oxycedrus.—J. nana. Dwarf juniper, a variety of J. communis found in the mountainous regions of temperate Europe and in Arctic countries and having the properties of J. communis. [B, 18, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—J. oxycedrus. Fr., cade, oxycedre, petit cèdre. Ger., Cedern-Wachholder, spanische Ceder. Brown-berried juniper, cade-oil plant, prickly cedar; a small shrub or tree indigenous to the Mediterranean regions. The fruits are used in southern Europe in leucorrhœa, amenorrhœa, and hysteria, and the ethereal oil of the fruits is used as an antihelmintic. Its wood is one of the principal sources of oil of cade. [B, 5, 18, 77, 173, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—J. phoenicea. Fr., genévrier de Phénicie (2d def.). Ger., phönizischer Wachholder. 1. Of De Candolle, the J. lycia. 2. Of Linnaeus, a Mediterranean species having properties like those of J. communis and yielding an incense-resin. To this species is referred the ἀρκευθος of Hippocrates, or the κερός μικρά of Dioscorides, used in uterine complaints. Its foliage is said to be sometimes substituted for savin, but it lacks the peculiar odor of the latter. [B, 5, 18, 77, 173, 180 (a, 35).]—J. sabina. Ger., Sade-Wachholder, stinkender Wachholder, Sadebaum, Seebenbaum. Sabín, cover-shame, a widely distributed species, usually of small size and low-growing, emitting an unpleasant odor when bruised. Savin, its young and tender green shoots, is official. It is highly irritant, and is a powerful uterine stimulant, and hence has been employed, especially by the laity, as an abortifacient. An ointment made with it is used as a stimulating dressing for blisters. [B, 5, 18, 77, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—J. sabina femina. Fr., sabine femelle (ou stérile). A variety of J. sabina. [a, 35.]—J. sabina mas. Fr., sabine mâle, savinier. A variety of J. sabina, having the same properties. [B, 173 (a, 35).]—J. sibirica. See J. nana.—J. stricta. Irish juniper, a variety of J. communis. [B, 275 (a, 35).]—J. suecica. The J. communis. [B, 311 (a, 35).]—J. tetragona. 1. Mexican juniper. [B, 173, 275 (a, 35).] 2. See J. phoenicea (2d def.).—J. thurifera. Fr., cedre thurifère, genévrier à Penceña. Ger., Weikrauch-Wachholder. Spanish juniper, the incense juniper found in Spain and Portugal. It yields a fragrant resin, for a long time erroneously supposed to be olibanum. [B, 77, 173, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—J. virginiana. Fr., genévrier (ou cedre) de Virginie, cedre rouge. Ger., virginischer Wachholder, rothe (oder virginische) Ceder. Virginia red cedar, savin of North America, a species very similar to, and by some identified with, J. sabina. Its wood yields cedar-camphor and oil of cedar-wood. Its volatile oil acts like oil of savin, though it yields less oil than the latter. Small excrescences (fungus juniperi virginiana) found on the branches, and known as cedar-apples, are used as an antihelmintic. The tops of this species were formerly included in the secondary list of the U. S. Ph., and are sometimes substituted for true savin. [B, 5, 18, 173, 180, 275 (a, 35).]—Lignum juniperi [Swiss Ph., Swed. Ph.]. The wood of J. communis, especially of the root. [B, 95, 180 (a, 35).]—Oleum juniperi (baccarum æthereum). See Oil of JUNIPER.—Oleum juniperi empyreumaticum. See Oil of CADE.—Resina juniperi. The resin of Callitris quadrivalvis and of J. communis. A preparation made by macerating 5 parts of j. with 15 parts each of alcohol and water and distilling off 20 parts. Used externally as an irritant. [A, 319 (a, 21).]—Spiritus juniperi compositus [U. S. Ph., Netherl. Ph.]. Fr., alcoolat de genièvre composé. A preparation made by dissolving 10 parts of oil of juniper and 1 part each of oil of caraway and oil of fennel in 3,000 parts of alcohol, and adding water enough to make 5,000 parts of liquid [U. S. Ph.]; or by distilling 3 parts of crushed juniper-berries, with 1 part each of caraway seeds and fennel-seeds, in 14 parts of alcohol and 30 of water until the product has a sp. gr. of about 0.935 [Netherl. Ph.]. [B, 95 (a, 38).]—Succus inspissatus juniperi (see juniperi inspissatus [Ger. Ph.]). See Extractum juniperi.—Summitates juniperi. The tops of the young branches of J. communis. [B, 180 (a, 35).]—Tincturæ oleo volatile juniperi. Fr., teinture d'essence de genièvre, esprit de genièvre [Fr. Cod.]. See Spiritus juniperi.

JUSTICIA (Lat.). n. f. Ju²(s)(yus)-ti²si²(ki²)²a³. From Justice, a Scotch botanist. Fr., justicia, carmentine (2d def.). Ger., J. (2d def.). Of Linnaeus, a genus of acanthaceous herbs, rarely shrubs, of the Justicieae; by some authors divided into numerous genera (Gendarussa, Rostellaria, Betonica, and Leptostachyo) regarded by Bentham and Hooker and others as sections of J. The Justiciaceae of Lindley (the Justicieae [Fr., justicieés] of Dumortier) are a tribe of the Acanthaceae, in which the seeds are subtended by hooked processes. The Justicieae of Bentham and Hooker are a tribe of the Acanthaceae, distinguished by having the limb of the corolla nearly equal or bilabiate with the lobes variously imbricated, and the seed flatly compressed, rarely oval, with a marginal hilum, and the funicle hardened into a hooked process (retinaculum), and comprising the Barlerieae, Asystasieae, Erantheaceae, Andrographideae, Eujusticieae, and Dicliptereae. [B, 19, 34, 42, 121, 173, 180, 185 (a, 35).]—J. adhatoda. Fr., carmentine adhatoda, noyer de Ceylan, (ou des Indes). The Malabar nut tree (or shrub); an East Indian species having bitterish, slightly aromatic leaves, used by the natives, in conjunction with other remedies, as an antelmintic, and their juice, combined with that of fresh ginger, in coughs, asthma, and ague. The flowers, leaves, and roots, but especially the flowers, are employed as an antispasmodic in asthma, especially in chronic pulmonary and catarrhal affections unattended with fever. The fresh flowers are applied in ophthalmia. [B, 172, 173, 180, 275 (a, 35).] See also ADHATODA.—J. aldina. See J. gendarussa.—J. appressa. See BARLERIA priortis.—J. betonica. An East Indian shrub; the root and the leaves are used in fevers, chest complaints, and phthisis, and the leaves as an external application to abscesses. [B, 180 (a, 35).]—J. bicalyculata. Fr., carmentine bicaculée. The Dianthera bicalyculata. [B, 173 (a, 35).]—J. biflora. Fr., carmentine à deux fleurs. An African species; the leaves are used in Egypt in emollient cataplasms. [B, 173 (a, 35).]—J. bivalvis. A bitter species (probably J. adhatoda) found in Malabar, where it is used in gout, asthma, catarrhs, and phthisis. [A, 334, 337, 344].—J. comata. The balsam-herb of Jamaica; an aromatic species used as a vulnerary. [B, 42, 180 (a, 35).]—J. ecbolinum. Fr., carmentine ecbolinum. Ger., langghrige J. The canin-corini of the Malays; a species found in the East Indies, where the root is used in gout and (together with the leaves) as a diuretic. The leaves are also used in coughs and, in Cochinchina, as a poultice to hang-nails. The root is employed in jaundice and menorrhagia. [B, 171, 172, 180 (a, 35).]—J. echioides. Fr., carmentine à feuilles d'échium. See ANDROGRAPHIS echioides.—J. foliosa, J. furcata. See J. peruviana.—J. gendarussa. Fr., carmentine gendarussa. The carvo-noochie or teo of the Tamils. The root, boiled in milk, is used in China in rheumatism and fevers, and in the East Indies in chronic indigestion and dysentery. The tender stalks and leaves are employed in rheumatism; the leaves (in infusion and in baths) in fevers; their juice in coughs and, mixed with oil, as an application to glandular swellings. In Java the leaves are used as an emetic. The whole plant has a disagreeable odor and taste. [B, 42, 172, 173, 180 (a, 24).]—J. hyssopifolia. KAIRINE, n. $\text{Ka}^3\text{i}^2\text{-ren}$. Lat., kaïrina. Ger., Kairin. It., kaïrina, chairina, caïrina. Sp., caïrina. An artificial alkaloid derived from quinoline. It is formed from the latter by treating with sulphuric acid, decomposing the product with caustic potassa, thus producing oxyquinoline; treating once more with tin and hydrochloric acid, thus forming the tetrahydride of oxyquinoline; and finally decomposing the last product with iodide of methyl or of ethyl, thus producing the hydride of methylic oxyquinoline,

The former was called k. M., the latter k. A. These terms are, however, now usually given to the hydrochlorides of these radicles, so that k. M. is $\text{C}_{10}\text{H}_{13}\text{NO}\cdot\text{HCl}$; and k. A., $\text{C}_{11}\text{H}_{15}\text{NO}\cdot\text{HCl}$. The latter is the salt now generally employed in medicine, and is usually denominated simply k. [B.]—K'sulphuric acid. Ger., Kairinschwefelsäure. An acid, $\text{C}_{11}\text{H}_{15}\text{NO}\cdot\text{SO}_2\cdot\text{OH}$, derived from k. A. Its potassium salt appears in the urine after the ingestion of k. [V. Mering, "Ztsch. f. klin. Med.," vii, suppl. Heft, p. 149 (B).]
